

TABLE OF CASES CITED

A		PAGE		PAGE
Ali v Sonabai	940	Abraham t Lodge " Good Will "	663
Abaji Annaji t Luxman Tukaram	625	Abrath v N E R Co	695
Abbas Ali t Ghulam Muhammed	169	Accidental Death Insurance Co v
Abbey t Hill	211, 214	Maekenzie	875
Abbott v Hendricks	608	Acerra v Petroni	907
Abbott t Maysie	656 671	Achhan Kuar t Thakur Das	762
Abdol Ali t Abdooor Rahman	27	Achhutanand v Ram Nath	742
Abdul Ahad t Mahtab Bibi	692	Achobandil v Mahabur	690
Abdul Ali t Pura Mal	361	Achunth Singh v Kishen Pershad	696
Abdul Ali t Kurrummusa	760	Achutaramaraju v Subbaraju	612, 619, 624, 625
Abdul Aziz t Ebrahim	330	" Actron," The	223
Abdul Goffer v Sheikh Jamal	624	Adam v Kur	809
Abdul Hakim t Pana Mia Mirji	877	Adams t Lloyd	910
Abdul Hakim Khan t Ram Gopal	636	Adams v Peters	443
Abdul Hamid v Kiron Chandra	380	Adapala v Rabala	929
Abdul Hossain t Habibullah	693	Adarkhalim Chetti v Marimuthu	696
Abdul Hossein t C A Turner	696	Adhar Chandra Pal t. Dibakar
Abdul Kadir t Doonlanbibi	397, 403, 413	Bhuyan	815
Abdul Karim v Manji Hansraj	786	Adikesavan Naidu t Gurunatha	708
Abdul Karim v R	270, 918, 922, 923	Adityam Iyer v Rama Krishna	628, 634, 635
Abdul Karim t Salimun	530, 531, 535, 536, 589	Admr Genl v Radolf	914
Abdul Majeed t Khirode Chandra		Admr Genl of Bengal v Prem Lall	99, 673
Pal	812	Admr Genl of Madras v Ananda
Abdul Majid t Amolak	729	Chari	800
Abdul Rahim v Madhavrao Apaji	854	Adhrushappa t Gurushidappa	693
Abdul Rahman t Mahomed Azim	699	Adu Shikdar t R	118, 273, 274, 280, 281, 282, 283, 285, 286
Abdul Rasheed t Joresh Chandra		Adurmoni Debi v Chowdhry Sib
Roy	374	namun	711
Abdul Razak v Aga Mahomed	446, 800	Advocate General of Bengal v
Abdul Sahim v Emperor	155, 157, 990, 991	Belchambers	653
Abdul Sobhan t Natahar Mandal	866	Aga Syud t Hajee Jackariah	671, 682, 715
Abdul Sovan t Lachmi Prasad	731	Agace, Ex parte	243
Abdulla Paru v Gannibai	320, 527	Agar, H W, In the goods of	563
Abed Ali t Moheshur Buksh	791	Agarchand Gumanchand v Rakma
Abhayeswari Debi v Kishori Mohan	929	Hanmant	844, 847
Abhiram Gossami t Shyama Charan		Agassiz v London Tram Co	144, 235
Nandi	582	Aghore Nath v Radhica Pershad
Abinash Chandra v Paresb Nath	126, 177, 180, 181, 182, 390, 409		409, 411, 724
Abinger v Ashton	421	Aghoree Ram v Ramolee Sahoo	697
Abouloff v Oppenheimer	414	Agrawal Singh v Foujdar Singh	854
Abraham v Abraham	594	Abid Khondkar v Mabendra Lal	118, 1012

	PAGE		PAGE
Ab Foonz v Emperor	227, 274	Allucka v Kashee Chunder	582
Ahmad Raza t Abid Hussain	577, 779	Allyat Chumaman v Juggut Chunder	364 751
Ahmad v Emp	920	Alokoondry Goopto v Horo Lal	850
Ahmedbhoy t Vuleebhoy	399 412	Aloo Nath t Gagubha Dipsanj	892
	415 416 418, 419	Atraja Nasdu In re	929
Ahmed Yar t Secretary of State for India in Council	946	Altab Bibee t Joogul	815
Ali Thain t Moothi Chetty	605	Alter Kaufman t Government of Bombay	770
Airey, R.	580	Amanat Sardar v Nagendra Biswas	921
Aiyathur Ali v Jnanaparakasha Odayar	827	Amar Chandra v Roy Goloke	816
Aizunnissa Khatoon v Karimunnissa Khatoon	446	Amar Nath v Achan Kuar	700
Ajabsinoh t Nanabhau	376	Amayce t Yalumalai	534
Ajoodhya Prashad t Babu Omrao	7, 503	Ambabai v Bhau Bin	873
Ajuddhia Pande t Inayatullah	395	Ambalam Pakkiya v Bartle	477, 479, 810
Al bar Ali v Bhyea Lal	131, 130 730, 731	Ambar Ali v Lutfo Ali	130, 219
Al bar Hussain v Alia Bibi	926	Ambalath Kuthu t Raman Nair	721
Akbar Khan v Sheoratan	405	Ambica Charan Das t Kala Chandra Das	415
Akhal Chandra v Nayu	364 901	Ambica Prasad v Ram Sahay	713
Akhoy Kumar t Jagat Chander	916	Ambika Churn Chakravarti t Dya Gazi	727
Akhona v Venkayya	783	Ambrose v Clendon	152
Akshaya Kumar v Shama Churn	366, 545	Ameer Bibee v Tukroonissa Begum	704
Alagava Tiruchettambal v Bami nada Pillai	600	Ameroonissa Khatoon v Abedoon nissa Khatoon	0
Alangamonjari Dabee v Sonamoni Debee	97, 100	Aney v Long	927, 928, 995, 996
Albion The	434	Amir Ali t Yakub Ali	597, 608
Albonso v United States	423	Amir Begam v Badr ud din	891
Alchorne v Gomme	868	Amiruddin t Emperor	266 280, 287
Alderson t Clay	15, 597, 607	Amirulla Pramanick v Emperor	297
Alderson v Maddison	828	Amjad Ali Hazi t Ismail	696
Alderson v White	623	Ammu v Rama Krishna	876
Aldridge v G W R Co	138	Amolak Ram v Emperor	162
Alep Pramanick v R	456	Amos v Hughes	677
Alexander t Gibson	979	Amrit Nath v Gauri Nath	167, 168, 701
Ali Bulsh t Sheikh Samiruddin	411	Amrita Bai t Jubbanbai	726
Ali Hader Syud Hussain Ali v Gobind Das	911	Amrita Bazar Patrika, In re	585, 588
Ali Khan v Indar Parshad	547, 683	Amrita Lal Hazra t R	157, 190, 208, 211, 304, 452 454, 693 773, 782, 897, 944, 956, 971
Ali Mahomed v Sheikh Maharaj	801 805	Amrita Ravi t Shridhar Narayan	723
Ali Meah, In re	355	Amritolal Bose v Rajonee Kant	232, 482
Ali Meah t Magistrate of Chittagong	930 931	Amstall v Alexander	973 974
Ali Moudin v Elayachanidathul Komba	201, 494	Amulya Ratna Sircar t Tarini Nath	952, 847
Ali Nasir v Manik Chand	369, 372	Ananda Chunder t Basu Budh	893
Alijan v Hara Chandra	181 186	Ananda Coomart Hari Das	873
Almudlin v R	915, 961	Ananda Hari Basak t Secretary of State	719
Alvon v Furnival	511	Ananda Mohan v Ananda Chandra	632, 639, 742
Alford v Skinner	760	Anandarav Sivaji t Ganesh Yesh vant	789
Allen v Allen	116 732, 952	Anand Rao Ganpatrao t Vasantrao Madhavrao	689, 690, 702, 791
Allen v Bennet	603
Allen v Pink	615
Allen v Seckham	850

	PAGE		PAGE
Anant Das v Ashburner & Co	823	Arlapa Nayak v Narsi Keshavji	168
Anand Ram t Collector of Etah	736	Arman Bih v Amuranissa	332
Anant Singh t Durga Singh	187 363	Arman Khan v Bama Soonduree	779
Ananta Balacharya t Damodhar		Armory v Delamirie	785
Makund	870 801	Armstrong v Strokham	572
Ananta Nalavde v Ganu Surulkar	831 833	Arnold v Cheque Bank	803 880
Anathnath Dev t Bsh t Chunder	218	Arnott Re	914
Andersen v Bank of Columbia	901, 907	Arruth Misser v Juggernath Indra
Anderson v Clay	715	swamee	708
Anderson t Collinson	401	Arumngam Chetty v Petriyannan
Anderson v Weston	808	Servai	681, 703
Andrews t Mottlev	778 809	Arun Chanira v Kamini Kuar	719
An ada Ram t Nema t Chand	929	Arunachalam Pillai v Vellaya Pillai	875
Anada Prasanna Lahuri t Badulla		Arunachella Ambelam v Orr	813
Mandal	817	Arunachellam t R	887
Anna Hinde In the goods of	568	Arunachellam Chettiar v Narayan
Annada Sundari v Jogutmoni Dab	734	Chettiar	806
Annarubala Chetti t Krishna		Arunmoyi Davi v Mohendra Nath	403
swamy Nayakkan	641	Asatulla v Sadafulia	632
Annakurnam t Muttupayal	476	Asa Beevi v Karuppan Chetty	814
Annamalai Chetty v Muruges	708	Asgar Ali Biswas v R	1016
Annapaganda t Sangadigaya	240	Asgur Hossein In the matter of	100 351
Annapurna Bai v Rama Chandra	825	Ashabai v Haji Rahmutulla	685
Annavimuthinyan (in re)	348, 301 483	Ashanullah Khan v Trilochan Bagchi
Annesley t Lord Anglesea	904 933		727 779 786
Annda Mohun v Bhuban Mohini	762	Asharfi Kunwar v Rup Chand	710
Anonymous case	572	Asharfi Lal v Nanhi	535 530
Antaji Kashi v Antaji Madhav	396	Ashfaq Husain v Syed Nazir Husain	678
Anund Chunder v Mookta Kesh	581	Ashford v Price	939
Anund Chunder v Punchoo Lall	100	Ashgar Ali v Delros Banoo	701
Anundmoyee Chowdhram v Sheeh		Ashghar Reza v Hyder Reza	113
Chunder	245	Ashudbai v Abdulla Haji Mahomed	700
Anundmoyee Dehea v Shib Dyal	696	Ashootosh Chandra t Tara Prasanna	112
Anundo Mohun v Lami	703	Ashpitel v Bryan	871
Anupchand Hemchand v Champai		Ashref Ali v R	922, 1016
Ugerchand	631	Ashrufoodowlah v Hyder Hossein	799
Anup Singh v Fatch Chand	724, 726	Ashrufoonissa Begum v Rughoonath
Anwar Hossein v Secretary of State	735	Sohoy	747
Apothecary Co v Bentley	739	Ashrufoonissa v Azceemum	733
Appamma Nayumula t Ramanna	607	Ashton s Case	388
Appa Rau v Subhanna	681 720	Ashunolla Khan t Hurri Churn	757
Apparthura Patter t Gopala Panikar		Ashutosh Das v R	451
	504 581, 808	Asiatic Steam Navigation Co v
Appasami t Manikam	824	Bengal Coal Co	170 22
Apurba Krishna Bose t R	148, 208 790	Asmuddin Sardar v Emperor	773
Arapa Nayak t Narsi Keshavji	191	Asmuddin Ahmed v R	734
Arbon t Fussel	540	Asmatunnessa Khatun v Harun
Ardeshir Dhanjibhai v Collector of		Lal Biswas	812, 820 881
Surat	783	Asmutoonissa Behee t Alla Haff
Arding t Flower	028		221, 761
Arfan Ali t R	201	Aspitel v Sercombe	111
Ariyapathira Padayachi v Muthu		Assanoolah v Obhoy Chandra	613
kumara Swami	614	Assanullah v Bussarat	75
Arjun Chanira Bhadra v Kailas		Astley v Astley	47
Chandra Das	579, 535 536, 809	Asvini Kumar v Samadhar	4

	PAGE		PAGE
Atal Bebary Keora v Lal Mohan		Baboo Ganesh v Mugneeram Chowdry	724
Singha Roy	497	Baboo Ganesh Dutt Singh v Maharaj
Atar Sing v Thakar Singha	714	Moheshur Singh	710
Atchayya v Gangayya	102 103	Baboo Ghansim v Chukowree Singh	689
Atchley v Sprig	446	Baboo Gooroo v Durbaree Lal	509
Atherley v Harvey	910	Baboo Gunga v Baboo Inderjit	3
Atkins v Tredgold	249 250	Baboo Radhakissen v Musst Shurree
Atkinson v Morris	245	Iunnissa	842
Atkins v Horde	803 808	Baboo Ram v Sardar Dyal	724
Atmarani v Umedram	741	Baboo Rambuddan v Ramee Kunwar
Att Genl v Ashe	512		598 599 600
Att Genl v Berkeley	902	Babu v Sitaram	652 660 699
Att Genl v Davison	334	Babu Badriprasad Singh v Anna
Att Genl v Drummond	143	purna Kuer	578
Att Genl v Hitchcock	968 969 970	Babu Singh v Bihari Lal	711 714
Att Genl v Moore	10	Babaram v Madhub	849
Att Genl v Munro	573	Bacharam Mondal v Peary Mohan	731
Att Genl v Stephen	872	Bacon v Breon	902
Att Genl of N S W v Bertrand	133 131	Badr Ram v Bhulal	616 619 633 639 640
Augustine v Chilla	393	Badam Kumari v Suraj Kumari	895
Augustine v Medlicott	473	Bid Bibi v Sami Pillai	761
Aung Myat v Hla Mye	756	Bidi v R	291 293 294
Austin v Evans	996	Badiatannesar v Ambika Charan	761
Austin v Rumsey	350	Badri Bishal v Baijnath	869
Auxa Singh v Ajudhia Bahu	644	Badri Narain v Joy Kishen	247 255
Ava and Brenhilda		Badri Prasad v Abul Karim	530
In the matter of a collision between the			531 532
	90 515 0 40	Balaji Prasad v Madan Lal	711
Avery v Bowden	310	Badul Singh v Chutterdharee Singh	702
Aveson v Kinnaird	194 198 894	Baerlein v The Chartered Merc
Ayudh Beharee v Pam Raj	933 945 954	Bank	353
Avesha Peebee v Kanhye Mollah	714	Bageshri Dival v Pancho	612
Ayetun v Pam Sebuk	314	Bagranji Singh v Manikarnika
Aylesford Peerage Case	79	Baksh	705 860
Azma Bibi v Shamalanant	762	Bahadur Singh v Mohar Singh	341 401
Azmat Singh v Kalwant Singh	305	Bahadur Singh v Viri	764
Azimut Ali v Hurdware Moll	811	Baharuddin v R	199
Azullah Khan v Ahmed Ali	232	Bahar Das v Nobin Chunder	803
Azzunissa Khatoon v Karmunissa		Bai Baiji v Bai Santok	404 406
Khatoon	793		441 695
Azmat Ali v Lali Begum	799	Bai Dival v Amedbhai Bhulabhai	397
		Bai Diwali v Patel Becharias	790
B		Bai Ganjabai v Bhugwandas Valji	734
Baba v Timma		Baiji Nath v Sukhu Mahton	368 370 340
Babaji v Krishna	711	Baijnath Goenka v Padmanand
Babaj Mahadaji v Krishaji Devi	851	Singh	413
Baban Mavacha v Anand	714	Baijnath Kela v Raghunath	684 911
Babhu v Sita Ram	385	Baijnath Prasad v Bal Singh	694
Baboo Bolhnamin v Baboo Omrao	657 660	Baijnath Sahav v Raghunath
		Pershad	681
Baboo Bhunput v Sherk Jowahur	3 1010	Baijnath Sinha v Biraj Koer	531
	596 637 843	Baikanta Nath Roy v Debendra
Baboo Dolce v Sham Beharee	872	Nath Sahi	729
Baboo Doorga v Musst Kundun	591	Baikanta Nath Roy Chowdhry v
		Mohendra Nath Roy	419

	PAGE		PAGE
Baikanthanath Kumar t Chandra Mohan	225	Banbury Peerage Case	446, 764, 765 767, 769
Bai Kesserbai t Narranji Walji	512	Bandi Bibi t Kalka	688
Bain t Whitehaven F P Co	97, 130, 1009	Bandon v Becher	412
Bainbrigge t Browne	759	Banee Madhub v Bhaggobutty Churn	792
Banee Singh t Bburth Singh	703	Banee Madhub v Thakoor Dass	868
Bai Ramji v Jagjivandas	704		871 872, 875
Bai Shanker Nanabhai v Morarji Keshavji	394, 818	Banee Pershad v Baboo Manu	846 865
Bajal Bhadur t Bhupendar Babadur	446	Bangi Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore	202 704, 706, 729, 804 839, 858
Bajrangji Singh t Manikainika Baksh Singh	441, 446	Bani Madhub v Shridur Deb	721
Bakshi Das t Nadu Das	691	Bank of Bengal v Ramanathan Chetty	571, 588 590
Bakshi Ram v Laludhan	249 866	Bank of Bombay v Nandlal Thaker sev	931
Biksu Lakhman t Govinda Kanji	616 617, 618 619, 622 624, 632, 633	Bank of Bombay v Suleman Somji	204, 550
Bal Gangadhar t R	1017	Bank of England v Cutler	848
Bal Gangadhar Tilak t Shrinwas Pandit	346, 348, 960	Bank of England v Vagliano Bros	9, 100, 880
Bal Mokoond t Jirjadhun Roy	121	Bank of United States v Dandridge	807
Bala t Shiva	681, 725	Bank of Utica t Hillard	696
Bala Parahad t Sriyan Singh	864	Bankalal t Chudramekkanca	877
Balabux t Rukhmabai	792	Banku Behari v Raj Kumar	507, 851
Balaji Raghunath t Balbir Raghaji	396	Banku Behari v Shama Churn	642
Balayya t Kistnappa	743	Banku Behari Sildar v Secretary of State for India	879
Balbadhar Prasad t Mahatajah of Betra	506, 598, 607	Banner t Jackson	905
Balbir Prasad t Jugul Kishore	82, 860	Banoo t Kashee Ram	700, 702
Baldeo Das t Gohind Das	371	Banshi Singh v Mir Amir Ali	342
Baldeo Pershad t Fakhr ud din	846	Bans Lal v Dhapo	415, 416
Baldeo Sahai t Brajnandan Sahai	868	Bans Lal t Ramji Lal	412, 416
Baldeo Singh t Imdad Ali	871	Banwari Das t Muhammad Mashit	779, 847
Balgobind t Bhaggu Mal	631		783
Balkishan t Kishan Lal	393, 395	Banwari Lal v Mohesh	783
Bali t Iien Das t Legge	588 589, 618, 620 623 624, 625	Banwari Lal Singh t Dwarka Nath Musir	210, 581
Balkishan Das t Ram Narain	90, 591, 701, 702	Bapanamma v Kettika Kristanamma	614
Balkrishna t Gopikabu	733	Bapuji t Senaraji	820
Bali t Taylor	808 809	Bapuji Botal t Satyabhanubhai	247
Ballard t Wey	385	Bapuji Narayan Chitnis v Bhagwant Balwant Chitnis	720
Balmakund v Bishvanath	372	Baquar Ali v Anjuman Ara	339
Bal Mokund v Jirjadhun	121	Barak Kamal Sabi t Lulu Christian	717
Balmakundas Atmaram v Moti Narayan	203	Barbat t Allen	130
Balmakund Ram t Ghansam Ram	111, 116 117, 144, 196, 692, 741	Birelt t Lytle	776
Bimandas Bhattacharjee t Nal madhab	718, 868	Baretto t Rodrigues	482, 824
Bamasondereer Dossee t Verner	99	Barindra Kumar Ghose v R	129
Bamasonderey Dassvith t Radhika Chowdhuran	717		149 157, 224 275, 271, 290, 493, 527, 539
Banaji t Sunderdas Jagjivandas	610, 618, 621, 622, 632	Barkut un nesa t Fazl Haq	417, 835
		Barlow v Chuni Lal	321, 739, 973
		Barnes & Co v Toye	..
		Barnett v Allen	..

PAGE		PAGE
Balkanathanath Kumar & Chandra Mohan	293	Banbury Peerage Case	446 764, 765 767 769
Bai Kesserbai & Narranji Walji	512	Banda Bti v Kalla	638
Bam & Whitehaven F P Co	97	Bandon v Beecher	412
Bainbridge & Browne	759	Bance Madhub & Bhaggobutty Churn	792
Bainee Singh & Bhurth Singh	703	Bance Madhub & Thakoor Dass	863 871 872 875
Bai Raman & Jagjivandas	704	Bance Pershad & Baboo Manu	846 865
Bai Shanker Narabhai & Morarji Keshavji	391 818	Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore	202 704 706 729 804 839 858
Bajal Bhadur & Bhupindar Bibadar	446	Bani Madhub & Shridur Deb	721
Bajrangji Singh & Manilarnika Baksh Singh	441 446	Bank of Bengal v Pamanathan Chetty	571 588 590
Bakhi Das & Nadu Das	691	Bank of Bombay & Nandlal Thaker sev	931
Bakshi Ram & Laladhar	210 866	Bank of Bombay v Suliman Somji	204 550
Baku Lakshman & Govinda Kanji (116 117 118 619 192 624 137 643)	1017	Bank of England v Cutler	848
Bal Ganadhar Tilak & Shrinwas Iandit	346 348 960	Bank of England v Vagliano Bros	100 880
Bal Mukond & Jirudhun Roy	121	Bank of United States & Dandridge	807
Bali & Shiva	681 725	Bank of Utica v Hillard	090
Bali Parshad & Srijan Singh	864	Bankal & Chidnamekkan	877
Balibux & Rukhmabai	792	Banku Behari & Raj Kumar	507 851
Balaji Paghunathi & Balbir Pagloji	396	Banku Behari & Sham Churn	642
Balavva & Khatappa	743	Banku Behari Sildar & Secretary of State for India	870
Balbahar Prasad & Maharajal & Beti	66 508 607	Banner & Jackson	005
Balbir Prasad & Jugul Kishore	87 860	Banoo & Kheshe Pam	700 702
Balle Das & Golund Das	371	Banshi Singh & Mir Amir Ali	342
Balleo Pershad & Fakhr ud din	846	Bansi Lal & Dhapo	415 410
Balleo Sibai & Brajnandan Salil	868	Bansi Lal & Ramji Lal	412 416
Balleo Singi & Imdad Ali	871	Bannari Das & Muhammad Mashed	770 847
Balgbind & Bhagga Mal	631	Banwari Lal & Mohesh	783
Balishan & Kishan Lal	393 395	Banwari Lal Singh & Dwarka Nath Misir	210 591
Balilen Das & Leage	588 589 618 620 693 694 62	Bapaamma & Kettika Kristamma	614
Balilen Das & Ravi Narain	591 701 702	Ripaji & Senaraji	890
Balishna & Copkaban	733	Ripaji Bolal & Satrubhainabhai	247
Ball & Taylor	838 809	Ripaji Narayan Chitnis & Bhagwant Balwant Chitnis	720
Ballard & Wav	385	Riquar Ali & Anjuman Ara	339
Balchand & Bshvanath	372	Barek Kamal Sahi & Lallu Christian	717
Bal Mukund & Jirudhun	121	Birbat & Allen	130
Balnakundas Atmarim & Moti Narayan	203	Birch & Lytle	776
Balnakund Ram & Chansam Ram (111 116 117 144 196 617 741)	718 868	Biretto & Rodrigues	482, 824
Balmandas Bhatti & Jarjee & Nd n & Lab	99	Birudra Kumar Ghose & R	120 140 157, 224 275, 271 290 408, 527, 539
Balasoondere Dossee & Verner	99	Birkutunnisi & Fazl Haq	417 085
Balsonfery Dissanay & Radhika Chowdhram	717	Barlow & Chuni Lal	321 739, 973 &
Balapa & Sunderdas Jagjivandas (610 618 621 677 632)	632	Barnes & Co & Toje
		Barnett & Allen

	PAGE.		PAGE
Barnett v Tugwell	801	Beehan Singh v Khoran Singh	815
Barony of Sale The	767	Beckwith v Bonner	904
Barrough v White	219 246 240	Beebee Ashrufoomissa v Union- Mohun	731
Barr v Gratz	410	Beer Chunder v Deputy Collector of Bhulloooh	722
Barrow v Hem Chunder Lahari	103	Beer Chunder v Ramgutta Dutt	687 716 813
Barrow v Case	836	Beer Narain v Teen Cowrie	693
Barry v Bebbington	339	Beg v Allah Ditta	713
Barry v Butlin	733	Beharee Lall, In the matter of	600
Bartlett v Wells	833	Beharee Lall v Kalso Daya	716
Barton v Bank of New South Wales	618	Beharee Lall v Kamince Sondaree	110 615
Barwick v English Joint Stock Bank	124	Behari Lal v Madho Lal	704
Barwick v Thompson	874	Behari v Sadho Mal	749
Basant Bibi In re	929	Behari Hajdi, In the matter of	262
Basanta Kumar Roy v Secretary of State	719 53	Behari Lal v Habiba Bibi	761
Basanta Kumari Guha v Pamkalanai Sen	818	Behari Patak v Mahomed Hayet	693
Basanto Kumari v Nanda Iam Kaibarto	753	Behari Lal v Jungo Mohun Gossain	403
Basarat v Najib Khan	713	Behari Lal v Tej Narain	618 619 622
Bashi Chunder v Faysal Ali	747 817 849	Bejai Bahadur v Bhupindar Bahadur	335 339, 475
Basiruddin v Mohima Bibi	678	Bejoy Gohind v Beekoo Poo	163
Baso Koor v Hurry Dass	713	Bejoy Gopal v Krishna Mohishi	705
Basti Begum v Sajjad Mirza	575 855	Bejoy Gopal Mukerjee v Girendm Nath	705
Bastin v Carew	938 972	Bela Ram v Mahabir Singh	162, 311
Basumnoti Adh Laria v Budra Kalita	930	Belaet Khan v Rash Beharee	360, 365
Baswantappa v S. Shudappa Banu	644 845	Balasaamy Ayyar v Venkataswamy Naicken	708
Bata v R	318	Bell v Ansley	243
Bata Krishna v Chitaman	702	Bell v Ingestre	641 641
Batai Ahir v Bhuggobutty Koor	720 749	Bell v Kennedy	778
Bate v Kinsey	573	Bellefontaine Ry Co v Bailey	432
Bateman v Bailey	147 162 250	Bellerophon, 'The	695
Bater v Bater	386	Belt v Lawes	436
Bates v Townley	221	Bemjon, In the goods of	789
Bati Keddi (in re)	253 296	Bemola Dossee v Mohun Dossee	706
Baerman v Kadenius	743	Benarsi Das v Bhikari Das	694 696
Baugh v Cradocke	902	Bengal Indigo Co The, v Tarinee Pershad	487
Baxendale v Bennett	680	Beni Madhub v Dina Bandhu	254
Baxter v Browne	590	Beni Madhub v Jai Krishna	167, 187
Bayabai Sakalkar v Maradas Ranchbordas	630 659	Beni Madhub v Sidasook Kotary	631, 632
Bayliffe v Bitterworth	804	Beni Madhub v Sridhar Deb	717
Bayliss v Att Genl	656	Beni Prasad v Mukhtesar Rai	861
Bayya Naidu v Paradesi Naidu	397	Beni Ram v Kundun Lal	861
Bayyan Naidu v Suryanarayana	397	Benjamin, Re	744, 788
Beale v Com	807	Bennett v Marshall	662
Bean v Quimby	901	Bennison v Cartwright	133, 147
Beasley v Magrath	220	Benodhee Lall v Dulloo Sircar	354
Beatson v Skene	695 997	Benson v Olive	350
Beattie v Jetha Durgarsi	912
Beauchamp v Parry	250
Beaufort v Smith	342
Beaumont v Fell	671
Beavan v McDonnell	203

	PAGE.		PAGE
Benyon v Nettlefold ..	634	Bholanath v Ajoodhya	699, 703, 791,
Bepin Behari Chowdhry v Ram		Bholanath Khettri v Kali Prasad
Chandra .	629, 630, 869	Agurwalla .	514, 620
Bepin Behari Kundu v Durga		Bholanath Roy v Secretary of State	832
Charan Banerji	706	Bholaram Chowdhry v Administra-
Bepin Behary v Breedam Chunder	338	tor General	544
Berkeley v Must Chittiar	480	Bhola Singh v Babu	694
Berkeley Peerage Case 2, 334, 335, 341, 446		Bhona v R	208, 457
Bernardi v Motteux	400	Bhoobun Mowee v Umbica Churn	346
Bernasconi v Atkinson	659	Bhoorun Koer v Shahzadee	707
Berryman v Wise	808	Bhootnath Chatterjee v Kedar	722
Bessela v Stern	140	Bhowanee Persad v Oheedun	850
Betham v Benson	235	Bhowany Sunkur v Pureem Bibee	850
Bethell v Blencowe	598	Bhubonmohini Dasi v Gajalakshmi
Beti Maharani v Collector of Etawah		Dehi .	762
	588, 651, 942	Bhunnaswari Debi v Harjagan
Bettley v McLeod	927	Sarna	146, 508, 510, 511, 517
Bevan v Waters	511, 905	Bhugabonty Misra v Domun
Bewicke v Graham	910	Visser	701
Bhaddar v Khair ud din Husain	723	Bhugmunt Narain v Lal Jha	221
Bhaddu v Emperor	260	Bhugwan Chunder v Mechoo Lal	230
Bhagam Megu v Gooro Pershad	515	Bhugwan Doss v Upooch Singh	849
Bhagawan Das v Balgobind Singh	168	Bhugwan Dutt v Sheo Mungai	765
Bhagbut Chunder v Hurrogobind		Bhugwandeon Doobey v Myra Baer	820
Fal	810	Bhupatram v Hari Prio	850
Bhughbut Pershad v Gurja Koer	711	Bhupendra Chandm Singha v Harihar
Bhagrathi Bai v Vishwanath	725, 733	Chakravarti	618, 625
Bhagoji v Bapuji	374, 376	Bhyah Ram v Bhyah Agur	170
Bhagubhai v Tukaram	608, 701	Bhyro Dutt v Must Lekharnee	845
Bhagvandas Tejmal v Rajmal	165	Bibee Jokai v Beglar	480
Bhagwan Sahai v Bagwan Din	625	Bibee Kubeerum v Bibee Sufehun	696
Bhagwan Singh v Bhagwan Singh		Bibee Meheroonnissa v Abdool
	170, 470, 471	Gunnee	728
Bhagwan Singh v Mahahur Singh	728	Bibee Nujeebunnissa, In re	794
Bhagvandas Hurjivan, In re	378	Bibee Rukhun v Shaikh Ahmed	761
Bhagwat Dayal Singh v Debi Dayal		Bibee Wuhedun v Wusee Hossein	799
Sahu	705	Bih Gyanessa v Must Mobaru
Bhaiganta Bewa v Himmat Bdyaker	868	knonesse	161, 162, 205
Bhan Singh v Gokal Chand	638, 639, 640	Bih Khaver v Bibi Rukha	160, 374
Bhan Singh v Gopal Chandra	638	Bickerton v Walker	857
Bhasker Taty v Vijalal Nathu	236	Bidder v Bridges	342, 678
Bhan Nanuji v Sundrabai	167, 170, 189	Biddle v Bond	881
Bhawani Harbhun v Devji Punja		Biddomoye Dabee v Sittaram	870
	527, 528	Bimby v Dickinson	430, 940
Bhaya Durguj Deo v Pande Fateh		Bihari v Ram Chandra	690, 730
Bahadoor Ram	173	Bihari Lal v Mahdenn Bakhsh	729
Bheeknaran Singh v Necot Koor	858	Bijoy Chand Mahatap v Kali Pada
Bhikhisahu v Kodai Pandey	714	Chatterjee	327
Sircar	929	Bijoy Gopal Mukerji v Krishna
Bhum Sen v Sittaram	724	Mahishi Debi	705
Bhima v Dhulappa	721, 768	Bijraj Nopani v Puri Sandary Dasee
Bhutto Kunwar v Kesho Pershad			590, 660
	177, 182, 185	Bikas Kunwar v Desraj Ranjit
Bhog Hong Kong v Ramanathan		Singh	684, 686, 700, 783, 810,
Chetty	362, 756, 787		811, 868, 872, 877

	PAGE		PAGE
Bundeswari Persad v Bushakha Bibi	733	Blue and Deschamps v Red Mountain Railway	377
Bundesree Dutt v Doma Singh	429	Blundell v Gladstone	671
Bind v Bind v Pearce Mohun	685 721	Board v Board	822, 852 865 869
Bridas Pal Chowdhury v Monorami Debi	371	Bochar Mahton v Ism Jagi	827
Bijr Doss v Secretary of State for India in Council	904 909	Boddy v Boddy	139
Bijro Pershad v Kent Davee	707	Bodh Singh v Gunesh Chunder	307
Bir Bhaddar v Sirju Prasad	371		693 732
Bir Chandra v Binsu Dhar	133, 820	Bogra v R	348, 600
Birjmandan Lal v Musst Kunwar	728	Bordenath Parooze v Russick Lall	128 366
Buch Ja re	838	Borkent Nath v Lakhun Majhi	579 581 582
Birch v Depeyster	617 669	Boulet v Miller	393 814
Birch v Ridgeway	738	Boulet v Ruthin	252
Birch v Wright	870	Bossovomoff v Nahapiet Jute Com pany	112 355
Birchall v Bullagh	988	Boldron v Widicks	206
Bisram The	204	Bolton v Corporation of Liverpool	900 907, 910
Bishambhar v Nadar Chand	722	Bolton v Sherman	481
Bishambhar Dyal v Pershad Lal	249 879	Bomanjee Conasjee In the matter of	930
Bishan Dutt v P	204 295	Bomanjee Muncherjee v Hossein Abdooleh	878
Bishen Chand v Prjendra Lal ore	680	Bombay Baroda Co v Ranchudlal Chhotalal	732
Bishen Dutt v R	303	Bombay Cotton Co v Motilal Shivalal	117 940
Bishen Dyal v Musst Khadeem	570	Bommerauze Bahadur v Ringasamy Mudilay	132
Bisheshur v Muirhead	845 961	Bond v Douglas	193
Bisheshur Bhutticharjee v Lamb	581	Bonfield v Smith	198
Bishnath Chowdhry v Ridha Churn	716	Bonham Ex parte	413
Bisnu Binnar v P	293	Bonnard v Perryman	103
Bishonath Neoghy v Huro Cobind	411	Bonnard v Chagniol	684
Bishonath Rukhit v Ram Dhone	863 929	Boo Junatboo v Sba Nagar	709 760
Bishoo Manjee v R	279 280	Brodh Narain v Omrao Singh	128
Bishop Mellus v Vicar Apostolic of Malabar	511 525	Boolee Singh v Hurobunz Narain	722
Bishop of Meath v Marques of Winchester	582	Booth v Emp	161
Bishop of Rochester trial of	115	Borrodale v Christook Buxtram	602
Bishunath Singh v Balloo Singh	612 616	Bottomley v Brougham	930
Bisessar Chuckerbutty v Ram Joy	704 709	Bottomley, Ex parte	349
Bisessar Chuckerbutty v Wooma Churn	731	Bourne v Gatliff	138 147 779
Bisessar Das v Smidt	631	Boverbank v Monteiro	612
Bisessar Lal v Luchmessar Singh	699	Bowes v Foster	300 837
Bisessar Singh v Gupput	393	Bowes v Shand	467
Bisessar Lal v Musst Bham	601	Bowling & Welby v Contract In re	401
Bisonath Binda v Dayaram Jana	534	Bowman v Bowman	972
Bissonath Roy v Lall Bahador	704	Bowman v Hodson	537
Bisumbhar Sircar v Soorodhuny Dassce	701	Bowman v Taylor	819
Blackett v Royal Exchange Insu rance Co	589 647	Boyes v Cook	649
Blackstone v Wilson	238	Boyle v Wiseman	311, 914
Blake v Albion Life Ass Co	5 126	Boyson v Cole	848
130 192 196 198 200 209 210	883	Braddon v Abbott	588 645
Blake v Pifford	896	Bradlaugh v De Pen	808
Blawett v Tregonning	952	Bradley v James	732
		Bradley v Ricardo	970
		Bram v Preece	327

	PAGE		PAGE
Braja Kishor v Karti Chandra	805	Brojo Kishoree v Sreenath Bose	710
Brajanath Dev v Anandamayi Dasi	602	Brojo Mohun v Radha Koomaree	704
Brajanath Kundu v Lakshmi Narayan	812	Brojo Soondery v Luchmee Koonwaree	811
Brajendro Coomar v Madhub Chander	688	Brojo Sunder v Koylash Chunder	754
Brajeshwar Peshakar v Budhanndhi	696 729 858	Brojonath Ghose v Koylash Chunder	849
Brassington v Brassington	912	Brojonath Roy v Kushen Lall	724
Breckon v Smith	221	Bromanund Gossain v Govt	722
Brembridge v Osborne	160	Bromley v G I P Ry Co	790
Brenchley v Still	809	Brook v Brook	879
Brett v Beale	342	Brooke v Tichborne	538
Brewer v Palmer	594	Brown v I C R Co	138
Brewster v Sewell	516 517	Brown v Foster	899 904 905
Brickell v Hulce	209	Brown v Woodman	500
Bridon In the goods of	573	Brown v McClintock	481
Bri v Arnsworth	940	Brown v Murray	678
Briog v Wilson	326	Browning v State	237
Briham v Faverweatler	400	Bruce v Garden	221
Bright v Doe v Tatham	734	Bruce v Nicolopulo	147, 808
Brij Bhokun v Mahadeo Dohar	82	Bruce v G N Ry Co	235
Brij Lal v Inda Kunwar	799 808	Bruckowsky v Thacker Spink & Co	159
Brij Mohun v Ram Nursing	800	Brunner v Re	201
Brij Nath v Chander Mehan	403	Brunswick v Harmer	423
Brijlal v Mola Kunwar	689	Bryan v White	531
Brijnandan Singh v Bilva Prasad	713	Bryant Pons and Bryant v Banque du Peuple	571, 590
Brijonath Chowdhry v Lall Meah	381 876	Buccleuch v Metropolitan Board of Works	891
Brimho Moe v Pam Dalub	800	Bicharam Gundul v Peary Mohun	730
Brindalun Chanler v Chundra Karmakar	809	Bucher v Jarratt	593
Brindaban Choudhry v Radhica Chowdram	736	Budhai Sardar v Sonaulah Mirdha	728
Brindaban Chunder v Chundal Bindjopadhyay	688	Budhu Koer v Hahz Husain	101
Brine v Bazilgetto	401	Budree Lall v Bhoosee Khan	517 560
Bonnerji v Sitanath Das	506	Budree Lall v Kantee Lall	711
Brinloe v Goodson	999	Bulkev v Bulley	223 704 800
Brislane v Baeres	803	Bullock v Courre	902
Brisco v Loman	337	Bullabee Kant v Dordjollun Shikalar	703
British American Co v Mehl v Buksh	882	Bunbury v Bunbury	904
Britow v Cremen	162 743	Bunbury v Mathew	808
Bristow v Segueville	427	Bunwarce Chundli v Mudden Mohun	708
British & Assurance Co v Re	508	Bunwarce Lall v Maharajah Hetnaram	7, 113 486 487 490 497 498
British and American Telegraph Co v Colson	14 576	Bunwari Lal v Daya Sankar	714
British Sailing Ship Falls of Litterick v Re	403	Bunwari Lal v Forlong	706 709 719 728
Broad v Pitt	901	Burberry v Cording & Co	669
Brocas v Lloyd	927	Burdacant Roy v Chunder Koomar	814
Brodie v Brodie	147	Burdett v Case	116
Brodie v Howar	242	Burdett v Spilsbury	532
Brohm Dutt v Dhurmdas Ghosh	832 833	Burgane v Showler	809
Brijendra Coomar v Chairman Dacca Municipality	240 245 301 302	Burha Mandari v Megh Nath	339
		Burjori Chatterji v Mancharji Kuverji	466 479, 481, 482 500, 613
		Burjori Dorabji v Dhunbai	247
		Berlinshaw v Nichols	849

	PAGE		PAGE
Chairington v Wooder	649	Chooa Kara v Isa bin Khalifa	113
Charter v Charter	662	Cooper v Slade	124
Charitter Rai v Kailash Behari	132	Chotei Narain v Musamat Ratan	498
	316 321, 366 577	Chotei Narain Singh v Ratan Koer	736
Chathalelan v Gobinda Karuntar	2-5	Choutuwall Doogur v River Steam Navigation Co	795 796
Chatenay v Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co	669	Chowdhrahi v Tarny Kanth	685 910
Chatlu v Viraryen	510 691	Chowdhry Debi v Chowdhry Dowlat	634, 729
Chatring Moolchand v Witechurch	760	Chowdhry Harnautollah v Brojo Soondur	709
Chattro Singh v Jhero Singh	321	Chowdhry Nazimul Haq v Abdul Wahab	377, 379, 381
Chauhan v Behari Lal	825	Chowdhry Pudum v Koer Oodey	709
Chaurand v Angerstein	671	Christachari v Karibasayya	741
Chedambara Chetty v Renga Krishna Muthu	769	Christian v Delanney	385
Cheetha v Mihecn Lal	701, 791	Chuckun Lal v Poran Chunder	236
Cheetun Lal v Chutter Dharee	145	Chudasma Khoduba v Chudasma Takhtsang	510
Chella Venkata Reddi v Devabhak tani	611	Chumman Shah, In the matter of	202
Chenvirappa v Putappa	417 819	Chundee Churn v Eduljee Cowasjee	39, 827
	851, 856	Chunder Coomar v Harluna Sahai	849, 865
Cherukunneth v Vengunat	474, 475 824	Chunder Kant v Brojo Nath	583
Cherry v Colonial Bank of Australia	842	Chunder Kant v Bungshee Deb	752
Cheshire v Bailey	124 837	Chunder Kant v Pearce Mohun	304
Chetti (Venugopal) v Chetti (Venugopal)	832	Chunder Kant v Ramnarain Dev	231
Chhato Ram v Bilto Ali	249	Chunder Monce v Joykissen Sircar	704
Chhotilal Aditram v Bai Mahakore	595 597, 607	Chunder Monce v Raj Kushore	747
Chidambara v Thirumani	929	Chunder Nath v Kristo Komul	700 810
Chidambara Chettiar v Valilingha	831	Chunder Soor v Kaly Churn Das	622
Chidambaram Pillai v R	208	Chundemath Roy v Koorer Gobind Nath	790
Child v Crace	149	Chundereshwar v Chuni Ahir	232
Childerson v Barrett	928	Chuni Kuar v Uday Ram	686 690 767
Chinnaji Govind v Dhunkar Dhondet	131 504, 510	Chuni Lal v Bai Samreth	651
Chinn v Morris	164	Chunni Bibi v Basanto Bibi	630
Chinna Umayi v Tegarai Chetti	168	Chunni Kuar v Rnp Singh	760
Chinnan v Ramchandray	690 691	Churaman v Balli	203
Chinnappa Reddi v Manekha Vasagam	727	Chutter Lal v Govt	406
Chinnasani v Hariharabadra	402, 403	Chyet Narain v Bunwaree Singh	638
Chinnaya v Gurunatham Chetti	236	Ciehel v Lambert	764
Chinnaya v Ramana	415	Citizens Bank v First National Bank	829, 830
Chunnery v Evans	249	Civa Rau v Jevana Rau	827
Chintaman Ramchandray v Darepja	844	Clarges v Sherwin	409
Chintaman Singh v R	16	Clardge v Mackenzie	876
Chintamanrao Melundale v Kashi Nath	711	Clark v Adie	581
Cluntu v Dhondu	82	Clark v Alexander	745
Clutko v Janaki	82	Clark v Bindabun Chunder	244 250
Choelalingam Pillai v Mayan L Chettiar	787	Clarke v Magruder	810
Chokkey Singh v Jote Singh	821	Clarke v Muthick	231
Cholmondeley v Cluton	902	Clarke v Soffers	972
		Clarkson v Woodhouse	343
		Clarton v Shaw	604 605

	PAGE		PAGE
Burling & Paterson	805	Carmichael & Pows	906
Burmester & Barron	212	Carr & London and N W Ry Co
Burn & Archuab & Roy	380	830 841 842, 843 844 849, 860 864, 865
Burn & Co & Bushomoyee Daser	869 876	Carter & Pryke	137
Burnaby & Baillie	169 311 769	Case & Case	797
Burnside & Dayrell	235	Caspersz & Kedar Nath	488 814 846
Burr & South	930	Cassamally Jaitrajibhai & Sir Currim
Burrell & North	501	bhoy Ibrahim	394 818
Burrough & Martin	937	Cassumbhoy Ahmedbhoy & Ahmed
Burrows & Lock	838	bhoy Hubbhoy	681, 693
Burwell & Tanner	904 99, 911	Caston & Caston	403 413
Burt & Walker	370	Castrique & Imme	419 411
Burton & Cornish	595	Cathcart & re	903 904
Burton & Jayne	511	Catt & Howard	388
Burton & Plummer	693 894	Cavalry Venkata & C Hector of Masu
Bury & Philp &	763 767	hpatam	704
Bustos & White	901 909	Cazenove & Vaughan	354
Butechire & Tie	452	Central Ry Co & Busch	840
Btler & Alhutt	212	Chabul las Lalubhai & Dayal Mowji	203 204
Butler & Ford	808	Chalwick & Bowman	909
Fizloor Puheem & Shumsooni &		Cham Mahto & R	134, 135
Bugum	99 107 310	Chaurasi Singh & Suraj Kuar	346
Bizun Sah & & Mintra Chowdhari	179 707	Cheltho Singh & Jhero Singh	250 255, 300 370
Byrhanma & Ayulla	175 179 271 379	Chamanbu & Mukkan Chand	336
Dynath Lill & Ramooldeen Chow		Chamarnce Bibee & Ayengolah Sudar	365
lhry	851	Chambers & Barnasconi	324
Dj North Sahoy & Doolhun Biswa		Chambers & The Queen's Proctor	4
nath	847	Chand Hurce & Rajah Norandro	703
Dikant Nath & Goboollah Silar	851	Chandi Charan & Bostob Charan
Byne Ex parte	978	541, 544 550
Dionkesh Chakravartty & Jagah		Chandi Prosad & Mohendra Singh	390
rar Rai	177	Chandi Singh & Janga Singh	706
Dyris & Shivshanker	865	Chandler & Greaves	478
Byrne & Brosville	793	Chandra Kahi Dabee & Chapman	879
		Chandra Kanta Nath & Amjad Ali
		Hazi	811
		Chandra Kunwar & Chandra Naraj
		Singh	256 306
Caine & Horsfall	648	Chandra Mehdi Hasan & Muhammed
Cameron & Lorimer	860	Hasan	641
Cameron's & Co & Co & R	912	Chandra Nath & Nilmadhub Bhut
Cammell & Sewell	413	tacharjee	312, 310 739
Campbell & Campbell	800	Chandradeo Singh & Vata Prasad	713
Campbell Ex parte	900 907 904	Chandrika Ram Kahar & Emperor	318
Campbell & Loader	1009	Chango & Kalaram	616
Campbell & R	101	Channel & re	349
Campden Charities & re	652	Chant & Brown	902
Cannell & Curtis	808	Chandika Baksh & Numa Kunwar	189
Cantello & Cantello	139	Chapin & Lapham	902
Carew Ex parte	1017	Chapman & Bluck	590
Cargile & Wood	799	Chard & Jervis	103
Carnarvon & Villebois	342	"Charles," The	478
Carpenter & Buller	819 858	Charlotte The	434
Carpenter & Wall	902	Charoo & Zobeida Khatoon	379

C

PAGE		PAGE
Chairington v Wooder	649	Chooa Kara v Isa bin Khalifa	113
Charter v Charter	662	Cooper v Slade	124
Charlter Rat v Kailash Behari	139	Chotev Naram v Mussamut Ratan	498
316 321 366 577 590		Ch tey Naram Singh v Ratan Koer	736
Chathalelan v Gobinda Karummar	255	Choutmail Doogur v River Steam Navigation Co	795 796
Chatenav v Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co	669	Choudhram v Tariny Kanth	885 810
Chathu v Virarven	510 691	Choudhry Debi v Chowdhry Dowlat	631 729
Chatring Mookhand v Witchurch	760	Chowdhry Herasutollah v Brojo Soonlar	709
Chattro Singh v Jhero Singh	321	Ch wdhy Nazirul Haq v Abdul Wahab	377, 379, 381
Chauhan v Behari Lal	855	Chowdhry Pudum v Koer Oodey	709
Chaurand v Angerstein	671	Christachari v Kasibasaaya	741
Che lambara Chetty v Renga Krishna Yuthu	760	Christian v Delanney	385
Cheetha v Miheen Lal	711, 791	Chuckun Lal v Poran Chunder	236
Cheetun Lal v Chutter Dharec	145	Chudasama Kholuba v Chudasama Tal hatsang	510
Chella Venkata Reddi v Devallakurti	611	Clumman Shah In the matter of	202
Chennirappu v Putappa	417 819	Chundee Churn v Eduljee Cowasjee	395 837
851, 856		Chunder Coomar v Harluna Sahai	849, 865
Cherukunneth v Vengunat	474, 475 824	Chunder Kant v Brojo Nath	593
Cherry v Colonial Bank of Australia	842	Chunder Kant v Bungshee Deb	752
Cheslure v Bailey	174 837	Chunder Kant v Pearro Mohun	304
Chetti (Venugopal) v Chetti (Venugopal)	832	Chunder Kant v Ramnarain Dey	231
Chhato Ram v Bili Ali	240	Chunder Monce v Joykissen Sircar	704
Chhotilal Ashtram v Bai Mahakore	595 597, 607	Chunder Monce v Raj Kishore	747
Chidambara v Thirumani	929	Chunder Nath v Kriato Komul	700 810
Chilambara Chettiar v Vailbhingha	831	Chunder Soor v Kaly Churn Das	622
Chilambara Pillai v R	208	Chundernath Roy v Koorer Gobind Nath	750
Chill v Grace	149	Chunderechwar v Chuni Ahir	232
Chiklerson v Barrett	928	Chuni Kuar v Udal Ram	686 690, 757
Chinnappi Govind v Dhunkar Dhondey	131 504, 515	Chuni Lal v Bai Samreth	61
Chinn v Morris	161	Chuni Bibi v Bassanto Bibi	62
Chinna Umaya v Tegara Chetti	168	Chunni Kuar v Rnp Singh	56
Chinnan v Pamchandra	690, 691	Churaman v Balli	25
Chinnappa Reddi v Manickha Vasagan	727	Chutter Lal v Govt	47
Chinnasami v Hariharabadra	402, 403	Chyet Naram v Bunwaree Singh	62
Chinnaya v Gurunatham Chetti	236	Cichel v Lambert	75
Chinnaya v Ramana	415	Citizens Bank v First National Bank	25 26
Chinnery v Evans	240	Civa Rau v Jevana Pau	25
Chintaman Pamchandra v Darella	844	Clarges v Sherwin	46
Chintaman Singh v R	456	Claridge v Mackenzie	55
Chintamanrao Melenale v Kashinath	711	Clark v Adee	55
Chintu v Dhondur	852	Clark v Alexander	515
Chitko v Janaki	852	Clarke v Bundabun Chatterjee	266 671
Choolalingam Pillai v Mayan Chettiar	787	Clarke v Magruder	211
Chokkey Singh v Jote Singh	821	Clarke v Mullick	221
Cholinondey v Clinton	902	Clarke v Saffery	222
		Clarkson v Woodhouse	222
		Clarton v Shaw	648

	Page		PAGE
Clayton v Green	99	Collier v Baron	337 8, 8 861
Clayton v Lord Nugent	609	Collier v Simpson	421 474 494
Clayton v Wardell	797	Collins v Bennett	733
Clare v Clear	733	Collins v Blantern	634
Clave v Jones	199 90	Colpoys v Colpoys	591 6, 7
Clifford v Burton	23	Colsell v Bnd l	167
Clifford v Hunter	9-5	Com v Casey	318
Clifford v R	118 1010	Com v Fox	99
Clive Durant In re	916	Com v Kimball	706
Cloak v Hammon l	665	Com v Morell	501
Cloasmadne v Carrel	819	Com v Webster	438 781
Clunes v Pezzev	780	Concha v Concha	400 401 613
Coatee v Banbridge	92	Concha v Mar etta	421 4 8
Colbett v Hutson	888	Constable v Leibel	431
Cobbett v Kilmister	429 539	Cook v Ward	340
Cobbett v Gray	97	Cook v Wilby	377
Cobden v Kenrick	904	Cooke v Banks	342
Cochran v Retberg	670	Cooke v North Met Trun Co	908 9 9
Cockrill v Sparles	244	Coole v Braham	246 200 251
Coggs v Bernard	795 891	Coombs v Coether	342
Coghlan v Cumberland	117	Cooper, In re	207
Cole v Bank of Bengal	613 6 0 611	Cooper v Blandy	871 872
Cohen v Sutherland	615	Cooper v Dedrick	740
Coldev v Richards	900	Cooper v Met Board of Works	930
Cole v Hawkins	928	Cooper v Slade	114 737
Cole v Langford	410	Cope v Cope	764 765 767 769
Cole v Manning	138 890 920	Cornish v Abington	840 842 809 800
Coles v Coles	972 974	Corbett v Brown	840
Collector of Allahabad v Suraj Baksh	872 876	Cornish v Searell	875 876
Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari	495 408 409	Cornwallis Trial of Lord	114
" 6 7 8 9 97 98 100 101		Corsen v Dubois	908
" 1 4 1 7 140 167 168 171		Cory v Bretton	95
" 1 179 185 186		Cory v Gerteken	834 830
Collector of Jaunpur v Jamna		Costello v Cronell	991
Prosad	810 89 897 938	Cotman v Orton	90
Collector of Madara v Motoo Ram		Cotton v James	198 207
alunga	171 470	Coulson v Diaborough	1001 1005
Collector of Masulipatam v Cavalry		Courteen v Touse	139 932
Venkata	704	Court of Wards v Ilahi Baksh	815
Collector of Mirzapur v Bhagwan		Court of Wards v Venkata Suriya	635
Prasad	530	Coventry v G E R Co	842 843 844 806
Collector of Monghyr v Hardas		Coventry v Tulsa Pershal	870 8 6
Naram	711	Coventry Luddha v Morari	7 9
Collector of Rajshahye v Doorga		Covert v Gray	176
Soondree	165 378 381 383	Cowasji Ruttonji v Borforj Rus	678 635 638
Collector of Rungpore v Frowunno		tomjee	663
Coomar Tagoor	792	Cowan v Truefitt	604 605
Collector of Sea Customs v P H		Cowie v Remfrey	859
Chithambaram	101	Cowley v People	786
Collector of Thana v Hari Sitaram	708	Cowper v Cowper	856
Collector of Trichunopoly v Tekka		Cox v Bruce	192
mani	812	Cox v Burbridge	987
Colledge v Horn	239	Craft v Com	905
		Crawfords v Salter	97, 100 101
		Crawford v Spooner

	PAGE		PAGE
Crease t Barrett	331, 332, 333, 1009	Daji Babaji t Sakhararam Krishna	118 1014
Creery t Cars	946	Dakhna Kali v Jagadeshwar
Cresswell t Jackson	429, 538	Bhattacharjee	703, 704
Criffin v Rice	444	Dal Singh t R	118, 389 961, 990
Crisp t Anderson	732 838		1010, 1017
Crispin t Doghoni	511	Dale t Hamilton	620
Croft t Croft	819	Dalghish t Yusuffur Hassan	168,
Cromack t Heathcote	901		169 406, 441, 442
Cropper t Smith	861 891	Dahchand Shubram t Lotu Sakha
Crossfield (R T) trial of	115	ram	531, 532, 536
Crowley t Page	980	Dahp Singh v Bahadur Ram	7 5
Crown v Abrahams	599	Dahp Singh v Durga Prasad	484, 606 607
Crowthier t Appleby	996	Dahp Singh v Nawal Kunwar	139 144
Cunliffe t Sefton	734	Dalson t Stark	598
Cunningham In re	124	Dalton v Fitzgerald	822
Cunningham t Faublanque	190	Damodar Jagannath v Atmaram
Currier t Hampton	439	Babaji	516
Curry t Walter	891	Damodara Mudaliar t The Secretary
Cursetji J Khambatta t Crowder	404	of State for India	9
Curteen t Touse	906	Damodhar Gordhan t Deoram Kanji
Curtes t Peek	423		468 473 474, 475 573 770
Curzon t Lomax	342	Damodar Dass t Mahiram Pandoh	832
Cuthbertson t Irving	869	Dan v Brown	242
Cutts t Brown 614 615 621 622,		Danakata Animal v Balasundera
632, 633, 638		Mudaliar	329
Cutts t Gilbert	735	Daniel t Metropolitan Ry Co	206

D

D H R Moves In the matter of	831	Danmull t B I S N Co	721
Dabee Misser v Mungur Mea	825	Danoo Darjee t Momotagaddi
Dabee Parshad v Ram Coomar	173 383	Bhunya	733
Dabee Subai v Shoo Dass	703	Danukdhan Singh t Nathima Sahu	733
Dabjee Saboo v Shaik, Tumceeroo I deen	734	Darbha Venkamma v Rama Sub barayudu	824
DaCosta t Jones	967	Darby v Ousely	2,6, 358
DaCosta t Pvm	540	Darya v Emp	920
Dadabhai t Jamsedji	476	Dasarath Mandal v R	78, 783
Dadabhai Narsidas v Sub collector of Broach	775	Dasarath Patel v Brojo Mohan	745
Dada Honaji v Babaji Jagushet	649, 641	Dattaji t Kalba	846
Dadan Gazi t R	961	Dattaram v Venayak	832
Dadasaheb Devrathrao t Bai Nahani	832, 833	Dattatraya, In re	130
Dadoha t Collector of Bombay	652	Dattoo t Rama Chandra	618 619, 625
Dagdu v Bhana	636, 637	Davalata v Ganesh Shastri	681, 729
Dagdu v Kamhle	707	David, In the matter of	898
Dagdu t Nanu	619, 632	David Bruce t Maung Kyaw Zin	739 741
Dagdu v Panchom Singh	9	Davies, Ex parte	881
Dagleish t Dodd	389	Davies t Lowndes	176, 335,
Daines t Hartley	423		339, 341, 410
Dantree t Hutchinson	671	Davies t Ridgre	231
Dantrey, In re	259	Davies t Waters	905, 911
Dantari Mohanti t Jugo Bundhoo	167, 171, 174, 531, 753	Davis t Dale	953
		Davis t Field	920
		Davis t Jones	640
		Davis t Hutchings	200

	PAGE		PAGE
Davis & Lloyd	310	Deputy Commr of Bara Bank & Ram
Davis & Maung Shwe Go	163 426	Parshad	323, 363
Davis & Pilgo	231	Deputy Legal Remembrancer v
Davies Trusts In re	478 572	Karuna Boustobi	116, 190 196
Dewan Singh & Mahip Singh	979	202, 264 265, 293, 294 692 738	741
Dickins & Polcby	896	Deputy Legal Remembrancer & Mir
Dij & Ting	664	Sarwar	778 779
Daval Jai Raj & Khatar Ladha	820	Derry & Leak	201 205
Dyanayi & Ananda Mohan	846	Desai Ranchoddas & Rawal Nathubai	188
Dear & Knight	973 974	Devaji Gaja & Godabhai Godabhai	583 823
Deben Ira Narain Sinha & Narendra
Narain	783	Devala C., Re	235
Debi Dayal & Ganesh Prasad	796	Devaheju & Mahomed Jaffer	877
Debidatta & Sowdagur Singh	690 714	Dewan Run & Indarpal Singh	704
De Bretton & De Bretton & Holme	984 890	Dhan Bibi & Laloo Bibi	799
De Bussebe & Alt	845	Dhanka & Umrao Singh	815
De Medina & Owen	389	Dhanmull & Ramchunder Ghose	338
De Mora & Cincha	400 401 603		833 835
De Pozar In the goods of	606 637	Dhanookdharee Sahee & Toomey	385
De Ross Pearce	446	Dhanul dari Singh & Nathama Sahu	733
De Souza & Pestonji	168	Dhanu Ram Mahto & Murli Mahto	347
De Naran Dutt & Chattrman Bar		Dharam Das & Ganga Devi	601
nigora Municipality	740	Dharam Kumar & Balwant Singh	813
Debdendra Nath Sen & Abdul		Dharani Kanta & Gabar Ali	747, 757
Samed Seraji	530	Dharm Singh & Hur Pershad	748
Debi Churn & Issur Chunder	754	Dharmaji Vaman & Gurtar Shrinivas	290
Debi Prosad Chowdhury & Golap		Dharnidar & Dhundraj	178
Bhagat	701 705 866	Dhan Kunwat & Diwan Singh	728
Debi Bai & Gokul Prasad	824	Dharrup Nath & Gobind Saran	743
Debi Singh & R	691	Dhondo & Keshva	841
Debnath Roy & Cudadbur Dev	869	Dhondo Balkrishna & Raoji	847
Deby Prasad & Dowlat Singh	4	Dhondo Bhikaji & Ganesh Bhikaji	743
Deely & Patent In re	393	Dhondo Ramchandra & Balkrishna
Deeniyai Lall & Jigdeep Naram	711	Gobind	704
Dekhari Tea Co & Assam Bengal		Dhumimal & Kalu	694
Palway	732	Dhun Monce & Suttoorghun Seal	730
Delany & Fox	870	Dhunoo Kazi In the matter of the
Delasale & Guildford	615	petition of	783, 784
Dhansil London Bank & Orchard	100	Dhunookdharer Lall & Gunput Lall	791
Dennett & Crocker	597	Dhunput Singh, In re	476
Denonath & Hurry Naram	699 791	Dhunput Singh & Gooman Singh	812
Den nath Batabyal & Adhor Chunder	824	Dhunput Singh & Mahomed Kazim	873 877
Deo Nath Das & Kalewar		Dhunput Singh & Russomoyee
Bhattacharya	804 833, 858	Chowdhraa	731
Deoo Singh & Durga Pershad	484	Dhurm Das Pandey & Shama Soondri
De & Andrews	366	Dibah	684 698 791 811
Deo Knar & Man Kuar	706 761	Dhurmadas Ghosh & Brohmo Dutt	834
Deo Nan lan Prashad & Janaki Singh	835 865	Diamoddee Pak & Kaim Tandar	618
Deo Naram Singh & Ganga Singh	713, 714	Dekunso & Inhabitants of Fitch
Deo Nath & Peer Khan	684	burgh	448
Deo Pershad & Lujoo Pay	705	Dickson & Evans	739
Deput & Titamber	655	Digumburee Dossee & Banee Madhub
Deo Kinan & Siram	369	Ghose	683
Deoman len Pershad & Udit Naram	705	Dileshwar Ram & Nohar Singh	219
Deh Chand & Verban Singh	858	Dil Cazi & R	142

	PAGE		PAGE
Dil Kunwar t Udal Ram	815	Doe v Hawkins	332
Dillett Re	118 1017	Doe t Hertford	90, 906
Dinabandhu Nandi t Mannu Lal		Doe t Hiscocks	662 666
Parik	216 651	Doe t James	905 906
Dinabandhu Patra t Sanathan		Doe t Jauncey	901
Dandapat	537	Doe t Jones	331
Dinkar v Appaji	236	Doe t Kelly	928 905
Dina Nath v Ganesh Chandra	717 718	Doe t Kemp	169
Dinanath Chandra t Nawab Ali	371	Doe t Langdon	911
Dinanath Das v Matimuli Das y	642	Doe t Lloyd	478
Dinanath Law t Mitharam	640	Doe v Morris	525
Dinamoyee Deb v Bon Bhan		Doe t Needs	662
Kapur	530 532	Doe t Oliver	823
Dinhal t Framroz	969	Doe t Perkins	992
Dinenironath Sannial t Ramkumar		Doe t Pettett	246
Chose	247	Doe t Phillips	578
Dinnonath Sen t Guruchurn Pal	894	Doe v Powell	350 301
Dinobundhoo Suhaye t Kurlong	722	Doe t Pulman	173
Dinomoney Dabea t Doorgapershad		Doe t Pye	146
Mozoomdar	479 897 872 873	Doe t Rase	590
Dinomoni Chowdhram t Brojo		Doe v Robson	329
Mohani	183 18, 186 344 383	Doe t Roe	481 940
	569 701	Doe t Ross	500 519 519 549 996
Dinomoyi Debi t Roy Luckmiput J		Doe t Steel	223
	6 48 592	Doe t Stone	539
Dinonath Mukerji t Gopal Churn		Doe t Suckernore	437
Mukerji	569	Doe t Thomas	902
Dushaw Elah t Jehangir		Doe t Turford	320 329 394 332
Cawasji	914 930	Doe t Tyler	1009
Dintarini Debi t the matter of the		Doe t Vickers	539
petition of	733 909	Doe t Vowles	329
Dintarini Debi t Dorbo Chandra	726	Doe t Webber	249
Dip Singh t Girand Singh	787	Doe t Westlake	602
Dibora t Phillips	498 660	Doe t Witcomb	342 516
Dvakar Ra t Chandanlal Rao	789	Doe t Wolley	578
Dvethi Varada v Krishnasami		Doe d Barlow t Wiggins	899 876
Ayyangar	019	Doe d Bullen v Mills	874
Diwan Rau v Indarpal Singh	793	Doe d Child v Roe	823
Doe v Allen	149 662	Doe d Derby t Foster	355
Doe t Barnes	376	Doe d Devine t Wilson	639
Doe t Barton	308 339	Doe d Franco t Andrews	372
Doe t Bevis	331	Doe d Gilbert v Post	3
Doe t Bird	238	Doe d Higginbotham t Barton	870 875
Doe t Bover	1012	Doe d Hiscocks t Hiscocks	649
Doe t Bray	369	Doe d Jagomohan Rai t Nima Das	167
Doe t Cartwright	798	Doe d Johnson t Baytap	867 878
Doe t Date	909 011	Doe d Knight t Smythe	868 874
Doe v Davies	324 325 335 338	Doe d Lloyd t Evans	259
Doe t Deakin	801	Doe d Lloyd t Passingham	353
Doe t Derby	346	Doe d Marriott t Edwards	876
Doe t Ford	612	Doe d Pearson t Pies	590
Doe t Francis	150	Doe d Plevin t Brown	872 876
Doe t Gesley	940	Doe d Spencer t Beckett	874
Doe t Griffin	801	Doe d Spalsbury t Burdett	531
Doe t Harvey	595 597	Doe d Welsh t Langfield	3

	PAGE		PAGE
Doe l Wright t Tataani	49	Durga v Gøberdhan	871
Dolder v Hu tingfield	473	Durga Prasad v Ja Narain	118
Dolz v Mo ris	434	Durga Prasad Singh v Brojo Natl	501 815
Dori Lal Sahu t Ro han Dubey	49 601	Durga Prasad Singh v Rajendra
Domun Lall v Pudmun Singh	719	Nara n Bagchi	623 628 63 660 718
D uzelle t Kedar Nath Chucier		Durga Prasad Singh v Ran Doval
butty	630 818 819 867	Ch dhuri	113 467 4 6 892
Do Li r Thakoor v Ram Lall	634	Durga Proead v Bhajan Lal	604
Dool Chand Must t Oomda	761 817		600 637
Doongrusee Byde t Gr dharee M H	74	Durga Prosad t Huzar Singh	815
Doorga Churn S ud Najunooddeen	77 739	Durga Sundari t Ram Krishna
Doorga D t Doorga Churn	411	Pod lar	705
Doorga Da s Nurend Coomar	1 4	Dularey Singh t Suraj Dar Singh	764 790
D rga Prasad Gost Iehari	588	Dwarkanath Pajmohun Chowdhuri
D rga Pershal t I e t Pershad	713	t R ver Steam Nav gat on Co	690
D rga Singh t Sheo Pershad Singh	835	D arka Bunia t R	457
Dorab Ally t Abtool Az e z	447 476	Dwarka Dass t Baboo Jankee	211 363
Dorasamy t Mutlu s v	727	D arka Dass v Sant Baksh	133 360 861
Dowden t Blak y	904	Dwarla Nath t Gunga Daye	347
D wley t W nfield	801	Dwarka Nath v Tara Soonduree	360
D wling t Dowlu	163	Dwarka Nath v Tarita Moy	546
Downs t Cooper	873 876	Dwarka Nath v Unnode Soonduree	874
Doyac and Shaha t Anund Chundra	717	Dwarkanath Bose v Chundee	931
Doyan dh Panda t Kela Panda	794	Dwarkanath Chattopadhy a v
Do lu Hart	805	Bhoggoban Panda	649
Drachenfels The Retriever t		Dvarksnath Chaudhuri v Tafezar
Dra henfels In the matter		Rahaman	98
of the	3 8 434 435	Dvarka t Makla	881
Drant v Browne	598	Dwarka Prasad t Raghiber	699
D aupner The	797	Dwarka Singh t Ramanand Upadhy a
Drinkwater t Porter	333		510 521 520 580
Dubey Sahu t Ganesh Lal	99	Dwyer v Collins	510 520 523 525 904 905
Du B et v Bere ford	345	Dyer v Pearson	848
Ducle s of Kingston a Case	419
Duke t Ashby	867 869
Duke of Devonshire t O Connor	191
D ke of Leeds t Earl of Amherst	815
Dukh Mullah v Halvay	99
Dullab Sirkar v Krishna Kumar	844 847
Dun a Case	797
Duncombe v Dan ell	482 511
Dungariya t Nand Lal	224 869
Dunne v Legge	794
Dunne t Dharsni Kanta Lahuri	380
Durga t Jh ngun	867 871
Durga Charan t Raghunath	167
Durga Charan Bose t Lakhu Narain
Bera	636
Durga Churn t Sohee Bhoosun	407
Durga Das v Norendro Coomar	405
Durga Das t Samash Akon	876
Durga Das Khan v Ishan Chandra
De y	80 85 857
Durga Diba v Anora j	930

	PAGE		PAGE
Ecker t McAllister	802	Faez Bux t Fakiruddin Mohomed	487, 685
Eckowne Singh t Heera Lall	128	Fairhe t Denton	150
	383 494 498	Fairhe v Hastings	229 233, 235
Ede t Kantho Nath	742	Fairtule t Gilbert	636
Edgington t Fitzmaurice	195	Fauz Ali v Koromdu	916
Ed e t Kungsford	390	Fauz un nissa t Hanif un nissa	635 648
Edmunds t Groves	480	Fauzur Rahman t Mamma Khetun	835
Edwards Ex parte	251	Fakcerudeen Mahomed v Official
Edwards t Miller	930	Trustee	393
Edwards t Toulls	150	Fakir Muhammad v Tirumala Chariar	470
Eklowne Singh t Kylash Chun ler	583	Fakirchand Lallubhai v Nagnchand	397
Ekradeshwar Singh t Jalnesvari		Falconer v Hanson	380
Bahnas n	187, 188	' Falls of Ettrick, In the matter of	403
Elahee Buksh In the matter of	1016	Fam Bhusan Banerji v Surjya Kanta
Elahee Buksh Kazi t R	557	Row Chowdhry	743
Elam Molla v R	662	Fanindra Nath Banerjee t R	319 601
Floun Mills Co v Mur Mills Co	715		82 763 985
Ehot t Boyles	947	Faqir Balsh t Dan Bahadur Singh	743
Elkin t Janson	739	Fard un nissa, In re	629
Ells t Saltan	691	Farmloo t Bain	656
Elton t Larkins	233	Farquharson t D varhanath Singh	4 366
Ely t Caldecott	340	Farrar v Beswick	616
Emperor v Jagat Ram	117	Farrar t Hinchinson	857
Enayet Hossein t Declat Bix	816	Farrow t Blomfield	256
Enayetollah Meah t Nubo Coomar	366	Farzand Ali t Zafar Ali	477
Enayetollah t Elabcebuksh	615	Farzand Ali Khan t Bismillah Begum	625
England d Syburn t Slade	876	Fatim un nissa Begum t Soonder
English t Tottie	908	Das	864
Englishman Ltd t I ajpat Rai	459 471	Fatma v Darya	374 376
Entusham Ali v Jamna Prasad	592 609	Fatta v Emp	620
Eranjoli Illath t Franjoli Illath	186	Fatteh Singji t Bamanji	676
Eranjoli Vishnu t Franjoli Krishnan	853	Faulkner t Brine	673
Eravat t Sidramappa Pasar	851	Fawkes t Lamb	647
Erfanconissa t Pearee Mohun	716	Fazel Husein v Muhammed Sherif	369 728
Erskine v Government	366	Fazlar Rahman v Paj Chunder	754
Ertaza Hossein t Baney Mistry	754	Fazulbhoj Jaffer v Credit Bank of
Eshan Chandra v Nundamoni	412	India	833
Eshan Chunder t Protab Chunder	664	Feeham Re	388
Eshan Chundra v Shama Charan	113	Fegredo v Mahomed Mudessur	708
Eshan Chandra Samanta t Nil Moni		Felder v State	317
Singh	168	Fellowes t Williamson	193 255
Eshoor Das v Venkatasubba Rau	631	Feltham In the matter of	648
Eugene Arama Case	144	Fenn t Griffith	594
Evans t Birch	212	Fenner v Duplock	871 876 577
Evans t Evans	116, 803	Fenner t S E. R Co	905 907
Evans t Morgan	447	Fenwick t Thornton	231 243
Evans t Mosely	953	Fergusson t Govt	363
Evans v Rees	406	Fernandez t Alves	534
Evansville R. R. Co t Young	444	Feroz v Emperor	254
Exeter t Warren	332	Ferrand v Milligan	1009
		Few t Guppy	911
F		Fielder t Rav	596
Fabrigas v Mostyn	252	Finch v Finch	925
Fackerooden Adam Saw In the		Firm (K. R. V.) v Seetharama	241
matter of	491	Fisher v Owen	910

	PAGE		PAGE
Ganouri Lal t R ..	431	Girdharee Singh t Koolahul Singh	694
Ganpat Marwari t Balmaund		Girdharee Singh t Lalloo Koonwur	807
Behara 638, 699 701, 702, 791		Girdhari Singh t Hardeo Narain	826
Ganpat Rai t Multan	869	Girdharial Dayaldas t Jaganath
Ganpat Rao t Ganpat Rao	753 757	Girdharibhai	724
Ganpat Rao t Ram Gandra	589	Girdle-tons v Brighton Aquarium
Ganu t Bhan	512 632, 642	Co	417
Garden Reach Spinning Co t Secre		Girdhari Lal v Emperor	199, 806
tary of State	118, 1014	Girdar Sarkar v Harish Chuntra	806
Gardner t Irvin	903	Girja Sundar Chuckerbutty t R	298
Gardner t Muilt	202	Girindra Chandra t Nogensra Nath	383
Gardner Peerage Case	433, 446	Girindra Chundra t Rajendro
Garroett In re	925	Nath	131, 370
Garth t Howard	231 231	Girindra Nath t Bijoy Gopal Nu
Garurudhwaja t Saparandhwaja	335	Lerjee	530, 531
363 443 444 476 493	694	Girish Chmnder t Bhugwan Chunder	439
Garvey t Hibbert	672	Girish Chunder t Broughton	401, 402
Gaskill t Skene	150	Girish Chunder v R	132
Gasper t Mytton	779	Girish Chunder v Shama Churn	221, 230
Gathercole t Mill	517	Girish Chunder t Soshi Shikha
Gaurand t Filson Gower Bell		reswar	608
Telephone Co	902	Girja Bai t Sadashiv Dhundiraj	702
Gaur Mohan t Tarachand	794	' Glencoe,' The	732
Gauri Sanker t Canga Ram	825, 835	Gobardhan Das t Hari Lal	537
Gaya Din t Sri Ram	775	Goberdhan Singh t Ritu Roy	801
Gaya Prasad t Bhagat Singh	356	Goberdhan Lal t Singessur Dutt	713
Gee t Ward	335	Gobinda v Emp	020
Genda Puri t Chhattur Puri	710	Gobind Chunder t Doorga
George t Surrev	438	persaud	099 791
George t Thyer	799	Gobind Chunder t Sri Gobind	175
George Clarke t Bindabun Chunder	747	Gobind Das t Suraj Das	601
George Whitchurch Lal t Cava		Gobind Lal t Dehendronath Mullick	723
nagh	841	Gobind Nath t G M Reilly	683
Gerish t Chartier	193	Gobind Prasad t Mohan Lal	740
Getty t Getty	224	Gobind Suain t Narain Rasoot	925
Ghasity t Umrao Jan	168	Gobinda t Dwarkanath	671
Ghassee Khan t Kulloo	820	Gobinda Nath Shaha Chowdhury t
Ghellaibhai t Nandubhai	648, 660	Surja Mantha Lahiri	873
Gheran t Kunj Behara	844 845, 847	Goblet v Beechey	671
Gholaub Koonwaree t Eshur Chan		Goculdas Bulabdas Manufacturing
dey	824	Co t Scott	824
Ghulam Ali Shah t Shahbal Singh	694	Goday Narain t Sri Ankitam	421, 803
Gibbs, In re	651	Goff t Mills	927
Gibson t Doeg	810	Gogun Chunder t Dhuronidhur
Gibson t Hunter	192	Mundul	741
Gildigadu t R	298, 299	Gogun Chunder t P	411
Gilbert t Endean	103	Gokaldas Gokaldas t Pirannal
Giles t Powell	931, 934	Premulldas	801, 814, 818
Gill t Gill	736	Gokal Prasad t Radho .	470
Gillard t Bates	804	Gokool Kristo t Davil	722, 777
Gillies t Smithers	533	Gokal Chunder t Nilmoney Mitter .	723
Girdhar Hari t Kali Kant	739 740	Gokul Dicht t Maharaj Dicht	369
Girdhar Nagpshet t Ganput Moroba	145	Golamabdin Sarkar t Hem Chandra
Girdharee Lal t Kantoo Lal	711	Majumdar	833
Girdharee Lal t Modho Por	484	Golam Ali t Tagore ..	718

	PAGE		PAGE
Goham Nabee t. Biswonnath Kurr	754	Gopeenath Naik t. Jadoo Ghose	851
Golap Jan t. Bholanath	929	Gopeenath Singh v. Anund Moyee	127, 382, 779
Golden River Mining Co. t. Buxton Mining Co.	947	Gopal v. Lakhpat Rai	898, 903, 904, 906
Golole Chunder t. Magistrate of Chittagong	226	Gopi Nath v. Bhugwat Pershad	811
Goluk Chunder t. Raja Sreemurd	484	Gopi Wasadev t. Markande Narayan	851
Goluk Kishore t. Nunl Mhun	484	Gorachand Sircar t. Ram Narain	127, 346 936 945
Good In the goods of	783	Gorakh Babaji t. Vithal Narayan	686
Goodall t. Little	901	Gordon v. Gordon	766
Goodman t. Savres	803	Gordon Stuart & Co. v. Beejoy Gobind	305
Goodrich t. Venkanna	836	Gore t. Gibson	221
Goodright t. Harwood	735	Goreebollah Sircar t. Boyd	245
Goodright t. S. I.	446	Goreti Subbarow t. Virgonda Nara	643 644
Goodtitle t. Sothern	663, 664	simhamon	643 644
Goodwin t. Parton	244	Goriboolia Kazee t. Gooroodas Roy	487 488 498
Goornance In the matter of	118, 484	Gorison v. Perrin	671
Gooro Das t. Huronath Roy	722	Goshain Tota t. Rajah Rickmunce	1010 1011 1012 1015
Gooro Do s t. Isur Chunder	811	Goss t. Lord Nugent	942
Gooro Pershad t. Bilunto Chunder	132, 379, 579	Goss v. Quinton	519
Gooro Pershad v. Juggobundoo		Goss t. Watlington	244
Mozondar	731	Gossain Dass v. Siroo Koomarce	700 722
Gooro Pershad t. Halee Pershad	701	Gossain Pambharti t. Gossavi Ish	693
Gooro Prasunno t. Nil Madhub	769 790	varbharti	693
Gopal t. Dasarath Set	396	Gour Chandra Das t. Prosanna	742
Gopal t. Kanaram	701	Kumar	742
Gopal t. Krishna	780 781	Gour Hari v. Amrunneasa Khatoon	878
Gopal t. Mageeshar	396	Gour Lal t. Mohesh Narain	221 231
Gopal t. Narayan	859	Gour Lal v. Rameswar Bhaumik	871
Gopal t. Sarju	779	Gour Monee t. Huree Kishore	379
Gopal Chela t. Rajaram Amtha	626	Gour Monee t. Krishna Chunder	857
Gopal Chunder t. Herembo Chunder	814	Gour Paroy t. Woma Soonduree	582 583 753
Gopal Chunder v. Madhub Chunder	383	Gour Sundar t. Hem Chunder	247
Gopal Chunder t. Sarat Chunder	845	Gout Suran v. Kanbja Singh	510
Gopal Chunder t. Umesh Narain	721	Goura Chandra v. Secretary of State	848
Gopal Lal v. Manick Lal	939, 1005	Gource Narain t. Malhoosoodun	688
Gopal Lal t. Tiluck Chunder	717 812	Dutt	688
Gopal Mundil t. Noboo Kishen	360 365	Gource Das t. Jagunnath Poy	878 879
Gopal Narain t. Mudlomutty	236 853	Gouridass Namasudra t. R	319
Gopal Narhar t. Hamant Ganesh	693		601, 690
Gopal Sahu t. Joyram Tewary	823	Government t. Gridharee Lal	871
Gopal Singh v. Laloo Lal	635	Govind v. Chokhe	856
Gopals Krishna v. Venkatanaraina	714	Govinda t. Josha Premji	681 682
Gopalasami Chetti t. Aruna Chellam	339 446 764, 792	Govinda Kuar t. Lala Kishun	81, 852
Gopalayyan t. Ragbupathayyan	165 167 168 188, 873	Govinda Priya t. Ratan Dhup	718
Goparund Jha v. Lalla Golm I	720 877	Gobindasami v. Kuppasami	741
Gopaul Chunder v. Gowr Monee	859	Govind Atmaram t. Santai	683
Gpeckristo Gossain v. Gungapersaud	644 699 701 791 810, 811	Govindji Jhaver v. Chhotalal Velsi	178 233
Gopee Lal v. Musti Sree Chundrasee	224 307, 480, 853, 862	Govindray Deshmukh t. Ragho	376
Gopee Mohun v. Abdul Pajah	362	Deshmukh	376
		Govind Vaman t. Sakharain Ram	824
		chandra	824

	PAGE		PAGE
Gowri Patra v Reiley	718	Gudgen v Bisett	641
Grace v Baynton	258	Gujjo Koer v Aalay Ahmel	365
Graham v Phanindranath	366 373	Gujju Lall v Fattch Lall	7 8 99
Granade Venkata Ratnam v Corpo- ration of Calcutta	477	100 101 128, 134 160 167 170
Grant v Bijnath Tewares	581 582	171, 172 174 175 176 177, 178
Grant v Madlox	670	179, 180 181 186 333 404 407
Grant v Norway	8 6		408 440
Grant v Robinson	814	Gulab Singh v Raja Seth Gokuldas	708
Gravenor v Woolhouse	871, 870	Gulamali v Miyabhai	741
Craves v Key	828 857	Gully v Bp of Exeter	16
Gray v Warner	760	Gulzar Ali v Feda Ali	838
Great Western Railway Co v Mc Carty	762	Gulzar Mal v Madho Ram	247
Great Western Ry v Bristol Corporation	649	Guman Gallubhai v Sorabji Bur- jori	484
Great Western Railway Co v Willis	233 235	Gumanee hazi v Hurryhur Moo- kerjee ..	731
Greaves v Greenwood	801	Gumant Singh v Chakkar Singh	686
Green v New River Co	469	Gunga Bushen v Ram Gut	871
Green v Settlements In re	744	Gungadut Singh v Bimola Dassee	730
Greenler Chunder v Mackintosh	203	Gunga Gobind v Bhopal Chunder	724
Greender Chunder v Troylolo Nauth	921	Gungamala Chowdhram v Malibah Chunder	687
Greenough v Peeles	972 973 974	Gungamovee Debi v Apurba Chandra	373
Greenough v Gaskell	884 900 901	Gunga Narain v Padhika Mohun	570
	903 904 905	Gunga Narain Gupta v Tiluckram Chowdhry	696
Greenshield v Henderson	801	Gunga Pershad v Gogun Singh	222
Greenstade v Dare	203 423	Ganga Pershad v Inderjit Singh	361 327
Greenwood v Holquetta	371	Ganga Pershad v Ramphul Sahoo	803
Creesh Chunder v Must Dinggo butty	761	Ganga Sahu v Lekhray Singh	104
Gregg v Wells	828 844 859	Ganendra Prasad v Baijnath Singh	826
Gregory v Doudge	856	Ganjra Huar v Ablakh Pande	370
Gregory v Dooley Chund	346 354	Gunnesh Dutt v Mugneeram Chow- dhry	829
Gregory v Howard	231 2 0	Gunnesh Pattn v Ram Nidbee	412 413
Gregory v Molesworth	793	Gunpat Rao v Bapu	653
Grellier v Neale	809	Gur Buksh Singh v Chatta Singh	638 639
Grey v Redman	329	Gurdayal Mal v Jhandumal	165
Girdhari Lall v Govt of Bengal	710		187 405
Griffin v Brown	409	Gurdit Singh v Emperor	286
Griffin v Mason	808	Gureebullah Sirkar v Mohun Lall	99, 100
Griffith v Hughes	838	Gurisdhaswami v Parana	835
Grish Chander v Iswar Chandra	140 70 861 873	Gurney v Gurney	767
Grish Chander v Mohesh Chunder	696	Gurudas Day v Sambhu Nath	583
Grish Chander v R	892 893	Gurulingaswami v Panialalsh mamma	827, 853
Grish Chander v Bhagwan Chunder	873	Gurnami Chetti v Salsava Chetti	713
Grish Chunder Ghose v Kishori Molan Das	781	Gurnami Sastrial v Ganapathia	714
Guardhouse v Blackburn	677	Gurnawami Nandan v Gopalaswami Odayar	706
Gudadbur Banerjee v Tara Chand Banerjee	379 380	Gusam Val v Ram Pakha Mal	863
Gudadbur Paul v Bhvrat Chunder	583	Guteo Korbuto v Blukut Koi- burto ..	167, 174
Guddalur Ruthna v Kunnatur Arumuga	613 615 640 642	Gya Singh v Mohamed Soliman	893
		Gyan Chunder v Durga Churn

	PAGE		PAGE
H		Haranand Poy & Chettangia Ram	574
Habibullah & P	925	Hara Sundari & Kumar Dukhnessur	824
Habibram Das & Hem Nath Sarma	372 745	Harbahadur Lal & Chandraj Bahadur	990
Halley & Bixenlale	164	Harbans Lal & Maharajah of
Halley & Carter	1 5	Benares	717
Halar Ali & Abu Mia	914 929	Harbana Sahai & Bhauro Pershad	5
Hader Khan & Secretary of State for		Harding & Crethorne	146 202
India in Council	747 810	Harding & Jones	279
Haigh & Brooks	805	Hartmel & Coleman	197
Haimun Chull & Koomar Gune beam	814	Hardy & trial	951
Haines & Guthrie	337	Hatechur Majoomdar & Churn
Hait Seng & Dibia Saig	703	Majhee	128
Haji & Colua	739 757	Harekhan & Bishun Chundra	630 642
Haji Jalaria & Haji Kaim	997	Harendra Lal & Haridas Debi	637 1015
Haji Khan & Balloo Das	681 872	Hargrave & Hargrave	445 765 766
Hajee Mahom & T. Spinner & Co	145 618 671	Hari & Lakshman	847
Haji Sahoo & Ayesha Bai	161	Hari & Parmchundra	852
Hakim Khan & Gool Khan	797	Hari Chintaman & Moro Lakshman
Hakim Maul & Mahomed & Bharat		371 375 339, 421 581 582 583 743	747
India	684	Hari Churn Singh & R	600
H. K. Mohanna & Jyeban	760 762	Hari Das & Ghansam Narain	719
Halman & P	917 303	Haridas Ranchore & Mercantile
Hill & Kerr	13 910	Bank	625
Hill & Bapthige	509	Hari Khardu & Dlondu Nath	747
Hill & Carrove	619	Hari Kishon Bhagat & Kashi
Hill & Hill	505	Pershad	70, 839 858
Hill & Veikata Lakshna	774	Hankishore Mitra & Abdul Bai	109 893
Hiller & Worman	119 233 48	Hari Krishna & R	983
Hillier & H. Leate	988	Hari Mohun & Kissen Sundari	895
Hillmark & Case	905	Hari Mohun & Krishna Mohun	047
Hamilton & Co	970	Hari Narayan & Ganpatray Dap	820
Hamilton & Tennant	138	Hari Narayan & Sram Chakravarti	991 815
Hamilton & C. N. I. Co	164	Haripada Mundle & Charan Bwas	748
Havmnd & Braintree	331 319	Harsh Chunder & Nishi Kanta	794
Hawpa & Wall	119 150	Harsh Chunder Neogy & Secretary
Hawfui & A. & Faiz & Nisa	616 693	of State	493
Hawantrio & Secy of State for		Harjivan & Shivram	794
India	48 7 6	Harkhu & Emperor	988
Hannab & Jannath	881 885	Har Lal & Basannia Singh	863
Hanooman Pershad & Mus		Harath Pershad & Nandal Dass	406
Rabooce	589 706 717 819 8 8	Haroprasad & Sheo Dyal	892
Hansa Koor & Sleo Cobin	167	Harratt & Wile	263 385
Hanson & Parker	243	Harrajia Debi & Rikim Debi	508 517
Hanuman Dat & Assadula	817	Harris & Re	958
Hanuman Dutt & Kishon Kishore	713	Harris & Prown	670
Hanuman Singh & Nankh Chan	711 719	Harris & C. W. R. Co	762
Hara Comar & D. Jorgation	402	Harris & Knight	718 806
Haralun & & Halodhur Chutler	872	Harris & Hickett	613 615
Harak Chai & Babnu Chandra	131 611	Harrison & Barton	145
Hara Kumar Saha & Ram Chandra		Harrison & Mayor	764 799
Lal	612	Harrod & Harrod	764 799
Haranan & J. Gov & Pani Copal	489	Harshankar Partab Singh & Lal
H. I. Gov & S. 5	71 533	Ragburaj Singh	759
		Hart & Hart	517 577 803
		Hartley & Wilkinson	612

	PAGE		PAGE
Harvey v Croydon Union	.. 481	Hennessey v Wright	5, 884, 895, 896, 897, 898, 997, 998
Harvey v. Fabrie	.. 403	Henry v Leigh	.. 510
Harvey v Francis	.. 871, 872	Henry v Marquis of Westmeath	.. 594
Hasaji v Dhonduram	937	Henry Coxon, The	.. 324
Hasan Khan v. Mandir Das	725	Henry Francis Blanford, In the goods of	.. 568
Hasha Khand v. Jesha Pennaji	618	Henry Packer, In the goods of	567
Haskins v Warren	443	Herumbdhev Dharnadhardev v
Haslam v. Hall	906, 908	Kashunath Bhaskar	644
Hasnu v Emperor	227	Het Lal Roy, In re	.. 892
Hassonally Moledina v Popatlal		Hetherington v Kemp	211, 213, 322
Parbhandas	673	Hew v Moorhouse	597
Hathaway v Haskell	242	Heyworth v Knight	.. 605
Ha'hem Mondal v Emperor	691	Hiberd v Knight	.. 515
Hatim v R	475, 494	Hicks v Thompson	258
Hawes v Drager	769	Hidayat Oollah v Rai Jan Khanum	798
Hawke, Re	512	Higgins v Nobin Chunder	590
Hawkes v Salter	213	Higgins v Senior	608
Hawkins, Re	413	Higham v Ridgway	325, 326, 329, 331
Hawkins v Warre	395, 598	Hibbourn v Fogg	.. 875
Hay v Gordon	232	Hill v Campbell	910
Haynes v McDermott	539	Hill v Clarke	.. 634
Hayalep v Gomer	149	Hill v Delt	.. 927
Hayward v Stephens	572	Hill v Manchester, etc., Co	.. 241
Hazarimal Babu v Abam Nath	714	Hill v Walson	.. 925
Horra v Emp	920	Hillayya Subbaya v Narayanappa
Head v Head	764 767	Timmaya	.. 870
Heane v Rogers	251, 256 304, 828	Hills v Ishore Ghose	.. 374, 375
Heath v Cresslock	840	Hira Lal v A Hills	172, 174, 175 176
Heatherington v Kemp	211, 213	Hira Lal v Ganesh Prasad	518, 523
Hebbard v Knight	512, 911	Hira Lal v Sabeel Jan	.. 889
Hedley v Holt	833	Hiran Miya, In the matter of	272, 274, 277
Heera Lal v Barikunnissa Bebee	715	Hiranmov Kumar v Ramjan Ali	.. 777
Heera Lal v Petumber Mundal	731	Huramba Nath Bandopadhyaya v
Heera Lal Bakshee v Rajkishore	869	Surendranath Mitra	.. 372
Heinger v Droy	334	Hirbai v Gorhai	.. 671
Heinger v Dror	404	Hitchins v Basset	.. 735
Helan Das v Durga Das Mundal	739, 631	Hitchman v Waltman	.. 870
Helen, The	400	Hoare v Coryton	.. 809
Helher v Silcox	873	Hoare v Graham	.. 608
Hemanta Kumari v Banhu Behary		Hodges v London Delhi Bank	.. 762
Sklar	347	Hodgson, In re	.. 925
Hemanta Kumari Devi v Jogendra		Hodoll v Taylor	.. 164
Nath Roy	722	Hoghton v Houghton	.. 218
Hem Chandra v Kali Prasanna	251, 321 329, 681	Holbard v Stephens	.. 595
Hem Chunder v Kally Churn	321	Holcombe v Hewson	.. 137
	618, 619 620	Holding v Elliott	.. 856
Hem Coomaree v R	92	Holdsworth v Dunsdale	.. 254
Hem Iotta v Sreedhone Barooa	779	Hollingham v Head	137, 138, 206, 776
Hemnath Dutt v Ashbur Sindar	719	Hollwar, Pe	.. 599
Hemnath Rai v Janke Rai	683, 698	Holmes v Mathews	.. 618
Henderson, In the goods of	472, 566, 567	Holt, Ex parte	.. 279
Henderson v Carbondale Coal Co	809	Holt v Jesse	.. 624
Henderson & Co v Williams	881	Holt v Square	.. 228
Heman v Lester	256 965

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Holt & Co. v. Collyer ..	667	Hureebur Mookerjee v. Raj Kishen
Home v. Bentinck ..	896, 897	Mookerjee ..	823
Hornfray, In the goods of ..	573	Hureebur Mojumdar v. Churn Majhee
Honapa v. Narsapa ..	851, 861		7, 515, 552
Hood v. Lady Beanchamp ..	337	Huri Ram v. Bhikari Roy	732, 747
Hopcraft v. Keys ..	876	Huri Ram v. Raj Coomar	684, 747
Hope v. Hope ..	309, 322	Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar
Hope v. Liddell ..	912	221, 222, 230, 504, 516, 519, 520,
Horendra Narain v. Chandra Kanta ..	530		545, 574
Hormasji Framji, In re ..	653	Hurish Chunder v. Tara Chand ..	346
Hormasji Karsetji v. Pedder ..	475	Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali ..	117
Hornumji v. Baudhanbaji ..	401	Huronath Sircar v. Preonath Sircar
Horne v. Mackenzie ..	993		104, 221, 231, 380
Hossain Ali v. Abul Ali ..	478	Hurparshad v. Sheo Dyal	113, 167,
Hossein Buksh v. R. ..	115, 132, 912		168, 187
Holdsworth v. City of Glasgow Bank	817	Hurnachurn Bose v. Monindra Nath ..	498
Houlston v. Smyth ..	809	Hurro Chunder, Re ..	888, 892
How v. Hall ..	599	Hurrochunder v. Shooro Dhonce ..	97
Howard v. Hudson ..	842, 848, 863	Hurro Dyal v. Mahomed Ghazi	727, 739, 780
Howard v. Wilson ..	104	Hurtonath Mullick v. Nattanund
Howe v. Malkin ..	147, 245, 330	Mullick ..	172, 187, 342, 344
Howland Will case ..	430	Hurro Soondery, In re ..	929
Hriday Nath Mohobutnissa Bibee.	702	Hurry Churn v. R. ..	475, 494, 783, 784
Brishkesh Mandal v. Atadbaut		Hurrybur Mookerjee v. Abbas Ally ..	731
Mandal ..	1016	Hurrybur Mookhopadhyay v. Maduh
Huckvale, In re ..	809	Chunder ..	718
Huddersfield Banking Co. v. Henry		Hurry Sunkur v. Kali Coomer ..	830
Lester & Sons, Ltd ..	419	Hussey v. Horne Payne ..	604
Hudson v. Parker ..	531	Hussonally v. Tribhovan Das ..	655
Hudson v. Roberts ..	192	Hutcheson v. Mannington	478, 572
Huffer v. Allen ..	412, 415	Hutcheson v. Smith ..	241
Hughes v. Cornelius ..	400	Hutchins v. Scott ..	742
Hughes v. Hughes ..	1009	Hutchinson v. Barnard ..	350
Hughes v. Secretary of State for		Hutton v. Warren ..	646
India ..	808	Huxtable (In re) ..	659
Hughes v. Thorpe ..	221	Hyde v. Palmer ..	147
Hughli v. Drachenfels ..	431	Hyder Hossain v. Mahomed Hossain	791
Huguenin v. Basely ..	759, 763
Hukum Chand v. Hirafal ..	634	I
Hulodhur Roy v. Jupoo Nath ..	231	Ibrahim v. H. ..	354
Humfrey v. Dall ..	646	Idityam Iyer v. Ram Krishna Iyer ..	598
Hungate v. Gascoigne ..	446	Idris v. Skinner ..	859
Hunooman Persad v. Munraj Kun-		Iftikarunissa Begum v. Amjad Ali ..	804
waree ..	708, 740	Iggulden v. May ..	145, 591
Hunooman Pershad Panday's case ..	708	Ihsan v. Emp. ..	490, 494
Hunsa Keer v. Sheo Gobind ..	175, 305	Imdad Ahmad v. Pateshri Partap
Hunuraj Purmanand v. Ruttonji Walji	879	Narain Singh ..	109, 117
Hunt v. Hunt ..	656	Imrit Chamar v. Subdhar Panday	580, 729
Hunt v. Livermore ..	612	Ina Sheikh v. R. ..	773, 774
Hunter v. Leathley ..	912	Inayet Husen v. Ali Husen	752, 756
Huntingford v. Massey ..	206	Incedon v. Berry ..	409
Huntley v. Donovan ..	375	Inderan Valungypuly v. Hama-
Hurdy Narain v. Rooder Perlash ..	714	swamy ..	800
Her Dyal v. Heeralal ..	480	Inder Narain v. Mahomed Nazir-
Her Dyal v. Roy Krato ..	682, 709	ooddeen ..	169, 401

	PAGE		PAGE
Inder Singh t Fateh Singh	181	Jackson t Wood	410
Inderjit t Lal Chand	635	Jacob v Lee	523
India General Steam and Naviga- tion Co v Bhagwan Chandra	796	Jacob t Lindsay	606
Indian General Steam and Navi- gation Co t Gopal Chandra	796	Jacobs t Humphrey	251
Indur Chandra t Lachmi Bibi	647	Jadabram Dey v Bulloram Dey	727 816 897, 938
Ingham v Primrose	880	Jadoomoney Dass v Gungadhar Seal	703
Ingram t Lea	598	Jadu Lal Sahu t Janaki Koer	470
Ings' Trial	950	Jadu Nath v Rup Lal	851
Inland Revenue t Mullers Margarine	882	Jadu Rai t Bhubotaran Dunda	127, 604 627 671 936
Innasimuthu t Upakarthu Dayan	757	Jadubar Singh t Sheo Saran	409
Iqbal Husen t Nand Kishore	752	Jadubnath v Ramsoondur	753
Ireland t Livingstone	805	Jafar Hasain v Mashuq Ali	722
Irish Society t Derry	308 1009	Jafar Husen t Panjit Singh	589, 590
Isah Mandal R	371	Jagabandhu Saha t Magnamoyi Dass	718, 815
Isao Mohammed t Bai Fatma	742	Jagabhai Lalubhai t Vij Bhubhudas	711
Isap Ahmed t Abhramji Adanji	792	Jagadindra Nath t Secretary of State for India	380 387 502 813
Ishan Chunder t Beni Madhub	247 248 255	Jagan Nath v Mannu Lal	236
Ishan Chunder t Bhjrub Chunder	509	Jagan Prasad v Inder Mal	609
Ishan Chunder t Harin Sardar	325	Jagannadha Narayana t Pedda Pakur	812
Ishan Chunder v Ram Lochun	422 701	Jagannath Khan t Bajram Das	531, 532
Ishan Chandra Mitter t Ramrangan Chuckerhutti	718 725	Jagannath t Dhirajao	520
Ishan Chandra t R	773 916 917	Jagannath Prasad t Runjit Singh	403
Ishan Muchi t R	773	Jagannatha t Ganga Reddi	847
Ishan Chandra t R	773	Jagar Nath Singh t Lalta Prasad	835
Ishore Ghose v Hills	474 475	Jagamath and Co t Cresswell	881
Ishri Prasad v Baij Nath	779	Jagannath t Sankar	645
Ishri Prasad t Lalji Jas	476 581 700	Jagamath Pershad t Hamman Petshad	118
Ishur Chunder t Doyamov Debea	603	Jagannath Prasad Singh t Syed Abdullah	864
Ismail Ariff t Mahomed Gous	731 755	Jagat Mohini t Rakhal Dass	672
Ismail Khan t Aghore Nath	719 812	Jagat Pal t Jageshar Baksh	316 723 331, 378
Ismail Khan t Broughton	812, 815 846	Jagatpal Sinha v Jogeshar Sinha	340
Ismail Khan t Fidayatunissa	798	Jagannath v Ravji	676
Ismail Khan t Joygoon Bibee	814 846	Jogdeo v Emp	955 971
Ismail Khan t Munimoye Dass	816	Jagers t Bunnings	242
Ismail Musajee t Hafiz Boo	616 760 763	Jaggon Lal In the matter of	372
Isti Prasad t Umrao Singh	929	Jagjivandas t Bai Amba	757
Isti Singh t Gunga	369	Jagant Koer v Durga Prasad	118 736 1014
Issur Chunder t Nobodeep Chunder	479	Jagan Koer v Raghoon Nundun	360
Issur Chunder t Russeck Lal	127	Jai Chand Bahador v Gurwar Singh	721
Iswar Chunder, In the matter of	103	Jainab Bibi v Hyderally Sahib	950
Ittapan t Nannu	244	Jai Narayan v Kadumbini Das	868 869
J		Jai Narayan t R	262 600
		Jai Ram Das v Paj Narain	610
		Jai Singh Prasad v Sujia Singh	601
		Jaimallahdin, Jc	774
		Jabbar Sheikh t Tamiz Sheikh	888
		Jacker v I C Co	1003
		Jackson, In re	744
		Jackson v Irym	777
		Jackson v Thomason	972 981
		Jackson t Ward	744

	PAGE		PAGE
Jainulla Sheikh v Inu Khan	177	Jervis v Berridge	604
Jainutulla v Ramani Kant	176, 185	Jesunghhai v Hatapi	876
Jaipal Gur v Dharmapala	475	Jesus Coll v Gibbs	512
Jahir Ali v Raj Chunder	472, 473, 548, 552	Jeswant Singjee v Jet Singjee	798, 932
Jalandhar Bhakur v Jharula Das	709	Jethabhai v Nathabhai	757 841, 962, 863
Jalpa Prasad v Emperor	135	Jetha Parkha v Ram Chandra	115
Jamatdi v Emp	920	Jew v Wood	876
Jamlu Prasad v Muhammad Aftah		Jewell v Parr	110
Ali	779	Jhama v Deobux	778
Janbu Pamaonamy v Sundaraj		Jhanda Singh v Wahid ud din	623, 625
Chetty	776	Jhandu v Mohan Lal	835
Jaricela Khatun v Pagnl Ram	167	Jhandu v Tarif	705
James v Bellington	164	Jhari Singh v Tokharam Marwari	679
Jauca v B ..	140	Jhinguri Tewari v Durga	861, 863
Jau .. le ted v Mahomed Mod		Jhubboo Mahton, In the matter of
cl ..	510	the petition of	947, 987, 988, 994
Jau .. n In re	619	Jhundu v Niamit Khan	695, 714
Jau .. v Nam Sukh	711, 713	Jianutullah Srdar v Romani Kant	172
Jau .. v Binath Roy	593	Jiban Kahi Mukherji v Mani Mala
Jau .. v Sarabji v Lakshmiram		Dassi	497
R .. ram	863	Jibanti Nath v Shib Nath	751
v .. v N Tata v Hashimath	711, 714	Jibun Nissa v Asger Ali	641
v .. v S .. v, Jure	738	Jigoyamba Bai Sahiba v Venkatasani
v .. v .. v Kamalsthammal		Ammal	371
	822 824, 826 832	Jivandas Keshavji v Framji Nana
J .. v Chowdhry v Doolur Chowdhry	304	bhai	474, 475, 591, 606 607
J .. v .. v Anant	589	Jiwanah Beg v Bisa Mal	643
J .. v .. v L .. n	589	Jiwan Lal v Behari Lal	817
J .. v Khar v Luchm Narain	413, 414, 415	Jnan Chowdhry v Deolar Chowdhry	245
J .. v M .. v Ranno Singh	187, 634, 729	Jnadendra Mohan v Gopal Das	643
J .. v P .. v Lifut Ali	247	Joadendra Nath Bose v Gadadhur
J .. v Prasad v Dwarka Prasad	287	Prasad	697
J .. v Jay Mazumdar v Keshab Lal	743	Jodunath Roy v Raja Butoda	222, 221, 225
J .. v .. v .. v K .. al	699, 791	Jogendra Chunder v Dwarka Nath	211, 213
J .. v .. v Gopal Acharya	710	Jogendra Deb v Funindro Deb	398, 399
J .. v Kumari v Lakumoni	570	Jogendra Krishna Roy v Kurpal
Jarat Kumari Dassi v Bessessur Dutt		Harshi	889
	112, 426, 733, 735, 902	Jogendra Narain v Banki Sing	721
J .. v .. v Kennedy	885	Jogendra Nath v Sangap Caro	920
J .. v .. v Leonard	251	Jogendra Nath Bunya v Mohendra
J .. v Lal v Ganga Devi	779	Chora	825, 854
J .. v .. v Emperor	293	Jogendra Nath Mukhyopadhyaya v
J .. v .. v B .. v Mall v Sadashiv		Netai Charan Bandopadhyaya	536
Walekar	832, 833	Jogendra Nath Rai v Baladeo Das	722, 723
J .. v .. v Sing v Sheonarain Lal	353	Jogendra Nath v Nitai Churn	535, 536 809
	353, 539	Jog .. v .. v Singh v Bycunt Nath	569, 570
J .. v .. v Singjee v Jet Singjee	761	Jogini Mohan v Bhoot Nath	725, 731
J .. v .. v Ram Chandra	744	Jagomohon v Nimu Das	167
J .. v .. v Price	710	Jogun Koor v Raghoonundon Lal	792
J .. v .. v Bibi v Kuwar Sham	503	John Elliot, In the goods of	567
J .. v .. v Secretary of State	896	John Howe v Charlotte Howe	494,
J .. v .. v Sheroraj Singh	312		768, 769, 890
J .. v .. v Sheikh v Jaibanessa Bibi	747, 755	John Kerr v Nuzzur Mahomed and
J .. v .. v Duthby	908 910	Azeem Serang	389, 570
J .. v .. v V ..	118, 562 1014	Johnson v Givson	359

	PAGE		PAGE
Johnson v Kershaw	942	Juggernath Sew v Ram Dyal	631
Johnson v Lawson	339	Juggessur Buttobyal v Poodro
Johnson v Pye	83*	Narayan	708
Johnson v R	1017	Juggessure Debi v Gudadhur
Johnson v Thucker	902	Banerjee	731
Johnstone v Marks	833	Jugobundhu Chatterjee v Watson
Johnstone v Todd	112 947	& Co	894
Jolly v Arbuthnot	809	Jugobundhu Mitter v Purnanund
Jolly v Rees	912	Gossami	723 724
Jolly v Taylor	599	Jugobundhu Mukerjee v Ram
Jolly v Young	670	Chander	723 724
Joloke Singh v Gundar Singh	731	Jugdishnund Misser v Hamid
Jones v Edwards	599	Russool	723
Jones v Godrich	733 904	Jugomohun Ghose v Karsree
Jones v Gordon	775	chund	646
Jones v Howell	79	Jugomohun Ghose v Manick
Jones v James	451	Chund	167 168 169 191
Jones v Jones	730 501 973	Juggun Lall In the matter of	361
Jones v Morrell	149	Juggernath Sahoo v Syud Shah	146
Jones v Smith	203 204	Juggut Chunder v Bhugwan Chunder
Jones v Williams	167 168 173 190		689, 729
Jogul Kishore v Kalee Churn	712	Juggut Mohun v Dwarka Nath	470
Joomna Pershad v Joyram Lall	696	Jugmohandas v Mangaldas	168 187,
Joopody Sarayya v Lakshmana swamy	689 728 745 816		189 440
Jooruh Haji v Kemp	544	Jugodumha Chowdhram v Ram
Jordan v Money	259 863	Chunder	722
Joseph Perry v Official Assignee	299 914	Jugtanund Misser v Nerbhan Singh
Joshua v Alliance Bank of Simla	203 204		640 641, 642
Jotadharilal v Raghuripershad	713	Jugul Kishori v Ananda Lal	239
Jotendra Mohun v Oanendramohun		Julius v Bishop of Oxford	100
Tagore	238 474 475	Jumant Ali v Chintturdharee Sahee	815
Jotendra Mohun v Rance Brujo	385	Jumna Das v Srinath Poy	604 614
Jowali Buleh v Dhurum Singh	747	Jummoona Pershad v Deg Narain	713
Joy Chandra v Sreenath Chatterjee	741	Junmajoy Mullick v Dwarkanath
Joy Chandra Bandopadhyay v Srinath Chattopadhyay	849	Mytee	171 278 353, 569
Joy Coomar v Bundhoolal	109 110	Jussoondah v Ajodhya Pershad	791
	112 113	Juthan Singh v Ramnarayan Singh	748
Joy Kishen v Doorga Narayan	167 189
Joy Kissen In the matter of	1010	K
Joykissen Mookerjee v Peiree		K R V Firm v Sutharamaswami	121
Mohun	716	Kachal Hart v R	558 559, 780
Joy Lall v Gossain Bhobun	708	Kachubai him Gulabchand v
Joyram v Narayan	848	Krishnababkom Bahaji	59.
Joytara Dissen v Mahomed Moba		Kader Mordeen v Nepean	618
ruck	113 379 381	Kadumbini Dassi v Kumudini
Judge v Cox	192	Dasi	156
Judoonath Mullick v Kalee Kisto	687	Kashuddin Biswas v Sabdar Ali
Judoonath Paul v Prosunoonath		Biswas	641
Dutt	869	Kahl v Jansen	233 235
Jugal Kishore v Fakhr ud-din	601	Kaikhneru Aderji v Secretary of
Jugdel Narain v Lalla Ram	707	State	748
Jugesh Chunder v Chowdhry		Kaikhneru Noroji v Jehangir	193
Zuhoorul Hu	379	Kallas Chandra Mitra v Secretary of State

	PAGE		PAGE
Khurrukhdharee Singh v Pro-		Konduri Srinivasa v. Goltumukkala..	506
sadhee Mundal ..	946	Konnerav t Gurrup ..	820
Khusaleband v Mahadepgari ..	708	Konwar Doorganath v. Ram
Khu v Emp	920	Ghunder 222, 225, 706, 708, 709
King Emp t Haji Sher Mahomad	207	Kondceev Narain v Govt	246, 812
King t Hunt	485	Koomar Bunjit v Schoene ..	722
King t Norman ..	409	Koomudinee Debia v. Poorno ..	377
King t Wina	649	Koondo Nath t Dheer Chunder	167,
Kip v Brigham	409		172, 174
Kirby t G W Ry Co	762	Koonj Beharee t Khettturnath Dutt	791, 792
Kirkstall Brewery Co t Furness Ry		Koonj Beharee t Shiba Baluk	645
Co 234, 275		Koonjee Singh t Jankee Singh ..	850
Kiron-hashi Debi v Ananda Chandra		Koonjo Beharee v Roy Mothoora
619, 625		nath ..	487, 728
Kirpal Narain t Sakurmoni	367	Kotta Ramasami v Bangari
Kirpal Singh t Balwant Singh	714	Seshma ..	236
Kirshaw t Wright	444	Kottala Uppi v Shangara Varma ..	712
Kirtabash Maytee t Ramdhen		Kower Narain t Sreenath Mitter	480
Khoira	448	Kowsulbah Sundari t Mukta Sundari
Kirty Chunder t Anath Nath	820		232, 240, 241, 242
Kisan v Emp	920	Koylash Chunder t. Raj Chunder ..	380
Kishan Lall t Ganga Ram	247, 248	Kovlash Chunder t. Sonatun Chunder	99
Kishan Chunder t Biratee Sheikh	44	Koylasbeshinoy Dasseo t Gocool
Kishan Chunder t Hookoom Chand	74	moni Dasseo ..	683, 715
Kishan Dhan t Ram Dhan	606	Kripa Sindhu t. Annada Sundari ..	918
Kishan Parshad t Her Narain	792	Kripamoyi Dabia t Durga Govind	677, 717
Kishorbhai Ravidas t Ranchodia		Krishna v Vasudev ..	708, 793
Dhulia	416	Krishna Behari t. Brojeswari
Kishore Dass t Pursun Mishtom	360	Choudhranee ..	397, 820
Kishori Lal Goswami t Lakhal Dis		Krishna Chandra Saha t Bhaurab
Banerjee 04, 515		Chandra Saha ..	249
Kishore Singh t Gunesh Mookerjee	892	Krishna Govind Pal t R ..	199, 210
Kishoreo Lall t Chumman Lall	700	Krishna Jiva Tewari v Baishnath
Kishoreo Lall v Enaeth Hossein	724	Kalwar ..	532
Kishori Lal v Chunnai Lal	762	Krishna Kanta t Bidya Sundarce ..	104
Kishori Lal t Rakhal Das	131	Krishna Kishori t Kishori Lall	504,
Kishori Mohun v Mahomed Wajaffar	248	505, 508, 516, 517, 519, 520, 545, 552
Kissen Kamnee v Bam Chunder		Krishna Lal Shaba v Bhaurab
130, 131		Chandra ..	865
Kissenmohun Singh t Cally Persad		Krishna Lall t Radha Krishna ..	724
Dutt ..	933	Krishnabhupati v Ramamurti	416, 418
Kitchen v Robbins ..	223	Krishnabhupati Devu v Vikrama
Kitchen, In re ..	411	Devu ..	248, 865
Kittu Hegadthi t Channama		Krishnacharya v. Langawa ..	379
Shettathi ..	815	Krishnaji v Moro ..	854
Klein t Landman ..	795	Krishnaji t Rajmal ..	480, 592
Knight t Martin ..	511	Krishnaji t Wamanji ..	696
Knight v Waterford ..	331	Krishnaji Ramchandra v. Antaji
Knight t Wissen	856, 863, 881	Pandurang ..	872, 873
Koer Hanmat Rai v Sunder Das ..	713	Krishnama Charar v Krishnama
Komolochun Dutt v Ndruttun		Charar 335, 370, 372, 568, 631,
Mundle ..	401	725, 733, 960
Kondappa v. Subba ..	236	Krishnama Charar v Narasimha
Kondayya Chetta v Narasimhulu		Charar ..	118, 1014
Chetta ..	9	Krishnamarazu v Manaju	608, 629

	PAGE		PAGE
Krishnarav Yashvant t. Vasudev		Kuverji t. Babai ..	830, 853
Apaji	753	Kuverji Shet t. Municipality of
Krishnasami Ayyangar t. Rajagopala		Lonavala	831, 839, 861, 863
174, 179, 223, 239, 245, 371, 407,
	408, 410
Krishnasawmi Aiyar t. Mangala
thammal	612, 672, 673
Krishno Chunder t. Meer Sajdar	387	Lachho t. Har Sahai	754, 756
Krishno Monce t. R	262	Lachman Das t. Babur Ramnath	614
Kristanasmrazu t. Marraza	629	Lachman Prasad t. Sarman Singh	717
Kristappa Chetty t. Ramasawmi		Lachman Rai t. Akbar Khan	167
Iyer	702		168, 188, 405
Kristo Indro t. Huromoni Dassee	823	Lachman Singh v. Tansukh	232
Kristo Monti t. Secy of State	382	Lachmeedhur t. Rughoobur	167
	864, 868	Lachmi Narain t. Raja Partab	468,
Kristo Nath t. T. E. Brown	472, 571		473, 479, 770
Kristo Prea t. Puddo Lochun	820	Lachmi v. Emp	994
K. R. V. Firm v. Seetharamaswami	124	Lachmi Bih t. Gopi Narain	733, 734
Kuar Sen t. Mamman	168	Lady Dartmouth t. Roberts	349
Kubeeroodeen t. Jogul Shaha	696	Lady Ivy's Case	160
Kali Subbanadri v. Muthu Rangayya	644	Lafone t. Falkland Islands Co	901
Kulada Prosad Degharia v. Kali Das		Lahaso Kuar t. Mahabir Tiwari	749
Naik	145, 582, 591	Lang Ram v. Thola Singh	188
Kullan t. R	887	Lakhee Kewar t. Hari Krishna	812
Kullum Mundal t. Bhowani Prasad	924	Lakhchand t. Lalchand	479
Kultoo Mahomed t. Hurdev Doss	487	Lakhi Chandra v. Kali Kumar	173
Kumar Buradindu t. Dharendra		Lakho Khan t. Wise	872
Kant Roy	688	Lakmidas Khushal t. Baiji Khushal	109
Kumara t. Srinivasa	634, 637	Lakhpai v. Rambodh Sen	202,
Kumara Upendra t. Nohin Krishna	790		803, 879, 858
Kumarasami t. Pala Nagappa	236	Lakshman t. Amrit	131, 161, 178
Kumaraswami t. King Emperor	276		179, 187, 407
Kumar Reddi t. Nagayami		Lakshman t. Jamnabai	199
Thamrichu Natcher	168	Lakshman Baukhopkar t. Radhabai	704
Kumeerzodeen Holder t. Rujjah Ali	518	Lakshman Dada Naik t. Ram
Kundan Lal t. Mussamut Begum		Chandra Dada Naik	820, 859
un nissa	679	Lakshman Govind t. Amrit Gopal	504, 515
Kunhambi t. Kalenther	168	Lakshman Nakhwa t. Ramji Nakhwa	867
Kunhunni Menon t. Kannan Thava	872, 877	Lakshman Sahu t. Gokul Maharana	737
Kunj Kishore t. Official Liquidator		Lakshmaraya t. Sri Raja Veradaraja
etc.	836	Apparow	113, 476, 892
Kunnoth Odangal t. Vayoth		Lakshmiha v. Ganput	852
Palhyil	509, 516, 519, 520	Lakshmiha v. Vithal Ramchandra	755
Kuppu Konan t. Thurgnana Sam		Lakshminarayana v. Pellamaraju	395
mandam Pillai	870	Lakshmi Prasanna Mojumdar t.
Kurali Prasad t. Anantsaram Hajra	546	Rajendar Poddar	827
Kurtz t. Spence	254	Lal Achal t. Raja Hazim	690
Kuru Chaubi t. Janki Persad	829	Lal Bahadur t. Kanhaiya Lal	791
Kurubi v. Kili	1010	Lal Kunwar t. Churanji Lal	783
Kusum Kumari v. Satya Panyan	347, 709	Lal Mohan Saha t. Tazimuddin	932
Kuthupemmal Rajah t. Secretary of		Lal Singh t. Deo Narain	711, 713
State for India	870	Lal Saha t. Emp	938
Kutti Mannadivar t. Pavanu Muthan	708	Lal t. Hira Singh	167, 168, 405
Kuvarbai t. Mir Alama	837	Lal Tribhawan t. Deputy Commis-
		ioner Fyzabad	895

	PAGE		PAGE
Johnson v Kershaw	942	Juggemath Se v v Ram Dyal	631
Johnson t Lawson	339	Juggessur Buttobyal t Poodro
Johnson t Pye	83 ⁿ	Narayan	708
Johnson t R	1017	Jugessuree Debn v Gudadhur
Johnson t Thucker	902	Banerjee	731
Johnstone t Marks	83 ⁿ	Juggobundhu Chatterjee t Watson
Johnstone t Todd	11 ⁿ 947	& Co	824
Jolly t Arbuthnot	809	Juggobundhu Mitter t Purnanund
Jolly t Rees	91 ⁿ	Gossami	723 7 ⁿ 4
Jolly t Taylor	599	Juggobundhu Mukerjee t Ram
Jolly t Yo ng	670	Chunder	7 ⁿ 3 724
Joloke Such t Gundar Singh	731	Jugodanund Misser t Ham d
Jones t Edwards	523	Russol	723
Jones t Go lrich	737 904	Juggomoh n Ghose t Kaurree
Jones t Gordon	175	chund	646
Jones t Howell	79	Juggomohun Ghose v Manick
Jones t James	45 ⁿ	Clund	167 168 169 191
Jones t Jones	73 ⁿ 801 973	Juggun Lal In the matter of	361
Jones t Morrell	14 ⁿ	Juggunath Sahoo t Syul Shah	146
Jon s t Smith	203 204	Juggut Chunder t Bhug an Chunder
Jones t Williams	16 ⁿ 16 ⁿ 173 190		699 720
Joogul Kishore t Kalee Churn	712	Juggut Mohini t Dwarika Nath	470
Joomna Pershad v Joyram Lal	796	Jugmohandas t Mangaldas	168 18 ⁿ
Joopodv Sarayya t Lakshmana			189 440
asany	68 ⁿ 7 ⁿ 8 745 816	Jugumba Chowdhram t Pam
Joorub Haji t Kemp	544	Chinder	7 ⁿ 2
Jordan t Money	250 813	Jugtanund Misser t Verbhian Singh
Joseph Perry t Official Assignee	770 914		640 641 642
Joshua v Alliance Bank of Sml	203 204	Jugal Kishori t An nla Lal	239
Jotadharilal t Raghunirpershad	713	Julus t Bishop of Oxford	100
Jotendra Mohun t Ganendramohun		Jumant Ali t Chutturdharee Sahee	815
Tagore	238 474 175	Jumna Das v Srinath Pov	604 614
Jotendra Mohun t Rancee Brjo	38 ⁿ	Jumona Pershad v Deg Narain	713
Jowal Bulsh t Dhurum Singh	747	Junmajoy Mallick t Dwarkanath
Joy Ch ndra v Sreenath Chatterjee	741	Mytee	171 378 383 569
Joy Chandra Bandopadhya t		Jussoondah t Ajodhia Pershad	701
Srinath Chattopadhya	840	Juthan Singh t Ramnarayan Singh	748
Joy Coomar v Bundhoolal	109 110
	112 113
Joy Kishen t Doorga N rayan	167 189
Joy Kissen In the matter of	101 ⁿ
Joykissen Moolerjee t Learee
Mohun	716
Joy Lal v Gossain Bloobun	708
Joyram t Narayan	848
Joytara D sset v Mahomed Moba
ruck	113 379 391 71
Judge t Cox	192
Judoonath Mull ck t Kalee Kisto	687
Judoonath Paul t Prosunoonath
Dutt	869
Jugal Kishore v Fakhr ud din	601
Jugdel Narau t Lalla Ram	707
Jugd h Chunder v Chowdhry
Zuhoorul Hu j	379

K

K R V Firm t Sutharamaswami	124
Kachak Hari t R	558 559 760
Kachubai bin Gulabchand r
Krishnabai Kom Babaj	59
Kader Mudeen v Nepean	618
Kalambini Dassi t Kumudini
Dasi	156
Kafiloddin Biswas v Sabdar Ali
Biswas	641
Kahl t Jansen	233 235
Kaikhustu Aderji t Secretary of
State	748
Kaikhustu Noroji t Jehangir	193
Kalas Chandra Mitra t Secretary of
State	424

	PAGE		PAGE
Ka lasa Padachi t Ponnukannu	240	Kalyanaband Lalchand t Sitabai	402
Ka lash Chan Ira t Harish Chunder	634	Kamala Prasad t Sital Prasad	915
Ka lash Chandra Bha vmick t Bejoy			900 924
Kanta Lahuri	616	Kamaraju t Secretary of State	397
Ka lash Chandra Nath t Sheikh		Kamatchumathan Chetta t R	348
Chlenu	32 643	Kameshar Prasad t Bhukan Narain	99
Ka la b Chunder t Pa n Lal	109	Kameshwar Pershad v Amanutulla
Kam t Iarrer	998		131 07 515 521 899
Ka i s t Knightly	608	Kameshwar Pershad v Rajkumar
Kala hand S rear t R	975	Rutton	394
Kalar Haldar v R	457	Kameshwar Prasad t Ram Bahadur
Kalappa t Shivaya	831		706 707
Kalee Chunder t Aloo Sheikh	814	Kamesvara t Veera Charlu	714
Kalee Churn t Banchee Mohun	708	Kamini Debi t Promotha Nath	708
Kalee Churn t Bengal Coal Co	234	Kamini Sundari t Kali Prosunno	759
Kal t Dosa t Iara Chan l	857	Kamoda v Emperor	227
Kalee Keomar t Gunga Narain	749	Kamp hkanbavapija t Somasu
I t ee Kumar t Maharaja of Burdwan	683	muddram	484
Kalee Narain t Anund Mowee	447 757	Kamulammal t Athukari Sangari	192
Kalechan n l Bhattacharjee	t	Kana Lal t Kamini Debi	760 761
Curebaba Daba	479 480	Kanailal Khan t Soshi Bhoosan	823
Kaleenath Kur t Deval Kristo	800 851	Kanayalal t Pyarabai	504
I lepershad Tewaree t Paja		Kunchan Malik v P	118 693
Sub Prahlad	689	Kandasani Asari v Somas handa
Kalan Dass t Bhagirothi	405	Ela Nethi	708
Kalan Singh t Maharaja	721	Kan lasani Pillai t Nagalinga
Kal Baksh t Ram Gopal	762	Pillai	200 804 830 808
K l Clandra t Shub Chandra	487 906	Kanhai Lal t Suraj Kunwar	307
Kali Charan t Pam Chandra	630	Kanhaya Lal t Radha Churn	174 399 403
Kali Charan t Pas h Lal	801	Kanhya Lal t Debidas	698 703
Kal Churn In the matter of the		Kanhya Chand t Ram Chander	104 113
petition of	735 935	Kaniz Vehdi t Rasul Beg	833 863
Kali Coomar v Pam Das	704	Kannamal t Virasami	803
Kahdas t Ishan Chunder	736	Kanhi Ram t Radha	895 839
Kal das Chowdhury v Prasana Ku		Kanto Prasad t Jagat Chandra	131
mar Dass	8 5 806		377 378 569
Kali Daval t Umesh Prasad	836	Kapur Singh t Emperor	287
Kalidhon Chuttapadhyay v Shuba		Karab Charan t Mahtab Chandra	861
Nath	167	Karab Prasad Gwin v R	144
Kali Dutt v Abdul Ali	732	Karamali t Rahmubhoy	412
Kali Kishore t Bhusan Chunder	710	Karampalli v Thelku	643
Kali Kishore v Gopi Mohan	740 242	Kari Singh t R	914 929
Kali Krishna v Secretary of State	393	Karni Khatav v Pardhan Manji	169
Kali Kumar v Bidhu Bhusan	397	Karmah Abdullah t Karimji
Kali Nath Gupta t Gobinda Charan	999	Jivaji	124 241
Kali Munda v R	157	Karunakar Mahati v Nilhardo
Kalka Prashad v Kanhaya Singh	412	Chowdhury	812
Kalka Prasad t Mathura Prasad	342	Karuppan v Ramasami	824
Kallanj v Bezanga	700	Karuppa Goundan t Thoppala
Kallonsas v Gunga Gobind	893	Go n lan	603 665
Kalla v Stal	014	Kasan Singh t Bhup Singh	712
Kally Churn v Secy of State	7 3 77	Kashaba t Chandrabhagabai	753
Kally Dass v Gobind Chunder	849	Kashee Chandra t Noor Chandra	546
Kally Nath v Rajeeblochun	521	Kashee Kishore v Bama Soondaree	231 379
Kalu Mirza t L.	161	Kashee Nath t Mohesh Chandra	510

PAGE.	PAGE.
Kashee Nath Chatterjee v. Chundy Churn .. 593, 816, 617, 618, 631, 638	Keshavarao Bhagwant v. Ray Pandu .. 632, 635
Kashi Nath Bhuttacharjee v. Murari Chandra Pal .. 120	Kesho Rao v. Poran Barai .. 719
Kashi Nath v. Brindsabun Chuckerbatti .. 632	Keshb Chunder v. Vyasmonee Dossia .. 850
Kashi Nath v. Collr. of Poona .. 892	Kesh Chand v. National Jute Mills .. 347
Kashi Nath v. Hurnbur Mookerjee 616, 618, 619, 620, 623	Kessowji Issur v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. .. 118
Kashinath Krishna v. Dhondshet .. 395	Kettika Bapanamma v. Kettika Kristanamma .. 644
Kassim Hassan v. Hazra Begum .. 696	Kettlewell v. Barstow .. 997
Kassim Mundle v. Sreemutty Noor 632, 637	Kettlewell v. Watson .. 203
Kasturchand Lakhmaji v. Jakhia Padia .. 619, 625, 856	Kettillamma v. Kelapan .. 411, 412
Kasturi v. Venkatschulpathi .. 847	Ketu Dass v. Surendra Nath .. 876, 878
Katama Natchier v. Rajah of Shilva-ganga .. 701	Keymer v. Visvanatham Reddi .. 396
Kaung Hla Pru v. San Paw 108, 161, 870	Khadar v. Subramanya ; .. 842
Kausaha v. Gulab Kuar .. 717	Khadam Ali v. Emperor.. 016
Kaurland v. Emp. .. 920	Khadem Ali v. Tajmunnissa 367, 372, 374
Kawal Narain v. Prabhu Lal .. 702	Khadajah Khanum v. Abdool Kureem Sherajl .. 934, 979
Kawa Manji v. Khowa Nussio .. 754	Khageshwar Bhattacharya v. Someshwar Bhattacharya .. 580
Kay v. Poorunchand Poonalal 903, 906	Khajah Abdul v. Gour Monee .. 480
Kazez Abdool v. Buroda Kant .. 664	Khajah Emaetoolah v. Kishen Soondur .. 753, 754
Kazi Ghulam v. Aga Khan 968, 969	Khajooroonissa v. Rowshan Jehan 798, 799
Kazi Korhutoolah v. Motee Peshakar 724	Khaful Rahman v. Gobind Pershad 711
Kearney v. London, Brighton & S. Coast Ry. .. 795	Khana v. R. .. 317
Kearely v. Phillips .. 996	Khandu Lal v. Fazal .. 724
Keate v. Phillips .. 837	Khankar Abdur v. Ali Hafez 618, 624
Kehul Kristo v. Ram Coomar .. 839	Kharondas Dharamsey v. Gangabal 700
Kedar Nath, In the matter of .. 129	Khas Mithal v. Admr.-Genl. of Bengal 733, 761, 762
Kedar Nath v. Bhupendra Nath .. 235	Khatija Bibi, In the matter of .. 816
Kedar Nath v. Mathu Mal .. 339	Khawani Singh v. Chet Ram 704, 705
Kedarnath v. Shurfoonnassa Behee 597, 600, 608	Khedon Lal v. Rajendra Narain Singh .. 751
Kedarnath Chuckerbutty v. Donzelle 799, 818, 819	Kheero Monee v. Bijoy Gobind 358, 363, 364, 366
Kedarnath Doss v. Protab Chunder 710	Khelat Chunder v. Poorno Chunder .. 716
Kedarnath Mitter v. Sreemutty Sorojoni .. 736	Khenum Kuree v. Gour Chunder 245, 249
Keeling v. Ball .. 533, 536	Kheoraj Jusrub v. Lingaya .. 847
Kell v. Charmar .. 671	Kheraj Mullah v. Janab Mullah .. 118
Kelly v. Jackson .. 898, 900	Khetra Nath Mandal v. Mahomed Alla Buksh .. 370
Kelly v. Kelly .. 890	Khetridas Agarwallah v. Shih Narayan .. 608, 618
Kemble v. Farren .. 242	Khetter Chunder v. Khetter Paul 516, 518, 531
Kemp v. King .. 912	Khlut Chunder v. Koonj Lal .. 781
Kempland v. Macauley.. 251	Khedu Rai v. Sheo Parson Rai 723, 757
Kenakammal v. Anantham Ammal .. 704	Khojah and Menon case .. 169
Kennedy v. Lyell .. 904	Khoorhed Kazi v. R. .. 691, 692
Kensington v. Inglis .. 517, 994	Khub Lal Singh v. Ajodhya Misser 682, 838
Kent v. Lowen .. 211, 214	Khugowlee Singh v. Hossein Bux .. 394
Kent v. Midland Railway .. 740
Keramutoolah v. Gholam Hossein .. 409, 410

	PAGE		PAGE
Krishnarav Vashvant & Vasudev Apaji	755	Kuverji & Babai ..	830, 853
Krishnasami Ayyangar & Rajagopala 174, 179 223 238, 245, 271, 407, 408 410		Kuverji Shet & Municipality of Lonavala .	831, 839, 861, 863
Krishnasawmi Aiyar & Mangala thammal	612 612, 673	L
Krishno Chunder & Meer Sajdar	383	Lachho & Har Sahai	754, 756
Krishno Monee & R	262	Lachhman Das & Babu Ramnath	614
Kristanamrazu & Marrazu	629	Lachman Prasad & Sarman Singh	713
Kristnaappa Chetty & Ramasawmy Iyer	702	Lachman Rai & Akbar Khan	165
Kristo Indro & Huromoni Dasseer	825		168, 188, 405
Kristo Moni & Secy of State	382	Lachman Singh & Tansukh	232
	364 868	Lachmeedbur & Rugheobur	167
Kristo Nath & T E Brown	472 571	Lachmi Narain & Raja Partab	468,
Kristo Prea & Puddo Lochun	820		473, 478, 770
K R V Firm & Seetharamaswami	124	Lachmi & Emp	994
Kuar Sen & Mamman	163	Lacho Bhu & Gopi Narain	733, 734
Kubeeroodeen & Jogul Shaha	696	Lady Dartmouth & Roberts	749
Kuka Subbanadri & Muthu Rangayya	644	Ladv Ivy's Case	160
Kulada Prosad Degharua & Kali Das Naik .	143 582, 591	Lafone & Falkland Islands Co	901
Kullan & R	887	Lahaso Kuar & Mahabir Tiwari	749
Kullum Mundal & Bhowani Prasad	924	Laig Ram & Thola Singh	688
Kultoo Mahomed & Hurdev Dass	487	Lakhee Kewar & Hari Krishna	812
Kumar buradindu & Dhirendra Kant Roy	683	Lakhchand & Lalchand .	479
Kumara & Srinivasa	631, 637	Lakhi Chandra & Kali Kumar	173
Kumara Upendra & Nobin Krishna	790	Lakhoo Khan & Wise	872
Kumarasami & Pala Nagappa	236	Lakimdas Khussal & Baiji Khussal .	199
Kumaraswami & King Emperor	276	Lakhipati & Rambodh Sen	202
Kumar Reddi & Nagyasami Thamvichi Naicker .	168		803, 839 878
Kumeerzooddeen Holder & Rujjub Ab Kundan Lal & Mussamnt Begum un nissa	516 679	Lakshman & Amrit	131, 161, 178, 179, 187, 407
Kunhambi & Kalenther	168	Lakshman t. Jamnabai ..	199
Kunhunni Menon & Kannan Thava	872, 877	Lakshman Baukhophar & Radhabai	704
Kunj Kabore & Official Liquidator, etc ,	836	Lakshman Dada Naik & Ram Chandra Dada Naik	820, 878
Kunneth Odangal & Vayoth Palliyil	509, 516, 519, 520	Lakshman Govind & Amrit Gopal	504 515
Kuppu Konan & Thurugana Sam mandam Pillai	870	Lakshman Nakhwa & Ramji Nakhwa	867
Kurali Prasad & Anantaram Hajra	540	Lakshman Sabu & Gokul Maharaja .	537
Kurtz & Spence	258	Lakshmavaya & Sri Raja Veradaraja Apparow .	113, 476, 892
Kuru Chaubi & Janki Persad	829	Lakshmbhai & Ganput ..	852
Koruba & Kliha .	1610	Lakshmbhai & Vitthal Ramchandra ..	755
Kusum Kumari & Satia Ranjan	347, 769	Lakshminarayana & Pellamaraju ..	395
Kuthupoumal Rajali & Secretary of State for India	850	Lakshmi Prasanna Mojumdar & Rajendar Poddar	827
Kutti Mannadiyar & Pavanu Muthan	708	Lal Achal & Raja Kazim	690
Kuyarbui & Mir Alam-	855	Lal Bahadur & Kanhaiya Lal	791
		Lal Bahwar & Churanji Lal .	783
		Lal Mohan Saba & Tazimaddin	932
		Lal Singh & Deo Narain	711, 713
		Lal Sinha & Emp .	925
		Lala & Hira Singh	167, 168 405
		Lal Tribhawar & Deputy Commis- sioner Fyzabad	895

PAGE	PAGE
Krishnaray Yashvant t Vusudev Apaji 735	Kuverji t. Babai .. 830, 853
Krishnasami Aryangar t Rajagopala 174, 179, 223, 238 245, 371, 407, 408 410	Kuverji Shet t. Municipality of Lonavala .. 831, 839, 861, 863
Krishnasawmi Aiyar v Mangala thammal 612, 672, 673	L
Krishno Chunder t Meer Sajdar 383	Lachho t Har Sahai . 754, 756
Krishno Monee t R 262	Lachbman Das t Babu Ramnath 614
Kristanamrazu t Matrazu 629	Lachman Prasad t Sarman Singh . 713
Kristnappa Chetty t Ramasawmi Iyer 702	Lachman Rai t Akbar Khan 167, 168, 188, 405
Kristo Indro t Huromoni Dassee 823	Lachman Singh t Tansukh .. 232
Kristo Moni t Secy of State 382 864, 868	Lachmeedhur t Rughoobur .. 167
Kristo Nath t T E Brown 472, 571	Lachmi Narain t Raja Partah 468, 473, 478, 770
Kristo Prea t Fuddo Lochun 820	Lachmi v Emp .. 994
K R V Firm v Seetharamasawami 124	Lachho Bibi t Gopi Narain 733, 734
Kuar Sen t Mamman .. 163	Lady Dartmouth t Roberts 749
Kubeeroodeen t Jogul Shaha 696	Lady Iry's Case . 160
Kuki Subbanadri v Muthu Rangayya 644	Lafone t Falkland Islands Co .. 901
Kulada Prosad Degharia v Kali Das Naik . 145, 582, 591	Lahaso Kuar t Mahabir Tiwari . 749
Kullan t R .. 887	Laig Ram t Thola Singh 688
Kullum Mundel t Bhowani Prasad .. 924	Lakhee Kewar t. Hari Krishna 812
Kultoo Mahomed t Hurdev Doss .. 487	Lakhschand t Lalchand .. 479
Kumar buradindu t Dhirendra Kant Roy . 683	Lakhi Chundra v. Kali Kumar . 173
Kumara t Srinivasa . 634, 675	Lakhoo Khan t. Wise .. 872
Kumara Upendra t. Nobin Krishna .. 790	Lakmidas Khusal t Baiji Khusal .. 109
Kumarasami t Pala Nagappa . 236	Lakbpati v Rambodh Sen 202, 803, 839, 878
Kumaraswami t King Emperor . 276	Lakshman t. Amrit 131, 161, 178, 179, 187, 407
Kumara Reddi v. Nagyasami Thamvichi Naicker .. 188	Lakshman t. Jamnabai .. 699
Kumeezoodeen Holder t Rujjah Ali hundan Lal t Mussamnt Begum un nissa .. 679	Lakshman Baukhopkar t. Radhahai 704
Kunhamhi t Kalenther 168	Lakshman Dada Naik v Ram Chandra Dada Naik .. 820, 858
Kunhunn Menon t Kannan Thava 872, 877	Lakshman Govind t. Amrit Gopal 504, 515
Kunj Kishore v Official Liquidator, etc . 836	Lakshman Nakhwa t Rampi Nakhwa 867
Kunneth Odangal v Vayoth Palliyil .. 509, 516, 519, 520	Lakshman Sahu t. Gokul Maharaja 537
Kuppu Konan t Thirugnana Sam mandain Pillai 870	Lakshmiayya t Sri Raja Venadaraja Apparow .. 113, 476, 892
Kuraki Prasad t Anantaram Hajra 540	Lakshmi Bai v Ganput .. 852
Kurtz t Spence . 238	Lakshmi Bai v Vithal Ramchandra .. 755
Kurni Chaubi v Janki Persad 829	Lakshminarayana v Pellamaraju .. 395
Kurubi t Kili .. 1010	Lakshmi Prasanna Mojumdar t Rajendar Poddar . 827
Kusum Kumari t Satya Ranjan 347, 709	Lal Achal v Raja Kazim . 799
Kuthuponnimal Rajali t Secretary of State for India . 870	Lal Bahadur v Kanhaiya Lal 791
Kutti Mannadivar t Pavanu Muthan 708	Lal Kunwar v Churanji Lal .. 783
Kuvarbai t Mir Alam . 877	Lal Mohan Saha v Tazimuddin .. 932
	Lal Singh v Deo Narain 711, 713
	Lal Sinha v. Emp .. 938
	Lala v Hira Singh .. 167, 168, 495
	Lal Tribhawan v Deputy Commis- sioner Fyzabad ..

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Khurruckdharree Singh & Pro-		Kondra Srinivasa v. Goltumukkala.	596
radhee Mundal ..	246	Konnerav & Gurrap ..	820
Khusalchand & Mahadepgiri ..	708	Konwar Doorganath & Ram
Khu & Emp	920	Chunder 222, 225, 706, 708, 709
King Emp & Haji Sher Mahomad	207	Kooldeo v. Narsain v. Govt	246, 812
King & Hunt	435	Koomar Runjit v. Soborne ..	722
King & Norman	409	Koomudinee Debia v. Poorno	377
King & Winn	649	Koondo Nath & Dheer Chunder 167,
Kip & Bringham	409		172, 174
Korby & G W Ry Co	762	Koonj Beharee & Khetturnath Dutt	791, 792
Kortall Brewery Co & Furness Ry		Koonj Beharee & Shiba Baluk	645
Co 234, 235		Koonjee Singh & Jankee Singh ..	850
Karna & Jai Debi & Ananda Chandra		Koonjo Beharee & Roy Mothoora
619, 625		nath	487, 728
Kirpal Narain & Sakurmoni	367	Kotta Ramasami & Bangari
Kirpal Singh & Balwant Singh	714	Seshma	236
Kirshaw & Wright	444	Kottala Uppi & Shangara Varma	712
Kirtibhush Mishra & Ramdhan		Kover Narain & Sreenath Mitter	480
Klura	498	Kowsulbah Sundari & Mukta Sundari
Kurtz Chunder & Anath Nath	820	232, 240, 241, 242
Kutan & Laj	920	Koylash Chunder & Raj Chunder	380
Kishan Lal & Garga Ram	217, 248	Koylash Chunder & Sonatun Chunder	99
Kishan Chunder & Daratee Sheikh	719	Koylashashiney Dassie & Gooool
Kishan Chunder & Hoshoom Chand	745	moni Dassie ..	683, 715
Kishan Dhan & Ram Dhan	696	Kripa Sindhu & Annada Sundari	918
Kishan Pureshad & Her Narain	702	Kripamoyi Dabha & Durga Govind	677, 717
Kishorbhai Ravidas & Ranchoha		Krishna & Vnsudev ..	704, 793
Dhuha	416	Krishna Behari & Brojeswari
Kishore Dass & Purson Mibtoin	363	Chowdhranee	307, 820
Kishori Lal Agrawani & Bakhal Das		Krishna Chandra Saha & Bhairab
Banerjee 504, 515		Chandra Saha ..	219
Kishore Singh & Gunesb Mo kersjee	892	Krishna Govind Pal & R	199, 210
Kishore Lal & Chuman Lal	700	Krishna Jiva Tewari & Baishnath
Kishore Lal & Inath Hossain	724	Kalwar ..	532
Kishori Lal & Chuan Lal	762	Krishna Kanta & Bidya Sundaroo	101
Kishori Lal & Bakhal Das	131	Krishna Kishori & Kishori Lal 504,
Kishori Mohun & Mahomed Mujaffar	248	505, 608, 516, 517, 519, 520, 545, 552
Kissen Kamree & Pam Chunder		Krishna Lal Shaha & Bhairab
130, 131		Chandra ..	865
Kissenmohun Singh & Cally Persad		Krishna Lal & Radha Krishna ..	724
Dutt ..	933	Krishnabhupati & Ramamurti	416, 418
Kitchen & Robbins	223	Krishnabhupati Devu & Vikrama
Kitchen, In re	411	Devu ..	248, 865
Kittu Hegadtha & Channama		Krishnacharya & Langawa	379
Shettathi ..	815	Krishna & Moro	854
Klein & Lanman	796	Krishna & Rajmal	480, 592
Knight & Martin	511	Krishna & Wamanji ..	696
Knight & Waterford	331	Krishna Ramchandra & Antaji
Knight & Wiffen	856, 863, 881	Pandurang ..	872, 873
Koer Hanmat Rai & Sunder Das	713	Krishnama Charar & Krishnama
Konebheon Dutt & Ndruttun		Charar 335, 370, 372, 568, 631,
Mundle ..	401		725, 733, 860
Konappa & Subba ..	236	Krishnama Charar & Narasimha
Konayya Chetti & Narasimhan		Charar ..	118, 1014
Chetti ..	0	Krishnamarazu & Manaju	609, 620

PAGE	PAGE.
Krishnarav Yashvant v. Vusudev Apaji 755	Kuverji v. Babai .. 830, 853
Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala 174, 179, 223, 238, 245, 371, 407, 408, 410	Kuverji Shet v. Municipality of Lonavala .. 831, 839, 861, 863
Krishnasawmi Aiyar v. Mangalathammal 612, 672, 673	L
Krishno Chunder v. Meer Sajdar .. 383	Lachho v. Har Sahai .. 754, 756
Krishno Monee v. R. 262	Lachhman Das v. Babu Ramnath .. 614
Kristanamarazu v. Marrazu .. 629	Lachman Prasad v. Sarman Singh .. 713
Kristnappa Chetty v. Ramasawmy Iyer 702	Lachman Rai v. Akbar Khan 165, 168, 188, 405
Kristo Indro v. Hurumoni Dassie .. 825	Lachman Singh v. Tansukh .. 232
Kristo Mont v. Secy. of State 382 864, 868	Lachmeedhur v. Rughoobur .. 167
Kristo Nath v. T. E. Brown 472, 571	Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab 468, 473, 478, 770
Kristo Prea v. Puddo Lochun .. 820	Lachmi v. Emp 994
K. R. V. Firm v. Seetharamaswami 124	Lacho Bibi v. Gopi Narain 733, 734
Kuar Sen v. Mammam 163	Lady Dartmouth v. Roberts .. 549
Kubeeroodeen v. Jogul Shaha .. 596	Lady Ivy's Case 160
K. K. Subbanadri v. Muthu Rangayya 644	Lafone v. Falkland Islands Co. .. 901
Kulada Provasd Degharia v. Kali Das Naik 145, 582, 591	Lahaso Kuar v. Mahabir Tiwari .. 749
Kullan v. R. 887	Laig Ram v. Thola Singh .. 688
Kullum Mundul v. Bhowani Prasad .. 924	Lakhee Kewar v. Hari Krishna .. 812
Kultoo Mahomed v. Hurdev Doss .. 487	Lakhschand v. Lalchand 479
Kumar Suradindu v. Dhirendra Kant Roy 688	Lakhi Chandra v. Kali Kumar .. 173
Kumara v. Srinivasa 634, 635	Lakhoo Khan v. Wise 872
Kumara Upendra v. Nobin Krishna .. 790	Lakmidas Khusal v. Baijl Khusal .. 199
Kumarasami v. Pala Nagappa .. 236	Lakpati v. Rambodh Sen 202, 803, 839, 858
Kumaraswami v. King-Emperor .. 276	Lakshman v. Amrit 131, 181, 178, 179, 187, 407
Kumar Reddi v. Nagayazami Thammichi Naicker 168	Lakshman v. Jannabai 699
Kumeerzodeen Holder v. Rujjub Ali 518	Lakshman Baukhopkar v. Radhabai 704
Kundan Lal v. Mussamut Begum-un-nissa 679	Lakshman Dada Naik v. Ram Chandra Dada Naik .. 820, 858
Kunhambi v. Kalenther 168	Lakshman Gorind v. Amrit Gopal 504, 515
Kunhunn Menon v. Kannan Thava 872, 877	Lakshman Nakhwa v. Ramji Nakhwa 867
Kunj Kishore v. Official Liquidator, etc. 836	Lakshman Sahu v. Gokul Maharana .. 537
Kunneth Odangal v. Vayoth Palliyil 509, 516, 519, 520	Lakshmayya v. Sri Raja Veradaraja Apparow .. 113, 476, 892
Kuppu Konan v. Thirugnana Sammandam Pillai 870	Lakshmi Bai v. Ganput 852
Kurals Prasad v. Anantaram Hajra .. 540	Lakshmi Bai v. Vithal Ramchandra .. 735
Kurtz v. Spence 258	Lakshminarayana v. Pellamaraju .. 395
Kuru Chaubi v. Janki Persad .. 829	Lakshmi Prasanna Mojumdar v. Rajendar Poddar 827
Kuruba v. Kili 1010	Lal Achal v. Raja Kazim 680
Kusum Kumari v. Satya Nanjan 347, 709	Lal Bahadur v. Kanbaiya Lal .. 791
Kuthupommal Rajali v. Secretary of State for India 870	Lal Kunwar v. Chiranjil Lal .. 783
Kutti Mannodiyar v. Payanu Muthan 708	Lal Mohan Saha v. Tazimuddin .. 932
Kuvarbai v. Mir Alama 837	Lal Singh v. Deo Narain 711, 713
	Lal Sinha v. Emp 938
	Lala v. Hira Singh .. 167, 168, 405
	Lal Tribhawan v. Deputy Commis- sioner Fyzabad 895

	PAGE		PAGE
Lala Banedar v Govt of Bengal	1011	Lambert v Cohen	606
Lala Beni v Kandan Lal	816	Lawrence v French	346 350
Lala v Emp	920	Lawrence v Ingmire	890 925
Lala Himmat v Llewellyn	633 63	Lawrence, Re	512
	638, 639	Laxman Rao v Vithoba	996
Lala Jha v Musst Bibee	113	Laybourn v Crisp	405
Lala Lakshmi v Sayed Haider	107	Leach v Simpson	114
	124 359, 690	Le Gert v Harvey	871
Lala Muddun v Khikhi la hoer	834	Lee v Burrell	901 998
Lala Narain v Lala Ramanuj	493	Lee v Merest	911 912
Lala Paribu v Mylne	247, 248	Lee v Pain	671
Lala Rupalal v Deonarayan Jewary	174	Leech v Schweder	112
Lala Soraj v Golab Chaul	9	Leeda v Cooks	595
Lalchand v P	600	Lee v Lancashire	612
Lal Hansi Sew Khan v F I Ry Co	796	Leelanund Singh v Basheeroonissa
Lal Chandra Chowdhry v R	149, 151		113 752 777
Lal Mohan Singh v Chukkun Lal		Leelanund Singh v Luchmun Singh	684 685
Pov	667	Leelanund Singh v Musst Lakh
Lahce Mahomed v Guzar	117	puttee	371
Lal In the matter of the petition of	893	Lees v Marton	144
Lal Mahomed v Kallanus	875, 876	Legal Remembrancer v Chema
Lal Mahomed v Watson & Co	690	Nashya	283 285
Lalla Beharoo v Lalla Modho	703	Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan
Lalla B. Neeedh v Kunwar Bin		Singh Pay	275 276 279 281 284 539
d soore	706	Legal Remembrancer v Matlal
Lalla Hanthi Lal v Lalla Brij Lal	875 84	Chose	103 111 221
Lalla Frobbho v Ste nath Roy	925	Leggatt v Tollervey	109
Lalla Foodroo v Bene Pam	696	Legge v Edmon la	231 243 767 769
Lalla Sheelil v Sheikh Gholam	715	Lel hraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh	9 98
Lalla Sheoprasad v Juggernath	227		126 366 338 372 373 412 443
Lalla Sheelhur v Lala Madil	791	Lekhraj Pat v Mahtab Ghand	239 711
Lalu Mishi v Kashubai	247	Leman v Damodaraya	100
Lamb v Munster	914	Lennox Ex parte	413
Lamb v Or n	906	Levene v Brougham	831
Lambert v Cohen	606	Lever v Goodwin	205
Lancum v Lovell	332	Levy v Pope	904
Land Mortgage Bank v Poy Luch		Lewis v Davison	805
vijut	696	Lewis v Fermor	205
Langlon v Doud	811, 863	Lewis v Hartley	1000
Langhorn v Allnutt	275	Lewis v Jones	138
Lanka Lakshmann v Lanka Vartha		Lewis v Levy	758
namma	745 3 6	Lewis v Pennington	904
Lano v Neale	608	Lewis v Rogers	199
Lapelev v Cherson	796	Lev v Barlow	912
Laro v Cum	426	Ley v Peter	236 237
Last Pe	110	Lightfoot v Cameron	908
Lastings v Gonsalves	816	Lincoln v Wright	621 623
Latafat Hussain v Badshah Hussain	894	Landley v Lacy	641
Lach v Wedlake	241	Lando v Behsario	386 428
Lathulan's Case	645	Lano v Taylor	485
Lauderdale Peerage Case	776	Lishman v Christie	856
Laverque v Hooper	871	Lister v Smith	641
Lawless v Queale	256	Liverpool Adelphe Loan Association
Lawrence v Campbell	901	v Fairhurst	833
Lawrence v Clarke	624	Livsey v Smith	925

	PAGE		PAGE
Madhavi Sundari v Gajanendranath	377, 378, 569	Maharajah of Joypore v Vikrama
Madhavrao Hariharrao v Anusuya		Deo Garu ..	693, 694
bhai ..	397	Maharajah of Jaipur v Surjan ..	874
Madharan Vydiar v Lakshmana		Maharajah Juggernath v. Ablad
Pattar ..	726	Kowur ..	748
Madhavrao v Balkrishna	189	Maharajah Koowur v Nund Lal ..	1013
Madhavrao v Deonak ..	127, 371, 376 718	Maharaj Lal Behari v Anjuman un-
Madhavrao v Gulabhai ..	257, 259, 1012	nassa ..	529
Madhavrao Kashovrao v Sobebrao		Maharajah Pertab v Maharanee
	619, 625	Sabhao Kooer ..	446
Madhoo Sudan v Suroop Chunder	113	Maharajah Rajendro Kishen v.
Madho Prasad v Durga Prasad	775	Sheopursum Misser ..	488
Madho Parshad v Mehrban Singh	713	Maharaj Singh v Raja Balwant
Madhorao v Abdul Gafur	732	Singh ..	623
Madhub Chunder v Gangadhar		Maharajah Sir Manindra Chandra v
Samunt ..	617	Saradinda Rav ..	687
Madhub Chunder v Gobind		Maharana Shri Ranmalsingji v
Chunder ..	858	Vadlal Valhateband ..	240, 474
Madhub Chunder v Law	842	Maharani Bent Pershad v Dudh
Madhub Chunder v Rajsoomardas	191	Nath ..	490
Madhub Chunder v Tomee Bonab		Maharani Bent Pershad v. Raj
	174, 404, 405	Kumar ..	397
Madras Deposit and Benefit Society,		Maharani Hirannath v Baboo Ram ..	189
Ld. v Oonamalai Ammal ..	530, 532	Maharani Hirannath v Ram Narayan	189
Madras Hindu Mutual Benefit		Mahatalla Bibee v Haleemoozooman
Permanent Fund v Pangava			670, 799
Chetti ..	831 870	Mahendra Nath Maithi v Giris
Mafizuddin v Emperor	293	Chandra ..	704
Maghulan v Ahmad Hossain	487, 557	Mahendro Nath v Jogendra Nath ..	631
Magnay v Knight	699	Maheshur Balhish v Ratan Singh	704
Magu Brahma v Bhola Das	849, 850	Mahipat v Lakshman ..	780
Mahabeer Persad v Oomrao Singh ..	716	Mahomed v Abdul ..	752, 999
Mahabeer Persad v Ramayad Singh ..	713	Mahomed Abdul v Gujraj Sahai	807
Mahabur Pershad v Mohiswar Nath ..	856	Mahomed Aizuddi v Shaffi Mulla ..	583
Mohabur Prasad v Tej Begum ..	762	Mahomed Akbar v Reilly ..	716
Mahabur Prasad v Barchdeo Sing ..	711	Mahomed Ali v Khaja Abdul	721, 722, 777
Mahabur Prasad v Bishen Dyal ..	690	Mahomed Ali v Nazar Ali ..	471, 618, 624
Mahabur Prasad v Massatulla ..	660	Mahomed Amin v Hasan ..	172, 178, 223
Mahadaji Gopal v Vitthal Ballal	820, 851	Mahomed Ashraff v Byessuree
Mahadeo Musser v Lchoroe Musser ..	697	Dassoe ..	704
Mahadeva Ayyar v Gopala Ayyar	657, 665	Mahomed Ausar v. Prokash Chunder	688
Mahadevappa v Basugonda	766	Mahomed Ayeruddin Khan v Prodyot
Mahadevi v Neelamoney	760 762, 8 8, 861	Kumar Tagore ..	645
Mahalal v Sankallu	1003	Mahomed Basir v Kurreem Bulsh	748
Mahalatchmi Ammal v Palani Chetti	589	Mahomed Bauker v Shurgoon Nissa	798
Mahamod Amin v Hasan ..	172	Mahomed Bhoy v Chutterput Sing ..	606
Mahamaya Debi v Haridas Halder		Mahomed Bulsh v Hossein Bibee ..	762
	168 188, 694, 870	Mahomed Bux v Abdool Kurreem	733, 1011
Mahant Narain v Emp ..	920	Mahomed Fedic v Ozeeoodeen	382, 578
Maharajah Birendra Kashore v		Mahomed Gofab v Mahomed Sul
Balkunta Chandra Deb ..	817	hman ..	413, 414, 696
Maharajah Gobind v. Raja Anund ..	484	Mahomed Hanudulla v Modhoo-
Maharajah Jagadendra v Bhaba-		soodun Ghose ..	858
tarini Das ..	1011	Mahomed Hamid ud-din v Shubha ..	846
		Mahomed Haneef v Mozbur Ali ..	303

	PAGE		PAGE
Iahomed Hasan Mia v Abdul Hamid	732	Manclaram v Kahdas	416
Iahomed Husun t Mulchand	873	Manchand v Emp	983
Iahome l Ibrahim v Ambika		Mancharji v Kongseoo	840
Pershad	397	Manchershaw Bezony v New
Iahomed Ibrahim v Morrisson	721 732	Dhurmsey Spinning & Weaving
Iahome l Imam v Surdar Husain	369	Co	8
Iahomed Ismail t Bhuggobntty		Mangal Sen v Hira Singh	346
Barmanya	591	Mangal Sen v Shankar Sahai	80
Iahomed Jafar v Emperor	375	Mangal Singh v Musst Shankar	749
Iahome l Khan t Mussumat Fattan	343	Mangali Lal t Abul Yarkhan	637
Iahome l Mahmood t Safar Ali	364 991	Mangamma t Rasumma	641
Iahomed Meher t Sheeh Pershad	379	Man Gobnd t Jankee Ram	824
Iahomed Mian t Emperor	938 964 967	Manik Chandra v Preonath Kuar	748
Iahomed Mozaffer v Kishori Mohan		Maniklal Baboo t Ramdas Ma
	948 945	zumlar	729
Iahome l Mudun t Khodezunnessa	833	Manin Ira Chandra Ghose t R	401
Iahome l Ozuallah v Beni Madhab		Man n Ira Chandra Nan li t Sara
Chow Ihun	552	dund Ray	751
Iahomed Samsoodeen t Munthee		Manindra Chandra Nandi t Seere
Abdo l Huq	653	tary of State	493 832
Iahomed Shumsool t Showukram	651 704	Maniram Deb t Debi Charan	429, 751
Iahomed Sultan Sabib t Horace		Manjanafi Devi v Ramdas Shome	403 411
Pobinson	912	Manjayya t Shesa Shetti	929
Iahom d Saleman v Biren Ira		Mankura Pasi v R	207, 457
Chau Ira	806	Manmathanath Mitter v Anatha
Mahommed S Id q v R	691	Bandhu Pal	751
Mahomed Uzman t Rahim Baksh	579	Manna Lal v Emp	940
Mahoney v Waterford Railway	740	Manno Chowdhury t Munshi Chow
Mabtab Chand t Bengal Govt	812	dhury	409
Madin Saiba t Nagappa	872	Mannu Singh v Umadat Pande	759
Mafiat t Anni v Sibbaraya Mudaliar	189	Manohar Lal t Nanak Chand	864
Mairaj Fatima v Abul Wahid	743	Manohar Singh v Sumitra Koer	729
Makbul Ali t Srimati Masnad B ha	603	Mano Mohun t Mothura Mohun	681,
Maklam Snch v Baisakhi Ramshah			722 777
	868 877	Manukerani Debi t Haripada Mitra
Makhum Lall t Ram Lall	703		210 706
Makin t Att Genl for N S W	137	Manomohun Ghose t R	208
	199 200	Manobar Das t Bhagabati Das	632
Makun l t Balori Iall	730	Mangal v Sahib Ram	825
Makun li Kuar t Balkishan Das	853	Mansel t Clements	197
Malappa t Naga Chetty	480	Maneer t Dix	904
Malcolm Brunler & Co v Water		Manson v Golam Kebria	127
House	124	Manuel Louis Kunha t Jnna
Malcolmson t O Dea	173 343 406	Cochi	617, 659
Malla Reddi t Aswa Natha Reddi	824	Ma Pyu v Maung Po Chet	862
Malikarjuna t Durga	694, 711	Marapu Thralu v Telukula Aeela
Mallikarjuna Dugget t Secretary		kanta Behara	731
of State for Ind a	379 546	Mariam Bibi v Sheikh Mahomed
Maloji Sintoji t Vitbu Hari	730	Ibrahim	190 475
Ma Mya t Ma Shwe Ban	768	Marne Investment Co v Havi de
Mansa t Sillajjee	817, 856		577 898 809
Mana Vikrama t Rama Patter	646	Mark d'Cruz v Jitendra Nath Chat
Manada Simlari t Mahananda		terjee	642 862
Sarnakar	686	Markur (in re)	411
Managers of Met. Asylum r Hill	126 138	Marks v Beyfus	897, 898

	PAGE		PAGE
Marlwich v Hardingham	240	Mayanda Chettiar v Oliver	618 643
Maro Sadashiv v Visaji Raghunah	835	Maybank v Brooks	608
Marquis of Anglesey v Lord		Mayen v Alston	638, 682, 728 739, 794
Hatherton	190	Mayenborg v Haynes	8 9
Marriott v Chamberlain	90 ^r 906	Mayhew v Nelson	235
Marshall v Berridge	145	Mayho v Williams	401
Marshall v Cliff	279	Mayor, etc., of Bristol v Cox	902
Marshall v Davies	934	Mayor v Murray	944
Marshall v Lamb	807	Mayor v Sefton	942
Marston v Dean	906	Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh	73 ^c 743 768
Marston v Downes	99 ^c	Mazhar Hassan v Behari Singh	740
Martin v Harbong	671	McAleer v Horsey	802
Martin v Mackonachie	115	McAllister v Reab	804
Martin v Martin	376	McCane v London & N W Ry Co	842
Martia Pillai v Siva Bagayathachi	704	McCombie v Anton	354
Mary Ellen v trial of	115	McConnell v Mayor	844 847
Mary Goodrich (Payne v Bennett)	374	McCorquodale v Ball	909
Mary Tug Co v B 1 S N Co	732	McDougall v Knight	1009
Mashai Hovan v Behari Sinha	749	McDonnell v Ragava Chettiar	711 714
Matheson v Patbani	800	McGohey v Alston	517
Mason v In re	902	McGowan v Smith	481
Math v Math	801	McGrews v McGrews	806
Math v Phelps	427	McKenzie v British Linen Co	8 9
Math v W 1	212	McLean v Herzig	599
Math v Allen	322 397 331	McLeod v Sirdarmull	972
Mata Prasad v Ram Charan Sahu	811	McLeod v Walely	481
Mathew v Brice	240	McNaghten v Case	421
Mathews v Munster	239	McQueen v Phipps	472
Mathews v O'Neill	212	Meajan Matbar v Alimuddu Mia	230 239
Mathu Krishna v Ramechandra	175	Mease v Mease	608
Mathura Das v Bhukhan	651	Meekins v Smith	928
Mathura Dhan v Ram Kumar	145	Meer Israr v Meer Arshud	798
	643 733	Meer Usdulah v Must Beeby
Mathura Pandey v Ram Puchia	489 697	Imamam	5 117 484, 488 517
Mathura Prasad v Cokul Chand	877	Meer Yar Ali Re	192 196 774
Mathura Prasad v Rukmini Koer	588	Meethun Bibee v Bushes Khan	892
Mati Lal Karam v Darjeeling Mu		Mehta Ram v Mahkan Lal	696
nicipality	717 745 815	Megh Hansraj v Ramji Bta	247
Matthew v Brice	240	Megh Raj v Mathura Das	692
Mathew v Ma Me	710	Meghraj v Mukundram	611 798
Mathham v Hubbard	988	Megraj v Seennarain	370 501
Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sattar	117 1014	Meharban Khan v Mughboob Khan	484
Maung Bin v Ma Hlang	625 643	Meka Venkata v Parthesarethi	601
Maung Kyi v Ma Ma Gale	597	Mejee Khestu v Devachund	797
Maung Kyin v Ma She La	624	Melbourne Banking Corporation v
Maung Kyin v Ma Shwe Sa	626	Brougham	190
Maung Lay v Emp	920	Melen v Andrews	140
Maung Po Hwin v Ma Hnyem	688	Melhuish v Collier	140 146 969 973
Maung Shwe v Chetty	645	Melville, trial of Lord	114 124 198
Maung Shwe v Maung Tun	614	Memon Hajee v Moulvie Abdool
Maung Tha Can v Emperor	376	Karim	902 907
Maung Thin v Ma Zi Zan	509	Meredith v Footner	23 236
Mawasi v Mulchand	369 728	Meres v Ansell	608
Ma Wun Di v Ma Kun	800	Meruti v Balaji	619
May v Burdett	192	Metropolitan Ry Co v Wright	1109

	PAGE		PAGE
Mettors v Brown	243	Moharani Beni v Goberdhan Koer	733
Meunier In re	918	Moheema Chunder v Poorno Chunder	3
Meux Executor's Case	237	Mohendra Lall v Rosomoyi Dasi	175
Mewa Lall v Bhujon Jha	412	Mohendro Chunder v Surbo
Mewa Singh v Bhagwant Smgh	839	Kokhya	69, 724
Meyer v Desser	190 892	Mohendra Nath v Koylash Chunder	724
Middleton v Melton	326	Mohendra Nath v R	1005
Middleton v Pollock	365	Molendra Nath Mookerjee v
Mighell v Sultan of Johore 463 471,		Jogendra Nath	637, 638
	473 478	Mohar Sheikh v R	100 277, 884, 914
Milan Khan v Sagai Bepari	117	Mohesh Chunder In the matter of	898
Millar v Traversa	608	Mohesh Chunder v Barada Debi	753 810
Millard In re	699 799	Mohesh Chunder v Dmo Bundhu	167 175
Miller Re	413	Mohesh Chunder v Gooroo Pershad	868 869
Miller v Babu Madho	257 256	Mohesh Chunder v Isur Chunder	848
Miller v Barber	677	Mohesh Chunder v Juggut
Miller v Madho Dass 130, 714 936 940 1006		Chunder	379
Milles v Farnson	422	Mohesh Chunder v Kamini Kumari	741
Milne v Lester	133 1009	Mohesh Chunder v Madhub Chunder	100
Mi Me v Mi Mahwe Ma	341 447	Mohesh Chunder v Mohesh
Mina Konwari v Juggul Setani	826	Chunder	898
Minet v Morgan	900, 991	Mohesh Chunder v Satrugban Dhal	189
Minu Sarkar v Rhedoy Nath	781	Mohesh Chunder v Ugra Kant	971
Mir Abdul Aziz v Karu	719	Mohesh Lal v Mohunt Bawan	814
Mir Sarwarjan v Fakharuddin Ma		Mohi Chowdhry v Dhuro Mirraia	370
homed Chowdhury	239	Mohudin Ahmed v Sayid Muhammad	484
Mirtunjoy Sircar v Gopal Chunder	871	Mohima Chunder In re	932
Mirtherjeet Singh v Choker Narain	815	Mohim Chandra Roy v Kali Tara
Mirza Himmatt v Sahabzadee	799	Debi	1014
Mirza Kuratulein v Pearsa Sahib	402	Mohima Chunder v Huro Lall	751
Mirza Mahomed v Radha Romun	718	Mohima Chunder v J P Wise	782
Mirza Mahomed v Suraptoonissa		Mohima Chunder v Mohesh Chunder	722
Khanum	722	Mohima Chunder v Rajkumar	379
Misir Raghubur v Sheo Buksh	394	Mohima Chunder v Ram Kashore
Misirut Banoo v Mahomed Saicem	979		481 704, 823
Mitham Bibi v Bashir Khan	113	Mohun Mohun v Promoda Nath	162
Mitterjett Singh v Radha Pershad	777, 815	Mohundin v Mancher Shah	724
Mobaral Ali v Emperor	266	Mohun Mohun v Krishno Kashore
Mobaruck Shah v Toofany	814		722, 777
Modoo Hudlin v Sandes	661	Mohori Bibee v Dharmodas	832 831
Modoo Kaikhoosron v Cooverbhace	683	Mohun Lall v Urnojoorna Dassee	799
Modhu Sudan Singh v Rooke	700	Mohun Sahoo v Chutto Mowar	221, 247 246
Mohabeer Pershad v Mohabeer		Mohunt Barm v Kashee Jha	705
Singh	754	Mohunt Dass v Nilkamal Dewan	661 863
Mohabeer Singh v Dhujoo Singh	259 815	M hunt G ur v Havagrib	724
Mohamed Jackeriah v Ahmed		Mohur Sing v Churiba	403, 1011
Mahomed	910		1013 1015
Mohan Lal v Indramati	725	Moses v Thornton	438 724
Mohan Das v Nilkomul	820	Mulwa March v Ct of Wards	837
Mohan Lalji v Cordhan Lalji	709	Moman v Musst Dhanu	691 803
Mohan Lall v Uruopoorna Dassee	599	Muckton v Att Gen	231 341
Mohan Mahtoo v Meer Shamsod	876	Mum hme, Dassee v Greesh
Mohansing Chawn v Henry Conder	721	Chun ler	574
Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalspat		Mymohunee Joginee v Jugg
sing Kanbaji	323 330 337 339	Bundho Sadhookhan	845 8

	PAGE		PAGE
Monmotha Nath & Nabin Chunder	655	Molayappin & Palani Coundan	641
Munohar Singh & Sumrita Kuar	658	Motee Lal & Juggumath Gurg	691
Munroe & Twistleton	594	Mote Lal & Judhoopattée Doss	731
Munchee Pam & Issamihar Roy	722, 722	Mote Sinha & Emp.	943 971
Moodilay & Milton	89	Mothoora Pandey & Ram Ruchya	204
Mookateshwar Debua & Collector of		Mothoor Mohun & The Bank of
Murshidabad	731	Bengal	489
Mukto Keshce & Anund Chunder	681	Motichand & Dadabhai	823
Mulji Lal & Chokulias	199, 703	Moti Chand & Lalita Prasad	533
Mulla Casm & Moolla Abdul	713	Moti Gulabchand & Mahomed
Munir Ummah & The Municipal		Mehdi	775
Commissioners for the Town of		Moti Lal & Jogumohun Das	896
Madras	721	Moti Lal Roy & Kalu Mondar	673 878
Munshir Amier & Maharant Inder		Moti Raju & Laldas Jebhai	704, 705
Jet	873	Motirahu & Parshotam Doral	685
Munshir Amier & Nef Ali	818 865	Moulad Khan & Abdul Sattur
Munshir Birbal & Pran Dhan	216		339 940
Munshir Birbal & Shumoomessy		Moult & Halliday	169
Begum	19, 700 761	Moulvi Mennooddeen & Greesh
Munshir Birbal	791	Chunder	753
Munshir Birbal	211	Moulvi Mahomed Ikramul Huk
Munshir Birbal	149	Walke	953
Munshir Birbal	1099	Mountjoy & Collier	870 877
Munshir Birbal	905	Mowatt & Castle Steel and Iron
Munshir Birbal	627	Works Co	240 865
Munshir Birbal	319 334	Mowji & National Bank of India	840
Munshir Birbal	590	Mozuffer Wahid & Abdas Samad	724
Munshir Birbal	944	Munmojee Dabee & Bhoobun Mowee	353
Munshir Birbal	862	Murtunjaya Sarkar & Gopal Chandra	871
Munshir Birbal	149	Muddun Mohun & Bhogoomanto
Munshir Birbal	1013	Pedlar	72 747
Munshir Birbal	346	Muddun Mohun & Bhurut Chunder	732
Munshir Birbal	517	Muddun Mohun & Kantoo Lal	707
Munshir Birbal	127, 140	Muddun Mohun & Sofuna Bewa	741
Munshir Birbal	608	Mudhoor Soodun & Suroop Chunder
Munshir Birbal	722 723		486 498
Munshir Birbal	702	Muffeodeen Kazeo & Mehar Ali
Munshir Birbal	139		508, 516 770
Munshir Birbal	446 763 767 769	Muhammad Abdul & Ibrahim	508 516
Munshir Birbal	910	Muhammad Ali & Ta'er Khan	732
Munshir Birbal	523	Muhamma I Allahdal & Muhammad
Munshir Birbal	224	Ismail	98
Munshir Birbal	647	Muhammad Allahdad & Ismail
Munshir Birbal	150	Khan	9 766 768 799
Munshir Birbal	869	Muhammad Amir & Sumitra Kuar	794 404
Munshir Birbal	869	Muhammad Fwas & Brj Lal	779
Munshir Birbal	311, 764	Muhammad Hassan & Munna Lal	369
Munshir Birbal	806	Muhammad Inayet & Muhammad
Munshir Birbal	870	Karamatullah	739, 740
Munshir Birbal	386 428	Muhammad Ismail & Lala Sheo
Munshir Birbal	601	mukh Pal	198, 768
Munshir Birbal	397	Muhammad Khan & Muhammad
Munshir Birbal	617 639	Ibrahim	849
Munshir Birbal		Muhammad Mebdi Hasan & Mandar
Munshir Birbal		Das	787

	PAGE		PAGE
Muhammad Simi ud din v Manu Lal	863	Musafir Rai v Trelochan Bagchi	725
Muhammad Sharif v Bande Ali	744	Musst Ackjoo v Lallah Ramchundra	238
Muhammad Umar Khan v Muhammad Maz ud-din	188	Musst Akbar un nissa v Syed Bashir Ali	744
Muhammed Wali Khan v Muhammad Mohi ud din	701, 792 797 92	Musst Amecroonissa v Musst Abe doonissa	704 708
Muhammad Yakub v Muhammad Ismail	717	Musst Anundee v Khedoo Lal	792
Muhammad Yunus v Fmp	113 676	Musst Azeeroonissa v Bakur Khan	761
Muhammad Yusuf v P & O S N Co	732	Musst Bhagbutty v Chondhry Bholuath	589 631, 660
Muir v Glasgow Bank	759 803	Musst Bibee v Sheik Hamid	816
Mujib un nissa v Abdur Rahim	779	Musst Bibi Wahan v Banke Behari	806
Mujnee Ram v Conesh Ditt	724	Musst Edun v Musst Beethun	113 481, 498
Mukhoda Soondary v Ram Churn	117	Musst Efatoonissa v Khan Ikhar Khoda	825
Mukhi Singh v Kushun Singh	61	Musst Farzhaee v Musst Azizun nissa	873
Mukim Mullick v Pamjan Sirdar	81	Musst Fiol v Goor Surun	305
Mukun la Chandra v Arpan Ali	717	Musst Fureedoonissa v Pam Onogra	583
Mulchand v Madho Ram	696 697	Musst Gulab Debi v Monji Pam	722 732
Munchershaw etc v New Dhurumsev Spinning Co	373 363 583 900	Musst Gulab Kuar v Badshah Bahadur	419
Munford v Cething	901 903, 994	Musst Hurrosoondery v Musst Amena	747
Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Guverji Hirji	603	Musst Inam v Jurgobind Ghose	484
Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State	641	Musst Imrit v Lalla Debee	247, 248
Municipality of Sholapur v Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co	780 781, 808	Musst Inderbuttee v Shaik Mahboob	809
Munjaboori Bibi v Alai Mahmud	101	Musst Jabun v Musst Bibee	799
Mun Mohinee v Joykisseen Mookerjee	716	Musst Jarut ool Batool v Musst Hosseince	776 798
Mun Mohinee v Sooda Monee	701	Musst Jhaloo v Shaik Furzund	729
Mun Mohun v Sriram Ray	739	Musst Khoo v Baboo Moodnaram	741
Munnoo Lall v Lalla Choonee	812 843	Musst Kurufool v Musst Paylaee	729
Munrunjun Singh v Telanund Singh	812	Musst Lal Kunwar v Chairangi Lal	709
Munshi Indar Sahai v Kunwar Shyam	701 703	Musst Lall v Murli Dhur	309 442
Munshi Mazhar Hasan v Behari Singh	719, 753 757	Musst Lalun v Hemraj Singh	719 721
Munshi Mosafal Iluq v Surendra Nath	415	Musst Luteefoonissa v Goor Surun	304
Munshi Munno Lall v Golam Abbas	806	Musst Naua Koer v Gobardhan Singh	321 984 987
Munster v Lamb	930	Musst Natukhee v Chowdhury Chintaman	693 711
Murlock v State	778	Musst Oodley v Musst Ladoo	704
Murietta v Wolfhagen	891	Musst Oodia v Bhopal	820 801, 863
Murray v Lord Stair	649	Musst Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chanderpal Kunwar	168 187, 189, 334, 309 371
Murray v R	693	Munbee Buzloor v Shumsooni sa Begum	684
Murray v Walter	997	Musst Phool v Goor Surun	379, 851
Murtaza Husam v Muhammad Yasin Ali	370, 728	Musst. Purnia v Torab Ally	869
Murugesami Pillai v Manickavasala Desika	708, 783	Musst Pam v Babu Bishen	634
		Musst Ramdeo v Babu Shub	634
		Musst Ramdeo v Chandrabali	729

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Mahabadi Nath v. Nath Chander ..	655	Motavappan v. Palani Goundan	641
Mahabadi Nath v. Sumitra Kuar ..	858	Motee Lal v. Juggumath Gurg ..	691
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	894	Mote Lal v. Juthoopatttee Dose ..	731
Mahabadi Nath v. Isambhar Boy ..	782, 782	Mote Saha v. Emp. ..	947, 971
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	897	Mothera Pandey v. Ram Ruchya ..	204
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	771	Mothor Mohun v. The Bank of Bengal ..	489
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	684	Motchand v. Dalabhai ..	823
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	691, 703	Moti Chand v. Lalta Prasad ..	433
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	743	Mota Gulabchand v. Mahomed Mehdi ..	775
Mahabadi Nath v. The Municipal Corporation for the Town of ..	721	Moti Lal v. Jogumohun Das ..	696
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	823	Moti Lal Boy v. Kahu Mondar ..	873, 878
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	848, 865	Moti Baiji v. Laldas Jethai ..	704, 705
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	216	Motahau v. Parshotam Doyal ..	685
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	691, 701, 704, 704	Moulajal Khan v. Abdul Sattar ..	539, 940
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	501	Moult v. Halliday ..	168
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	211	Moulvi Maennosheen v. Greesh Chander ..	753
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	149	Moulvi Mahomed Ikramull Iluk v. Wilkie ..	983
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	1099	Mountjoy v. Collier ..	876, 877
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	505	Mowatt v. Castle Steel and Iron Works Co. ..	210, 805
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	627	Mowji v. National Bank of India ..	840
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	319, 331	Mozuffar Wahid v. Alalza Samad ..	744
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	590	Munmojee Dabee v. Bhobun Moyee ..	353
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	911	Mununjaya Sarkar v. Gopal Chandra ..	871
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	852	Muddun Mohun v. Bhogomanto Pahlar ..	723, 747
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	119	Muddun Mohun v. Bhurut Chunder ..	732
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	1013	Muddun Mohun v. Kantoo Lal ..	707
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	716	Muddun Mohun v. Sadana Dewa ..	741
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	517	Mudhos Soodun v. Surrop Chunder ..	486, 498
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	127, 140	Muffeendeen Kaze v. Mehar Ali ..	508, 516, 779
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	608	Muhammad Abdul v. Ibrahim ..	508, 516
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	722, 723	Muhammad Ali v. Jafer Khan ..	732
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	792	Muhammad Allahdai v. Muhammad Ismail ..	98
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	128	Muhammad Allahdai v. Ismail Khan ..	9, 769, 769, 769
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	116, 765, 767, 769	Muhammad Amir v. Sumitra Kuar ..	294, 404
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	916	Muhammad Fera v. Harj Lal ..	779
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	513	Muhammad Hassan v. Munna Lal ..	309
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	214	Muhammad Inayat v. Muhammad Karamatullah ..	739, 740
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	647	Muhammad Ismail v. Lal's ..	168, 768
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	150	Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Ibrahim ..	819
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	889	Muhammad Mohd Hasan v. Mander Das ..	787
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	809
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	314, 764
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	606
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	870
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	384, 424
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	604
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	297
Mahabadi Nath v. ..	615, 620

PAGE		PAGE
Muhammad Sami ud din v Mannu Lal	863	Musafir Rai v Trelochan Bagchi	725
Muhammad Sharif t Bande Ali	744	Musst Achjoo t Lallah Ramchundra	238
Muhammad Umar Khan t Muham mad Maz nd din	188	Musst Akbar un nissa t Syed Bashir Ali	744
Muhammad Wali Khan t Muham mad Mohi ud din	701, 792 799 825 827	Musst Ameeroonissa t Musst Abe doonissa	504 508
Muhammad Yakub t Muhammud Ismail	717	Musst Anumdes t Khedoo Lal	792
Muhammad Yunus v Fmp	113, 676 736	Musst Azeezoonissa t Bakur Khan	761
Muhammad Yusuf t P & O S N Co	732	Musst Bhagbutty t Chowdhry Bholanath	580 551, 560
Muir t Glasgow Bank	738 803	Musst Bibee v Sheikh Hamid	816
Mujib un nissa t Abdur Rahim	779	Musst Bibi Wahan t Banke Behari	896
Mujnee Ram t Gonesh Dutt	724	Musst Edun t Musst Beechun	113 486 498
Mukhoda Soondary t Ram Churn	113	Musst Elatoonissa t Khandkar Khoda	825
Mukhi Singh t Kishun Singh	616, 730	Musst Farzharce t Musst Anzun nissa	873
Mukim Mullick t Pamjan Sirdar	851	Musst Fool t Goor Surun	305
Muk in la Chandra t Arpan Ah	717	Musst Fureedoonissa t Ram Onogra	583
Mukhand t Madho Ram	626, 627	Musst Gulab Debi t Monji Ram	722 732
Munchershaw etc t New Dhurumsey Si nning Co	323, 363, 883 900, 901, 903 904	Musst Gulab Kuar t Badshah Bahadur	410
Munford t Gething	149	Musst Hurrooondery t Musst Ameena	747
Municipal Corporation of Bombay t Caverji Hirji	603	Musst Inam t Hargobind Ghose	484
Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State	841	Musst Imrit t Lalla Debee	247, 248
Municipality of Sholapur v Shola pur Spinning and Weaving Co	780 781, 808	Musst Inderbittes v Shaik Mahboob	800
Munjhoon Bibi t Akel Mahmud	101	Musst Jabun v Musst Bibee	509
Mun Mohinee t Joykissen Mookerjee	716	Musst Janut ool Batool t Musst Hossainee	776 708
Mun Mohinee t Sooda Monee	701	Musst Jhaloo v Shaik Furzund	729
Mun Mohun v Seram Ray	739	Musst Khoob t Baboo Moondharain	741
Munnoo Lal t Lalla Choonee	842 843, 847	Musst Kurulool t Musst Pajlalee	729
Munrunjun Singh t Telanund Singh	812	Musst Lal Kunwar t Charangi Lal	709
Munshi Indar Sahai t Kunwar Shyam	701, 703	Musst Lal t Muri Dhur	319 142
Munshi Mazhar Hasan t Behari Singh	719, 733 737	Musst Lalun v Hemraj Singh	719 721
Munshi Mosaful Huq v Surendra Nath	415	Musst Luteefoonissa t Goor Surun	304
Munshi Munno Lal t Golam Abbas	806	Musst Naina Koer v Gobardhan Singh	321 984, 987
Munster t Lamb	930	Musst Natukhee v Chowdhury Chintaman	693 731
Murlock t State	776	Musst Oodey t Musst Ladoo	704, 826 861 863
Murietta t Wolfhagen	801	Musst Oodia t Bhopal	870
Murray t Lord Stair	640	Musst Parbati Kunwar t Pani Chanderpai Kunwar	168, 187 189 334 360 371
Murray t R	693	Munsee Buzloor t Shunsooonissa Begum	684
Murray t Walter	997	Musst Phool t Goor Surun	570 851
Murtaza Hussain t Muhammad Yasun Ali	370, 728	Musst Purnia t Torab Ally	869
Murugesami Pillai t Manickavasaka Desika	708 783	Musst Pam t Babu Bishen	634
		Musst Ramdee v Babu Shub	634
		Musst Ramdeo t Chandrabali	729

PAGE		PAGE
Muhammad Sami ud din t Mannu Lal	863	Musafir Rai v Trelochan Bagchi	725
Muhammad Sharif t Bande Ali	744	Musst Ackjoo t Lallah Ramchundra	238
Muhammad Umar Khan v Muham mad Maz nd-din	188	Musst Akbar un nissa v Syed Bashir Ali	744
Muhammed Wah Khan t Muham mad Mohi ud din	701, 792, 799, 825	Musst Ameeroonissa v Musst Abe doonissa	504, 508
Muhammad Yakub v Muhammad Ismail	717	Musst Annundee t Khedoo Lal	792
Muhammad Yunus v Fmp	113, 676, 736	Musst Azeeroonissa t Bakur Khan	761
Muhammad Yusuf t P & O S N Co	732	Musst Bhagbotty t Chowdhry Bholanath	589, 651, 660
Muir t Glasgow Bank	798	Musst Bibee t Sheik Hamud	816
Mujib un nissa v Abdur Rahum	779	Musst Bibi Wahani t Banke Behari	896
Mujnee Ram t Gonesh Dutt	724	Musst Edun v Musst Beechun	113, 486
Mukhoda Secondary t Ram Churn	117	Musst Efatoonissa t Khandkar Khoda	825
Mukhi Singh t Kishun Singh	616	Musst Farzharee t Musst Azizun nissa	873
Mukim Mullick t Ramjan Sirdar	851	Musst Fool t Goor Surun	307
Mukunda Chandra t Arpan Ali	717	Musst Fareedoonissa t Ram Onogra	783
Mulchand t Madho Ram	696	Musst Gulab Debi t Monji Pam	722
Munchershaw, etc t Aew Dhurumsev Spinning Co	323, 363	Musst Gulab Kuar t Badshah Bahadur	419
	883, 900, 901, 903, 904	Musst Hurrooondery v Musst Ameena	747
Munford t Gething	640	Musst Imam t Hurgobind Ghose	484
Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Caverji Hurji	603	Musst Imrit v Lalla Dehee	247, 248
Municipal Corporation of Bombay v Secretary of State	841	Musst Inderbuttee v Shaik Mahboob	869
Municipality of Sholapur v Shola pur Spinning and Weaving Co	780	Musst Jabun t Musst Bibee	799
	781, 808	Musst Jarutool Batool v Musst Hosseinee	776, 798
Munjhoori Bibi t Alci Mahmud	101	Musst Jhaloo v Shaik Fuzund	729
Mun Mohinee t Joykisseen Mookerjee	716	Musst Khoob t Baboo Moodnarain	741
Mun Mohinee v Sooda Monce	701	Musst Kurufool t Musst Rajpalce	729
Mun Mohun v Srimam Ray	739	Musst Lal Kunwar t Charangi Lal	709
Munnoo Lall t Lalla Choonee	812, 813, 847	Musst Lall t Murb Dhur	369, 142
Munrunjun Singh t Telanund Singh	812	Musst Lafun v Hemraj Singh	719, 721
Munshi Indar Sahai t Kunwar Shiam	701, 703	Musst Lateefoonissa t Goor Surun	304
Munshi Mazhar Hasan t Behari Singh	719, 753, 757	Musst Nana Koer v Gobardhan Singh	321, 984, 987
Munshi Mosaful Huq t Surendra Nath	415	Musst Natukhee v Chowdhury Chintamun	693, 751
Munshi Munno Lall t Golam Abbas	806	Musst Oodey v Musst Ladoo	704, 826, 861, 863
Munster t Lamb	930	Musst Ooda v Bhopal	870
Murlock t State	776	Musst Parbati Kunwar t Ram Chanderpai Kunwar	168, 167, 189, 334, 369, 371
Muretta v Wolfhagen	801	Mun-shee Buzloor v Shumsoonissa Begum	684
Murray v Lord Stair	640	Musst Phool v Goor Surun	579, 851
Murray v R	691	Musst Purnia v Torab Ally	869
Murray v Walter	997	Musst Ram v Babu Bishen	634
Murtaza Husain t Muhammad Yasin Ali	370, 728	Musst Ramdeo v Babu Shub	634
Murugesami Pillai t Manickavasaka Desika	708, 783	Musst Ramdeo v Chandrabah	729

	PAGE		PAGE
Narayan : Political Agent	706	Nazir Jhamdar : R	268 274
Narayan : Raoji	823 861 862	Nazir Sidhee : Womesh Chunder	722
Narayan Annada : Ramalinga	714	Neal : Erving	139 932
Narayan Bhagwant : Srinivas		Neal : Parkin	146
Trimbak	743	Neamut Ali : Gooroo Doss	167 171 174
Narayan Ganesh : Bhurraj	683	Neave : Moss	576
Narayan Kandu : Kaigunda	848	Neel Kanto : Jaggabundho Ghose	110 493, 597
Narayan Rani Krishna : Vignashwar	619 625	Neelkanto Deb : Beer Chunder	170
Narayan Unl r t Motulal Pamdas	857	Nehal Chunder : Hurree Pershad	698 791
Narayanan Chettier : Veerappa		Nehal Chunder : Hurree Pershad	731
Chettier	719	Neile : Jakle	139 149
Narayanan Chetty : Muthiah		Neill : Devonshire	162 173
Servai	596	Neki Ram : Khushi Ram	689
Narayana Annayi : Pamalinga	714	Nellamatta : Bethia Naickan	723
Narayani : Nabin Chandra	846	Nellappa : Virithachala	864
Narendra Lal : Jogi Hari	778 779	Nelson : Bridport	421
Narendra v Bhola	618	Nelson : Whittall	801
Narendra Narain : Bushen Chundra	730	Nelson Line Limited v Nelson & Sons	593
Narendra Nath : Ram Gobind	767	Nemaganla : Paresha	393
Narhari Hari : Anibaikom Bal		Nemai Charan De : Secretary of
Krishna	132	State	727
Narlu : Lal Saiu	743	Nemi Chand : Wallace	993
Naro V nayak : Nahari Bin	162 163	Nepean : Doe	744
Narandas Jitram : G Joglekar	847	Ne vaji Bundopadhya : Kali Prosonni
Narsing Das : Rahimambhai	831 863 867	Chose	718 731
Narsing Dial : Ram Narain	137	Newsome : Ilwers	817 834
	146 161 860	Newton : Belcher	790
Narsingo Narain : Dharam Thacker	717 749	Newton : Chaplin	996
Nash : Inman	720	Newton : Harland	927
Natha Hari : Jamne	817	Newton : Leddian	30 820
Natha Singh : Jodha Singh	696	Nga Thabash : F N Burn	683
Nathji : Mulashwar : Lalbhai		Niametoolah Khehim v Himmud Ali	22 232 69
Rindar	929	Niamatulla Khan : Gajraj Singh	730
Nathubhai : Mulchand	870	Nibaran Chandra Roy : R	111 693
Nathubhai Dhurajram v Bai Hans			782 784 796
gauri	702	Nibaran Chandra Sen : Pam Chandra
Nathu Ram : Kalyan	413	Sen	3 736
Nattathambi Batter : Nellakunara		Nicholas : Asqilar	130 764
Pellai	174	Nicol & Co : Castle	161
Nawab Azimut : Hurdwarce Wall	850	Nicholl : Jones	945
Nawab Howledar : R	890	Nichols : In re	501
Nawab Khan : Rugboonath Das	1015	Nicholls : Dowling	240 9 9 7
Nawab Nazir Begum : Rao Raghu		Nicholls : Downes	222
Nath Singh	766	Nicholson : Smith	209
Nawab Shah Ara Begum : Nanbi		Nikha Chowdhury v Bunda Lal	823
Begum	337	Nikhan Singh : Sham Singh	589
Nawab S thee : Rajah Ojoodhyaram	801 933	Nulbee Singh v Biso Nath	549
Nawab Syelt Musst Amancee	696	Nilukrishna Bose v Narain Das	110
	739 782	Niel en v Watt	670
Nawab Tarasseed : Behari Lal	717	Nikunja Belair v Haren Ira
Nawabunisa : Fuzloonissa	799	Chandra	606 9 7
Nazimullin : P	1047	Nidalaniben v Palmanabha	160
		Nidanth Surmah v Soosela Debia	932

	PAGE		PAGE
Musst Pam Kaur v Achin	711	Nagudas Harjivandas t Kara Jesang	831
Musst Safiqunissa v Shaban Ali	340, 580	Nago v Tukaram	592 593
Musst Sahordan v Joy Narain	696	Nagore Monee t t Smith	754
Musst Shunemokeo t Isan Chunder	932	Namappa Chetti t Chidambaram
Musst Sahagbati v Babu Surendra		Chetti	393
Mohun	778	Nalini Kanta Lahiri v Surnamoyt
Musst Surajmamt t Rabi Nath Ojha	793	Debja ..	702, 821
Mus t Ushrufooneesa t Baboo		Nallapa t Vridhachala	864
Crduhare	305	Nallathambi t Nellakumara	174 40,
Musst Ustoorum t Baboo Mohun	508	Nallappa Goundan v Kaliappa
Musst Zaynub t Hadjee Baba	32, 327	Goundan	724
Mistajha Saheb t Santha Pillai	756	Nana t Shanker	247
Mitloora Dasa t Kanoo Beharee	707	Nanakchand t Chameli Kunwar	864
Mutlammal t Secretary of State	397	Nanak Ram t Mehun Lall	99 101
Muthu Pillai t R	457	Nana Narain t Huree Puntu	488
Muthuravivan v Sona Samavaiyan	869	Nanda Gopal Sinha t Pores Mont
Muthu Pamakrishna Naicken t		Debi	790
Marimuth Goundan	680 700 704 792	Nanda Kumar Howladar v Ram
Muthu Sastriat t Viswanatha	241	Jiban	413 415
Muthukumaraswami Pillai v R	274	Nanda Lal t Jagneswar Halder	718 720
"t 299 310 601 918 921 923		Nanda Lal Goswami t Atarmani
	984 985 986	Dasce	814
Mithuswamy Ayyar t Kalyani		Nandan Singh t Jumman	723 838
Ammal	531 726	Nandkishore Das t Ramkalp Roy	480
Mithuvivan t Sinna Samavaiyan	878	Nandlal Pathek t Mohanth Channer
Mattavan Chetti t Sangh Vira	714	pet Das	371, 815
Muttia Pillai t Western	602	Nand Ram t Bhupal Singh	714
Muttu Karuppa v Rama Pillai	256	Nanlu Pam t I M R Co	790
Muttu I amalunga t Perianayagam		Nanomi Babuasin t Modhun
Pillai	371	Mohun	711 713
Muttu I amalunga t Setapati	710	Naracott t Naracott	452 459
Muttusami Jagavera t Venctas		Nara Gopal Kulkarni t Paragouda
wara	416		713 714
Mutty Lall t Annundo Chunder	618	Narogunty Jutehmedavanah t
Mutty Lall t Michael	114	Vengama Naidoo	7, 128 518 698 791
Malapuri Krishnasami t P	349 931	Narain t Emp	920
Miche In the goods of	773 808	Narain Chunder t Cohen	423
N		Narain Chunler t Dataram Roy	814
Nabar Chand v Chunler Sikhur	653	Narain Coomary t Ram Kshna	221 222
Naser Sheikh t R	88, 846 940	Narain Das t Dhanar	247
Nana Cho t M t M	162	Narathee D ssee t Nurroburry
Nasifugam Pillai t Lama Chandra	791	M hunto	222
Nataraja Pillai t Secretary of State		Narain Kuar t Chandi Din	341
	835 937	Narain Prasad t Sarnam Singh	702
Nagarj Trikanj In re	759 929		712 713
Nagar Mall t Azemoolah	857	Narain Singh t Surendro Narain	382
Nagarbanjar t Fajper t	135	Narang Bhikabai t Diya Uned It 7
Naraina Nath Ghosh t Lawrence			177 179
Jute C	219 251	Narang Rai Agarwalla t River
Narainwar Prasad t Bachu Singh		Steam Navigation Co	796
	573 735	Narasimha Appa Row t Iarthasa
Naraina t Emperor	94	rathy	691 710
Naralla t Abdullah	684 685, 810 811	Navalatti Narayna v Logdinga	832
		Narayan t Chintaman	768
		Narayan t Lakshmandis	530

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Narayan v. Political Agent ..	706	Nazir Jhamdar v. R. ..	268, 274
Narayan v. Raoji ..	823, 861, 862	Nazir Sidhee v. Womesh Chunder ..	722
Narayan Annadi v. Ramalinga ..	714	Neal v. Erving ..	139, 232
Narayan Bhagwant v. Srinivas Trimbak ..	743	Neal v. Parkin ..	146
Narayan Ganesh v. Bhurraj ..	688	Neamut Ali v. Gooroo Doss ..	167, 171, 174
Narayan Kandu v. Kalgunda ..	848	Neave v. Moss ..	876
Narayan Ram Krishna v. Vignashwar ..	619, 625	Neel Kanto v. Jaggatundho Ghose ..	110, 493, 527
Narayan Undir v. Motilal Ramdas ..	857	Neelkuto Deb v. Beer Chunder ..	170, 698, 791
Narayanan Chettier v. Veerappa Chettier ..	712	Nehal Chunder v. Hurree Pershad ..	731
Narayanan Chetty v. Mutluah Servai ..	596	Neile v. Jable ..	139, 149
Narayana Annavi v. Ramalinga ..	714	Nell v. Devonshire ..	162, 173
Narayani v. Nabin Chandra ..	846	Neki Ram v. Khushi Ram ..	689
Narendra Lal v. Jogi Hari ..	778, 779	Nellamatta v. Bethia Naickan ..	723
Narendra v. Bhola ..	618	Nellappa v. Vrudhachala ..	864
Narendra Narain v. Bishen Chandra ..	730	Nelson v. Bridport ..	421
Narendra Nath v. Ram Gobind ..	767	Nelson v. Whittall ..	801
Narhari Hari v. Anibaikom Bal-krishna ..	132	Nelson Line Limited v. Nelson & Sons ..	588
Narki v. Lal Sahu ..	743	Nemaganda v. Paresha ..	393
Naro Vinayak v. Nahari Bin ..	162, 163	Nemai Charan De v. Secretary of State ..	727
Narsidas Jitram v. G. Joglekar ..	847	Nemi Chand v. Wallace ..	993
Narsing Das v. Rahimnabhai ..	831, 863, 867	Nepean v. Doe ..	744
Narsing Dyal v. Ram Narain ..	137, 145, 161, 862	Nesaj Bundopadhya v. Kali Prosonno Ghose ..	719, 731
Narsing Naram v. Dharam Thakur ..	717, 749	Newsome v. Flowers ..	637, 838
Nash v. Inman ..	725	Newton v. Belcher ..	305
Natha Hari v. Jamne ..	847	Newton v. Chaplin ..	996
Natha Singh v. Jodha Singh ..	696	Newton v. Harland ..	927
Nathji Mulashwar v. Lalbhai Rindar ..	929	Newton v. Leddiard ..	305, 826
Nathubhai v. Mulchand ..	830	Nga Tha Yah v. F. N. Burn ..	683
Nathubhai Dhirajram v. Bal Han- gauri ..	702	Niamutoolah Khodim v. Hummut Ali ..	225, 232, 569
Nathu Ram v. Kalyan ..	413	Niamatulla Khan v. Gajraj Singh ..	735
Nattathambi Batter v. Nellakumara Pella ..	174	Nibaran Chandra Roy v. R. 111, 693, 782, 784, 796
Nawab Azimut v. Hurdwarce Mull ..	850	Nibaran Chandra Sen v. Ram Chandra Sen ..	535, 536
Nawab Howledar v. R. ..	895	Nicholas v. Asphar ..	370, 761
Nawab Khan v. Rughoonath Das ..	1015	Nicol & Co. v. Castle ..	121
Nawab Nazir Begum v. Rao Raghu Nath Singh ..	706	Nicholl v. Jones ..	996
Nawab Shah Ara Begam v. Nanhi Begam ..	337	Nicholls, In re ..	801
Nawab Sidhee v. Rajah Ojoodhyaram ..	871, 933	Nicholls v. Dowding ..	240, 955, 957
Nawab Syed v. Musst. Amanee ..	698, 729, 782	Nicholls v. Downes ..	222
Nawab Tarasseed v. Behari Lall ..	717	Nicholson v. Smith ..	259
Nawabunissa v. Fuzloonissa ..	798	Nidha Chowdhury v. Banda Lal ..	823
Nazimuddin v. R. ..	1007	Nidhan Singh v. Sham Singh ..	589
		Nidhee Singh v. Bisso Nath ..	849
		Nidhukrishna Bose v. Nistarini Das ..	145
		Niel-en v. Watt ..	670
		Nikunja Behari v. Harendra Chandra ..	796, 967
		Nidalandhen v. Padmanabha ..	165
		Nidkanth Surnah v. Soosela Debia ..	972

	PAGE		PAGE
Musst Pam haur e Achb n	711	Nagindas Harjivandas e Kara Jesang	831
Musst Safiqunis. a v Shaban Al	310 780	Nago e Tukaram	59 59
Musst Sahordan e Joy Narain	196	Nagore Monce e e Smith	754
Mu t Stanemokee e Lan Chunder	93	Namappa Chett e Chudambaram
M t Bohagbati e Babu Surendra Mohun	773	Chetti	393
M t Surajman e Rab Nath Ojha	793	Nalini Kanta Lahiri e Surnamoyi	70 8 1
M t Usirufonea. a e Baboo		Debya	804
Crudhare	303	Nallapa e Vridhachala	804
M t Ustoorum e Baboo Mohun	303	Nallstlambi e Nellakumara	174 403
Mus t Zaynub e Hadjee Baba	3 3 7	Nallappa Coundan e Kahaipya
M tajia Saleh e Santha Plla	756	Goundan	7 4
M thora Da s Kanoo Beharee	97	Nana e Shanker	74
f thannal Secretary of State	797	Nanakchand e Chameli Kunwar	864
Mutlu P la e J	4 7	Nanal Ram e Meh n Lal	99 101
M thura an e Sana Sanna yan	868	Nana Nara n e Huree Puntu	488
M th Pounkri hns Na chen e		Nanda Gopal Sinha e Pores Mon
Mari mutl Coundan (56 00 01	9	Deb	790
M u Sastigal Vis anatia	741	Nanda K mar Howladar e Ram
M hukumara. nan Plla e P 4		Jhan	413 415
00 319 6 1 918 9 1 993	98 99 980	Nanda Lal e Jagnes var Halder	718 7 0
M th wan v Ayyar e Kalyan		Nala Lal Goswami e Atarman
Anmal	691 7 6	Dace	814
M th u a an Sana S mava ya i	878	Nan lin Singh e J mman	7 3 838
M ta an Chett e Sangli i ra	714	Nandashore Das e Namkajp Roy	480
Muttal la e Western	60 7	Nandlal Pathek e Mohan Channer
M ttu harujja Rama Plla	9 6	pet Das	371 815
Mutl lamalnga e Periasayagam		Nand Ra n e Bhupal Singh	714
P la	371	Nanku Pam e I M R Co	796
M ttu lan alnga Setaj at	710	Nasoom Bab as n e Mxibun
M a n Jagovera Venecatas		Mohun	711 713
n n	416	Narac tt e Naracott	45 459
M et Lal e Annundo Chunder	618	Nara Gopal Kulkarn e Paragouda
M t Lal e M hacl	114		713 714
M laj ti Kri hna am R	319 911	Naramunty I tel neelava sh e
M i e In th goods f	3 8 9	Vengama Nadoo	7 198 518 609 791
N
Nahar Chanl e Chunder S Mur	191	Nara n Emp	9 0
Naf e Slekh e R	88 84 91	Nara n Cl nter e Cohen	499
N a Cl e M Se M	169	Nara n Clunler e Dataran Ro	814
Nal gam I llar Jama Chan lrs	7	Nara n Coonary e Ram Ka hna	1 7
Na raja Plla e Secretary of State		Nara n Dst e Dlawar	94
	89 97	Narane Dace e Nur hurry	900
Narj Trika j In re	799 9 3	M hunt
Na Mall e Azeemollah	8	Nara n Kuar e Chan li Dn	341
N a Banja e Fajeror	13	Nara n Irsal e Sarnam Singh
Namla Natl Ghosh e Lawrence			710 713
Jute C	11 9 1	Nara n Singl e N ren lro Nara n	38
Nashtwar Irsad e Bachu Engl	53 53	Narang Bh kaba e Dja Uned	117
	53 53		1 7 179
Nana e Fajeror	94	Narank Bai Agar alla e B rer
Nanl e Abdullah	684 68 816 811	Stean Nav gat m Co	79
		Narankia Ajpa R w e Parthasa	791 711 rally
		Narakatt Narayna e Logal nga	83
		Naraya e Cl nian an	8
		Naraya e Lalshwandas	690

	PAGE		PAGE
Narayan v Political Agent	706	Nazir Jhamdar t R	269 274
Narayan t Raoji	823 861	Nazir Sadhee t Womesh Chunder	722
Narayan Annadi t Ramalinga	714	Neal t Erving	139 232
Narayan Bhagwant v Srinivas Trimbak	743	Neal t Parkin	146
Narayan Ganesh v Bhurraj	689	Neamut Ah t Gooroo Doss	167 171 174
Narayan Kandu t Kaigunda	848	Neave t Moss	876
Narayan Rani Krishna t Vignashwar	619 625	Neel Kanto t Jaggabundho Ghose	110 493, 527
Narayan Undir t Motilal Pamdas	837	Neellisto Deb t Beer Chunder	170
Narayanan Chettier t Veerappa Chettier	712		698 791
Narayanan Chetty t Muthiah Servai	796	Nehal Chunder t Hurree Pershad	731
Narayana Annayi t Pamalinga	714	Neile t Jakle	139 149
Narayani t Nabin Chandra	846	Neill t Devonshire	162 173
Narendra Lal t Jogi Hart	779	Neki Ram t Khushi Ram	689
Narendra v Bhola	618	Nellamatta t Bethia Naickan	723
Narendra Narain t Bishen Chandra	730	Nellappa t Yndhachala	964
Narendra Nath t Ram Gobind	767	Nelson t Bridport	421
Narhari Hari t Anubai Kom Bal Krishna	139	Nelson t Whittall	801
Narka t Lal Sahu	743	Nelson Fine Limited t Nelson & Sons	588
Naro Vinayak t Nahari Bin	162 163	Nemaganda t Paresha	393
Narudas Jitram t G Joglekar	847	Nemat Charan De t Secretary of State	727
Narsing Das t Rahimnabhai	831 863	Nemi Chand t Wallace	993
Narsing Dial t Ram Narain	137	Nepean t Doe	744
Narsing Dial t Ram Narain	147 161	Newaj Bundopadhya t Kali Prosenn Ghose	718 731
Narsing Narain t Dharam Thacker	717 749	Newsome t Howers	837 838
	725	Newton t Belcher	301
Nash t Inman	847	Newton t Chaplin	996
Natha Hari t Jamne	696	Newton t Harlan	927
Natha Singh t Jodha Singh		Newton t Leddiard	207 826
Nathji Mulashwar t Lalbhai Rindar	929	Nga Tha Lah t F N Burn	693
Nathubhai t Mulchand	870	Niamutoolah Khedum t Himmut Ali	22 232 61
Nathubhai Dhirajram t Bai Hans gairi	702	Niamatulla Khan t Gajraj Singh	725
Nathu Ram t Rajyan	413	Nibaran Chandra Roy t R	111, 693
Nattathambi Batter t Nellikumara Pellai	174		787 784 796
Nawab Azimut t Hurdwaree Mull	850	Nibaran Chandra Sen t Ram Chandra Sen	31 738
Nawab Howledar t P	897	Nicholas t Asphar	336 761
Nawab Khan t Rughoonath Das	1015	Nicol & Co t Castle	191
Nawab Nazir Begum t Rao Raghu Nath Singh	706	Nicholl t Jones	906
Nawal Shah Ara Begum t Nanbi Begum	337	Nicholls In re	401
Nawab Sulhee t Rajah Ojodhyaram	851, 933	Nicholls t Dowding	240, 241 87
Nawab Syed t Must Amianee	696	Nicholls t Downes	222
	729 782	Nicholson t Smith	29
Nawab Tarasced t Behari Lal	717	Nidha Chowdhury t Bindu Lal	823
Nawabunissa t Fuzloonissa	798	Nidhan Singh t Shain Smith	389
Nazimullu t I	1047	Nidhee Singh t Russo Nath	849
		Nidhikrishna Bose t Natarani Das	115
		Nielsen t Watt	670
		Nikunja Behari t Narendra Chandra	606 957
		Nidhanandhen t Padmanabha	161
		Nidhanth Sarmah t Soosela Debis	932

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Nilkristo Deb v Bir Chandra	496, 487	Nrityamoni Dassi v Lakhan Chandra	588, 590
Nilmaoi Maitra v Mathura Nath ..	719	Nubo Kishen v Promothonath Ghose	740
Nil Monce v Zuheerunnissa Khanum	336, 683, 858	Nuddarchand Saha v Meajan ..	811
Nilmoney Bhooya v Ganga Narain ..	703	Nujmooddeen Ahmed v Beebee Zu-
Nilmony Mukhopadhyay v Aimmunisa		hoorum	799
Bibee	416	Nolitt Chunder v Bugola Soonduree..	710
Nilo Ramchandra v Govind Balla ..	820	Numbo Cant v Mahtab Bibi ..	799
Niratan Mandal v Ismail Khan	719, 812	Nund Coomar v Gunga Pershad ..	707
Nimboo Sahoo v Boodhoo Jum-		Nund Dhunpat v Tara Chand ..	366
mular	858	Nund Kishore v Sheo Dyal ..	754
Ningawa v Bharmappa 130, 131, 211,		Nund Panda v Gyadbur ..	245
345, 312, 321, 322, 327, 325, 328,		Nundo Kumar v Bonomially Gayan	839, 846
331, 510, 770, 771		Nundo Lall v Nistariui Dassi ..	886
Nirmul Chunder v Srimati Sarat-		Nundo Lall v Prosunno Moyee ..	618
mani	526	Nund Ram v Chootoo ..	703
Nisa Chand v Kanchiram Bagani	754, 755	Nundun Lal v Tayler ..	840
Nivakar Das v Bairagi Samal	849, 852	Nunna Lal Scrowjee v Jawala Prasad	197
Nistarini v Kapershad Dass	681, 687, 716	Nur Mahomed v Bismulla Jan ..	889
Nistarini Dowece v Nundo Lall	347,	Nuri Mian v Ambica Singh ..	729
412, 414, 415, 416, 417, 669, 761,		Nuronath Dass v Goda Kohita	703, 708
083, 893		Nurroohurry Mohunto v Naraince
Nitramur Singh v Nund Lall ..	722	Dassee	242
Nitra Pal v Jai Pal ..	189	Nursing Das v Narain Das ..	703
Nittanand Ghose v Krishna Dyal ..	789	Nursing Narain v Rogboobur
Nittyand Roy v Abdar Raheem ..	546	Singh	847
Nittyandund Roy v Banshi Chandra ..	683	Nusseerim v Gource Sunkur	253, 321
Nitya Gopal v Nagendra Nath	530, 534	Nyamutullah v Gobind Churn ..	168
Nityanund Surmah v Kashinath		Nye v Macdonald ..	472, 572
Nyalunker	411
Nobin Chunder v Dokhobala Das
685, 700, 810
Nobin Krishno v Russick Lal ..	549	Oakeley v Ooddeen ..	678
Nobin Mundul v Chohm Mullick..	813	Obhoy Chunder v Pearee Mohun ..	296
Nobo Coomar v Gobind Chunder	378,	Obhoy Churn v Gobind Chunder	700, 702
379, 381		Obhoy Churn v Hari Nath	702, 746,
Nobodoorga, In re ..	129, 734		776, 777
Nobodoorga v Dwarkanath Roy ..	812	Obhoy Churn v Lakhya Nonee ..	695
Nobo Kishore v Joy Doorga ..	736	Oldoy Churn v Nobin Chunder ..	832
Nobokishore Sarma Roy v Hari Nath	704	Obhoy Churn v Panchanun Bose ..	849
Nocoor Chunder v Ashutosh Ma-		Obhoy Churn v Treelochun Chat-kerjee	613	terjee	850
Nogendrabala Dabee v R ..	157	Obhoy Churn v Uma Churn ..	735
Noobai Mistri v R ..	356	Obhoy Gobind v Beejoy Gobind
Noor Bux v R ..	294, 295, 938, 1004		221, 230, 871
Norden Steam Ship Co v Demsey ..	670	Ochantram v Dolatram ..	403
Norendra Nath v Kamalbasuni		O'Connell's Case ..	903
Das	9	O'Connor v Marjoribanks ..	804
North v Miles ..	251	Ofner (in re) ..	640
North-Eastern Railway v Hastings ..	660	Ogra Kant v Mohes Chunder ..	724
Noshai Mistri v R ..	348	Olpherts v Mahabir Pershad ..	487
Nowcourse Chunder v Birmontogee		Omer Dutt v Burn ..	167, 175
Debee	724	Omet Chunder v Dukhina Soondry	715, 813
Nripendra Nath Sahu v Ashutosh		Omrita Lall v Kalee Pershad ..	569
Ghose	802	Omrannissa Bibee v Dilawar Ally ..	747

	PAGE		PAGE
Onychund t Barker	3	Panduranga t Nagappa	732
O'Neill v Read	290	Pandya Nayak In the matter of the petition of	691
Onkarappa t Subaji Pandurang	813	Pangang t Emperor	297 915
Onraet t Krishen Soonduree	695	Panna Lal t Srimati Bamasundari	751
Oodcy Chund t Bhasker Jagonnath	741	Ponnappa Pillai t Pappuday jangar	711
Oolagappa Chetty t Collector of Trichunopoly	760	Papendick t Bridgewater	245 330
Oomabuttie t Pareshnath Pandey	238	Pappi Anterjenam t Jeyyan Nayer	801
Oomda Bibee t Shah J nab	798	Paramma t Ramachandra	711
Oomut Fatima t Bhuj Gopal	319 379	Parami Singh t [Lal] Mal	818 819 857 858
Oriental Government Security Life Ass Co t Narasimha Chari	479	Paranjpe t Kanade	412
	714 9 9 984	Para Sundary Dasee t B jraj Nopant	550
Oriental Govt Security Life Ass Co t Sarat Chandra	126 714	Parbati Charan t Raj Krishna	715
Oriental Life Assurance Co t Narasimha Chari	730 338 490 715	Parbati Dasi t Raja Baikunta Nath De	684 685 694
O'Rourke t Bohingbroke	4	Parbati Kumari t Jagadis Chunder	788
O'Rourke t Commissioner for Railways	891	Parbutti Dasi t Ram Chand	747
Osborne t Ghaequell	138	Parbutti Dasi t Purno Chunder	369 372
Osborne t London Dock Co	910	Parcell t Macnamara	409
Osmond Beeby v Khutish Chandra Acheryya	845	Pardee t Price	616
O'Shea t Wood	903	Pareman Dass t Bhattro Mahton	711 714
Oudh Behari In re	109	Parfitt t Lawless	763
		Parker t S E R Co	762
		Parker t Lewis	411
		Parkin t Moon	972
		Parmanand t Airepat Rani	611
		Parmanand Misser t Sabib Ali	722
		Parsons t London County Council	411
		Parsothama Das t Patesri Pattab	677 639
		Partab Singh t Balwant Singh	638
		Partab Singh t Chitpal Singh	697
		Parton t Cole	511 537
		Partridge t Bere	870
		Partridge t Coates	711
		Parvatibayamma t Ramakrishna Rai	83
		Pasley t Freeman	193
		Pasumarty Jagappa In the matter of	655
		Pasupati t Narayana	574
		Patch, Re	141
		Patch t Ward	413
		Patel Lalabhai t Hargovan Manubhai	850
		Patel Vandrayan t Patel Manilal	168, 189 332
		Patnammal t Kalai Pavuthar	617
			656, 673
		Patman r Harlan t	294
		Pattaburam er r Vencatarow Naicken	457
		Patterson r McCausland	474
		Paul r Robson	1015
		Paxton r Douglas	914
		Pavne r Bennet	374

P

Pachaperumal Chettiar v Dasi Thangam	0 9, 930
Padam Lal t Tel Singh	793
Padarath Halwai t Ram Nain	531
Padduck t Forester	257 258
Paddu t Mahabir Prasad	816
Page t Findley	778
Pahalwan Singh t Maharajah Mahesh Buksh	664
Paine t Tilden	982
Palakdhari Rai t Manners	191 1014
Palaneappa Chetty t Maung Po Sang	683
Palianappa Chetty t Sreemath Deva. Akamoney	708 709 1015
Palla t Emperor	621
Palm er v Case	142
Panchanan Bose v Emperor	691
Panchi Das t I	116 319
Panchu Moid t R	421 431
Pandaya Talaver t Puli Telaver	766 767
Panit Gaval arshad Tewari r Sardar Blaat Singh	336
Pandit Hanuman t Mufti Assadullah	831
Pandurang t Narayan Rao	844, 848
Pandurang Krishnanji t Markandeva Tukaram	839

TABLE OF CASES CITED

lxii

	PAGE		PAGE
Omyehnd t Barker	3	Panduranga t Nagappa	732
O'Neill t Read	220	Pandya Nayak, In the matter of the petition of	691
Onkarappa t Subaji Pandurang	813	Pangang t Emperor	227 915
Onraet t Kusben Soonduree	695	Panna Lal t Srimati Bamasundari	751
Oodley Chund t Bhasker Jagonnath	741	Ponnappa Pillai t Pappuday jangar	711
Oolagappa Chetty t Collector of Trichunopoly	766	Papendick t Bridgewater	245 330
Oomabutte t Pareshnath Pandey	238	Pappa Anterjenam t Jeyyan Nayer	801
Oomda Bibee t Shah Jonab	798	Paramma t Ramachandra	711
Oomut Fatima t Bhuj Gopal	1 9 379	Param Singh t (Lal) Mal 818 819 820	836
Oriental Government Security Life Ass Co t Narasimha Chari	479	Paranjie t Kanade	412
	714 9 9 984	Para Sundary Dasee t Bijraj Nopani	590
Oriental Govt Security Life Ass Co t Sarat Chandra	126 714	Parbati Charan t Raj Krishna	715
Oriental Life Assurance Co t Narasimha Chari	736 338 490 715	Parbati Dasi t Raja Baikunta Nath De	684 685, 699
O'Rourke t Bolingbroke	4	Parbati Kumari t Jagadis Chunder	789
O'Rourke t Commissioner for Railways	891	Parbutti Dasi t Ram Chand	747
Osborne t Gbacquell	138	Parbutti Dasi t Purno Chunder	369 372
Osborne t London Dock Co	910	Parcell t Macnamara	409
Osmond Beeby t Khutish Chandra Acheryja	845	Pardec t Price	516
O'Shea t Wood	503	Parman Dasi t Bhattro Mahton	711, 714
Oudh Behari In re	109	Parfitt t Lawless	763
		Parker t S E. R Co	762
		Parker v Lewis	411
		Parlan t Moon	972
		Parmanand t Airepat Ram	611
		Parmanand Misser t Sahib Ali	722
		Parsons t London County Council	411
		Parsotham Dasi t Patcari Parthab	637, 638
		Parthab Singh t Palwant Singh	638
		Parthab Singh t Chitpal Singh	697
		Parton t Cole	15 7
		Partridge t Bere	840
		Partridge t Coates	511
		Parratibayamma t Ramakrishna Rai	873
		Pasley t Freeman	193
		Pasumarty Jagappa In the matter of	900
		Pasupati t Narayana	574
		Patch Re	141
		Patch t Ward	413
		Patel Kulabhai t Hargovan Mansukh	870
		Patel Vandravan t Patel Manilal	169, 189 332
			626, 673
		Patman t Harland	204
		Pattabburamier t Vencatarow Naicken	487
		Patterson t McCausland	474
		Paul t Pobon	1015
		Paxton t Douglas	914
		Payne t Bennet	374

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Payton v. St. Thomas' Hospital ..	235	Pickering, Re ..	902
Peacable v. Watson ..	331	Pickering v. Noyes ..	910
Peacock v. Bell ..	806	Picket v. Packham ..	745
Peacock v. Harper ..	258	Piggott v. E. C. R. Co. ..	138
Peacock v. Harris ..	146	Pika Bawa v. R. ..	218, 226
Pearce v. Decker ..	438	Pillay v. Maistry ..	648
Pearce v. Foster ..	902	Pinney v. Hunt ..	603
Pearl Mohun v. Drobomoyi Dabia	176, 187	Pinney v. Pinney ..	603
Peary Mohun Mukerjee v. Jote		Pipe v. Fulcher ..	342
Kumar Mukerjee ..	188	Pirthee Singh v. Sheo Soonduree ..	791
Pearson v. LeMaitre ..	193	Pirthee Singh v. The Court of Peddiamuthulaty v. Timma Reddy ..	863	Wards ..	546
Padda Venentappa v. Arookala		Pisani v. Att. Gen. of Gibraltar	823, 824
Hoodrapa ..	814	Pitambar Chandra Saha v. Nishikanta
Pedru v. Domingos ..	699	Saha ..	791
Peck v. Derry ..	842	Pitamberdas v. Jamnagar Town
Peck v. Gurney ..	840	Municipality ..	872
Peck v. Peck ..	962	Pitt v. Coombes ..	928
Pemraj Bhavaniram v. Narayan		Pitamber Das v. Ruttan Bullab Dass	129
Shivaram ..	755	Place v. Alcock ..	191
Penny v. Hanson ..	205	Plaxton v. Dare ..	331, 342
Penruddock v. Hammond ..	904	Plower v. Berry ..	707
Penwarden v. Roberts ..	532	Plumer v. Plumer ..	232, 236
People v. Holbrook ..	599	Plumer v. Bruce ..	808
Perival v. Nanson ..	331	Poe v. Darrah ..	777
Perihlad Sen v. Rajender Kishna		Pogha Nahtoon v. Guru Baboo ..	222
Singh ..	722	Pogose v. Bank of Bengal	630, 635
Perry v. Gibson ..	928, 953	Pogose v. Mokoond Chunder	379, 380
Perry v. Meddowncroft ..	403	Ponster v. U. S. ..	143.
Perry v. Smith ..	902	Ponindra Nath Sen v. Hemangini Dasi	751
Perhad Singh v. Ram Puttab ..	8	Ponnammal v. Sundaram Pillai	368,
Pertab Udai v. Mass Das ..	367		372, 547
Perton, re ..	223, 743	Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai ..	316
Perumal Sethurayar v. M. Ramalinga		Ponnusami Pillai v. Subramania
Sethurayar ..	167, 168	Pillai ..	834
Petamber Manikjee v. Moteechand		Pontifex v. Bignold ..	803
Manikjee ..	711	Pooley v. Goodwin ..	808
Petch v. Lyon ..	238	Poola Beharee v. Watson & Co.
Petherpermal Chetty v. Munandy			225, 682, 739
Serrai ..	851	Poote v. Hayne ..	904
Petrie v. Nuttall ..	401	Poresh Narain v. Kashi Chunder ..	873
Phanindra Nath Mitter v. R. ..	946	Poreshnath Mookerjee v. Anath Nath	218
Pheloo Monee v. Gresham Chunder ..	618	Port Canning Co. v. Kalyani Debi ..	815
Phelps v. Brew ..	100, 512, 909 911, 993	Porter v. Moore ..	843
Phene's Trusts, In re ..	743, 801	Porter v. Incell ..	240, 837
Philip Kanouf v. Att.-Gen. for Jersey	1016	Postlethwaite, Re ..	902
Philpott v. Earl of Egremont ..	412	Postlethwaite v. Rickman ..	906
Phillips v. Cole ..	129	Pothi Reddi v. Velayudasiran ..	594
Phillips v. Gomes ..	945	Poulett Peering Case ..	769
Phillips v. Martin ..	1069	Poulton v. Adjustable Cover, &c., Co.	393
Philpott v. St. George's Hospital ..	93	Pound v. Wilson ..	973, 974
Phul Chand v. Man Singh ..	714	Powell v. Browne ..	857
Phul Kuar v. Surjan Pandey ..	7	Powell v. Knox ..	776
Pickard v. Sears ..	823, 827, 828, 816,	Powell v. Layton ..	409
	848, 859, 860	Powell v. Smith ..	803

	PAGE		PAGE
Powers Re	244	Proceedings 24th Jan 1873	298
Prabhakarbhat t Vishwambhar Pandt	100	Proctor t Bennis	844, 845 881
Prafulla Nath Tagore v Secretary of State	751	Proctor v Lanson	350
Prahlad Sen t Budhu Singh	379	Proctor t Smiles	904 909
Prahlad Sen v Rajendra Kishore	377	Prosunno Chunder t Land Mortgage	379 752
Pranprindas t Mayaram	490	Prosunno Coomar t Koylash Chunder	869
Pranpivan Govardhandass t Raju	808	Prosunno Kumar t Kali Das	696
Frankishen Paul t Methooramohan	701 791	Prosunno Kumar t Mahabharat	878
Pran Krishna t Jalu Nath	531	Prosunno Kumar t Secy of State for India	806 813
Pran Kisto t Bhageeruttee Gooptea	699 791	Prosunno Kumari t Golab Chund	708 709
Pran Nath t Jalu Nath	402	Protap Chundra t Mohammad Ali	623 645 655
Prannath Roy t Rookhea Begum	855	Protap Chunder t Arathoon	823
Prasanna Kumar t Sankantha Rout	723 757 867	Protap Chunder t R	117
Pratap Chandra t Mahomed Ali Sarkar	110	Protap Chunder t Ranee Surmo moyee	569
Pratt t Blunt Cornfoot	863	Iryanath Chatterjee v Bissessur Dass	535
Prayag Paj v Sidhu Prasad Tewari	951	Pryer t Gribble	824
Premchand Donlatram In re	754	Public Prosecutor v Bonugiri Potti gadu	457
Prem Chand t Hures Das	757	Public Prosecutor v Sarabu Channaya	601
Prem Chand t Suraj Panjan	73	Iuchai Khan t Amed Sirdar	651
Prem Chand t Sirenlra Nath	835	Puddo Monee t Jholla Polly	874
Prem Nath Tiwary t Chatterpal Man Tiwary	37	Pudmavati t Doular Singh	130
Prem Sooksh t Purthee Pam	871	Pulaka Moidu t Truthipalli Menon	640 532
Premji Trilandas t Madhooji Munji	851	Pulin Beharee t, Watson & Co	225
Preonath Koer t kazi Mahomed Shazed	618 635 698	Punardeo Narayan v Ram Sarup	90
Preonath Shaba t Madhu Sudan	149	Punchanan Banerjee t Raj Kumar	721
Preston t Morceau	975	Punjab Singh t Ramantar Singh	250
Price t Burva	606	Puran Chunder t Gribb Chunder	538
Price v Mann ng	326 393	Puran Lade t Dhanpat Tewari	211 617
Price t Page	149	Purna Dai v Jai Narain	705
Price t Torrington	585	Pureeq Lall v Ram Jewan	758
Price t Woodhouse	415	Purmanandas Jewandas In re	590 591 663
Price & Co t Union Lighterage Co	567 572	Purmanandas Jivandas v Cormak	871
Priestman t Thomas	389 952	Purmehur Chowdhury v Bijoy Lall	754
Primrose In the goods of	691	Purnima Chowdram v Nittanund Shah	454
Prince t Samo	252	Purseed Narain v Bissessur Dyal	710 731
Prince Mahomed t Rani Dhojmani	250	Purud Narayan v Hanuman Sahay	713
Pritchard t Bagshawe	469	Pushong v Numa Halwani	759, 761
Pritchard t Draper	701	Pyan Lall, In the matter of	8 100
Pritchard t Hitchcock	757		101, 348 350 351, 352
Prat Koer t Mahadeo Pershad Singh	689	Pyle v Crouch	353
Priya Sakhi Debi t Manbodh Bibi	598 635	Pym v Campbell	613 640
Privanath Chatterjee t Bissessur Dass	777
Probat Chandra Gangapadhya v Churag Ali	225
Probhakar Tehari v Raja Baidya Nath Pandit	718
Probhoo v Sheonath
Probodh Chandra v Cherag Ali

Q

Quartz Hill Co, &c	945
Queen t Khivroolah	6
Queen s Case	124, 226, 389, 959
Queale's Estate, In re	204

	PAGE		PAGE
Payton v St Thomas Hospital	235	Pickering Re	902
Peacable v Watson	331	Pickering v Noyes	910
Peacock v Bell	806	Picket v Packham	745
Peacock v Harper	203	Piggott v E C R Co	138
Peacock v Harris	146	Pika B wa v R	218 226
Pearce v Decker	438	Pillay v Maistry	648
Pearce v Foster	902	Pinney v Hunt	603
Peari Mohun v Drobomoy Dabia	176 187	Pinney v Pinney	603
Peari Mohun Mukerjee v Jote Kumar Mukerjee	183	Pipe v Fulcher	342
Pearson v LeMaitre	193	Pirthee Singh v Sheo Soonduree	731
Peddimuthulaty v Timma Reddy	863	Pirthee Singh v The Court of Wards	546
Padda Vineatappa v Arookala Boodrappa	814	Pisani v Att Gen of Gibraltar	823 824
Pedru v Domingo	699	Pitambar Chandra Saba v Nishikanta Saba	791
Peck v Derry	842	Pitamberdas v Jamusar Town Municipality	872
Peck v Gurney	840	Pitt v Coombes	928
Peck v Peck	962	Pitamber Das v Ruttan Bullul Dass	129
Pemraj Bhavanuram v Narayan Shivaram	750	Place v Alcock	191
Penny v Hanson	200	Plaxton v Dare	331 312
Pennulloch v Hammond	904	Plower v Berry	777
Penwarden v Roberts	732	Plumer v Plumer	232 236
People v Holbrook	599	Plumer v Brisco	809
Perrival v Nanson	331	Poe v Darrah	777
Perrilal Sein v Rajender Krishna Singh	722	Poeha Mahtoon v Curu Baboo	222
Perry v Gibson	928 93	Pogose v Bank of Bengal	637 630
Perry v Mellwerft	403	Pogose v Mookond Chunder	379 380
Perry v Smith	912	Pinter v U S	113
Persilal Singh v Ram Pertab	8	Pandora Nath Sen v Hemangini Das	671
Pertab Udai v Masi Das	367	Ponnanal v Sunlaram Pillai	368 372 547
Pertman v	223 743	Ponnusami Pillai v Sngaram Pillai	316
Perrumal Sethurayar v Miamalinga Sethurayar	167 168	Ponnusami Pillai v Subramania Pillai	834
Pitamber Manikjee v Motecchand Manikjee	741	Pontifex v Dignold	803
Petch v Lyon	238	Pooley v Goodwin	808
Petherpermal Chetty v Munandy Serval	81	Poolin Behares v Watson & Co	220 682 739
Petrie v Nuttall	404	Poote v Hayne	904
Pishundra Nath Mitter v R	916	Poreh Naram v Kassi Chunder	873
Pléoe Monce v Greesh Chunder	618	Porelnath Mookerjee v Anath Nath	248
Pléoe v Frew	100 512 909 911, 936	Port Canning Co v Kalyani Debi	815
Pléoe v Trusts In re	743 801	Porter v Moore	843
Philip Lenouf v Att Gen for Jersey	1016	Porter v Ince	249 837
Philipson v Earl of Egremont	412	Postlethwaite, Re	902
Phillips v Cole	129	Postlethwaite v Rickman	996
Phillips v Gomes	915	Potha Peddi v Velayudasavan	594
Phillips v Martin	1009	Poulett Peccage Case	769
Phillips v	93	Poulton v Adjustable Cover, &c, Co	393
	714	Pound v Wilson	973, 974
	7	Powell v Browne	857
		Powell v Knox	776
		Powell v Layton	409
		Powell v Smith	603

	PAGE		PAGE
Powers, Re	244	Proceedings, 24th Jan 1873	298
Prabhakarbhāt v Vishwambhar		Proctor t Bennis	844, 845, 881
Pan lit	100	Proctor t Lamson	300
Pratulla Nath Tagore v Secretary of State	751	Proctor t Smiles	904 909
Prahlād Sen v Budhu Singh	379	Prosunno Chunder t Land Mortgage	379 752
Prahlād Sen t Rajendra Kashore	377	Prosunno Coomar t Koylash Chunder	863
Pranjivandas t Mayaram	420	Prosunno Kumar t Kali Das	696
Pranpran Govardhandass t Bajū	858	Prosunno Kumar t Mahabharat	878
Frankishen Paul t Mothooramohan	701 701	Prosunno Kumar v Secy of State for India	806 813
Pren Krishna t Jadu Nath	534	Prosunno Knmar t Golab Chund	708 709
Pren Kisto t Bhageeruteo Gooptea	699 701	Protap Chundra v Mohammad Ali	623, 645 655
Pren Nath t Jadu Nath	402	Protap Chunder t Arathoon	873
Prannath Roy t Rookhea Begum	805	Protap Chunder t R	117
Prasanna Kumar t Srikantha Pout	723 757 866	Protap Chunder t Ranoo Surno moyce	769
Pratap Chandra t Mahomed Ali Sarkar	611	Pryanath Chatterjee t Bissessur Dass	535
Pratt t Blunt Cornfoot	110	Pryer t Gribble	824
Prayag Paj t Sidhu Prasad Tewari	349 805	Public Prosecutor t Bonagiri Potti gadu	457
Premchand Dowlatram, In re	953	Public Prosecutor v Sarabu Channaya	601
Prem Chand t Hureo Das	704	Puchai Khan t Amed Sirdar	(9)
Prem Chand t Suraj Ranjan	727	Puddo Moneo t Jholla Lolly	814
Prem Chand t Surentra Nath	73	Pudmavati t Doolar Singh	130
Prem Nath Tiwary t Chatterpal Man Tiwary	83, 117	Pulaka Moidu t Thiruthipalli Menon	530, 632
Prem Sooksh t Pirthee Ram	81	Pulun Beharee t, Watson & Co	225
Prempr Trikamdas t Madhwan Munj	651	Punardeo Narayan v Ram Sarup	90
Preonath Koer t kazi Mahomed Shazed	614 632	Punchanan Banerjee v Raj Kumar	721
Preonath Shaha t Madhu Sudan	408	Punjab Singh t Ramautar Singh	209
Preston t Morecau	149	Puran Chunder t Crish Chunder	538
Price t Burva	92	Puran Pande t Dhanpat Tewari	219, 817
Price v Manning	656	Purna Du v Jai Narayan	705
Price t Lage	370 373	Pureeaj Lall v Ram Jewan	728
Price t Torrington	189	Purmanandas Jewandas In re	590, 591, 603
Price & Co t Union Lighterage Co	585	Purmanandas Jivandas v Cormack	871
Priestman t Thomas	415	Purneesur Chowdhury v Bijoy Lall	754
Primrose In the goods of	567 572	Purnima Chowdran v Nittanund Shah	484
Prince t Samo	389 902	Purseed Narain v Bissessur Dyal	716 731
Prince Mahomed t Rani Dhojaman	691	Purud Narayan v Hannman Sahay	713
Pritchard t Bagshawe	252	Pushong v Munia Halwan	759, 761
Pritchard t Draper	250	Pyan Lall In the matter of	8, 100,
Pritchard t Hitchcock	409		101, 349 350, 351, 352
Prit Koer t Mahadeo Pershad Singh	701	Pyke v Crouch	353
Priya Sakhi Debi t Manbodh Bibi	723 757	Pym v Campbell	613, 640
Prianath Chatterjee t Bissessur Dass	680
Probat Chandra Gangapadhya t Churag Ali	598 635
Probbakar Tehari t Raja Baidya Nath Fundit	777
Probhoo v Sheonath	225
Probodh Chandra t Chersag Ali	718

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Queen's Proctor v Fry ..	368	R. v. Ashraff Sheikh ..	888
Quilter v Jorse ..	511	R. v. Audley ..	736
		R. v. Avery ..	906
R		R. v. Babaji ..	226, 290, 299, 929
R. v. Abaji Ramchandra ..	202	R. v. Babar Ali Gazi ..	298, 299, 983
R. v. Abani Bhushan Chuckerbutty ..	887	R. v. Babu Lall ..	216, 217, 264,
R. v. Abdool Setar ..	932	265, 267, 272, 273, 274, 277, 279,
R. v. Abdool Wadood Ahmed ..	206	290, 281, 283, 284, 285, 286
R. v. Abdul Kadir ..	693	R. v. Baddry ..	217
R. v. Abdul Sheikh ..	162	R. v. Babar Ali ..	142, 923
R. v. Abdullallah 6, 7, 8, 9, 98, 126,		R. v. Baijoo Chowdhry ..	129, 291,
139, 140, 144, 146, 312, 318, 489, 955		295, 296, 300, 301, 923
R. v. Abdul Wahid Khan ..	200	R. v. Baikuntath Banerjee ..	921, 922
R. v. Abraham ..	699	R. v. Badley ..	210
R. v. Adam ..	774	R. v. Bajo Huri ..	773
R. v. Adamson ..	612	R. v. Bakhooree Chowbey ..	925
R. v. Adey ..	914, 915	R. v. Bakur Khan ..	294, 295
R. v. Affazudeen ..	930, 931	R. v. Bala ..	887
R. v. Ahmad ..	946	R. v. Bala Dharma ..	898
R. v. Ahmed Ally ..	115, 116	R. v. Bala Patel ..	294
R. v. Aickles ..	599	R. v. Balaji ..	985
R. v. Akbar Badoo ..	923, 986	R. v. Balaram Dass ..	141, 219, 319
R. v. Alagappan Bah 291, 293, 294,		R. v. Baldeo Sahai ..	940
299, 300, 301		R. v. Baldry ..	260, 271
R. v. Alerton ..	764	R. v. Bal Gangadhar ..	150, 208, 923
R. v. Ali Husain ..	773	R. v. Balkrishna Vithal ..	99, 101,
R. v. Allen ..	115, 132	691, 738, 929
R. v. Allison ..	448	R. v. Ball ..	199, 972
R. v. Alloomiya Hassan 207, 208,		R. v. Balvant Tendharkar ..	263, 265, 267
454, 457, 1011		R. v. Balya Dagda ..	263
R. v. Aloo Paroo ..	100	R. v. Banarsi ..	881, 891, 914
R. v. Amanoolah Moolah ..	538, 540	R. v. Banwaree Lall ..	291, 295
R. v. Amba Prasad ..	208	R. v. Barnard ..	922
R. v. Ambergate Ry Co ..	865	R. v. Bartlett ..	145
R. v. Ambigara Hulagu ..	299	R. v. Baru Nayar ..	301
R. v. Amir Khan ..	141, 153, 156, 919	R. v. Baswanta ..	260, 261, 263, 265, 354
R. v. Amiruddin ..	156, 384, 473	R. v. Bate ..	270, 287
R. v. Amrita Govinda 128, 132, 228,		R. v. Bayaji Kom Undu ..	298, 301, 302
294, 295, 1011		R. v. Beauchamp ..	921
R. v. Anant Kumar Banerjee 272, 775, 915		R. v. Bedfordshire ..	310, 311, 333
R. v. Annada Charan Thakur ..	449	R. v. Beddingfield ..	144
R. v. Annya ..	293	R. v. Beharce 114, 117, 141, 190, 197
R. v. Ansuja ..	304	R. v. Behary Lall ..	454, 888
R. v. Anunto Chuckerbutty ..	886	R. v. Behary Sing ..	116, 267
R. v. Anuntram Singh ..	262	R. v. Belaney ..	49
R. v. Appa Subhana ..	931	R. v. Belat Ali ..	291, 294, 295, 290
R. v. Appleby ..	149	R. v. Bajan Bawas 297, 299, 301, 692,
R. v. Arjun Megha ..	951	915, 922, 923, 941
R. v. Arnall ..	144, 232	R. v. Bertrand ..	109, 314, 1017
R. v. Arshed Ali ..	447	R. v. Beshor Bawa ..	226
R. v. Arumugam ..	541, 544, 546, 921	R. v. Beshya ..	242
R. v. Ashgar Ali 267, 269, 270, 272, 844		R. v. Best ..	139, 290
R. v. Ashutosh Chuckerbutty 8, 9,		R. v. Bhairab Chunder ..	236
94, 105, 110, 112, 113, 170, 290, 297,		R. v. Bhairam Singh ..	263
298, 299, 300, 301, 302		R. v. Bharma ..	925

	PAGE		PAGE
R v Bharmappa	265	R t Castle Morton	594
R t Bhavanrao Vithalrao	547	R t Castor	114, 430
R t Bhawanani	299	R t Chaddi Khan	891
R v Bhima	274	R t Chagon Dayaram	5, 916,
R v Bhista	115		918, 920 921, 923
R t Bholanath Sen	11, 132 348 483 892	R t Chando Chaudalunee	916, 917
R v Bholu	196 476 741	R t Chandra Nath	296, 297
R t Bhuban Isker	932	R v Chand Valad	292, 301
R t Bhuttun Rajwan	218, 265	R t Chapman	972
R t Bickley	917	R v Charoo	931
R t Bulhyapatti	457	R v Chaturbhuj Sahu	917
P t Bndabun Bowree	960	R v Chatur Purshotam	301, 922
R t Birdseye	135	R t Chatur Singh	914
R t Birmingham	331	R t Cheadle	672
R t Bishonath Pal	132 300 931,	R t Chellan	449
	95, 984, 985	R t Cherath Choyi	981
R v Bussen Nath	984 986	R v Chudda Khan	69
R v Bissorunjun Mukerjee	308 316 317	R t Chumna Pivuchi	292, 293
R v Blackburn	269, 272	R t Chokoo Khan	226
R v Blake	156	R t Christopher	599
P t Blechynden	319	R v Chullundeo Poramanick	226
R t Bleesdale	196	R t Chander Bhattacharjee	297, 298,
R v Bliss	147 245 330, 333		301, 302
R t Boidnath Singh	262	R v Chunderkant Chuckerbutty	901
R v Bond	137 200, 210	R t Chunder Koomar	129
R t Borrett	140	R t Chutteniharoo Singh	109, 916,
R t Boswell	269, 272		922, 923
R t Boyes	912 916 917 922, 921	R t Clarke	1000
R t Brackenbury	289 290	R t Clewes	139, 226, 261, 269, 288 707
R t Bradlaugh	898	R t Cobden	133
R t Braintree	492 517	R t Cole	193, 797
R t Brandreth	156	R t Coley	272
R v Brower	901	R t Conmar Sahib	281, 284, 286
R v Brice	898	R t Conde	141
R t Brooke	945	R t Cook	144
P t Brown	907 978 1009	R t Cooper	144 202, 260, 774, 797
R v Buckley	139 329, 347	R t Cotton	210, 797
R t Budd	776	R v Court	260, 270
P t Budder ud deen	116 260	R t Convoisier	144
R v Budh Lal	774	R v Cox and Raiton	898, 900, 905, 906
R v Budhoobai	693	R t Coyle	149
R t Budhu Nanku	300 301, 922, 923	R v Cramp	145
R t Bull	351	R t Cray	209
R t Burlett	114, 902	R t Crooks	1909
R t Burke	348 352, 773, 774	R t Crouch	439
R t Burley	290	R t Crovdon	269
R t Burton	773	R v Dabee Pershad	216, 275
R t Bushmo Anent	275	R t Dada Ana	110 226, 227, 263,
R t Bussirud li	291		214 265, 267, 268, 475
R t Bykant Nath	452, 454	R v Daji Narsu	291, 294, 295
R t Bysagoo Noshyo	218	R v Dala Jiva	588
R t Carey	296	R v Dale	197, 210
R t Carter	191	R v Dan Sahai	960
R t Cass	272	P v Daulat Kuntra	319
R v Cassy Mul	192	R v Dav	355

		PAGE			PAGE
R v Daje	501, 513	912 979 996	R v Fakira Appaya		268 269
R v Debendra Prosad		139 200, 209	R v Fakirappa	8, 133	134, 135 199
R v Degumber Thakoor		316	R v Farar		920 922
R v Densley		773	R v Farley		906
R v Deodhar Singh		916	R v Farr		500
R v Deoki Nandan		892	P v Farrell		351
R v Derington		289	R v Farrington		802
R v Despard		917	R v Fatta Adaji		319
R v Devji Govindji		738	R v Fatch Chand Agarwalla		583
R v Dhamba Parnva		693	R v Fatik Biswas	506	892
R v Dhani	264 88,	886	R v Fattah Chand		893
R v Dham Ram		940	R v Fennel		271
R v Dhunoo Kazi		693	R v Fenton		501
R v Dhun Singh		738	P v Fernand		268
R v Dhurum Dutt	268 272	280	R v Firth		170
R v Dina Bandhu		980	R v Fisher	692	803
R v Dinanath Sundarji		272	R v Fitzgerald		318
R v Dingley		272	R v Fitzsimons		599
R v Dip Narain		298	R v Flaherty	224	232
R v Dixon	803 928,	995	R v Flanagan		139
R v Doherty		201	R v Fontaine Moreau	407, 410	411
R v Domun Kahar	973	277	R v Foster		193 202
R v Daghue		894	R v Fowler		133
R v Donellan		39, 144	R v Francis	128, 197, 201, 209	480, 797
R v Donnelly		892 893	R v Fursey		103
R v Dorasami Ayyar		978	R v Galbury		456
R v Dosa Jiva	299 300	301	R v Gallagher		922
R v Dossaji Ghulam		347, 387	R v Ganapabhat	299 300	301
R v Dossett		797	R v Gambia		265
R v Dowling		917	R v Gandfield		149
R v Downer	237, 238	906 997	R v Ganesh	268 269, 271,	258
R v Dradge		116 191	R v Ganga Prasad		914 929
R v Drew		269	R v Gangappa Kardeipai	303 775	921
R v Drummond		317	P v Ganta	234 235	296
R v Durbaroo Das		291	R v Ganu		921
R v Durga Sonar		561	R v Ganu Sonba		914
R v Durgaya		266	R v Garner	209, 268, 269	271 797
R v Durant		912	R v Gavin		289 790
R v Dwarka	922 923	978	R v Gaya Bhar	201, 697	741
R v Dwarkanath Dutt		134	R v Gazard		891
R v East Fairlie		517	R v Geering	209,	797
R v Edge		500	R v Gharya		265
P v Edmunds		139	R v Gholam Ismail		102
R v Eduljee Byramjee		1016	P v Ghulam Mustafa		960
R v Egerton		138	R v Ghulet	8	925
R v Flah Bux	8 111, 489, 915	917,	R v Gibbons	269	901
	918 919, 921	922, 923	R v Gilson		1009
R v Elizabeth Suppets		221	R v Gilhan	270,	901
R v Elliott		925	R v Gills		270
P v Ellis	134 135	138 290	R v Gurja Sankar Kashiram		738
R v Ftwaroo Dharee		354	R v Gloster	194, 198,	317
R v Excter		330, 331	R v Gobardhan	144, 267,	919
R v Fagout		318	R v Godai Raut		919
R v Faine		138, 224	R v Goddard		4, 290
R v Fakir Mahomed		154, 163, 432	R v Gogalao		483

	PAGE		PAGE
R v Gonowri	559	R v Hedger b, 114, 142, 143, 157,
R v Gokool Kahar	115		411, 440, 498, 924, 926
R v Gookool Bowree	195, 197	R v Heramun	144
R v Gopal Dass 7, 100, 101, 882, 884,		R t Heeson	139, 209
885, 891, 893, 895, 897, 912, 913		R v Heweltine	436
	914, 962 963	R t Hewitt	288
R v Gopal Thakoor	454	R v Heyforu	329
R t Gopeenath Kollu	218	R v Hicks	367, 260, 270
R v Gopee Noshyo	931	R v Hilditch	931, 934
R t Gora Chand	196	R v Hill	802, 887
R v Gordon	147, 152, 516	R v Hind	317
R v Gould	292	R t Hira Gobar	273
R v Gour Chand	226 890	R t Hira Lall	892
R v Govind Bahli	294, 296	R v Histed	290
R v Grant	1009	R t Hodges	111
R t Gray	797	R t Holden	693
R t Green	192 270	R v Hollamly	456
R t Greenacre	144	R v Holmes	270
R t Greenaway	996	R t Holt	200 211 478
R t Grees Chunder	361, 372	R t Holy Trinity, Hull	507
R t Griffin	901	R v Hosseinee	885
R v Grish Chunder	939 1000	R t Howes	288
R t Gunesh Koormes	263	R v Howgill	107
R t Gungadhur Bhunjo	802	R t Hunt	147, 153 501
R v Gungnarain	1011	R v Hurdeep Sahoy	360, 361
R v Gunnel	203	R t Hurribole Chunder	273, 274,
R t Gulah	802		277, 921, 1011, 1016
R t Guttridge	194	R t Hussein Gaiba	412
R v Haji Sher Mahomad	276	R v Hussein Haji	888
R v Hamman	201	R t Hyder Jolaha	218
R v Hammond Page	410	R v Iles	410
R v Hanmant	221 222, 235, 916	R t Imani	990 922, 923
R t Hanmanta 270 323, 324 363		R v Imdad Khan	922
	887, 888 920	R t Ings	115, 510
R t Hammaraddi	319, 601, 985	R v Inhabitants of Brampton	445
R t Hannah More	267	R t Inhabitants of Brightside	403
R t Hanuman	602, 802	R v Inhabitants of Gloucestershire	794
R t Haradhan	692	R t Inhabitants of Harborne	796
R t Hardewa	301	R t Inhabitants of Lower Hlev
R t Harding	270	ford	327
R v Hardwick	155 242	R t Inhabitants of Padstow	596
R v Hardy	1 6, 897, 898	R t Inhabitants of Mansfield	767
R v Hargrave	916	R t Ishan Dutt	932, 944, 945
R v Hari	774	R t Ishri	116, 144, 692
R v Hari Charan	960	R t Ishri Singh	353, 354, 986, 1006
R v Hari Lakshman	914 1006	R t Ismail Ali Bhai	456
R t Harimaniram	773	R t Ismail Valad	990
R t Harkumar Barman Roy	892	R t Jacobs	279 1005
R t Harvey	540	R t Jadab Das	203 265, 274 300
R v Hatts	271		816 961, 978, 991
R t Hawkins	290	R v Jaffer Ali	291, 294, 295, 300,
R v Haworth	509		301, 923
R t Haynes	143	R v Jagadeo Pandi	981
R v Hayward	906	R v Jagat Chandra	265, 270, 292
R t Hearn	269 272	R v Jagrup	216, 217, 276 291, 294

TABLE OF CASES CITED.

ix

	PAGE		PAGE
R t Malhari	774 916	R t Mullins	917
R t Malik	144, 201	R t Mulu	201, 295 296 347 348 350, 352
R t Mallungowda	278	R t Mungul Dass	559 600
R t Mallory	128, 149 226	R t Murhs	953
R t Mania Daval	227	R t Murphy	114, 156 410 933 942, 975
P t Manick Chandra Sarkar	887	R t Murray	764
P r Manikam	893	R t Murtou	317
P r Manning and wife	114	R t Musst Itwarva	886
R t Mannu	389 961, 990	R t Musst Jawat	267
R t Mannu Tamoolce	262	R t Musst Jema	265
P t Mansfield	271 272 446 767 769	R t Musst Lachoo	267 269 270
R t Manwaring	448		272 274 280 288
R t Maru	675 886 1011	R t Mustafa	142
P t Maruti Slunde	978	R t Nabadwiv Goswami	260 27
R t Matabadal	925		289 290 469 473 780
P r Mathews	276 277	R t Naba Kumar	191 207 455 46
R t Mathura Prasad	367	R t Naba Patnak	437
P t Mathura Thakur	310	R t Nadi Chand	602
P t Mayadeb Goswami	340 600	R t Naga	291 29 298 299 300 301 302
R t M Cue	409	R t Nagar	238
R t McDonald	141 148 216 274 275	R t Nagla Kala	100 274 277 279
P t McGuire	1016	R t Nana	285
R t McKenna	157	R t Nana	118 217 276 279 280
R t Mead	317		281 282 283 284 285
R r Meade	201	R t Nand Ram	355 930 931, 1010
P t Meher Ali	216 276 421 435	R t Nande Khan	303
R t Merhyr Tidral	795	R r Neor Bhaskar	918
R t Michel Stokes	143	R t Narain Ragdee	192
R t Miller	290	R t Narain Tel	238
R t Millen	269	R r Narayan	212 213
P t Mills	272	P t Narayan Rachunath Patki	266
R t Milton	342	R t Nash	802
P t Misen	145, 280 283	R t Natu	687
P t Misser Sheikh	263 356	R t Navroji Dadabhai	132 267 270
R t Mitchell	308 317 318 320		271, 288, 921, 1009 1011, 1016
R t Mogg	196	R t Nawab Jan	921 972
R t Mohan Banfor	355 920	R t Neville	155 224 423
P r Mithan Lall	218 268 269 270 223	R r Neil Cream	279
R t M hesh Biswas	294 295 296	R t Newton	224 232
	298 300, 301 922	R t Niaz Ali	738, 927
R t M hama Chundra	919, 921	R r Nicholas	191 198
R t M huddin Sahib	918 922	R r Nidhee Ram	919
R t M huu Banfor	930 931	R r Nilkanta	310, 601 918 923
P t M na Pura	5 127 888 915	P r Nilmadhub Mitter	262 278
R t Monmohun R a	273 277 278	R r Nungappa	923
R r More	269 270 1009	R r Nural Das	298
R t Morris	923	R r Nrunjun Singh	693
P t Moss	911 914	R r Nitro Copal	223 267
P t M tee J lala	102 773	R r Noakes	923
R t Moulton Cox	220	R r Nobokasto Ghose	116, 226 22
R t Mvajan	347 348, 350 354	R r Nojam Ali	1011
R t Mugapa bin	925	R r Nur Malomed	192 291, 293,
R r Muhammed Hadd	946		294 296, 423
R t Mukta Sneh	888 892 893	R r Nussuruddin	559 560 561
I r Mulla	692 693 741	R r Othor Churu	916

	PAGE		PAGE
R v O Connell	147	R v Price	109
R v Oddy	129	R v Prosonno Chundra	348
R v O Hara 917 919 921 922 1911	1016	R v Prosunno Coomar	932
R v Ollis	209	P v Panchanun Tantee	116
R v Orton	377	R v Purshottamdas Ranchoddas	759
R v Osborne	141 148	R v Pyari Lall	8 347
R v Pagaree Shaha 271 280 283 285		R v Queen s Case	388
R v Page	693	R v Radha Nath Dosadh	270 279
R v Pahuji	299 293	R v Raghnath	600 931
P v Palany Chetty	995	R v Rahmat	99
R v Palmer	51 140 143	R v Rai Ratan	269 600
R v Paltua	292	R v Raj Krishna	930 931
R v Pancham 273 274 277 980		R v Rama Birapa 8 147 217 267
	282 283 285 286 287		268 2 0 272 279 980 281 289
R v Panchudas 126 139 154 161			285 286 937 903
	195 208 211 1011	R v Ramadhan Maharam	897
R v Pandharnath 216 217 274 276		R v Raman	265
R v Paparsani 193 741 1011		R v Ramanund	967
P v Parbhidas 2 126 127 134		R v Ramanujya	269 277
	178 160 199 900 408 455 1011	R v Ramasami Padayachi 6 887 919 919
R v Parker	269	R v Rama Sattu 317 995 1011
P v Parmeshar Aheer	273 274	R v Ram Chand	290
P v Parratt	269 272	R v Ram Chandra	780 793 059
R v Parndge	272 774	R v Ramchandra Govind	350 3 4
R v Parsons	157		355 943 1011
R v Partridge	272	R v Ram Chunder	127 055
R v Patel 18 111 140		R v Ram Chirn 113 271 280 281 888
R v Payne	898	P v Ramdhan Singh 968 269 976 272
P v Peacock	354	R v Ram Dutt	344 345
R v Pearce	138	R v Ramgopal Dhur	129
R v Perkins	317	R v Ram Reddi 8 346 347 350
R v Pestonj Dinsba	493 921		352 353 355 358
R v Petchir n	147 196 201	R v Pampj Sajabarao	025
R v Peter Ram	114	R v Ram Krishan	916
R v Petta Gazi	116 295 280	R v Ram Lall	105
R v Phandendra Nath Mitter	208 693 738	R v Ramlochan	117
R v Pherozsha Pestonji	899	R v Ram Newaz	699 802
R v Philhp	291	R v Ram Ruchea	117 116
R v Philhys 145 192 351		P v Ram Rutton	436
P v Phoolchand	454 455	P v Ram Sahoy	201
R v Phulel	148	R v Ram Saran 293 999 300 301
P v Pike	317		455 487 918 919 991 999
P v Pirbhu	299 293	R v Ram Sewak	886
R v Pitamber J na 9 98 274 975		R v Ramsodoy Clucherbutty	917
	277 991 1011 1016	P v Ramswami Mudahar	1011
R v Pitbaran Saha	219	R v Ram Vaver	267
R v Pitambur Singh	445 447	R v Ramzan	470
P v Pitambur Srdar	199 910	R v Rang	965
R v Plumer	214	P v Ranjeet Son al	218
P v Pohj Sngl 558 559 560 561 780		R v Rankeen	939
P v Porowullah Sikhdar	116	R v Raspi Fulchand	457 494
R v Porteous	803	R v Rawden	595
R v Pountney	269	R v Rearden	135
P v Pramatha Nath Bose 914 915 964		R v Reason	2 1 272
R v Pramotha Nath Bagchi	27	R v Reed	599

PAGE

PAGE

R v Rees	290	R v Sham Lal	148
P v Reeve	270 271	R v Shankar	917
P v Reg of Greenwich County Court	239	R v Shava	886
P v Remedios	888	R v Shaw	289, 410, 969
P v Remnant	1001	P v Sheikh Abdul	207 456
R v Rhodes	200	R v Sheikh Boodhoo	226
R v Rbatten Ram	196	R v Sheikh Buxoo	972
R v Richards	272	P v Sheikh Choollye	738
I v Richardson	35 45 196 198	P v Sheikh Kyamut	931
	199 209 797 897 898	R v Shail Mag n	179
P v Rickman	153	P v Sheikh Mustafa	142
R v Riling	558 780	P v Shepherd	769 802
P v Ridsdale	141	P v Sherrington	288
P v Rigg	347	P v Shub Chunder	921
P v Riley	483 961 981	P v Slabo Mundle	455
P v Robinson	194	R v Shippey	139
P v Pochua Mohato	318 320 323 325 3 6	R v Shiva	562 563 569 600
I v Roden	127 209 210 797	R v Shrimpton	456
P v Podnuea	903	P v Shuruffodeca	196 202 773
I v Pookai Kant	196	P v Srinivas Krishna	918
I v Rooney	135 153	R v Sdhu	367
R v Ross	995	P v Silverlock	429 430 497 411 539 540
P v Rowland	148	P v Simon-to	224 227 305
P v Rowton	454 459 460 461	P v Simons	971 989
R v Rudra	398 317	R v Sitaram Vithal	101 757, 990
R v Rosir	288	P v Slater	778
P v Russell	928 991	R v Sleeman	269, 270
P v Rustem	321 930	P v Smith	111 309 318
P v Sabit Khan	993	R v Smithers	145 917
R v Sadhu Mandal	291 297 298	P v S nao Allah	226
	299 300 331 918 921 922 993	R v So hyan	218 226
R v Saffron Hill	517	R v Sorob Roy	114 125 141 142 144
I v Saal Samba	207 922 916 975	P v Spalbury	89 290
R v Saena	221 274 289	R v Sreemutty Mongola	939
R v Sahadev	692	P v Sreenath Mahapatra	939
R v Sadhucharan	312	P v Sreenath Mukhopadhyay	932
P v Salharam Mukundji	158 939	P v St Martin s Leicester	508 959
	978 969 977 1004	R v Stantor	433
R v Salemu lin Sheik	974	P v Stephens	179
R v Salisury	135	P v Sterne	114
I v Sama Pajt	274 278	P v Steward	71
P v Sami	131 175 144	I v Stewart	990
R v Samappa	60 761 914 916	P v Stuhls	922, 923
R v Samiruddin	192 319 990	P v Subbappa Chunnaji	201, 802
I v Sardarkhan Jaridkhan	692	R v Subbaravan	447, 448
I v Savare	224 232	P v Subbaya	602
R v Sayed Ahmed	780 807 811	I v Sulla	544
R v Scatfe	318 32	R v Sulla	887
R v Scamman	612	I v Suthar Singh	774
R v Scott	260	R v Sundar Singh	545 561
I v Seetanath Ghosal	783	R v Suthar	888, 916
R v Sellers	317	I v Surra p Chunder	453, 952
I v Sewa Bhogta	886	P v Swatkins	261
I v Sexton	270	R v Swenden	454
I v Shahabut Sheikh	225	P v Symmer Singh	317

	PAGE		PAGE
R v Tanyavalad Shivan	296, 297	R v Weering	451
R t Taranath Roy Chowdhry	264, 296, 302	R v Wells	923
R t Tarni Charan	320	R v Welsh	149
R t Tate	145, 918, 921	R t Westwood	135
R v Tattershall	145, 192, 202	R v Whaley	133, 135, 197, 202
R t Tateya Bin	278	R v White	114
R v Taylor	269 797	R v Whitehead	206, 886
R t Thal oor Das	455	R t Whitely	192
R t Thatlewood	506, 510	R v Whitmarsh	308
R t Thomas	260, 272 289	R t Whitworth	318
R v Thompson	260, 261, 264, 272	R t Wicl ham	612
R t Thornhill	483	R t Wild	270
R t Thurburn	194	R t Willes	922
R t Tiluk	486, 609, 670	R t Williams	492
R v Tirumal	157, 738 1010	R v Williams	135, 261, 351 992
R v Tolson	376	R t Wilton	351
R v Tooke	578	R v Windsor	272
R t Tribhoban Manekchand	216, 217, 275	R v Wink	141
R t Tuberfield	452	R v Woodcock	308 318
R v Tukaram	693	R t Woodley	903
R v Tulja	102, 105	R t Woods	952
R t Tulsha	802	R t Woodward	460
R v Tulsi Dosadh	946	R t Woolford	773
R t Turner	149, 453	R v Worth	322
R v Tyler	269	R v Wramble	598
R t Udhan Bind	923	R t Wright	901
R t Udit Persad	175	R t Wazir Mundul	217
R t Upchurch	269, 272	R v Wyatt	137, 200 203 210
R t Uttamchand	127, 600, 980, 990	R t Wylie	133 201
R t Uzeer	267, 269, 271, 290	R v Yakataz Khan	998
R v Vahala Jetha	278	R v Yal uh Ali	199
R t Vajuran	8 110 134 160, 192 197 199, 202, 203 209	R v Yakub Khan	269
R t Vaman	353	R v Yellarad li	217
R v Vaughan	516	R t Yewin	970
R v Verelst	807	R t Young	135
R v Vincent	141 345	R t Zamuram	990
R v Vram	262, 516, 556 557, 558, 560, 600	R v Zawar Husen	943
R t Viraperumal	886	R v Zavar Rohman	960
R t Vram Babaji	262, 600	R t Zuhur	142
R t Voke	194, 797	R R Co t Mayles	444 501
R v Vyapoory Moodelher	134 139, 159, 199, 200	Radford t McIntosh	146
R v Wainwright	147, 492	Radha Bullab t Kist en Gobind	753
R v Walker	223	Radha Bullab t Jugut Chunder	708
R v Walkley	271	Radha Chowdhran v Gireedhar Shahoo	378 379 381
R t Warden of the Fleet	419	Radha Churn t Anund Sen	380
R v Warner	259	Radha Churn t Chunder Manee	225
R t Warringham	261, 268 269	Radha Churn t Kripa Sindhu	702
R v Watson	969, 1005	Radha Gobind t Ingus	722, 723 756 777
R v Watts	355	Radha Gobinda v Rakhal Das	246
R v Wazir Singh	274	Radha Jeeban t Grees Chunder	932
R v Wazira	447	Radha Jeebun t Taramonce Dosee	945, 972
R v Weeks	202	Radha Kanta Chakravarti v Ra- mananda Shahu	249, 865

	PAGE		PAGE
Radha Kishore t Mitoonjoy Gow	707	Raja of Deo t Abdullah	850
Radha Kishen t Fateh Ali	532	Raja Enayet t Girdhari	247
Radha Krieto Singh t Radl a Nunghu	715	Rajagopala Peddy t Sadasiva
Raiba Prasad Mullick t Rancee Mani		Reddy	710
Dassee	651	Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan	222, 336
Radha Madhub Pukara t Kalpataru		Deb	652
Rai	203 849 850	Raja Gour Chandra t Raja Makunda
Radhamoni Debi t Collector of		Deb	652
Kbulna	757	Raja Kumari Venkata Perumal t
Radhanath Ranerjee t J loonath		Thathe Ramsamv	826
Sinoh	729	Paja Leelanund t Maharaja Mo
Ralhanath Kaibbartha t R	590	besur	686
Radhan Singh t Kansaya Dicht	154	Raja Leelanund t Musamut
Radha Pyari t Nobin Chandra	688	Lakhputte	328 329
Rad t Raman t Bhowani Prasad		Raja Mukund Deb t Gopi Nath Sahu	813
(194 62, 643		Raja Nagendra t Rughoonath
Ratha Ramon v Phool Kumaree	703	Narain	167 168 189
Radhey Lal v Maheeh Prasad	929 858	Raja Neelanund t Nuseeb Singh	507
Radhica Prasad t Dharma Das	791	Raja Nirod Chandra v Harihar
Radhika Mohun v Gunga Narain	381	Chal swarty	619 621
Rae Manick v Madhoram	694	Raja Peary t Narendro Nath	360, 701
Raggett t Musgrave	151	Raja Prosonno t Romonce Dossee	925
Rachava Charar t Srinivasa	832	Rajah Kishen t Narendra Bahadur	682
Raghavendra t Kael nath Bhat	695 725	Rajah Leelanund t Must Bashee
Ragboba t Palboba	746	r nisa	489
Raghojirao v Lakshmanrao	591 650 814	Rajah Leelanund t Rajah Mohen Ira
Raghunath t Hoti Lal	121 783	narain	657
Raghunathji Mulchand t Jivandas		Rajah Mahendra t Jokha Sng	693
Madanjee	699 760	Rajah Malash t Keshianund Mir	747
Raghunath Lal t Emperor	197	Rajb Nilmoney t Ramanooagrah
Raghunath t Ganpathi	682	Roy	225 783
Raghoonath Das t Luchmenarain	729	Raja of Kalahasti t Maharaja t
Rahman t Flahi Bakshi	624 625 626	Venkatagiri	848
Rahmatbai t Hirbai	188 693	Rajah of Pittapur t Sri Rajah low
Rahmibhy Habbalhor t Turner	696 759	Puchi	820
Rahim Rili In the matter of	930	Paja of Venkatagiri t Narayana
Rahimuli v R.	118	Reddy	596
Rai Babu Golab Chand t Syed Salka		Rajah Rajnars n t Jogunnath
Hussain	370	Perashd	870
Rai t Rialalal	726	Rajah Patan Singh t Thakur Man
Rai Rajya Dirgay t Poni Mahito	370 376	Singh	197, 721
Raichand Motchand t Narayan		Raja Ram t Fmp.	913
Rhikha	629	Rajah Pun t Must Locho	172
Rai Churn t Kamul M han	395 397	Rajah Udava t Jalublal Aditya	654
Rai Jari t R	456 459	Rajah Valad t Krishnabhat	164
Raishori Ghose t Kumudini Kant	113	Rajah Venkata Appa Rao t Pajal
Raunv t Bravo	505	Surenani Gopala Pow	725 726
Rai Seeta t Kishun Dass	839	Rajah Vurma t Ravi Vurnahi	17
Rai Srikishen t Rai Hun	221	Pajaram t Krishnashami	27
Raja Babu t Middleton M hnn	748	Raja Sahib t Baboo Rulha	175 176 177
Raja Bommarauze t Gangasamy		Raja Sahub t Doorgaperiah	725 726
Mudaly	366, 933 1011	Paj Bahadur Lal t Binalal	62
Raja Rurdacant t Clunder Coomar	747	Raj Coomar t Lam Salasa	62
Raja Chandranath t Ramya		Rajender Narain t J. A. S.	62
Muzumdar	681 685		62 626 627

Date	Page
1891	1
1892	2
1893	3
1894	4
1895	5
1896	6
1897	7
1898	8
1899	9
1900	10
1901	11
1902	12
1903	13
1904	14
1905	15
1906	16
1907	17
1908	18
1909	19
1910	20
1911	21
1912	22
1913	23
1914	24
1915	25
1916	26
1917	27
1918	28

	PAGE		PAGE
Rajendra Nath v Jogendra Nath		Ramanamrthy v Gopayya	244
146 416 539, 721, 789		Paman v Secretary of State for
Rajeswari Kuar v Rai Bal	686	India	130, 371
Rajb Panda v Lalban Sindh	413 415 416	Ramana Reddi v Babu Reddi	835
Rajkushen v Peary Mohun	749	Ramanadammar Aiyar v Rama
Rajkushen Singh v Ramjov Surma	168	Bhattar	484
Rajkishore v Hureehur Mookherjee	730	Ramanathan Chetty v Ranganathan
Rajkishore Nag v Mudhoooodun	1015	Chetty	847
Rajkishore Surma v Gria Kant	871, 872	Rama Nath Chatterjee v Kuenm
Rajkissen Mookerjee v Joykssen		Kamini	698, 793
Mookerjee	731	Ramanath Doss v Bolorain Phookun	847
Raj Krishna Dev v Pepin Behari		Raman Pershad v Mahanta Adaiva	256
Dey	709	Raman Nayar v Sabramanya
Raj Kumar Pay v Gobind Chunder		Ayyar	930
718 750 777		Ramanu,ra Narani v Mahasundur
Paj Kumari v Bama Sundari	411	Kunwar	850
Rajlakhhee v Gocool Chunder	202 858	Ramasani v Appavu	167, 172, 174
Rajlukhee Debia v Golool Chunder			178 185 189, 406
704 706 804 839		Ramasani v Lolanada	691, 738
Raj Mangal Mier v Mathura		Ramasani v Ramu	891
Duban	53~	Ramasani Ayyar v Vengudisani
Paj Mohun v Gour Mohun	823	Ayyar	476
Paj Nath v Narani	703 707	Ramasani Bhagavathar v Nagen
Pajnarani v Powshun Mull	696	drayyan	476
Pajnarani Bose v Universal Life		Ramasani Gaunden v P	916 917,
Assurance Co	862		916 921
Raj Narain Ghosh v Abdur Pahu	332	Rama Singh v Harakdhar Singh	106
Paj ni Kant v Ayan Mullick	916 919 921	Ramat Ali Khan v Musst Babu Zuhra	399
Rajunde Narani v Rijai Gobind	499	Ram Autar v Raja Muhammad	240
Rakhal Dass v Denomoti Debi	613	Ramaya v Devappa	190 940
Rakhal Dass v Indra Monce	508	Ramava v Sivayya	724
Rakhal Doss v Protah Chunder	931 932	Ram Bahadur v Dusori Pam	596
Pakhal v Moduck v Rindoo		Ram Bahadur Singh v Ajodhya
Bichnee	849	Singh	532
Lakshmasi v Tukaram	644	Ram Bahadur Singh v Luchoo Koer	176
Pakken v Alaguppuddayan	618 619	Ram Baksh v Durjan	629
620 621 623 624 625 632		Ram Baksh v Kishori Mohan	233 045
Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangani		Ram Bandhu v Kuru Rhattu	777
Dasi	401 416 419	Rambhat v Babhat	873
Palli v Forbes	839 840 846	Ram Bhuan v Jebhi Mahto	373 375
Palli v Gau Kuni	137 503 511 525	Ram Bromo v Kamince Soondaree	791
Palli v Kasanalli Fazal	604	Ram Chand v Hanif Sheikh	902
Ramabai v Pam Chundera Shyram	684	Ramchandra Apaji v Bilaji Bhanra	747
Ramakantadas Mohapatro v Sha		Ramchandra Bhaskar v Raghunath
nanan Das Mohapatro	188	Pachaset	396
Pama Kanan Singh v Mangal Singh	127	Pam Chandra Chatterji v Pramatha
Lankrishna v Namavaya	714	nath Chatterji	876
Pamkrishna v Subbakka	710	Pamchandra Chowdhry v Brajanath
Pamalakshmi Anmal v Sivanatha		Sarna	753
Irumal	3 167, 188 187 497 498	Pam Chandra Das v Farzand Ali	779 807
Ramalinga Chetti v Paghunatha	791	Ramchandra Dhonglo v Malkapa	394
Ramalinga Pillai v Sadasiva Pillai	113		397, 866
Ramalinga Pedu v Kotayya	374	Ram Charan Das v Arad Ali	663
Ramamani Anmal v Kulathai		Pam Chandra Kantrani Marwa v
Nathcar	486 487	Lakshmi	781

PAGE

PAGE

Ramchandra Narayan : Narayan Mahadev	397 722	Ramjeebun Serowgy : Pees	979
Ram Chandra Das : Caya Prasad	240	Ramjiban Serowgy : Oghur Nath	127 609, 610 628 640, 641
Ram Chandra v Bunsee Ithur Nask	383, 545 546 569	Ramjoy Karmol ar In the matter of	202, 773
Pam Chunder : Chunder Coomar	701	Ram Kant : Brindabun Chunder	480
Pam Chunder : Hari Das	202 839 848	Ram Kinkar Tewari : Sthiti Pam Panja	637
Pam Chunder : Joggeswar Chunder	338 772 871	Pam Kishore Kedarnath : Jai narayan Pamrachpal	702
Ramchunder Chuckerbutty : Girilhur Dutt	721	Ram Krishna : Surfunissa Begum	693
Ram Coomar v Beejoy Gobind	717 739	Ramkrishno Pal : Hurydos Koondoo	360
Pam Coomar : Debee Pershad	771	Ramlakhan Rai v Balkhtaur Rai	824
Pam Coomar : Macqueen	810 849	Ramlal Chandra : Gobinda Kar mohar	644
Pam Coomar : Ram Sthave	787	Ram Lal : Kishen Chunler	850
Ram Das : Bhagwat Dass	682	Pam Lal : Pivers Steam Navigation Co	763
I am Dass : Muthra Das	630	Pam Lal : Tara Sondari	263
I a : Das v Official L C t t n	212 213 367 372	Ram Lal : Tula Ram	411
Gunning Co	375 781	Ram Lal Set : Kanai Lal	819 840
I am Dayal : Aoodhna Khan	113	Pamlochun Choudhury : Jy Dooorga	722
I am Dayal : Heera Lal	618	Pam Lochun : Unnopourna Dass	640
I am Dayal v Ma lan Mohan	100	Ram Lochun Mura : Pun lit Harinath Mura	515
Pam Daval : Suraj Mal	717	Pam Mohunee : Pran Koomaree	810
Ra n Dei : Munna Lal	711	Ram Mohun : Jhujj roo Das	701
I am Ihan Mandal : Rajbullul Paramantek	972	Ram Monee : Aleemooddeen	740 749
Ram Dhene : Isl annee Dabee	764	Pam Narain : Chota Nagpur Bank	144 814
I am Doolal : Radha Nath	617	Ram Narain : Durga Dat	411
Pam Dutt : Mahen ler Prasa l	713	Pam Narain : Mahomed Hadi	691
I amesh Chandra Banerjee : R	401	Ram Narain : M hesh Chunder	778 779
Paamesh Chandra Chackrabarti : Das	787	Ram Narain : M nee Pibee	330 376
Bhisan Upa Ithay	876	Ram Narain : Ramcoomar Chunder	170
I a nassar Pershad : Koonj Behari	172 691	Ram Nath : Lachman Pai	712
I ameswar K : Bhurat Pershad	488 501 617	Ram Nandan : Maharam Janka	710
Pa ne var Lal Blugat : Pat Kumar	497	Pam Narsing : Tripura S n u doree	34
I ameswar Men lai : I r vabati Dei	707	Pamjal Ram : Suba Snob	659
I amfal Shaw : Biswanath Man lai	938	Pampal Singh : Murray & C	690
Ra i G bu l : H ssein Ali	702	Pam Parkash Das : Anand Das	700
I a i C pal : Blaquere	818 919	Pam Pershad : Lakpati Kwer	362 490 701
I a n Gopal : Bill leb Bo e	70	Ram Pershad : Najbunsee Kwer	700
I am Gopit : C r l n Stuart & Co	493 507	Pam Pershad : Panee Ph x lutee	711 712
I am Gulam : Rim Bebra	701 702 791	Pam Pershad : Shiva Persal	811
I am Guffy : Muntaz Beebe	796 935	I a n Pershad Tewari : S h eburn Das	695 713
I an Hari : Triluram	701	Pam Pertab : Marshall	837
I a n I ed l i n e	340	I amjit v Emperor	270
I amundur Deo : B o j n a r u m G h e	840	Pamphal Singh v Deo Narain	712 713
Ra i j a l o : C a n a k h e : Luckh e	501	I am Puri : Kallu	118
I amjeebun Chuckerbutty : P r i s l a l Shar	716	Pam Prasad : I a b u n a n l a n Prasad	498 511, 512 513 751

	PAGE		PAGE
Ramprasanna Nandi t Secretary of State	708	Rangasami Reddi t Guana Sa mantha	474 719
Ramprosad t Kishore Lal	726	Pangasvami t Krishna	890
Ram Prosad t Lakhi Nara n	723	Rangaswami t R	348
Ramprotap Misser t Abhilak Misser	709	Rangulbhai Kahandas t Vinavak Vishnn	704
Rampyarabai t Balajai	321 361	Rango Balaji t Mudiyeppa	736 743
Ram Ranjan t Ram Narain	177 181	Rani Annund Koer v Court of Wards	705
Ram Ranjan Pay t R	18 156	Rani Diaram Kunwar t Balwant Singh	853
Ram Ratan t Nandu	693	Rani Hemanta Kumari t Jaga Jendra Nath Poy	750
Ram Ratan t Shew Nandin	691	Rani Mewa t Hulas Kavar	589 840 856
Pam Rutton t Furrookoonnissa Begum	835 747	Rani Monmohini t Robert Watson & Co	380
Ram Ritun t Bunmalee Dass	710	Rani Simat t Khagendra Narayan	246
Ram Sarup t Allah Rakla	618 637	Ranu t Laxmanaro	530 531 39
Ram Sarup v Sital Prosai	369	Ransordas Bhoyslal Kestarsingh	168 191
Ram Sarup Sahu t Karamullah Khan	636	Pao Karan t Baker Ali	858
Primsbottom v Senior	904	Rao Kurun t Gyazalee Khan	704
Ramsbottom t Mortley	595	Rao Narsingh t B timaha	764 767
Ramsbottom t Tunbridge	595 598	Rapp t Latham	241
Ramsden t Dyson	837 839 846 861	Rash Behari t Hararion Debva	882 683 719
Pam Singh t Must Tursa Kunwar	702 781	Rash Belari t I tambori Chow dhrant	727, 780
Ran Singh t I	284	Rasmondee Daben t Hurronath Roy	710
Ram Shile t Sanhar Baladur	932	Rassonda Payer v Sitharama Pillai	731 756
Ramsouder bandal t Raja Anund	850	Ratan Koer t Chotey Nara n	499
Ram Soundur t Akima Bibee	484	Ratan Kar t Jivan Singh	747
Pam Sarun t Pran Peary	304 365	Ratan Lal t Anwar Khan	630
	820 856	Ratan Lal t Jadu Halana	718
Ramuvien t Vcerappudayan	579	Ratcliff v Ratcliff	369
Rana Karan t Mangul Sen	936	Ratpal Singh t Uday Bhan	505
Panchhodas Krishna t Bapu Narhar 7 8 100 165 167 170 171 177	399	Rott nhhai v Chabildas	336
Ranchodlal Vandravon las t Seere tary of State	861	Ravi Veerachavavaru t Bomina Devava	101,
Ranchol Morai t Bezanji Fuljee	397	Ravji Vinayakrav t Lakshmi Bai	8 2
Ranee Emamun t Hurdial Singh	509	Rawaon t Haig	147
Ranee Pujulla t Glolam Mostafa	939	Rawson t Walker	608
Ranee Lalha t Gree tharee Sahoo	145	Rawtone t Corporation of Preston	906
Ranee Shornom vee t Watson & Co	747	Rayner t Pearson	935
Panee Sfurut t C llr of Mymem singh	728	Rayner t Rayner	653 667 671
Ra ce Surnomoyee t Maharajah Sutee Churn	487	Read t Gamble	599
Ranee Sfurut t Rajen Ira Kishore	484	Read t Price	544 519
Ranee T lessurve t Ranee Asmedh	87	Reajadhi Sarkar v Canga Charan Bhattacharya	139 396
Raigael ariar t Yegna Dikshatur	113	Reazooddeen Mahomeli McAlpine	366
Rangaclarya t Desacharya	101 886	Reazooddeen t Bookloo Clowd rain	498
Rangama t Atchama	845	Redfern t Redfern	911
Ranganimal t Venkatchari	851	Redford t Biley	345
Ranganatha Rao t Narayanasami Nacker	701	Iedgrave t Hurd	845
Panasami Ayyangar v Soura Ayyangar	637 638 665	Rece t Trye	904

	PAGE		PAGE
Reed v Deere	596	Roe v Ferrars	223 859
Reed & James	945	Roger & Hawkins	290
Reed & King	974	Rogers & Allen	173
Reel & Lyon	874	Rogers & Custance	523
Reedoy Kristo v Pud lo Lochna	103	Rogers & Hadley	412
Reeve v Whitmore	388	Rogers v Pitcher	871
Reeves v Lindsay	809	Rogers Sons & Co & Lambert	881
Reil v Batto	595 597	Pogham Singh & P	421 435
Reul & Hoskin	274		456 557 590 991
Reigard v McNeil	837	Rohramudh v R	117
Rekhab v Sheobai	744	Romanath Roy v Kally Proshad	381
Rennel v Sprye	902	Lo okri Bani v Roberts	929
Rennie v Gunga Naram	819	Roopehanl Bhukat & Hur Kishan	174
Pennie v Robinson	874	Roopmonjoree Chowdhranee v
Returaji Duba n & Pal luan		Pam Lall	509 516
I hagal	369 728	Roop Naram v Gungadhur Pershad	707, 761
Revell Ex parte	413	Rooj Rani v Saseeram Nath	185 696
Reynolds Ex parte	912	Ro e v Bryant	326
Rhejoy Kristo & Nobin Chun lei	687	Roselle & Buchanan	906
Rice v Howarl	975	Roshun Dosa th & R	455
Rice & Rice	857	Ross & Bruce	529
Rick v Jackson	114	Ross v Gibbs	900 902
Richards & Black	805	Ross v Hill	795
Richards v Gellatly	159	Rouch v G W R	144 152
Richards & Morgan	252	Roushan Bibee v Huray Krist	361, 364
Pichards v Richards	891	Roushan Khatoon v Collr of
Richardson v Dunn	150	Mymensingh	850
Richardson & Peto	239	Rousseau v Pinto	113, 892
Richardson v Rowntree	762	Routledge v Carruthers	764
Rickets v Gurney	928	Rowcliffe v Egremont	912
Pidley & Plymouth Baking Co	135	Rowe v Brenton	912
Riggs Miller v Wheatley	324	Rowshan Jehan v Ennet Hossen	799
Rijhu Ram & Mol an Lal	701	Rowshan Bibee & Shaikh
Risal Singh & Balwant Singh	806	Karnam	850
Richton & Nesbit	337	Lowthakount In re	101, 692
Rist & Hobson	810	Poyal Exch Ass Corp & Tol	145
River Steam Co In re	257 758	Roy Dhunput v Prem Bibee	929
Rivett Carnac v New Mofussil Co	836	Royce Molla v Soodan	791
	840 841	Roy Odyte & Ubharun Roy	874
Roach v Garvans	403	Roy Rashibeharee & Roy Gource	850
Robb & Starkey	510	Royzudda Sheikh & Kahi Nath
Robert v Phillips	521	Mookerjee	530
Roberts & Doxon	912	Rozano v Ingles	765, 769 891 957
Roberts & Humphreys	136	I P Co & Maple	501
Robert Watson & Co & Mohesh		Ruck & Ruck	403
Naram	145	Ruelmabaye & Lull obhoy	95
R binson & Davis	131 3 0	Rudge & McCarthy	594
R binson v Marlis	750	Rul lf Stallman In the matter of	8
R binson & Robinson	224 232	Rudra Naram Maiti & Natobar Jana	753
Robson & Att Genl	446	Ruphoobur Doyal & Mana Koer	104
Robson & Acmy	405	Rukmal & En peror	2 9 896
Robson & Warwick	95	Pulman Koer & Nilm ny Bands
Roche foucault & Bou tesl	623	palhya	531
Rodham & Morley	211	Pukhna loala Nawab & Hurdwan
Roe & Day	755	Mul	655

PAGE		PAGE
Pungama t Atchama	436	Sh Leo Nara n De t Kusim Kumari	316
Ringa Rao t Bhavavamm	866	Sah Lal Chand v Indrajit	112
Runge Lall t Abdool Guffoor	744 745 870 873	Sahab Perhlad v Baboo Budhoo	729
Runge Monce v Paj Coomar	246 247	Sahab Perhlad t Doorga Pershad	720
Punjeet Ram t Mahomed Wars	707	Sahib Mirza t Umda Khanum	730
Punjeet Pam t Gobardhun Pam	748	Sahu Ram Chandra v Bhup Singh	712
Punj t Singh t Bhuwari Lal	721	Saikh Faiz t Omedee Singh	520
Rup Chand v Janchu Pershad	710	Saibala Debi t Sriram Bhatta	720
Rup Chand t Surbessur Chundra	690	charji	720
817 821 822 823, 829 832 868 879		Sayid Abdullah Khan v Saivil
Pnp Narun t Must Gopal Devi	789	Basharat	628
Raj Singh t R	406	Sajid Ali t Ibad Ali	476
Rush t Peacock	231	Sajjad Hussain v Wazir Ali Khan	762
Rush v Smith	910 903	Sakundin Saha v Sonaula Sarker	846
Russell t Jackson	899, 900 902	Sakma Khanum t Laddan Sahaba	721
Russell t Langstoffs	880	Salamat Ali v Budh Singh	202 839
Russell t Smyth	801	Salamba Goundan t Palani Goundan	630
Russell t Watts	940	Salford v Waterworks & Co	241
Rustem t R	980	Sahmatul Fatima t Koylashpoti
Ruston t Case	899	Narsin	472 571
Rutchman v Dhondo Mahadev	797	Salkeld v Johnson	97
Ruttansee Lal v Poorbai	824	Salt t R	272
Puttana Rowji t Bombay Spinning		Saltern v Melbush	780
Co	648	Samana Basappa t Gadgaya Ko
Puttoo Singh v Bajrang Sing	684 686	maya	619
Pyall v Hannam	665	Samar Dosadh v Juggul Ashore	359
Ryan t Ryan	323	306 367 370
Ryan t Sams	778	Sambasiva Ayyar t Visham Ayvar	560
Ryler v Wombwell	110 833	Sambayya t Gangayya	481 516
Pyrie t Shiv Shankar	904 908	Samoo Pattar t Abdool Sammal
		Sahib	530
		Samuel t Ofner	649
		San Hla Baw t Mi Khoroa	460 476
		Sandar Kuat v Chandreshar Prasad
		Narain Singh	519 521
		Sanderson t Coleman	879
		Sandlands Re	808
		Sangra Malapa v Ramappa	620
		Sangram Singh t Rajan Bibi	339
		Sankappa Rai t P	286 290
		Sankarabarya Sivamigal t Manali
		Saravana	376
		Sankaralingam t Subban Chetti	168
		Santacena v Ardevol	1015
		Santappaya t Rangapayya	803
		Santaya v Savitri	603 600
		Santishwar Mahanta t Lakkikanta
		Mahanta	601
		Sarabjit Partab v Inderjit Partab	443
		Sarada Prasad Pal v Rama Pati	790
		Sarada Prasad Poy v Ananda Mov
		Dutta	827, 861
		Sarah Holson's Case	114 115
		Saraswati Dasa v Dhanput Singh	366,
			373, 375

S

S t Ganes	147
Satapathy Mulali t Kunpusamy
Mulali	638
Saboo Bawa v Mahagan Mantri	789
Sabran Sleikh v Odoy Mahto	162 160
	167, 171, 174
Sadabart I rasad v Foolbush Koer	711
Sadakarsur v Tadepally Rasaviab	030
Sadakat Hossein v Mahomed Yusuf	709
Sadashub t Dinkar	712
Saishiv Moreshwar v Hari
Moreshwar	802
Sadasiv Singh v R.	915
Sadasiva Pillai v Ramalinga Pillai	824
Sadik Hussain Khan v Hashim Ali	998
Sadhana Upadhyay v R	893
Sadhu Churn v Basudev Parbeary	810
Sadhu Sahu v Raja Ram	369
Sadhu Sheikh t P	680, 693
Sadu t Baza	820
Sagurnull t Manraj	362

	PAGE.		PAGE
Sarat Chandra Dutt v. Jadah		Schmaltz v. Avery	863
Chandra	692, 871	Scholes v. Chadwick	245, 339
Sarat Chunder v. Gopal Chunder	249,	Scholes v. Hilton	927
828, 829, 830, 839, 842, 843,		Scholey v. Walton	231
849, 853, 859, 860, 865		Schofield v. Earl of Londesborough	580
Sarbish Chandra Basu v. Hari Daval		Schnmack v. Lock	235
Singh	419	Schwalba, The	133
Sardarmal v. Aranyajal	412, 413, 417	Scott v. Clare	224
Sardhari Lall, In re ..	105	Scott v. Jones	799
Sariatullab v. Pran Nath	163, 169,	Scott v. London Dock Co.	795
	441, 442	Scott v. Marshall	251
Sarkies v. Prosonomoyee Dossee	857	Scott v. Sampson	209, 459
Saroda Prasad v. Luchmeeput Singh		Scully v. Lord Dandonald	824
	779, 807	Seal v. Claridge	332
Saroda Prasad v. Mahananda Roy	709	Sealy v. Ramnarain Bose	737
Sarada Prasanna v. Uma Kanta	791	Seaman v. v. Netherclift	929, 963
Saroda Soonduree v. Muddon		Sears v. Lyons	164
Mobun	733, 734	Secretary Chief Khalsa Dewan v.
Sarojini Dasi v. Hari Das Ghose	537, 733	Punjab National Bank ..	855
Sasi Bhusan Pal v. Chandra Peshkar	530	Secretary of State v. Birendra Kumbore
Saskachellum Chetty v. T. Govind-		Manikya	380
appa	857	Secretary of State Chellikani	750
Sastry Velander v. Sembycutty		Secy. of State for India v. Dattatrya
Vayalie	809	Nayaju	846
Sateowri Ghosh v. Secy. of State	379,	Secretary of State v. Kirtibas Bhupati
	389, 381		740, 812
Sathu Sheikh v. R.	925	Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni
Satiraju v. Venkataswami	709, 790	Gupta	767, 777
Satis Chunder v. Mohendra Lal	335, 370	Secretary of State v. Kumar Narendra
Satish Chandra Chacravarty v. Ram		nath Mitter	618, 625
Dayal Dey	914, 930	Secretary of State v. Manjeshwar
Satis Chandra Mitra v. Jogendranath	536	Krishnappay	118, 203
Satya Moni v. Bhagobutty Churn	694	Secretary of State v. Reshidul Huq	790
Satyendra Nath v. Emp.	977	Secretary of State v. Saminatha	597
Satyesh Chunder v. Dhunput Singh	613	Secy. of State for India v. Shan-
Saunderson v. Judge	211, 213	muzaraya Mudaliar	475
Savage v. Foster	875	Secretary of State v. Srinivasa Chariar	591
Savak Singh v. Girja Pande	728	Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmad	320, 345
Savi v. Obboy Nath	719	Secretary of State for India v. Vira
Savlapa v. Devchand	774	Rayan	722
Sawal Singhai Nathuram v. Kaloo	816	Seethapati Rao Dora v. Venkan-
Sawentrana v. Girappa Fakerrappa	626	nadora	371
Sawyer v. Birchmore	904	Seetharama Raju v. Bayanna Pantulu
Saxlehmer v. Appollunaris Co.	197		876, 878
Sayad Gulam Hossein v. Bili		Selby v. Hills	928
Anvarmisa	792	Selam Sheikh v. Baidonath Glatal	814
Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai	570, 743	Sallamuthu Seryaigaran v. Palla-
Sayad Muhammad v. Fatteh Mu-		muthu	509, 692, 741, 802
hammad	763	Sellen v. Norman	212
Sayad Megamula v. Nanavalad	723	Selwyn, In re	801
Sayer v. Glossop	376, 458, 460, 512	Sennandan v. Kollakiram	511
Sayer v. Kitchen	229	Sechachalla Chetty v. Chinnaasami	748
Sayyud Ushur v. Beebee Utaf	811	Sechamma v. Padmanatha Rao	802
Scales v. Key	777	Sehgin Shankaboy v. Salrad-e Vas	847
Scarmanga v. Stamp	8	Seton v. A. S. Bijohn	643

	PAGE		PAGE
Pungama t Atchama	486	Subdeo Narain Deo t Kusim Kumari	316
Runga Rao t Bhavavamm	866	Sah Lal Chand t Indrajit	612
Rungo Lall t Abdool Gaffoor		Sahab Perhlad t Baboo Budhoo	729
	744 745 872 873	Sahib Perhlad t Doorga Pershad	770
Rungo Monee t Paj Coomar	216 247	Sahib Mirza t Umda Khanum	735
Punjeet Ram t Mahomed Waris	707	Sabu Ram Chandra v Bhup Singh	712
Runjeet Ram t Goburdhun Pam	748	Sahib Faiz t Omedce Singh	520
Punjit Singh t Bunwari Lal	724	Saibabala Debi t Snram Bhatta
Rup Chand t Janchu Pershad	710	charji	720
Rup Chand v Surlessur Chundra	690	Sayid Abdullah Khan v Saivil
	817 821 822 825 829 852 868	Basharat	628
Pup Narain v Mueet Copal Devi	789	Sayid Ali t Ibad Ali	476
Raj Singh t R	456	Sajjad Hussain t Wazir Ali Khan	762
Rush t Peacock	231	Sakimuddin Saha t Sonaula Sarkar	846
Rush v Smith	945 953	Sakina Khanum v Laddan Sabeba	721
Russell t Jackson	898, 900 902	Salamat Ali v Budh Singh	202 839
Russell t Langstoffs	880	Salamba Goundan v Palani Goundan	635
Russell t Smyth	801	Salford t Waterworks & Co	741
Russell t Watts	845	Salimatul Fatima t Koylashpoti
Rustem t R	985	Narain	472 571
Ruston s Case	889	Salkeld v Johnson	97
Rutehmini t Dhondo Mahadev	397	Salt t R	272
Ruttansey Lalji t Poorhai	824	Saltern t Melthursh	780
Ruttons Rowji t Bombay Spinning		Samana Basappa t Gadigaya Ko
Co	648	maya	619
Ruttoo Singh v Bajrang Sing	684 686	Samar Dosadh t Juggul Kishore	359
Pyall t Hannam	665		366, 367 370
Ryan t Ryan	373	Sambasiva Ayyar t Visbam Ayyar	589
Ryan t Sams	778	Sambayya t Gangayya	481 516
Ryder t Wombell	110 833	Samoo Pattar v Abdool Sammad
Pyne t Shiv Shankar	904 908	Sahib	730
		Samuel t Ofner	649
		San Hla Baw t Mi Khoroa	465 476
		Sandar Kuar v Chandreshar Prasad
		Narain Singh	519 521
S t Ganesh	147	Sanderson t Coleman	879
Satapathy Madali v Kunpusamy		Sandilands Pe	808
Mulali	638	Sangra Malapa t Pamappa	675
Sahoo Bewa t Nahagan Maistri	789	Sangram Singh t Rajan Bibi	339
Sabran Sheikh v Odoy Mabto	162 165	Sankappa Rai t P	286 292
	167, 171 174	Sankaradarya Svanugal t Manali
Sadabart Prasad v Foolhusb Hoer	711	Saravana	376
Sadaharan v Tadepally Basaviab	530	Sankaralingam t Subban Chetti	168
Sadakat Hossein t Mahomed Yusuf	799	Santacana v Anderol	1015
Salasub t Dunkar	712	Santappaya v Pangapayya	853
Salashiv Moreshtar t Hari		Santaya t Savitra	603 665
Moreshtar	855	Santishwar Mahanta t Lalukhanta
Sadasiv Singh t R	945	Mahanta	601
Sadasiva I Ili t Ramalinga Pillai	824	Sarabjit Partab t Inderjit Partab	443
Sadiq Hussain Khan t Hashim Ali	998	Sarda's Prosad Pal v Pama Pati	700
Sadhana Upadhya v P	893	Sarada Prosad Roy v Ananda Moy
Sadhu Churn t Basudev Parbeary	819	Dutta	827, 861
Sadhu Sahn t Paja Ram	369	Sarab Hobson s Case	114 115
Sadhu Sheikh t P	650, 693	Saraswati Dasi v Dhanput Singh	366
Sadu t Harza	820
Sagarmull t Manraj	362		373 375

PAGE		PAGE
Sarat Chandra Dutt v Jadb		Schmaltz v Avery	803
Chandra	617, 871	Scholes v Chadwick	245, 730
Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder	249,	Scholes v Hilton	927
898, 829 830, 839 842 843		Scholev v Walton	231
849 853, 859, 860 865		Scholfeld v Earl of Lonsborough	880
Sarbish Chandra Basu v Hari Dayal		Schumack v Lock	231
Singh	419	Schwalba The	133
Sardarmal v Aranyaval	412, 413 417	Scott v Clare	224
Sardhari Lall, In re	105	Scott v Jones	799
Sariatullah v Pran Nath	168 169	Scott v London Dock Co	795
	441, 442	Scott v Marshall	211
Sarkies v Prosonomoyce Dwyer	857	Scott v Sampson	207, 459
Saroda Prasad v Iuchmeeput Singh	79 807	Scully v Lord Dandonald	824
Saroda Prasad v Mahananda Roy	700	Seal v Claridge	532
Sarada Prasanna v Uma Kanta	791	Sealy v Ramnaran Bose	737
Saroda Soon lures v Muddan		Seaman v Netherelift	929, 965
Mohun	733 734	Seas v Lyons	164
Sarojini Das v Hari Das Ghose	337 733	Secretary Chief Khalsa Dewan v
Sasi Bhusan Pal v Chandra Peshkar	530	Punjab National Bank	855
Saskachellum Chetty v T Govind		Secretary of State v Birendra Kaphore
appa	837	Munkia	780
Sastry Velander v Sombycutty		Secretary of State Chellikani	776
Vayala	809	Secy of State for India v Dattatraya
Sateowri Ghosh v Secy of State	379	Nayari	846
	780, 781	Secretary of State v Kirtibas Bhupati
Sathu Sheikh v R	925		740, 812
Satiraju v Venkataswami	709, 790	Secretary of State v Krishnamoni
Satia Chunder v Mohendra Lal	335, 370	Gupta	767, 777
Satish Chandra Chacravarty v Ram		Secretary of State v Kumar Narendra
Dayal Dey	914 930	nath Mitter	618, 675
Satis Chandra Mitra v Jogendranath	536	Secretary of State v Manjeshwar
Satya Mont v Bhaggobutty Churn	634	Krishnayyar	118 503
Satyendra Nath v Emp	971	Secretary of State v Reshidul Huq	790
Satyesh Chunder v Dhunput Singh	613	Secretary of State v Saminatha	397
Stun lerson v Judge	211, 213	Secy of State for India v Khan
Savage v Foster	835	muzarava Mulaliar	475
Savak Singh v Girja Pande	728	Secretary of State v Srinivasa Channar	791
Savi v Obhoy Nath	719	Secretary of State v Syed Ahmad	390, 395
Savlaip v Devchand	794	Secretary of State for India v Vira
Sawai Singhai Nathuram v Kalso	846	Itayan	722
Sawentran v Ginnappa Fakeraip	626	Seethapati Paj Dora v Venkan
Sawyer v Birchmore	904	nadora	771
Saxlehmer v Appollinaris Co	197	Seetharama Raju v Bayanna Pantulu
Sayad Gulam Hossein v Pili			876, 878
Anvarmisa	792	Selly v Hills	98
Savad Gulamali v Myabhai	510, 743	Setam Sheikh v Basilonath Glatak	814
Sayad Muhammad v Fattah Mu		Saltmuthu Savaigaran v Polla
hammad	763	muthu	201, 692, 741, 812
Savad Megamtila v Nanavalad	723	Sellen v Norman	212
Sayer v Glossop	376, 438, 440, 512	Selwyn In re	506
Sayer v Kitchen	999	Sennandan v Kollakaram	711
Sayyud Usbur v Beelee Ultaf	511	Seshachalla Chetty v Chinnaasami	748
Scales v Key	777	Seshamma v Padmanatha Pao	802
Scarmanga v Stamp	8	Seshum Shankathov v Salvad v Vas	847
		Ston v A S Injola	653

	PAGE		PAGE
Seton Laing Co v Lafone	841 842	Sham Narain v Court of Ward	747
	843 846 849 860	Shamsh ul jahan Begum v Ahmad Wah	630
Seraram Aiyar v Samu Aiyar	686	Sham Sundar v Achhian Kuar	704 708
Seraji Vijaya v Chinna Nayana	456	Shamn Patter v Abdul Kadir Parvthian	530 532
	187, 47	Shankar Murlidhar v Mohan Lal	870
Sewall v Evans	801	Shankarrao v Ramjee	440
Se Leo Narain Singh v Ajodhya Prasad	25 321 329	Shanmugasnatha Chettiar v Srinivasa Ayyar	241
Shadai Khan v Aminullah Khan	175 179	Shan Mill v Ma Iras Building Co	203
Shadi Lal v Mohammad Lhaq Khan	163 183	Sharfud n v Gobind	777 582 584
Shahatun nssa v Slaban Ali	118	Sharo Bala v Baldeo Das	602
Shah Ara Begam v Nanhi Begam	607	Saroda Moyee v Nobin Chunder	688
Shah Golam v Most Fmanum	254 682	Sharp In re	619
Shah Golam v Mahommed Akbar	747	Sharp v Birch	513
Shaheer Ma v R	156 704	Sharp v Jackson	802
Shahebzadee Shahunshah v Ferguson	544	Sharpe v Lamb	510
Shah Makhanlal v Srikrishna Singh	633	Shashu Bhusa v Dhir v Nawab of Murshidabad	171
Shah Mohsum v Balasoo Koer	640	Shashi Bhusan Mura v Jyoti Prasad	591, 815
Shahzadi Begam v Secy of State for India	131 340 515	Shashu Pajbanshu v P	857
Shaikh Abdulla v Haji Abdulla	847	Shaw v Beck	078
Shaikh Hanif v Jagabonibu Shaha	867	Shaw v Goull	403
Shaikh Hussain v Govardhandas Purmanandas	59	Shazada Mahomed v Daniel Wedge berry	545 552
Shaikh Komuroodeen v Shaikh Monye	395	Shearman v Fleming	786
Shaikh Koodootoolah v Mohumee Mohun	160 405	Shedden v Att Genl	335 339
Shaikh Koodru v Mohumee Mohun	169	Shedden v Patrick	340 412
Shaikh Kuleemooddeen v Ashruf Ali	604	Sheeh Chunder v Brojo Nath	664
Shaikh Moldeen v Official Assignee	124 241	Sheeb Narain v Chidlam Doss	731
Shaikh Omed v N thee Pam	79	Shcen v Bumpstead	205
Shaikh Shurforaz v Shaikh Dhanoo	224 225 226	Sheetul Pershad v Junmejoy Mullick	129 130 1006
Shaikh Walee v Shaikh Kumar	634	Sheikh Abdulla v Sheikh Muhammad	518
Shama Charan v Madhus Chandra	724	Sheikh Ashruf v Ram Kishore	719
Shama Charu v Abdul Kabecr	754	Sheikh Fa zulla v Pamkamel Mitter	70 629
Shama Churn v Khettro Mont	734	Sheikh Fakir v P	68
Shamaldhone Dutt v Lakshmani Debi	759	Sheikh Goburdhnan v Sheikh Tofaul	718
Shama Soonluree v Collector of Maldah	754	Shama Patter In re	531
Samanan l Das v Ramkanta	173	Shah Lalchand v Indrajit	835
Shambati Koeri v Jago B bee	524 761	She kh Hosse n v Sheikh Musund	820
Shamtho Lal v Collect v of Surat	688	Sheikh Ibrahim v Parvata	257, 470, 498 506
Shanbu Nath v Lam Chan ra	510 601	Sheikh Imda l v Must Kootby	204
Sham Chand v Kishen Ironal	815	She kh Malomed Ravather v Brit sh India S N Co	588 725
Sham Chand v Ram Kasto Dewrah	353	She kh Milan v Mahome l Ali	710
Shan Nath Chau lin v Ravinas	419	Sheikh Mohamed v Jadunandan Jha	777 780
Shan Lal v Amarendra Nath	851	Sheikh Parabde v Sheikh Mohamed	618
Shari Lal v Anunttee Lal	990	Sheikh Roshan v Nobin Chunder	774
Sham Lal v Ladha Pibee	337	Sheikh Sahab v Lalla Bussessur	716
Sham Narain v Alir Genl of Bengal	691

	PAGE		PAGE
Sheikh Sultan t Sheikh Ajmodin		Shivappa t Shudlingappa	118
	371 375	Shivram v Narayan	820
Sheikh Tamjuddin t Sheikh Tazu	374	Shobanadri Appa v Sriramulu	236, 240
Sheikh Tenoo, In the matter of	308, 317	Shookram Sookul t Ram Lal
Sheikh Torab v Sheikh Mahomed	731		504 508 511, 517
Shelbourne v Inchiquin	637	Shore t Bedford	902
Sheldon v Benham	669	Shore v Wilson	589 659 667 688 670
Shenmuganatha Chettiar v Srinivasa Ayyar	124	Shoshi Blusan v Girish Chunder
Sheo Bahadur Singh v Beni Bahadur Singh	125		366 370 373 375, 546
Sheobaran v Bhairo Prasad	405	Shree Mohan Kishora v Coimbatore Spinning and Weaving Co	791
Sheobarat Ram v B and N W Ry Co	796	Shre Chedambara v Veerama Reddi	678
Sheodarchan Lal v Assessor Singh	778	Shrewsbury v Blount	103, 206
Sheo Golam t Beni Prasad	824	Shridher Balkrishna v Bahaji Mula
Sheopargash Dubee t Dhanraj Dubee	728		831, 876
Sheoparsan Singh v Ramnandan Prasad	391	Shripuja v Kanhay Palal	579, 681
Sheopakash Singh v Rawlins	793 972	Shruteedhur v Kali Kant	872
Sheo Prasad v Jung Bahadur	713	Shropshire Union Ry and Canal Co v Queen	857
Sheo Prasad v Udal Singh	858	Shumboo Chunder t Modhoo Koyburt	410
Sheo Prasad Koeri v Emperor	264 265	Shurfaraj t Shaikh Dhunoor	224, 225
Sheo Ruttun v Gour Beharee	703	Shambu Nath t Rani Chandra	601
Sheo Ruttun t Net Lal	727, 780	Shundan Ali v Mothooranath Dutt	716
Sheo Shankar v Rani Sewak	708	Shumnagaroya Mudahar t Manikka Mudahar	109 117
Sheo Shurn t Ram Khelawan	230	Shums Ahmed t Goolam Mohee oodeen	869
Sheo Suhaye t Gondur Roy	761 481	Shunker Bharati v Venkapa Nath	708
Shephard In re	700	Shusce Mohun t Aukhil	703
Shepherd t Payne	189	Shusce Mookhee t Bussessure Debee	377, 379
Sher Ahmed t Ibrahim	580	Shustee Churn, In the matter of	731
Sher Bahadur t Ganga Baksh	611	Shyama Charan v Heras Mollah
Shih Chandra Kar t Dufelen	825 8 4		616, 618, 613
Shih Dayal t Sheo Ghulam	531	Sheo Balak v Gya Prasad	306
Shibessourtee Debi t Mothooranath Acharjee	709	Shyama Charan Nundy v Abhiram Goswami	583
Shib Narain v Shaukar Panigrahi	696	Shyamanand Das v Pama Kanto	337, 476, 605
Shibo Prasad, In matter of the petition of	737, 738	Shyam Chand Basak v Chairman Dacca Municipality	695 831
Sheebosoonduri Debi t Syed Mahomed	696	Sia Das t Gur Sahi	839 852
Shib Parshad t Promothoonath Ghose	360 375	Sih Charan Dev v Nilkanta Mahto	569
Shib Sabitri Prasad v Collector of Meerut	735	Sibo Sundari v Hemangini Dabi	579
Sib Singh t Mukat Singh	688	Si hel v Lambert	799
Shiddeshwar t Ramchandraray	814	Silapa v Panakooty	763
Shields t Boucher	337	Sidgier v Burch	928
Shields t Wilkinson	681, 690 739	Silhu Sabu v Gopa Charan Dass	628
Shilling v Accidental Death Co	492	Sierewright v Archibald	601, 608
Shambu Nath v Gyan Chand	466	Sikandar v Emperor	272
Shu Golam v Baran Singh	699, 700, 791	Sikher Chand v Dulpattv Singh	696, 707, 838
Shivalingava v Nagalingaya	824	Silbeck v Garbett	213
Shivagunga Case	189	Simmons v London, e'c., Bank	235

	PAGE		PAGE
Simmons v Mitchell	423	Smith v Hughes	205 763
Simon v Anglo American Telegraph Co	863 881	Smith v Keel	124
Simon Elias v Jorawar Mull	682	Smith v Ludha Ghella	8 191 646
Simpson v Margston	670		647 648 669 671
Simpson v Robinson	149 152	Smith v Lyon	243
Sinclair v Baggalay	809	Smith v Mokhun Mahtoon	849
Sinclair v Sinclair	403	Smith v Saintsbury	439
Sinclair v Stevenson	511 523	Smith v Smith	245 246
Sindh Punjab and Delhi Bank v Yu Isoodun Choudhury	856	Smith v Tayler	304
Sital Pershad v Monobur Das	931 945	Smith v Whittingham	244
Sital Prasad v Parbhu Lal	760	Smith v Wilkins	137
Sital Singh v Emperor	153 994	Smith v Wilson	670
Stanath Dass v Mohesh Chunder	353	Sisout v Ilbery	745 7 8
Stanath Koert Land Mortgage Bank of India	713	Snowball v Goodricke	251
Sta Pam v Amir Begum	394 818	Sobhag Chand v Bhaichand	247
Sta Ram v Zalim Singh	711 712	Sodarudin Sarkar v R	914
Stararam Krishna v Daji Devaji	741	Somru Padhmanath v Narayanrao	793
Starama v Krishnaswami	244	Solar Naik v R	691
Svaanga v Lakshmana	711	Solano v Lalram	847 861 863
Svananjan Perumal v Muttu Ramalinga	188	Solomon v Britton	1009
Svananjanee Perumal v Meenakshi Ammal	167	Solway The	223
Siva Ram v Ali Baksh	8 6 965	Somangouda v Bharmangouda	701
Sivasankara Mundali v Purvati Aneri	711	Somar Dossad v Juggul Kishore	367
Svasubramanya v Secy of State for India	333 334 340 546	Somasundaram Chettiar v Vathiunga	709 789
Skaffe v Jackson	931 857	Somasunderam Pillai v Chokka	355
Skinner v Orde	815	Somasundra Mudalay v Duraisami	591
Skinner & Co v Rancee Shama	687	Mudabar	591
Skinner & Co v Shew & Co	143	Somu Gurukhal v Rangammal	245
Slack v Buchanan	231	Sonaallah v Imamooddeen	895
Sladen In re	579	Sona v Lmp	805
Slater v Lawson	942 250	Sonaton Ghose v Moulvie Abdul	716
Slattene v Pooley	256	Sonaton Shaha v Dino Nath	530 532
Slaymaker v Gundacker & Co	949	Soni Ram v Kanhaiya Lal	601
Sleeper v Van Middlesworth	78	Soobheddur Dossce v Bolaram	700 791
Sly v Sly	330	Dewan	700 791
Small v Nurne	350 955	Soorjan Bibee v Achmut Ali	221
Smart v Bayner	678		222 231 304 305 349 353
Smidt v Reddaway	793	Soolram Misor v Crowdy	150 412
Smith v Anderson	358	Sooltan Ali v Chand Bibee	223 224 225
Smith v Blackey	394 397	Soonaton Saha v Ramjoy Saha	716 747 757
Smith v Brownlow	349	Soondar Monee v Bhobun Mohun	785
Smith v Chadwick	561 869	Soopromoniam Setty v Heulgers	699
Smith v Cramer	152	Sooraj Kant v Ahoodde Naram	113 892
Smith v Danell	901	Soorendronath Poy v Musamat	168 169
Smith v L. I. Co	895	Heeromonee	168 169
Smith v Emperor	117, 227 268	Soorah Row v Cotaghery Boochiah	681 783
Slani v Fell	269 741 774	Soorjo Coonar v Bhugwan Chunder	606 607
Bengal Henderson	901	Soorjomonee Dayee v Sudlanund	393
	801-72	Mohapatter	393
	838	Soorjomonee Dayee v Sudlanund	393
		Broche	815

PAGE		PAGE
Sorabjee Vacha v Koovurjee Ma nikjee	361	Sri Gopal v Partha Singh	.. 397
Soroj Kumar Achary : Umed Ali Howladar	163, 173	Srikant : R	421, 431
Soroop Chunder v Troylokho Nath	852	Sri Kishen : Hun Kishen	361
Sosbee Mohun : Aukhui	699	Srimati Jagannatha v Kutumbara gudu	813
South Eastern Railway Co : Wharton	856 858	Srimati Aliyan : Harachandra Chowdhury	172
Southward Co : Quick	900, 908	Srimati Anandmayi : Dhaneudra Chandra	247
Sowdamanee Dehya v A Spalding	638	Srimati Jaikali : Shib Nath	602
Spargo v Brown	215 219	Srimati Kabyan Bibi : Krishna Das	536
Spence v Stuart	928	Srimati Lakhmani : Mohendra Nath	850
Spencely v DeWilloott	137 914	Srimati Sukhiani : Mahendra Nath	793, 821
Spencer v Billing	521, 912	Sri Narain : Lala Raghubans	712
Spencer : Williams	865	Srinath Das v Probodh Chandra Das	744
Spicer v Cooper	670	Srinath Paria : Kuloda Prosad Banerjee	579
Spiers v William	597	Srinivas v R	.. 108
Steelant Bhuttacharjee : Raj Narain	581 582 583	Srinivasa Swami : Athmarawa Aiyar	.. 643
Sree Mahant v Coimbatore Spinning Co	876	Srinivasa Krishna v Nabar Kundoo	244
Sreeman Chunder : Gopal Chunder	487, 683 810	Sripat Singh Dugar : Prodyat Kumar Tagore	713, 839
Sreemutty v Lulhee Narain	706	Sri Raghunadha : Sri Brojo	113, 493
Sreemutty Debia v Pimola Soonduree	334, 305 851	Sri Rajah Chalikani v Secretary of State	.. 722
Sreemutty Dossee : Pitamber Pundah	489	Sri Raja Parthasarathy Appa Row : Secretary of State	.. 740, 785, 812
Sreemutty Gour : Hureo Kishore	503, 311	Sri Raja Prakasharavani v Venkata Ram	130, 131, 934, 940, 1006
Sreemutty Mohun v Sarat Chunder	833, 834, 1005	Sri Rajah : Sri Rajah Venkatanara Simha	720
Sreemati Netty Kali v Sarat Ch Bose	171	Sri Ram : Lurm Sobha Ram Gopal Rai	.. 627
Sreemutty Oodoy : Bisonath Dutt	519, 546	Sri Rangammal : Sandammal	416
Sreemutty Phoodde : Gobind Chunder	423, 538, 540	Sri Chandra : Triguna Prasad	.. 395
Sreemutty Rabutty Dassee : Sib chunder Mullick	589	Sri Chunder : Dononah	.. 839
Sreemutty Soorjeemoney : Deno bundoo Mullick	651	Snoodhur Sawant v Ramanath Rohit	.. 716
Sreenath Mundle : Sreerain Rajput	932	Stamp Act, s 46, Preference to F B under	.. 547, 548
Sreenuath Nag : Mon Mohinee	305	Stanes : Stewart	.. 965
Sreenath Roy : Bindoo Bashinee	304, 305, 851	Standage v Creighton	.. 228
Sreenath Roy : Goluck Chunder	130, 910	Stanford : Huristone	.. 148
Sree Sankarachari : Varada Pillai	.. 855	Stanley v White	.. 145
Sri Balusu : Sri Balusu	.. 892	Stanton v Percival	220, 225, 229, 243
Sri Braja : Kundana Devi	.. 176	Staplyton v Clough	.. 320
Sridhar Nandy v Braja Nath	.. 730	State v Blackburn	.. 317
Sridhar Vinayak : Narayan Valad Babaji	.. 394	State v Exell	.. 933
n Gajapathi : Sri Gajapathi	.. 824	State v Glass	.. 434
n Gineb v Keshavray Givind	405, 406, 838	State v Lapage	.. 597
		State v Railroad	.. 212
		State v Rathburn	.. 143
		State v Roe	.. 5-2

	PAGE.		PAGE
State v Staton	992	Suddist Lal r Most Sheobarat	761
State v Wilson	459	Sudhanya Kumar Singh r Gour
Steering r Henzman	609	Chandra Pal	131 529 532 678
Steele r Stewart	901	Sadhar Chandra Sett r Sied Abdulla
Steinkeller r Newton	354 991	ul Masavi	726
Stephen r Vroman	559	Sadukhina Chowdram r Raj
Stephenson r Piver Tyne Im		mohan Bose	352, 353
Improvement Commissioners	436	Sufiuddeen r P	260
Stevens v Lynch	803	Sugden r St Leonards	518
Stevens r Pinney	596	Sugg r Bray	524
Stevens r Thacker	233	Sojad Ali r Hashinath Das	943
Steward r Young	119	Sukarno Koburaj r R	738
Stewart r Edlowes	615	Sakh Dei r Kedar Nath	735
Stewart's case	241	Sakh Lall r Madhuri Prasad	697
Sikeman r Dawson	834	Sakumat Bibee r Warris Ali	710
Stiles r Cardiff S & Co	235	Sukumari Debi r Kalpada Mukerjee	626
Stimson r Farnham	863	Saleman Kader r Mehndi Afzur	681 684
Stocken r Collin	211, 214 576	Salivan r Norton	907
Stockfeth r De Tastet	257	Sullivan r Sullivan	657
Stockler r Stockler	803	Sumbo Chunder r Modhoo Kalurt	223
Stone v Metcalfe	612	Sumera Khatoon r Lahore	718
Storr r Scott	358	Summers r Moorhouse	657
Stewart r Billings	824	Summers r Mosely	908 953
Stracey v Blake	491 877	Summersett r Adamson	224
Stranger r Searl	439	Sunrun Singh r Khedum Singh	189
Stratford v Hogan	906	Samsuddin r Abdul Hussein	702
Stringer v Estate In re	867	Sunda Gopalan v Venkataravala
Strong v Brewer	430 478	Ayyangar	247
Strung r Dickinson	978	Sundaraja Ayyenar r Jeeanala
Stronhill v Buck	858	Pillai	713
Strother r Barr	496 506 597	Sundarasastriai v Gorinda Man
Struthers v Wheeler	137	darayan	722
Studdy r Sanders	904 905	Sundar Anar r Chandreshwar
Sturge v Buchanan	388 389	Prasad	549
Sturla v Freccia	307 374 366 768 542	Sundar Singh r Dul p Singh	728
Subba r P	930, 931	Sunker Lal r Jud loobuns Sahaye	706 848
Sabbaji r Shidlapa	782 972	Sunnul Ali r Musst Karim oonissa	777
Subbamanja Ayyar v Paja Pajesh		Supernadhwaja r Carura Ithwaja	359
vara Dorai	653	Suppa r Gorinda Charyar	104
Subbaraya r Krishnaspija	876	Surab Narain r Shew Govind	707 854
Sibbarat r Sibramanis Ayyar	676	Suraj Bansi v Sheo Prasad	711
Subraman v Ayyar r R	157 1010	Suraj Mookha r Bhagwati Konwar	240
	1011 1016 1017	Suraj Prasad r Standard Life
Subramania Siva In re	972	Insurance Co	947
Subramanian Chettiar v Aruna		Surat Dhabni In the matter of	133, 134
chalam Chettiar	612	Surat Soon laree r Pajen ira Kishore	350
Subramanaya Pantha r Siva Sutra		Suren ira Keshav r Durgasundari
manva	159	Dassee	224 480 807
Subramanyasavan r Sibraman v		Surendra Krishna Mandal v Panee
avan	713	Dassie	733 742 971 974 975
Subrahmanya r Paramaswaran	173 370		1001 1004
Subramanya r Suthava	579	Surendra Narain r Dina Nath	790
Subuktulla r Ilari	869	Surendra Narayan Adhicary r R	111, 479
Succaram Morari r Kalidas		Surendra Nath r Dwarkanath	813
Kal anji	236 584 589 651	Surendra Nath r Brojo Nath	175 176 177

PAGE		PAGE
Surendra Nath v Hiramonee Bar-		Tahboonissa t Koomar Sham	708
mani	791	Talor t Wilkams	123, 238
Surendra Nath Mitra t Khetendra		Tajhoo Damer Singh t Kotwar
Mohan Mitra	855	Jagatpal Singh	330
Surendranath Mukerjee t Emperor	280	Tajuddin t Govind	577 582 584
Suresh Chandra Sanyal t R	429 539 959	Takannath t R	300
Suresh Chandra Biswas t Jogendra		Talbot t Hodson	37, 809
Nath Sen	695	Talbot t Marshfield	902
Surja Prasad t Golab Chand	713	Talluri Venkayya v R	946
Surjan Singh t Sardar Singh	337	Tajudin v Gohind	577
Surja Kant t Banerwar Saha	171, 608	Takanath v R	300
Surja Narain t Biswambhur Singh	166	Talshubhai t Ranchod	757
Surjyamon Das t Kali Kanta	800	Tamarasern Sivithri t Maranat
Sumomoyee t Luchmepoot Doogra	811	Vasudevan	762
Sumomoyee t Suttesschunder Roy	813	Tamur Singh v Kaldas Poy	472
Sumomoy t Johur Mahomed	360 364	Tanti t Pihram	743
Surrooty Dosee t Umbica Nanl	332 383	Tanti v Gajadhar	721
Sushil Chandra Das t Gauri Sutar	603	Tara Banu v Abdul Gaffur	754
Singex Pierre Case 310 383 386		Tara Chand t Baldeo	611
	421 428	Tara Chand t Debnath Roy	734
Sutto Churn t Tarnec Churn	731	Tara Chand t Reeb Ram	168,
Sutton v Cicer	667		170, 183, 189
Sutton t Devonport	786	Tara Chunder t Amir Mandal	815
Sutton t Sutton	99	Tara Churn t Joy Narain	791
Sutton t Tatham	804	Tara Lal t Sarobur Singh	827 861 864
Sutto Surrun t Mohesh Chunder	812	Taraknath Chuckerbutti t Joy
Satyobhama Dassee t Krishna		Soondur	664
Chunder	826	Tara Pershad v Lukhee Narain	533
Swami Nayudu t Subramania		Taraprasad Mitra v Ram Narain	246
Mudali	724	Tara Singh t R	291, 292
Swamirao v Collector of Dharwar	802	Tarnec Pershad t Kali Charan	716
Swan Ex parte	889	Tarnec Pershad t Dwarka Nath	225
Swan t North British Australian		Tarni Charan t Saroda Sundari
Co	843 848 860		709, 789 803, 939 1005
Sasannanaya Raur t Sunibash		Tarini Mohan t Gunga Persad	873
Koyal	732 748	Tarruck Chunder v Jogeshur Chunder
Swinfen t Lord Chelmsford	239		699 700, 703 791
Swinfen t Swinfen	150	Taruck Nath t Mohendra Nath
Syama Sunder t Jugo Bundhu	380		382 383, 569
Syam Lal v Lachman Choudhry	379 380	Taruck Nath Mookerjee t Gourtee
Syed Abbas t Yadeem Raina	498 516 517	Churn	354
Syed Ahmed t Enayat Husein	731	Tarucknath Mutlick t Jeemat
Syed Anur t Heera Singh	829	Norra	691
Syed Ashgar t Syed Medhi	684	Taru Patur v Abinash Chandra	545
Syed Fuzzul t Amjad Ali	761	Tatta t Sadashiv	872, 873
Syed Loofoollah v Must Nus		Tawakkul Rai v Lachman Pal	723
Seebun	519	Taylor t Barclay	471, 478
Syed Nural t Sheo Sahai	841 842 848	Taylor v Blacklaw	407
Syers t Jonas	645	Taylor v Briggs	671
		Taylor t Cook	848
		Taylor t Creswell	776
		Taylor v Kinloch	809
		Taylor v Needham	574
		Taylor v Rendell	597
		Taylor v Williams	223

T

Tacooreen Tenaree t	Hossain
Khan	710 761, 761
Tadman t Henman	599 874
Takore t Tagore	221 490 862

	PAGE		PAGE
Taylor will case	539	Thuppan Nambudripad t Ittichuri
Taylor v Williams	140 142, 206	Amma	869, 877
Taylor v Witham	327, 329 331	Thursby t Plant	682
Tayammaul v Sashachalla	852	Thurston v Nottingham Permanent
Teafani's Trademark, In re	882	Benefit Building Society	834
Tcencourie t Hureehur	401	Tichborne case	961
Tek Chand v Musst Gopal Devi	853 862	Tiery v Kristodhun Bose	477
Tekaet Doorga t Tekaitne Doorga	168 189	Tikamdas Javahirilal t Gangakom
Tekait Roop v Annni Roy	729	Mathuradas	742
Tehulram t Kashibai	857, 858	Tikam Singh t Dhan Kunwar	475 768
Templeton t Lawrie	157, 929	Tikaya Ram t Wassu Miser	875, 880
Tenerani Mandal t Emperor	782	Tilakdhan Lal t Khedan Lal	848
Tepu Khan v Pojoni Mohun	161, 167 172 174 177, 181, 185	Tilak Singh t Chhutta Sing	240
Thacoor Bron ma t Thacoor Lullit	380	Tilak Sinha t Chock Sinha	240
Thakoorance Dassee t Rialesbur		Tiley t Cowling	222
Mookerjee	374	Till t Ainsworth	1000
Thakdi Haji t Budrudin Saib	725	Tima v Darimma	336
Thakoor Deen v Nowah Syud	484	Timangavda t Ranganavda	570 581 582
Thakoor Daval In the matter of	946	Timmana v Putobhata	827
Thakoor Jeetnath t Loke Nath	693	Tinoo Mish t R	914
Thal oor Mahtab v Leelanund Sing	826	Tinapra t Murugappa	847
Thakoor Pershad v Mussamut		Tinklers Case	888
Rashmutty	580 583	Tirthasami t Gopala	113
Thakoor Fateemgi t Bamanji Dalal	645	Tiruchoran Perumal t Sangudien	873
Thakuram Balaram t Rai Jazat Pal	99	Tirumala t Pingalai	819
Thakurani Tara Kumari v Chatur		Tirumalasami Reddi v Rama Sami	750
bhuji	670	Tiruvengada Ayyangar t Panga
Thakur Dass t Jairaj Singh	760	sami Nayak	641 642
Thakur Garuradhwaja t Kunwar		Tofaluddi Pradit t Mahar Ali	530
Shaparami	441	Tokee Bibee t Abdool Khan	889
Thakur Singh t Bhooraj Singh	749 752	Tollemache, In re	201, 327, 413
Tham t Kondan	370	Toleman In re	512
Thamman Pandi v Maharajah of		Toolsee Money t Maria Margery
Vizitanagram	873	Cornelius	836
Thayammal t Kuppama Koundan	239 706	Toolsey Das v Premji Trinunidas	698 700
Thet She v Maang Ba	131	Topham t McGregor	942
Thickness t Bromilow	880	Torab Ali v Chooramun Singh	688
Thimma Reddi t Chenna Reddi	725	Toronto Railway Co t Corporation
Thiagraja v Guyana Symbandha	719	of Toronto	401
Thirukumarsan Chetti t Subbaraya		Tota v Emp	920
Chetti	682 728	Tota Ram t Hargobind	219 865, 866
Thomas t Connell	198	Tota Pam t Mohun Lal	405 466
Thomas v David	969	Townsend t Strangroon	4
Thomas v Jenkins	537	Townshend Peerage Case	446
Thomas t Morgan	259	Tracy Peerage Case	491, 446
Thomas v Newton	914, 915	Trailokia t Shumo Chungoni	579 582 583
Thomas v Secretary of State for India		Travers t Blundell	664
in Council	902	Treelochun Roy t Raj Kishen	701
Thompson v Trevanion	144 147	Trewhitt t Lambert	598
Thomson v Austen	225, 259	Trubhavadan Jekisandas t Krishna
Thomson v Hall	809	ram Kuberam	661
Thorne t Heard	124	Tuccam Panachan t Bombay
Thornhill t Thornhill	996	Baroda, etc, Py Co	478
Thunder v Warren	591	Tucumdas Coover, t v Sri Sri Gopi
		nath	792

	PAGE		PAGE
Trilochun Ghose v Koulash Nath	754, 814	Umed Ali t Nawab Khaji Hahirulla	321
Trimbak Gangadhar t Bhagvandas Mulchand	644	Umedmal Motiram t Davubin Dhondiba	642
Trimbak Ramchandra v Shekh Gulam Zilani	860 871 875	Umesh Chundra t Sageman	652 655 661, 662 664
Trimhak Ramkrishna t Hari Laxman	831	Umes Chunder Banerva t Mohini Mohan	638
Trolok Nath v Musst Lachhnien	708	Umrit Nath t Gourree Nath	698
Trimblestown t Kemmis	223 329, 331	Unam Din t Niamut Ulla	557
Troilokhya Mohini Dasi t Kali Prosanna Ghose	684, 1014	Unapoorua Dassce t Nuffer Podhar	248, 255
Trotter t Maclean	211, 213	Underwood v Wing	100 788
Troup, Ex parte	413	Ungley t Ungley	620
Troylokanath Biswas In the matter of	998	Urude Rajsha t Pemmasamy Venkatarajy	7 128 198 703
Troyluckho Taruni t Mohama Chundra	873	United Company t Raja Buddinath	933
Trustees of the Harbour of Malras t Pest & Co	796	United States v Dickinson	954
Tucker In re	214	United States Exp Co t Henderson	996
Tueler v Langer	169	Uni t Kunchi Amma	708
Tugwell t Hooper	906	Upendra Krishna t Ismail Khan	812
Tularam v Ramchand	619 623	Upendra Molun t Gopal Chandra	1013
Tukaram bin Atmaram t Ram chandra bin Budharam	847	Upendra Narain v Gupee Nath	702
Tukey Pat v Tupsee Koer	955 959, 960	Upendra Nath Bagehi t R	759
Tullidge t Wade	164	Upendra Nath Das t Emperor	266
Tulloek t Dun	231	Urquhart t Butterfield	481
Tulsi Pershad t Raja Misser	722	Ushar Ali t Ultaf Fatima	811
Tulsi Ram t Mutesali Lal	849	Uttam Chandra Daw t Raj Krishna Dalal	780 807
Tunley t Evans	270	Uttam Singh t Hukam Singh	534
Turner t Power	595	Uttamechandra Knthy t Khetra Nath	823
Turner t Railton	258		V
Turof Sahib t Esuf Salit	644	Vacher t Cocks	193 198 202
Turquand t Knight	905 906	Vadivelam Pillai t Natesam Pillai	708
Turton t Turton	776	Vagliano t Bank of England	859
Twedie t Poorno Chunder	827, 876	Vaithilingam Mudali t Natasa Mudali	703 790 853
Twynam t Knowles	797	Vaithinatha Pillai t R	1010 1017
Tyrell t Ponton	734	Valampuducherry Padmanathan t Chowakarem	672
	U	Valesubramanian t Pamanathan	124 241
Ulilack Rai t Dallial Pat	580	Valiant t Dedemial	903
Uda Begum t Imam ud din	97 98 845	Vallabha t Madhusudan	188, 477
Udit Upadhya t Bhowandin	598	Vallabh Bhulee t Pama	827
Ugerakant Choudhry t Hurro Chunder	979 590	Valubai t Govind Kasinath	960
Ujagir Singh t Pitman Singh	714	Vanderickt t Thellus n	38 426 428
Uma Churn t Ajalanissa Bibee	95	Van Omeren t De wick	112 40 177 808
Uma Shankar t Mansur Ali	687	Van Wart t Waller	239
Uma Prasad t Gandharo Singh	113 369	Varada Pillai t Jeeraratanammal	792, 597
Umica Churn t Bhuga Sluttie Churn	506	Varadalajulu Naidu t Emperor	575
Umica Churn t Madhub Chasat	724	Varadarajulu Naidu t Smitra salu Naidu	418 851
Umica Churn Den t Bengal Spinning Co	907	Varajal t Bhaju Nagaradas	825
		Varvar Nicholas t Asghar	578

	PAGE		PAGE
Taylor will case	539	Thuppan Nambudripad t Itticburi
Taylor v Williams	140 142 206	Amma	869 877
Taylor v Witham	327 329 331	Thursby v Plant	682
Tayammaul t Sasbachalla	859	Thurston v Nottingham Permanent
Teafani s Trademark In re	882	Benefit Budding Society	834
Tecencourte t Hurechur	401	Tichborne case	901
Tek Chand t Musst Gopal Devi	853 869	Tiery t Kristodhun Bose	477
Tekaset Doorga t Tekaitne Doorga	168 183	Tikamdas Javalirdas t Cangakom
Tekait Roop v Anunl Roy	729	Mathura las	749
Tehilram v Kashubai	857 858	Tikam Singh t Dhan Kunwar	475 768
Templeton v Lawrie	157 999	Tikaya Ram t Wasu Miser	875 860
Teneram Mandal v Emperor	782	Tilakdhan Lal t Abedan Lal	848
Tepu Khan v Pojoni Mohun	161	Tilak Singh t Chhutta Sing	240
167 172 174 177, 181	185	Tilak Sinha t Chock Sinha	240
Thacoor Bronma t Thacoor Lalit	380	Tiley t Cowling	222
Thakooranco Dassee v Baleshur		Till t Ainsworth	1000
Mookerjee	374	Tima v Darimma	336
Thakdi Haji t Budrud n Saib	720	Timangavda t Rangangavda	579 581 582
Thakoor Deen t Nowab Syud	484	Timmana t Putobbata	827
Thakoor Dayal In the matter of	915	Tinoo Miah t R	914
Thakoor Jeetnath t Loke Nath	693	Tinapi t Murugappa	847
Thakoor Mabtab t Leelanunl Sng	826	Truckler a Case	888
Thakoor Pershad v Mussamit		Turthasami v Gopala	113
Baahmutty	580 583	Turuchuran Peruunl t Sangudien	873
Thakoor Fates ngui t Bimanyi Dalal	845	Turumala t Pingalai	819
Thakurain Belaraj t Rai Jagat Pal	99	Turumalasami Reddi v Rama Sami	760
Thakurani Tara Kumari t Chatur		Tuvengada Avvangan t Panga
bbuj	669	sani Nayak	641 642
Thakur Dass v Ja raj Singh	760	Tofaluddi Peala t Mahar Ali	536
Thakur Caruradhwaja t Kunwar		Tolke Bibee t Abdool Khan	839
Shaparami	441	Tollemache In re	251 327 413
Thakur Singh t Bhooraj Singh	749 752	Toleman In re	512
Tbama v Kondan	370	Toolesee Monev t Maria Maryery
Thamman Pandi v Mabarajah of		Cornelius	836
Vizianagaram	873	Toolesey Das t Premji Trinandas	698 700
Thayammal v Kuppana Kounlan	239 706	Topbam t McGregor	942
Thet She v Maung Ba	131	Torab Ali t Chooramun Singh	688
Thickness v Bromlow	880	Toronto Railway Co t Corporation
Thamma Pedl t Chenna Rell	720	of Toronto	401
Thagrja v Ciyana Samban lha	719	Tota v Emp	970
Thurukumaresan Chetti t Subbarava		Tota Ram t Harg binl	219 860 866
Chetti	682 728	Tota Pam t Mohun Lal	400 466
Thomas v Connell	198	Townsenl t Strangro m	4
Thomas v Davil	969	Townsenl Peerage Case	446
Thomas v Jenkins	537	Tracy Peerage Case	491 446
Thomas v Morgan	259	Tra lok a t Shumo Chingoni	579 582 583
Thomas v Newton	914 915	Travers t Blinlell	664
Thomas v Secretary of State for Ind a		Treelochun P y t Raj K shen	701
m Co neil	902	Trewitt t Lai bert	598
Thompson t Trevanion	144 147	Tribhovan las Ieksan las t Krishna
Thomson t Atsten	225 259	ram Kuberan	664
Thomson t Hall	809	Tricam Panachenl t Bombay
Thorne v Heard	124	Baroda etc Ry Co	478
Thornhill t Thornhill	996	Tricomas Coover t v Sn Sn Gop
Thunder v Warren	691	nath	792

TABLE OF CASES CITED

lxxvii

	PAGE		PAGE
Tilochun Ghose v Kailash Nath	754, 814	Umed Ali t Nawab Khaji Hahirulla	321
Trimbak Gangadhar t Bhowandas Mulchand	644	Umcdmal Motiram t Darubin Dhondiba	612
Trimbal Ramechandra v Shekh Gulam Zilani	870 871 875	Umesh Chundra t Sageman	652 655 661 662 664
Trimbak Ramkrishna t Hari Laxman	831	Umes Chunder Banerji t Mohini Mohini	638
Triok Nath t Vinasti Lechnien	768	Umrith Nath t Gourree Nath	699
Trimblestown v Kemmis	223 379 331	Unam Din t Niamut Ulla	577
Trolokhyo Mohini Das t Kali Prasanna Ghose	684 1014	Unapoorna Dasseet t Nuffer Podlar	248, 255
Trotter t Maclean	211, 213	Underwood t Wing	160 788
Troup Ex parte	413	Ungley t Ungley	620
Troylochanath Biswas In re matter of	998	Urude Pajaba t Pemmasamy Venkatadry	7 128 498 503
Troyluckho Tarini v Mohinia Chunira	873	United Company t Raja Buddinath	973
Trustees of the Harbour of Malacca t Best & Co	790	United States t Dickenson	934
Tuelier In re	244	United States Exp Co t Henderson	999
Tuelier v Linger	169	Unit t Kunchi Amma	708
Tugwell r Hooper	906	Upendra Krishna t Ismail Khan	812
Tularam t Ramchand	619 623	Upendra Mohun t Copal Chandra	1013
Tukaram bin Atmaram t Ram chandra bin Budharam	847	Upendra Narain t Gopee Nath	792
Tukey Pat t Thipsee Koer	93 979 960	Upendra Nath Bagchi t R Upendra Nath Das t Emper t Urquhart t Butterfield	799 796 481
Tulkidoo t Wade	164	Usar Ali t Ultaf Fatima	811
Tulloek t Dun	231	Uttam Chandra Daw t Raj Krishna Dalal	780 807
Tulsi Pershad t Raja Messer	722	Uttam Singh t Hukam Singh	534
Tulsi Ram r Mutyadi Lal	849	Uttamchandra Anthy t Khetra Nath	823
Tunley t Evans	20
Turner t Power	533	V
Turner t Railton	238	Vacher t Cocks	193 198 202
Turof Sahib t Esuf Salih	644	Vadivelam Pillai t Nataram Pillai	708
Turquand v Knight	903 906	Vagliano r Bank of England	859
Turton r Turton	770	Vaithulingam Mudali r Natesa Muthiah	799 799 833
Tweedie t Poorno Chunder	897, 800	Vaithimatha Pillai r P	1010 1017
Tvannam v Knowles	697	Valampu Icherri Padmanabhan t Chowakarem	652
Tyrell t Ponton	734	Valesubramanian t Ranaratnan	124, 241
		Vahant r Dodemead	903
U		Vallabha r Madusudanana	188, 477
Ubilack Rai t Dalial Rai	580	Vallabh Bhulee r Rama	527
Uda Begum t Imam ud-din	97 98 847	Valubai r Govind Kashinath	960
Udit Upadhya t Bhowandin	598	Vandenlonck t Theilsson	781 426 428
Ugerahant Chudhry t Hurro Chunder	979 580	Van Omenen r Dowick	212 417 477, 608
Ujagar Singh t Pitman Singh	714	Van Wart r Walley	279
Uma Churn t Ajadanissa Bibee	98	Varala Pillai r Jeeraratanammal	592 597
Uma Shankar t Mansur Ali	687	Varadalayulu Nadu r Empere	775
Uma Prosad t Gandhiraj Singh	113 369	Varadarajulu Nadu t Seniva salu Nadu	418 851
Umbica Churn t Bhuggoluttiv Churn	703	Vasylar r Bhaji Nagarias	825
Umbica Churn t Madhub Chosai	724	Varrar Nicholas r Aphar	578
Umbica Churn Sen t Benca Spinning Co	907

	PAGE		PAGE
Taylor will case	539	Thuppan Nambudripad & Ittiehiri
Taylor & Williams	140 142, 206	Amma	869 877
Taylor v Witham	327, 329 331	Thursby v Plant	682
Tayammaul & Sasbachalla	852	Thurston v Nottingham Permanent
Teafani's Trademark In re	882	Benefit Building Society	834
Teencourie & Hureehur	401	Tichborne case	964
Tek Chand v Musst Gopal Devi	853 862	Tiery & Kristodhun Bose	477
Tekaet Doorga & Tekaitne Doorga	168 189	Tikamdas Javahirdas & Cangalom
Tekait Roop & Anund Roy	729	Mathuradas	740
Tebilram v Kashibai	857 858	Tikam Singh & Dhan Kunwar	475 768
Templeton & Lawrie	157, 929	Tikaya Ram & Wassu Miser	875 860
Teneram Mandal v Emperor	782	Tilakdhar Lal & Khedari Lal	848
Tepu Khan & Pajoni Mohan	161, 167 172 174 177 181, 185	Tilak Singh & Chhutta Sing	240
Thacoor Bromma & Thacoor Lalit	380	Tilak Sinha & Chock Sinha	240
Thakoorance Dassie & Rakeshur		Tiley & Cowling	222
Mookerjee	374	Till & Ainsworth	1000
Thakdi Haji & Budrudin Saib	723	Tima v Darimma	336
Thakoor Deen v Nowab Syud	484	Timangavda & Rangangavda	579 581 782
Thakoor Dayal In the matter of	946	Timmana v Putobbata	827
Thakoor Jeetnath & Loke Nath	693	Tinoo Mah & R	914
Thakoor Mahtab & Leelanund Sing	826	Tinappa v Murugappa	847
Thakoor Pershad & Mussamit		Tinckler & Cas-	888
Rashmutty	580 583	Tirhasami & Gopala	113
Thakoor Fates ngi & Ramaji Dalal	845	Tiruchuran Perumal & Sangudien	873
Thakuran Belaraj & Rai Jawat Pal	99	Tirumala & Pingalai	819
Thakurani Tara Kumari & Chatur		Tirumalasami Reddi & Rama Sami	756
bhu	609	Tiruvengada Ayyangar & Ranga
Thakur Dass & Jauraj Singh	760	san & Nayak	641 642
Thakur Caruradhwaya & Kunwar		Tofaluddi Peada & Mahar Ali	530
Shaparam	441	Tokee Rubee & Abdool Khan	889
Thakur Singh v Bhojraji Singh	749 752	Tollemache In re	201 327 413
Tham & Kondan	370	Toleman In re	512
Thamman Panda v Maharajah ol		Toolsee Moner & Maria Margery
Vizianagaram	873	Cornelius	836
Thayammal & Kuppana Koundan	239 766	Tooley Das v Premji Tricundas	698 700
Thet Sher Maung Ba	131	Topham & McGregor	942
Thickness v Bromilow	880	Torab Ali & Chooramun Singh	688
Thimma Peddi & Chenna Reddi	720	Toronto Railway Co & Corporation
Thiagraja & Geyana Sambandha	719	of Toronto	401
Thurukumarasan Chetti & Subbaraya		Tota v Emp	920
Chetti	682 728	Tota Ram & Harg b n l	249 860, 860
Thomas & Connell	198	Tota Pam & Mohun Lal	405 466
Thomas & Davil	969	Townsend & Strangro m	4
Thomas & Jenkins	537	Townsent & Peeraee Case	446
Thomas & Morgan	251	Tracy Peerage Case	401 446
Thomas & Newton	914 915	Trailokya & Shurno Chungoni	579 582 583
Thomas & Secretary of State for India		Travers & Blumell	764
in Council	902	Trelochan Roy & Raj Kishen	701
Thompson & Trevanion	144 147	Trehutt & Lambert	598
Thomson & Arsten	225, 230	Tribhovanias Jekusan las & Krishna
Thomson & Hall	809	ram Knberana	664
Thorne & Heard	124	Trocam Panachan l & Bombay
Thornhill & Thornhill	996	Baroda etc Py Co	478
Thunder & Warren	591	Tricomas Coover & Sri Sri Gopi
		nath	792

	PAGE		PAGE
Taylor will case	539	Thuppan Nambudripad r Ittiehum
Taylor r Williams	140 142, 206	Amma	569 877
Taylor r Witham	327 329 331	Thursby r Plant	622
Tayammaul r Sashachala	852	Thurston r Nottingham Permanent
Trafanti's Trademark In re	852	Benefit Buid Long Society	834
Teencourt r Hureehur	401	Tichborne case	964
Tek Chand r Must G pal Devi	553 562	Tiern r Kristodhun Rose	477
Tekaet Doorra r Teka tue Doorra	162 164	Tikandias Javahundis r Cangakom
Tekaut Poop r Anunil Poy	799	Mathuradas	742
Tehilram r Kashibai	557 558	Tikam Singh r Dhan Kunwar	472, 768
Templeton r Lawrie	177 229	Tikara Pam r Wassu Vicer	822, 860
Tenarum Mandal r Prosperor	722	Tilakdhan Lal r Kheelan Lal	845
Tepu Khan r P joni Mohun	161	Tilak San h r Chhutta Sing	241
167 177 174 177 181	183	Tilak Sinha r Chock Sinha	240
Thacoor Promma r Thacoor Lalit	320	Tiler r Cowling	222
Thakooranee Dassie r Pileeshur		Till r Ainsworth	1000
Mockerjee	374	Tima r Daramma	336
Thakda Haji r Pulrudin Sub	773	Timsaravda r Panangavda	570 581 82
Thakoor Deen r Nowab Syul	481	Timmans r Putobhala	827
Thakoor Daral In the matter of	945	Tinoo Miah r P	914
Thakoor Jeetnath r Loke Nath	697	Tinappa r Mururappa	847
Thakoor Mahtab r Leelanunil Sm	826	Tinckler's Case	828
Thakoor Pemhad r Mussamut		Tirthasami r Gopala	113
Rashmitty	20 83	Tiruchuran Perumal r Sangudien	873
Thakoor Fatesingji r Ramasji Dalal	845	Tirumala r Pingalai	819
Thakuran Dalara r Pai Jany Pal	99	Tirumala-sami Pedli r Rama Sami	76
Thakurani Tara Kumari r Chatur		Tiruvengada Arvanar r Panra
Ibuji	609	sami Navak	641 647
Thakur Dass r Jairaj Singh	760	Tisledit Peadi r Mahar Ali	530
Thakur Caruradhwaia r Kunwar		Tikce Dibee r Abdal Khan	859
Shaparam	441	Tollemiche In re	211 277 413
Thakur San h r Phortraj Singh	740 752	Tolman In re	512
Thama r Kandas	370	Tolke Miner r Maria Marera
Thamman Panai r Maharajah of		Cornelus	836
Viliana-rum	873	Tolsey Das r Premji Thevar das	602 700
Thavammal r Kuppana Kunlan	239 706	Tophar r McCretor	942
Ther Sher Maun Ra	131	Tribal Ali r Charamun Singh	622
Thcknes r Bromlow	820	Trento Padway Co r Cyprian
Thimma Pedli e Chenna Pedli	725	of Trent	431
Thacraja r Cyana Sambanthia	719	Tota r Emp	929
Thurukumarasan Chetti e Subbarava		Tota Ram r Harabinil	210 862, 864
Chetti	622 722	Tota Pam r Mohun Lal	430 466
Thomas r Connell	192	Townsend r Strangro m	4
Thomas e David	969	Townshenl Peersie Case	446
Thomas r Jenkins	137	Tracy Peersie Case	421 446
Thomas r Morgan	251	Trail Asa r Shutter Chunnai	579 582, 583
Thomas e Newton	914 915	Travers r Flanlell	614
Thomas e Secretary of State f India		Treelchun Loy r Paj Kaben	711
in Council	902	Treshitt r Lambert	592
Thompson r Terani n	144, 147	Tribhuvandas Jekusan las e Krishna
Thomson r Anson	225, 259	ram Kuberam	664
Thomson r Hall	809	Trocam Panachand r Bombay
Thorne e Heard	124	Baroda, etc Pr Co	478
Thornhill e Thornhill	996	Trocomdas Coovera r Sri Sri Gopi
Thunder r Warren	594	nath	792

	PAGE		PAGE
Vasanji v Haribhai	518 520 544	Venkata Reddi, In re	914
Vasanji Haribhai v Lali Akhu	865	Venkata Row, In re	421, 929
Vasanji Moraji v Chanda Bibi	729, 858	Venkatasaam v R	292 293
Vasta Balwant v Secretary of State	731, 749, 755 756	Venkatasaam v Venkatreddi	167, 172 179
Vasudeva Bhatlu v Narasamma	634	Venkatasaubhiah Chetty v Govinda
Vasudeva Mudaliar v Srinivasa Pillai	601	rajulu Naidu	597 607
Vasudev Daji v Babaji Ranu	878	Venkatiaswami Nayakkam v Subba
	871, 872 877	Rao	406
Vat Vatta Nair v Kenath Puther		Venkatasa v Sengoda	608
Vittie	706	Venkatratnam v Reddish	619 619
Vavasseur v Vavasseur	925	Venkatayyar v Venkata Subbaya	606 607
Vaughan v Martin	992	Venour's Settled States In re	99
Vedanayagar Mudaliar v Ve		Vermicombe v Butler	809
dimal	411	Verabhai Ajubhai v Bai Hirabai	475
Vedavalli v Narayana	699 703	Vesoni Moraji v Chanda Bibi	729 858
Veeramma v Chenna Reddi	744	Vimpakshappa v Shibappa	725
Veerappa Kivundan v Ramasami		Vinayak v Collector of Bombay	758 786
Kavundan	733	Vinayak Narsingh v Datto Govind	703
Veeraraghava Aiyangar v Sauri		Vinayak v Govind	839 840
Aiyangar	538	Vincent v Cole	506 507 597
Velayuthan Pillai v Subberoy Pillai	749	Virabhai Ajubhai v Bai Hirabai	710
Veliyammal v Katba Cletti	713	Virgo v Virgo	411
Velliah Kone v Emp	983	Virjivandas Madhavdass v Maho
Vengama Naikar v Raghavacharry	724	med Ali	664
Venkaji Krishna v Lakshman Devji	873	Vishnu v Krishnan	173 860
Venkaji Sridhar v Vishnu Babaji	276	Vishnu Ramchandra v Ganesh Satho	609 610 628, 640
Venkamma v Venkataramma	782	Vishnu Yeshawant v New York Life
Venkata Chandrappa v Venka		Insurance Co	907 908
tarama Ieda	493	Vishvanath Charli v Subraya
Venkatachella Clettia v Sam		Shevappa	247
patbu Chettiar	897 998	Vissani v Sbaipurji Burjorji	588
Venkata Chetty v Aiyanna Goundan	868 878		590 616 621
Venkatadri v Peda Venkayamma	870	Vithaldas v Secretary of State for Venkata Gopala v Lakshmi Ven		India	752 757 671, 876
kama	701	Vithol Mahadeb v Muhammad
Venkata Gopal v Rangappa	871	Husen	583
Venkata Krishnamma v Annapur		Vithu Govinda v Ranji Yelluji	751
namma	789	Viyapuri v Sonamma	723
Venkata Narasimha v Bhashya		Volant v Soyer	111 996
Karlu	482	Volkart Bros v Vettivelu Nadan	190 191
Venkatamarasimha Naidu v Dun La		Vyajuri v Sonamma	757
modi Kettaya	476	Vytilinga v Venkatachella	167 171 179
Venkatappa Naik v Subba Naik	415
Venkatarama Ayyar v Venkata		W
Subrahmaniam	393	Wadbeer v I I Co.	895
Venkataramanna v Chavala	234	Wadlington v Roberts	212
Venkataramanna v Varamma	724	Wafadar Khan v I	1011
Venkataratnam v Reddish	618 619 622	Wagstaff v Watson	237
Venkataratnam Naidu v Collect v of		Walil mossa v Durgalass	880
Godavari	717	Wajibun v Kadir Buksh	240 601
Venkatarama Aiyar v Venkatarama		Wajid Hossain v Nankoo Singh	711
Aiyar	81	Wajid Khan v Fwaz Ali Khan	760
		Wake v Harrop	6 637

PAGE		PAGE
Walcott v American Life, etc, Society	794	West v Lawday	664
Waldrige v Kennison	258	Westinghouse v M R Co	908, 909
Wali Ahmad v Ajudha Kunda	814	Westmacott v Westmacott	374
Wali Ahmed v Tota Meah	757	Weston v Etnes	608
Walker, In re	741	Weston v Peary Mohan Das	115, 467, 782, 786, 793, 889, 898, 906, 967
Walker v Atmaram	212 747	Whaley v Carlisle	331
Walker v Barron	212	Wharam v Routledge	999
Walker v Frohisher	1009	Wharton v Lewis	931, 946
Walker v Wilsber	257 258 259	Wheatley v Williams	904 905
Walker v Case	744 797, 887	Wheeler v LeMarchant	900, 901, 902, 907 909
Wallace v Jefferson	908	Whicker v Hume	401 603 778
Wallace v Small	230 901	Whistler's Case	766
Wallingford v Mutual Society Co	606	Whitaker v Izod	910
Walls v Lattel	641 642	Whitcomb v Whiting	240 241
Walls v Acheson	931 934	White v Dowling	252
Walpole v Alexander	928	White v Greenish	828 873
Walsham v Stainton	905 906	White v White	224
Wallean v Fenwick	124	Whitehead v Scott	525
Walter v Haynes	212 839	Whitelock v Musgrove	534 801
Wamra Ramchandra v Dhondiba Krishnaji	6 6 17	Whiteley, In re	229, 230, 232 240 254, 891
Ward v Hobbs	205	Whitefield v Bland	597
Ward v Lord Londesborough	211, 213	Whitnash v George	244
Ward v Marshall	904	Whiton v Snyder	433
Wara Ali Khan v Pursotam Naram	815	Whittaker v Morrison	748
Warren v Warren	211 213	Whyte v Bhairab Maji	721
Wasinda Ram v Sita Ram	831	Wiedemann v Walpole	149, 140 925
Waterpark v Fennell	591	Wight v Rogers	537
Watkins v Rymill	204 763	Wilke v Case	5
Watkins v Vince	139 232	William Abbott, In the goods of	567
Watson Ex parte	636	William Cornell, In the goods of	568
Watson v Gopee Soonduree	1014	Williams v Bridges	251
Watson v Little	409	Williams v Curtis	164
Watson v Mohesh Naram Roy	141	Williams v E I Co	794
Watson v Smith	721	Williams v Gravel	329
Watson v Woodman	244	Williams v Hall	5
Watson & Co v Govt	777	Williams v Innes	251
Watts & Co v Mohendra Nath	365	Williams v Richards	138
Watson & Co v Robin Mohun	246	Williams v Star Newspapers Co	896
Watson & Co v Nukee Mundul	932	Williams v Thomas	259
Watts & Co v Rance Shurut	872	Williams v Walcott	1009
Watts v Cresswell	835	Williams v Williams	116 224, 852
Watts v Lawton	209	Williamson v Rover Cycle Co	783
Weatherall v Dillon	724	William Stone, Trial of ..	114
Welb v Byng	619 660	Willoughby v Willoughby	478
Webb v East	901 910	Wilmott v Barber	845
Webb v Fox	746	Wilson v Bowie	998
Webb v Smallwood	925	Wilson v Oakes	667
Webb v Smith	901	Wilson v Rastall	903
Webster v Corbett	662	Wilson v Wilson	197
Webster v Friedberg	1009	Wilm v Adamson	151
Weeks v Sparke	310	Wing v Angrave	160, 7-8
Wells v L. T. & S. Ry Co	99	Wm. v L.	888
Wentworth v Lloyd	786 907

	PAGE		PAGE
Winterscale v Sarat Chunder	812	Wutzler v Sharpe	781
Wintle In re	374	Wuzzer Ali v Kali Koon ar	508 518
Wise v Am runnissa Khatun	751	Wyatt v Bateman	350 497
Wise v Bhoobun Movee	687 716	Wynne v Tyrwhitt	578
Wise v Sunduloonessa Chodranee	486 487, 493
		Y
Witmer v Schlatter	410	Yado v Behari Lal	638 640
Woldridge v Kennison	259	Yanumula Venkayamah v Boochia
Wolmershasen In re	250	Yenkondora	703
Wolverton In re	667	Yaralalamma v Annakala	398 399
Womesh Chunder v Chundy	1011 1014	Yarakalma v Naranema	399
Womesh Chun ler v Shama Sundari	516 519	Yasamati v Chundra Pappayya	851
Wood v Bra id ck	241	Yashvant Puttee v Radhabai	304 831 853
Wood v Cooper	997	Yasim Sah b v Fkambara A yar	837
Wood v Corporation of the Town of Calcutta	897	Yas n t R	26 307 399
Wood v Durham	450	Yates v Pym	647
Wood v Mackinnon	945	Yenaman Ira S taramisami v
Woodlur v Obear	433	N data a Sanyasi	714
Woodcock v Houldsworth	211 213	Yeshwadabai v Ramchan Ira	439 597
Woodward v Coulstone	518		817 846
Woodley v Coventry	881	Yesuvadiyan v Subba Nacien	371 999
Woolley v N L R Co	904 908 909	Young Ex parte	945
Woods v Cox	459	Yo ng v Brown	431
Woolmer v Daly	371 733	Young v Grote	880
Woolway v Powe	246	Young Manufaturing Co In re	103
Wooma Churn v Haradhun Mo		Yusa Khatun v Ramnath Se	788
joom far	707	Yu uf Hussa n v Emperor	637
Wooma Soondaree v Kishore Mohun	716
Woomesh Chun ler v Rashmoni Dassi	109 733 734	Z
Worthington v Scribner	898	Zabela Bhai v Sheo Charan	874
Wright v Beckett	127 974 975	Zaher Begum v Sana Begum	320
Wright v Doe d Tatham	353	Zamindar Serimatu v Vripa
Wright v Holligate	767	Cletta	818 856
Wright v Lamson	809	Zamora of Calcut v Narayanan
Wright v Sanderson	534	Musad	872
Wright v Tatlam	147 148 149	Zeata v Emperor	27 774
	108 473 1009	Zeenot Ali v Ram Doyal	664
Wright v Ca c	2 1	Zemndar of Ramna l v Zem n lar of
Wuhedun v Wussee Hossein	799	Yett apooram	696
		Z Inssa Ladli v Mot dev I atan lev	510 601

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

THE Bibliography here given is by no means strictly complete. Omitted therefrom are—(1) Works on psychology, logic and rhetoric, (2) Works of the civilian and scholastic jurists [such as the Corpus Juris Glossatum, Heinkecius on the Pandects, Mascardus De Probationibus, Menochius De Presumptionibus, Endemann's Beweislehre, Weiske's Rechtslexicon, Savigny's Römische Recht, Puffendorf, Grotius, Cujacius Voet, Hertius, Strykius, Puchta, Heffter and others], (3) Works on Continental law; (4) Works incidentally, but not specifically and directly, dealing with the subject of Evidence [as, for example, Russell on Crimes, Foster's Crown Law, Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, Blackstone's Commentaries, Collinson, Pope, and Shelford, on Lunacy, Bishop on works treating of the much matter relating sub hoc 'Estoppel',azines [of which there is at part well known present or past use by the profession—Ed

(A) CHRONOLOGICAL CLASSIFICATION.

(WORKS ON THE ENGLISH, SCOTCH AND AMERICAN LAWS OF EVIDENCE)

1735 The Law of Evidence wherein all the cases that have yet been printed in any of our Law Books or Trials, and which in any wise relate to points of Evidence are collected and methodically digested under their proper heads, with necessary table to the whole

2nd Ed., London, 1735

[The anonymous author observes in his Preface that prior to this collection there was nothing of this nature extant besides the 11th Chapter of a Book entitled Trials per Pais which was very defective. Ed.]

1744 NELSON (W.)—The Law of Evidence Third Edition

London, 1744

1756 GILBERT—The Law of Evidence, by Lord Chief Baron Gilbert.

London, 1756

[2nd Ed. (*), 3rd Fl. 1769, 4th Ed. 1777, 5th Ed. 1791—1796, 6th Fl. 1801, by James Sedgwick. This is the first of the recognised text books on the subject. Mr Best (Fr p 70) says that it is to Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, that we are principally indebted for reducing our law of evidence into a system. Ed.]

1761 Theory of Evidence

[This anonymous work is in substance Part VI of the anonymous first edition (1767) of what afterwards appeared as Butler's Anal. Præf., it is found also in all subsequent editions. Thayer's Cases on Evidence p. 1024]

London, 1761

1801 PEAKE—A Compendium of the Law of Evidence, by Thomas Peake.

London, 1801.

1802 McNALLY—The Rule of Evidence on Pleas of the Crown illustrated from Printed and Manuscript Trials and Cases, by Leonard McNally, 2 vols.

London and Dublin, 1802

1810 SWIFT—A Digest of the Law of Evidence in Civil and Criminal Cases, by Zephaniah Swift, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the State of Connecticut.

Hartford, 1810.

1812 McKINNON—The Philosophy of Evidence, by Daniel M'Kinnon.

London, 1812

1814 PHILLIPS AND AMES—A treatise on the Law of Evidence, by the Right Hon S March Phillips and Ames, and (subsequently) Thomas James Arnold

London, 1814.

[2nd Ed, 1815, 3rd Ed, 1817, 4th Ed, 1820, 5th Ed, 1822, 6th Ed, 1824, 7th Ed, 1829, 8th Ed, 1838, 9th Ed, 1843, 10th Ed, 1852 (latest) Ed]

1820 GLASSFORD—An Essay on the Principles of Evidence and their application to subject of judicial enquiry, by James Glassford

Edinburgh, 1820.

1824 STARKIE—A practical treatise on the Law of Evidence, by Thomas Starkie, 3 vols

London, 1824

[2nd Ed, 1833 (2 vols), 3rd Ed, 1842 (3 vols), 4th Ed, 1853 (latest) by George Morley Dowdeswell and John George Malcolm There is an American Edition (10th, 1876) taken from the fourth English Edition with references to American Cases by George Sharwood Philadelphia, 1876, Ed]

1825 BENTHAM—A treatise on Judicial Evidence extracted from the Manuscripts of Jeremy Bentham, Esq, by M Dumont, Member of the Representative and Sovereign Council of Geneva Translated into English

London, 1825.

[A translation of Dumont's 'Traite des Preuves Judiciaires' published in 1823, v post, 1827 Ed]

1825 ESPINASSE—A practical treatise on the settling of evidence for trial at Nisi Prius and on the preparing and arranging the necessary proofs, by Isaac Espinasse

London, 1825

[This is a 2nd Ed quart date of first Ed]

1825 UNACKF—Evidence forming a title of the Code of legal proceedings according to the plan proposed by Crofton Unacke, Esq, by S B Harrison

London, 1825

[An early attempt at codification Ed]

1827 BENTHAM—Rationale of Judicial Evidence specially applied to English Practice from the Manuscripts of Jeremy Bentham, Esq, Benchet of Lincoln's Inn, in five volumes Ed John S Mill

London, 1827.

[The papers from which this work was extracted were written by Bentham at various times from the year 1802 to 1817 on all the branches of the Law of Evidence as it was then understood of that branch of law in modern times. Speculations on Judicial Evidence had already been published in a more condensed form by M Dumont of Geneva in the "Traite des Preuves Judiciaires," published in 1823, an English translation of which appeared in 1825 See ante, and the Preface of J S Mill. As

Professor Wigmore says in less than three generations nearly every reform which Bentham advocated for the Law of Evidence has come to pass Law of Evidence vol iv § 2251 Ed.]

1827 MATHEWS, (J H)—A treatise on the doctrine of presumption and presumptive Evidence as affecting the title to real and personal property

London, 1827

1827 ROSCOE—Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence on the trial of Actions at Law Prius

London 1827

[Quare title of first edition 2nd Ed 1831 3rd Ed 1834 4th Ed 1836 5th Ed 1839 6th Ed 1844 7th Ed 1849 8th Ed 1851 9th Ed 1858 10th Ed 1861 11th Ed 1866 12th Ed 1870 13th Ed 1875 14th Ed 1879 15th Ed 1884 16th Ed 1891 17th Edn 1900 2 vols 18th Ed 1907 by Maurice Powell Ed.]

1830 GRADE—A practical treatise on the General Principles and Elementary Rules of the Law of Evidence by Richard Grade

London 1830

1831 WIGRAM—An Examination of the Rules of Law respecting the admission of extrinsic evidence in aid of the interpretation of wills by the Right Hon Sir James Wigram

London 1831

[2nd Ed 1835 3rd Ed 1840 4th Ed 1858 (latest) by W Knox Wigram Ed.]

1834 TAIT—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in Scotland by George Tait

Edinburgh 1834

[This is the 3rd Edition by Adam Urquhart Ed.]

1835 ROSCOE—Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence in Criminal cases

London 1835

[Quare title of first edition 2nd Ed 1840 3rd Ed 1846 4th Ed 1857 5th Ed 1861 6th Ed 1867 7th Ed 1868 8th Ed 1874 9th Ed 1878 10th Ed 1884 11th Ed 1890 12th Ed by A P Percival Kepp 1898 1 vol Ed 13th Edn. (1908) by Herman Cohen]

1836 GRESLEY—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in the Courts of Equity by Richard Newcombe Gresley

London, 1836

[A work dealing with the system of evidence prevalent in the Court of Chancery, 2nd Ed 1847 (latest) by Christopher Alderson Calvert Ed.]

1838 WILLS—An Essay on the Principles of Circumstantial Evidence, by William Wills

London, 1838

[Quare date of 2nd Ed 3rd Ed 1850 4th Ed 1862, 6th Ed., edited by Alfred Wills Ed.]

1842 GREENLEAF—A treatise on the Law of Evidence, by Simon Greenleaf, LL.D

Philadelphia 1842

[1st Ed in one vol. 2nd Ed 1844—1846, 3rd Ed 2 vols, 1846 quare as to subsequent editions until 1896, the date of the last edition in 3 vols., revised with additions by William Draper Lewis who states in his preface that in upwards of 20 000 cases on evidence the Courts have referred to some section of Mr Greenleaf's work to support their decisions. Ed.]

1842 JOY—A treatise on the Admissibility of Confessions and Challenge of Jurors in Criminal cases in England and Ireland, by Henry H Joy

Dublin, 1842.

1843 LOWANES, (J J)—A few brief remarks on Lord Denman's Bill for improving the Law of Evidence

London, 1843

1844 BEST—A treatise on presumption of Law and Fact with the theory and rules of presumptive or Circumstantial proof in Criminal cases, by W N. Best

London, 1844

[The 1844 Ed is the only edition of this work Ed]

1844 TOZER (J)—On the measure of the force of testimony in cases of legal evidence

London, 1844

1848 TAYLOR—A treatise on the Law of Evidence as administered in England and Ireland with illustrations from American and other foreign Laws by His Honour Judge Pitt Taylor

London, 1848

[Quære title of first edition, 2nd Ed, 1855, 3rd Ed, 1858, 4th Ed, 1864, 5th Ed, 1868 6th Ed 1872, 7th Ed., 1878 8th Ed, 1885, 9th Ed., 1895 10th Ed., 1906, by W E Hume Williams & c, 11th Ed., 1900]

1849 BEST—The Principles of the Law of Evidence with elementary rules for conducting the examination and cross examination of witnesses, by W M Best

London, 1849

[2nd Ed, 1855 3rd Ed, 1860, 4th Ed., 1866, 5th Ed, 1870, 6th Ed., 1875, 7th Ed. 1883 8th Ed 1893 by J M Lely, with Notes to American and Canadian Cases, by Charles F Chamberlayne of the Boston Bar 9th Ed, 1902 10th Ed., 1906, 11th Ed., 1911]

1850 MAUNSELL (W T)—The Law of Accessories in felony and the evidence of accomplices 1850

1850 PHILLIMORE—The History and Principles of the Law of Evidence as illustrating our social progress, by John George Phillimore

London, 1850

1855 DICKSON—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in Scotland by William Gillespie Dickson 2 vols

Edinburgh, 1855

[2nd Ed, 1864, 3rd, (?) 1887, by P J Hamilton Grieron Ed.]

1856 POWELL—Powell's Principles and Practice of the Law of Evidence

London, 1856

[Quære title of first edition, 2nd Ed., 1859, 3rd Ed., 1868, 4th Ed., 1875, 5th Ed 1885 6th Ed., 1892, 7th Ed. by John Cutler and Charles F Cagney, 9th Edn.(?) The law is here reduced to the form of general rules with a running commentary thereto attached. Ed.]

1858 STEPHEN (Sir J F J)—The practice of interrogating persons accused of Crime

London, 1858

1861. RAM—A treatise on Facts as subjects of Enquiry by a Jury, by James Ram
London, 1861.
1861. WORSLEY (F)—Expediency of passing an act to permit defendants in criminal Courts and their wives or husbands to testify on oath
London, 1861.
1863. BLUNDELL—(B) Testimony on Oath in Criminal Cases. 1863.
1863. STEPHEN (Sir J. F. J.)—On trial by jury and the evidence of Experts.
London, 1863
1865. BADDELY—Privilege of confessions, religious, by Baddely.
- 1865 WADDILOVE (A)—On the amendment of the Law of Evidence, in order to admit the testimony of parties in all Civil Suits and of defendants in Criminal Trials
London, 1865
1868. BURRILL—A treatise on the Nature, Principles and the Rules of Circumstantial Evidence, especially that of the presumptive kind in criminal cases, by A. M. Burrill.
New York, 1868.
1868. NORTON (J. B.)—Notes on evidence extracted from the works of Best, etc. 1868
- 1870 KERR (W. W.)—The Law of Discovery,
London, 1870.
1871. HOPWOOD (E. H.)—On the law relating to Confessions in Criminal Cases
London, 1871.
1871. MAURICE (T. D.)—Ought any person to be excluded from giving evidence on the ground of religious unbelief
London, 1871.
1872. BIGELOW—A treatise on the Law of Estoppel and its application in Practice, by Melville M. Bigelow.
Boston, 1872
- [Quære date of 2nd and 3rd Ed., 4th Ed., 1886, 5th Ed., 1890 (latest) Ed.]
1876. STEPHEN—A Digest of the Law of Evidence, by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen.
London, 1876.
- [Reprinted with slight alterations, September, 1876, December, 1876, with many alterations, 1877, 2nd Ed., 1881, 3rd Ed., 1887, 4th Ed., 1893 (latest) There is also an American Edition (Boston, 1886), from the fourth English Edition, with Notes from American case, including those of J. W. May Ed.]
1877. WHARTON—A Commentary on the Law of Evidence in Civil Issues, by Francis Wharton, LL.D
Philadelphia, 1877.
- [2nd Ed., 1879, 3rd Ed., 1888 (latest) Ed.]
1879. NASMITH (D.)—The institutes of English adjective law (procedure in Court) embracing an outline of the Law of Evidence
London, 1879.

1879 PHILLIPS—Famous cases of Circumstantial Evidence by S M Phillips Jersey 1879

[This is the 4th American Edition of the English work by the author of Phillips on Evidence Ed.]

1880 BEST—An Exposition of the Practice relative to the Right to Begin and Reply, by W M Best

Burlington N J 1880

[This is an American Edition of the English work. Quære date Ed.]

1880 WHARTON—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in Criminal Issue by Francis Wharton LL.D 8th Ed

Philadelphia 1880

[8th Ed 1880 9th Ed 1894 10th Ed 1912 Previous to 1880 the date of the 8th Ed. this book was one of the volumes of the same author's Treatise on Criminal Law the editions of which are as follows 1st Ed. 1846 2nd Ed. 1852 3rd Ed. 1855 4th Ed. 1857 5th Ed. 1861 6th Ed. 1868 7th Ed. 1874 In the same manner Dr Wharton's Treatise on Criminal Pleading and Practice 9th Ed. (1889) was previous to 1880 the title of the 8th Ed. one of the volumes of his abovementioned Treatise on Criminal Law Ed.]

1882 KIRKPATRICK (J)—Digest of the Scottish Law of Evidence 1882

1883 REYNOLDS—The Theory of the Law of Evidence as established in the United States and of the Conduct of the Examination of Witnesses by W Reynolds

Chicago 1883

[2nd Ed. 1890 3rd Ed. 1897 Ed.]

1883 ROGERS—The Law of Expert Testimony by H W Rogers LL.D

St Louis Mo 1883

[2nd Ed. 1891 rewritten and enlarged Ed.]

1884 EVEREST AND STRODE—The Law of Estoppel by L F Everest and E Strode

London 1884

1885 GRAY—A treatise on Communication by Telegraph by Morris Gray

Boston 1885

[A fourth of this book deals with the subject from the point of view of the Law of Evidence Ed.]

1886 LAWSON—The Law of Presumptive Evidence including presumptions both of law and of fact and the burden of proof both in Civil and Criminal cases by John D Lawson

San Francisco 1886

[The law of presumptive evidence is here reduced to definite rules Ed.]

1886 LAWSON—The Law of Expert and Opinion Evidence reduced to rules by John D Lawson

San Francisco 1886

1886 WOOD—Practice Evidence for ready use in the trial of causes by H G Wood

New York, 1886

1887 RAPALJE—A treatise on the Law of Witnesses by Stewart Rapalje

New York 1887

1887 SICHEL—The Practice relating to Witnesses in all matters and proceedings Civil and Criminal at and before the trial or hearing both in the superior and inferior Courts by Walter S Sichel

London 1887

1887. WARNER—Law of Evidence under the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of New York, by Henry E Warner .

Albany, 1887

1888 CABABÉ—An Essay on the Principles of Estoppel, by M Cababé

London, 1888

1889 HAGEMAN—Privileged Communications as a branch of Legal Evidence, by John Frelinghuysen Hageman

New Jersey, 1889

1889 JAMES—The Ohio Law of Opinion Evidence, expert and non expert, by Francis B James

Cincinnati, 1889

1891 ABBOTT—A brief on the modes of proving the facts most frequently in issue or collaterally in question on the trial of Civil or Criminal cases, by Austin Abbott of the New York Bar

New York, 1891

[3rd Ed. 1912]

[By the same author A brief for the trial of civil issues before a jury' and "A brief for the trial of criminal cases See also 1895 Ed]

1892 HARRIS—A treatise on the Law of Identification, by G E Harris

Albany, 1892

[Identity of persons and things—animate and inanimate—living and dead—Mistaken identity—corpus delicti—opinion evidence The author omits the subjects of poisoning and drowning Ed]

1892 PHIPSON—The Law of Evidence, by Sidney L Phipson

London, 1892

[2nd Ed, 1898, 3rd Ed, 1902, 4th Ed, 1907, 5th Ed, 1911, 6th Ed, 1921]

1892 RICE—The General Principles of the Law of Evidence with their application to the trial of civil actions and criminal cases, 3 vols, by Frank S Rice

Rochester, N. Y., 1892

[The first two volumes deal with civil actions and the third with criminal cases Ed]

1892 THAYER—Select Cases on Evidence at the Common Law with notes, by J B Thayer, LL.D Professor of Law at Harvard University

Cambridge, 1892

[“The only writer who has added much to our knowledge of the principles of evidence since Bentham” Sir William Markby in Preface to his Indian Evidence Act]

1893 BROWNE—A treatise on the Admissibility of Parol Evidence in respect to written instruments, by Irving Browne

New York, 1893.

1894 HAGAN—A treatise on Disputed Handwriting and the determination of genuine from forged signatures The character and composition of inks and their determination by chemical tests The effect of age on documents, by W E Hagan, Expert in Handwriting

New York, 1894

[See also Le Faux—Maquillage, Decalquage Graphotypie par Gustave Hasse, Paris 1893 Ed]

1894 WILLS—The Theory and Practice of the Law of Evidence, by William Wills

London, 1894

- 1895 ABBOTT—Select cases in the Law of Evidence as applied during the examination of witnesses, by Austin Abbott, LL.D
New York, 1895
- 1895 WILLIAMS AND MACKLIN—The taking of Evidence on Commission, by W E Hume Williams and A Romer Macklin
London, 1895
- 1896 JONES—The Law of Evidence in Civil Cases, by Burr W Jones, 3 vols
San Francisco, 1896
- 1896 THAYER—A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, Part I, Development of Trial by Jury, by J B Thayer, LL.D
Boston 1896
- 1896 WILL—A treatise on the Law of Circumstantial Evidence, by Arthur P Will Philadelphia, 1896
- 1897 BROWNE—Short Studies in Evidence, By I Browne
U S 1897
- 1897 GILLETT, (J H)—Indirect and Collateral Evidence
U S, 1897
- 1898 ALLEN, (W B)—The Criminal Evidence Act, with a short history of the Act by Sir H B Poland, 1898
- 1898 BRADNER—Rules of Evidence as prescribed by the Common Law for the trial of actions and proceedings, by George W Bradner
Chicago, 1898
- 1898 BUTTERWORTH—The Criminal Evidence Act By A R Butterworth
London, 1898.
- 1898 JELF—The Law of Evidence in Criminal cases under the Act of 1898, by Ernest Arthur Jelf
London, 1898
- 1898 MOROAN, (C B)—Criminal Evidence Act, 1898
- 1898 STEPHEN, (SIR H)—Prisoners on Oath, present and future
London, 1898
- 1898 THAYER—A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, by James Bradley Thayer, LL.D
London, 1898
- [This is the full work of which the volumes published in 1898 contained the first four Chapters. Ed.]
London, 1898
- 1899 STRAKER—Compendium of Evidence, by D Augustus Straker
Detroit, 1899
- 1900 EWART, (J S)—Exposition of the Principles of Estoppel by misrepresentation 1900.
- 1902 CANADA—The Criminal Code of Canada and the Canadian Evidence Act Montreal 1902 and Toronto 1910

1902 EWBANK, (L B)—Indiana Trial Evidence

Indianapolis, 1902

1902 TREMECAR, (W J)—Criminal Code and Law of Criminal Evidence in Canada

Toronto, 1902

1903 10 CAMP (E W) AND CROW, (J F)—Encyclopædia of Evidence, 14 volumes

U S, 1903-10

1903 WELLMAN, (F L)—The art of cross examination

N Y, 1903

1904 BODINGTON—Outline of the French Law of Evidence, By O L Bodington

1901

1904 ELLIOTT (B K and W F)—Treatise on the Law of Evidence
4 vols

Indianapolis, 1904 5

1904 WIGMORE (J H)—Treatise on the Law of Evidence 1901 15
5 vols

1904 WIGMORE—Treatise on Evidence An Encyclopædia of Statutes and cases until March 1904 Canadian Edition in 4 vols, by J H Wigmore,
5 vols 1905

1905 GULSON (J R)—Philosophy of Proof in its relation to the English
Law of Judicial Evidence 1905

1905 KNOWLES (V D)—Evidence in Brief 1905

[2nd Ed, 1910]

1906 CHADMAN (C E)—Criminal Procedure and Evidence

1906

1906 HUGHES (T W)—Illustrated Treatise on the Law of Evidence

U S, 1906

1906 KENNEDY (R L)—Trial Evidence

U S, 1906

1906 WILSHERE (A N M)—Outlines of evidence and procedure in an action in the King's Bench Division 1906

[2nd Ed 1913]

1907 COCKLE—Leading Cases on the Law of Evidence By E Cockle
1907

[2nd Ed 1911 3rd Ed 1915]

1907 HAMMON (L L)—On Evidence

U S, 1907

1907 McKELVY (J J)—Handbook of the Law of Evidence, 2nd Edition U. S, 1907.

1907 REYNOLDS (A L)—Brief Summary of the Law of Evidence 1907

- 1908 KINGSFORD (R E)—Evidence and Practice at Trials in Civil Cases
Toronto, 1908
[Another Ed, in 1911]
- 1908 PRIPSON (S L)—Manual of the Law of Evidence, 1908
[2nd Ed, 1914, 3rd Ed, 1921]
- 1910 UNDERHILL (H C)—Treatise on the Law of criminal evidence
Indianapolis, 1910
- 1911 CHAMBERLAYNE—Treatise on the Modern Law of Evidence By
C F Chamberlayne
N Y, 1911
- 1911 DE COLYAR (H A)—Notes on the Presumption of Death
London, 1911
- 1911 MAUDE (W C)—Justice's Handbook of the Law of Evidence 1911
- 1912 HIBBERT (W N)—Law of Evidence 1912
[2nd Ed, 1915 3rd Ed 1920 4th Ed 1922]
- 1912 REYNOLDS (W)—Trial Evidence The Rules of Evidence and the Conduct of Examination of Witnesses
U S, 1912
- 1912 RICHARDSON (W P)—Outlines of Evidence
U S, 1912
- 1913 TROCKMORTEN (A H)—Illustrative Cases on Evidence
U S, 1913
- 1913 TURNER (F G)—New Jersey Law of Evidence
U S, 1913
- 1913 WIGMORE (J H)—Principles of judicial proof
U S, 1913
- 1913 WIGMORE (J H)—Select Cases on the Law of Evidence Second Edition
U S, 1913
- 1914 CARLSON (M)—Handwriting Testimony and kindred subjects
California, 1914
- 1914 HENRY (J M)—Pennsylvania Trial Evidence
U S, 1914
- 1914 MACNEAL (J A)—Law of Evidence in Civil and Criminal Cases
U S, 1914
- 1915 LOCKHART (W S)—Handbook of the Law of Evidence for North Carolina
U S, 1915
- 1915 PERAINS (W D)—Evidence by Survivor
U S, 1915
- 1915 TELGARTH (J B C)—Law of Hearsay Evidence 1915
- 1915 WIGMORE (J H)—Pocket code of the rules of evidence in trials at law
U S, 1915.

- | | | |
|-------|---|--------------|
| 1915 | WROTTESELEY (F J)—Examination of witnesses in Court, including examination in chief, cross-examination and re-examination | 1915 |
| 1916 | CARTER (J P)—Law of Evidence | U S, 1916 |
| 1916 | WILLIS (J W)—A digest of the rules and practice as to interrogatories for the examination of witnesses in Courts of Equity and Common Law with precedents | London, 1916 |
| 1917. | HOLT, (L V) Outlines of the Rules of Evidence | 1917 |
| 1917 | HUGHES (T W)—Pocket Digest of Evidence | U S, 1917 |
| 1917 | WATSON (C S)—Inquiry into the basis and development of the principal rules of evidence in English Law | 1917 |
| 1918 | ABBOTT—Trial Evidence By A Abbott 3rd Edition 3 vols | U S, 1918 |
| 1919 | ARCHER—The Law of Evidence By G I Archer | U S 1919 |
| 1919 | CHAMBERLAIN—Handbook on Evidence By C F Chamberlayne | U S, 1919 |
| 1921 | HUGHES (T W)—Cases on the Law of Evidence | U S, 1921. |
| 1921 | MEDINA (H R)—Summary of the Law of Pleading, Practice and Evidence in the State of New York 4th Edition | U S, 1921. |

WORKS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE IN INDIA

- 1858 NORTON—The Law of Evidence applicable to the Courts of the Late East India Company explained in a course of lectures delivered by the Hon'ble John Bruce Norton Barrister at Law Advocate General of Madras

Madras. 1858

[2nd Ed 1869 3rd quære date 4th Ed 186, 5th Ed, quære date, 6th Ed, 1868, 7th Ed 1869 This book contains the substance of the lectures the author delivered as Professor of Law in the Madras Presidency College]

- 1862 GOODEVE—The Law of Evidence as administered in England and applied to India, by Joseph Goodeve, Barrister at law, Acting Master of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, and Lecturer on Law and Equity in the Presidency College.

Calcutta, 1862

[In the preface the author says — Some progress had been made in the work before and character of the two works and the wideness of the field open to both, it was felt that there was still abundant room for each and the author persevered in his original design. It is trusted that the practical character to which at the same time it aspires will not make it useless to those of more advanced position*. The author subsequently, and in 1872 after the passing of the Evidence Act published a Supplement to this book. Ed.]

- 1907 MONNIER (E R)—The Law of Confessions
Calcutta, 1907
- 1908 JANAKI NATHA PALA—Indian Evidence Act of 1872 1908
- 1908 THIKAMLAL RANCHODLAL DESAI—Law of Evidence, English and Indian Bombay, 1908
- 1912 Guide to the principles of the Law of Evidence and the Indian Evidence Act
Madras 1912.
- 1913 CRANENBURGH (D E)—Criminal Evidence being the Indian Evidence Act
Calcutta 1913
- 1913 TAPAPADA BANDYOPADHYAYA—Indian Evidence Act as amended to 1899
Calcutta 1913
- 1914 KINNEY (A P)—Students' Guide to the Law of Evidence in India
Calcutta, 1914
- 1914 NARASIMHACHARI—Law relating to burden of proof in British India
Madras, 1914
- 1915 EGGAR (A)—A pocket book of Common Sense extracted from the case law relating to Evidence in British India
Rangoon, 1915
- 1915 MAHIMA CHANDRA SARKAR—The Students' Indian Evidence Act, 1872
Calcutta, 1915
- 1915 PRANASANKARA TIIPUSANKARA—The Law of Evidence simplified Surat 1915
- 1916 EGGAR (A) Evidence
Madras, 1916
- 1916 KAMALANANDA—Guide to the Indian Evidence Act, 1872
Gorakhpur 1916
- 1918 DONOGH (W R)—Principles of Circumstantial Evidence applicable to British India
Calcutta, 1918
- [1911 1921]
- 1918 HARENDRA NATH MAITRA—Case noted Indian Evidence Act, 1872
Silpur, 1918
- 1919 PATANLALA RANCHHODDARA AND DHIRAJLALA KESAVLALA THAKUR—The Indian Evidence Act
Bombay, 1919

(B) CLASSIFICATION BY NAMES OF AUTHORS

NOTE — For the works of the authors, see the entry given in the previous list against the date mentioned in this

(AUTHORS OF WORKS ON THE ENGLISH, SCOTCH AND AMERICAN LAWS OF EVIDENCE)

- | | |
|------------------------------|----------------------------|
| Abbott, 1891, 1895 | Lawson, 1886 |
| Allen, 1898 | Lockhart, 1915 |
| Anonymous, 1735, 1761 | Lowndes, 1843 |
| Archer, 1919 | Macklin, 1895 |
| Bentham, 1825, 1827 | Mac Nally, 1802 |
| Best, 1844, 1849, 1880, 1911 | Mac Neal, 1914 |
| Bigelow, 1872 | Mande, 1911 |
| Bodington, 1904 | Maurice, 1921 |
| Bradner, 1898 | McKelvey, 1907 |
| Bro vnc, 1893, 1897 | McKinnon, 1812 |
| Burnell, 1868 | Morgan, 1898 |
| Butterworth, 1898 | Nasmith, 1879 |
| Cababé, 1888 | Nelson, 1744 |
| Camp, 1903 | Norton, 1868 |
| Canadian Act, 1902 | Peale, 1801 |
| Carter, 1916 | Phillimore, 1850 |
| Chadwin, 1906 | Phillips, 1843, 1852, 1908 |
| Chamberlyne, 1911 1919 | Phipson, 1892 |
| Cockle, 1907, 1915 | Powell, 1858, 1910 |
| Davis, 1837 | Pam, 1861 |
| Dickson, 1855 | Rapalje, 1887 |
| Filho, 1904 | Reynolds, 1907 |
| Espinasse, 1825 | Rice, 1892 |
| Garde, 1830 | Richardson, 1912 |
| Gilbert, 1756 | Rogers, 1883 |
| Gillett, 1897 | Roscoe, 1827, 1833, 1908 |
| Glasford, 1820 | Starbce, 1824 |
| Gray, 1885 | Stephen, 1876, 1922 |
| Greenleaf, 1842 | Straker, 1899 |
| Gresley, 1836 | Swift, 1810 |
| Hagan, 1894 | Tait, 1834 |
| Hagemin 1889 | Taylor, 1818, 1906, 1920 |
| Hammon, 1907 | Thayer, 1892, 1896, 1898 |
| Harris 1892 | Throckmorton, 1913 |
| Harrison, 1825 | Tremecar, 1902 |
| Hibbert, 1912 | Turner, 1913 |
| Holt, 1917 | Underhill, 1912 |
| Hughes 1906 | Wadclove, 1865 |
| Hughes, 1917, 1921 | Warner, 1887 |
| Indemur & Thwaites | Watson, 1917 |
| James, 1889 | Wharton 1877, 1880 |
| Jell, 1898 | Wigmore 1905 1913, 1915. |
| Jones, 1896 | Wilt, 1896 |
| Joy, 1842 | Williams 1895 |
| Kingsford 1908 | Wills, 1838 1894 1907 |
| Kirkpatrick, 1882 | Wishere, 1906 |

Wood, 1886.

(AUTHORS OF WORKS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE IN INDIA)

- | | |
|-------------------|-----------------------|
| Banerji, 1896 | Kamalunands 1916 |
| Broughton 1893 | Kandersky, 1862 |
| Caspersz, 1893 | Kinnev, 1914 |
| Cranenburgh 1913 | Le Janu 1869 |
| Cunningham 1872 | Lewis 1828 |
| Desai, 1908 | Maitra 1918 |
| Eggar 1915 1916 | Markby 1897 |
| Field 1867 | Mitra (A. C.) 1895. |
| Goolvee 1862 1872 | Mitra and Sircar 1894 |
| Griffiths 1890 | Norton, 1858, 1877 |
| Gurleto 9121 | Pala, 1908 |
| Hukma Chand, 1894 | Pillai, 1898. |

Pranasankara, 1916
Raha, 1894
Ratanlal, 1919
Sarkar, 1915

Sircar, 1894
Stephen, 1872.
Tarapada, 1913
Whitworth, 1875

(C) CLASSIFICATION BY SUBJECTS TREATED OF.

NOTE—For the works of the authors, see the entry given in the Chronological List against the date mentioned in this

ACCESSORIES AND ACCOMPLICES

Blundell, 1863

Chaudhuri, 1903

Maunsell, 1850

ADVOCACY.

Morison, 1895.

BURDEN OF PROOF (See Act I of 1892, ss. 101—111)

Best, 1880

Lawson, 1896

Gulson, 1900

Narasimhachari, 1914

Wigmore, 1913

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Burrill, 1868

Phillips, 1879

Donogh, 1918

Will, 1896

Wills, 1838

COMMENTARIES ON THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT (Act I of 1872)

Banerji, 1896

Lewis, 1882

Broughton, 1893

Markby, 1897.

Caspersz, 1893

Mitra (A. C.) 1890

Cunningham, 1872

Mitra (B. K.) and Sarkar, 1894

Field, 1873, 1894

Norton, 1873

Goswami, 1872

Sarkar, 1894

Griffiths, 1890

Stephen, 1872

Whitworth, 1875

COMMUNICATION BY TELEGRAPH

Gray, 1885

CONFESSIONS AND CHALLENGE OF JURORS (See Act I of 1872, ss. 24—30)

Buddleley (Religious), 1865

Hopwood, 1871

Chaudhuri, 1903

Jay, 1842

Monnier, 1897

Notes—See also works on Criminal Evidence.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Wellman, 1903

Wrottesley, 1915

FSTOPPEL (See Act I of 1872, ss. 115—117)

Berglow, 1872

Caspersz, 1893

Broughton, 1893

Everest and Stride, 1884

Calabò, 1888

Fewart, 1900

Hukm Chand, 1891

EVIDENCE IN COURTS OF EQUITY

Gresley, 1836

EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES

Allen, 1898

Rice, 1892

Burrill, 1868

Roscoe, 1825

Craneburgh, 1913

Tremear, 1902

Jell, 1894

Underhill, 1910

MacNally, 1892

Wharton, 1880

EVIDENCE ON COMMISSION
Hume Williams & Macklin 1885

EVIDENCE UNDER THE NEW YORK CODE
Warner 1887

EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE (See Act I of 1879 ss 45—51)

Harris 1897	Lawson 1886
James 1889	Rogers 1883
Stephen 1863

EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE AS AFFECTING DOCUMENTS

(See Act I of 1872 ss 91—100)

Browne 1893	Wigram 1831
-------------	-------------

FRENCH LAW OF EVIDENCE

Bolington 1904

GENERAL WORKS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

Anonymous 1730 1761	Phipson 1897
Bralner 1898	Powell 1856
Bentham 1800 1802	Ram 1861
Best 1849	Reynolds 1887
Dickson 185	Pice 1897
Cardie 1830	Starkie 1874
Olbert 1756	Stephen 1876 1910
Glassford 1870	Straker 1890
Greenleaf 1842	Swift 1810
Harrison 182	Tait 1834
Jones 1896	Taylor 1848
Knowles 1905	Thayer 1897 1896 1897
McKenney 1812	Wharton 1877 1880
Peake 1801	Wigmore 1904
Phillips 1814	Wills 1804

Wood 1886

HANDWRITING

Carlson 1914	Hagan 1891
--------------	------------

HEARSAY EVIDENCE

Tregarthen 1915

HISTORY OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

Phillimore 1860	Poland 1897
-----------------	-------------

IDENTIFICATION

Harris 1897	Ram 1861
-------------	----------

INTERROGATING

Stephen 1868	Schell 1883
Willis 1916

IN SPRIUS EVIDENCE

Albott 1891 1897	Espnasse 1877
Arcbold 1844	Leake 1801

Rose 1897

PRESUMPTIONS (See Act I of 1877 ss 79—90 101—141)

Best 1844	DeCottar 1911
Burnell 1868	Lawson 1886

Mathews 1877

PRISONERS ON OATH

Stephen 1898	Wales 1861
--------------	------------

PRIVATE AND COMMUNICATIONS (See Act I of 1877 ss 121—177)

Hageman 1889

PSYCHOLOGY APPLIED TO EVIDENCE

Arnold, 1906

REFLEVANCY (See Act I of 1872, ss 5—16)

Whitworth, 1875

RIGHT TO BEGIN AND REPLY

Best, 1880

RULES OF EVIDENCE

Holt, 1917

Watson 1917

TESTIMONY

Blundell, 1863

Tozer, 1844

Carlson, 1914

Worsley, 1861

TEXT BOOKS ON INDIAN LAW OF EVIDENCE PRIOR TO ACT I OF 1872

Field 1867

Kindersley, 1862

Goodeve, 1862

Norton 1858

TRIAL EVIDENCE

Abbott, 1918

Henry, 1914

Iwbank, 1902

Kennedy, 1906

Reynolds, 1912

WITNESSES (See Act I of 1872, ss 118—160)

Best, 1849

Reynolds, 1883

Morison 1895

Sichel, 1887

Ram 1861

Wilks, 1910

Rapalje, 1887

Wrottesley, 1910

THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

APPLICABLE TO

BRITISH INDIA.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION.

PRELIMINARY

The substantive law of this country defines the rights, duties and liabilities, the ascertainment of which is the purpose of every judicial proceeding. The Criminal branch of that law is contained in the Indian Penal Code, as also in various special and local laws dealing with the subject. The substantive Civil law of India has not as yet been codified. Generally speaking, it is to be found in various Acts of the Indian Legislature, in the English Statutes extending to India and in the personal law of the Hindus and Mussalmans. In cases for which no special provision exists, the Courts are enjoined to act according to justice, equity and good conscience. Adjective law defines the pleading procedure and proof by which the substantive law is applied in practice. It is the machinery by which that law is set and kept in motion. The rules relating to pleading and procedure are contained in the Civil and Criminal Procedure Codes. Proof, the remaining branch of adjective law, logically defined is the sufficient reason for assenting to a proposition as true (1). Practically considered, it is the establishment of facts in issue (ascertained in each particular case by the pleadings and settlement of issues) by proper legal means to the satisfaction of the Court (2). This is done by the production of evidence, the law relating to which is to all legal practice what logic is to all reasoning, whatever subject it may be concerned about. Accurately speaking, the terms 'proof' and 'evidence' are distinguished in this: that proof is the effect or result of evidence, while evidence is the medium of proof (3). The facts out of which the rights and liabilities arise must be determined correctly. Facts which come in question in Courts of Justice are enquired into and determined in precisely the same way as doubtful or disputed facts are enquired into and determined by men in general, except so far as positive law has interposed with rules to secure impartiality and accuracy of decision or to exclude collateral mischief likely to result from the investigation (4). Some portions of the law of Evidence, such as those which deal with the relevancy of facts, are intimately connected with the whole theory

Evidence
branch adjective
law

(1) Wharton Fr. § 1 id. Cr. Ev. § 2

(2) Best Ev. § 10

(3) Ib.

(4) Ib., § 2. Whether all these rules are effective for the purpose for which they were enacted or are necessary is of course another question of human knowledge and with logic as applied to human conduct (1) Other rules are of a technical character designed to secure the objects mentioned or are based on principles of general policy

Meaning of term 'Evidence'

The ambiguity of the word "evidence" has given rise to varying definitions Bentham used it in its broadest sense when he defined it as "any matter of fact the effect, tendency, or design of which is to produce in the mind a persuasion affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence of some other matter of fact" (2) It is, however, clear, that the term as used in municipal law must have a very much more limited meaning It is manifest that every fact some having, it may be, but the very slightest bearing on the issue, cannot be adduced some limit to the facts which may and of litigation (3) The great bulk, consists of negative rules declaring "evidence" (4) In its legal and most general acceptance, "evidence" has been defined to include all the means, exclusive of mere argument, by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved to the satisfaction of the Court (5) According to the concise definition of the California Code, "Judicial Evidence is the means, sanctioned by law, of ascertaining in a judicial proceeding the truth respecting a question of fact" (6)

Judicial evidence is thus a species of the genus "evidence," and is for the most part nothing more than natural evidence, restrained or modified by rules of positive law (7) A law of evidence properly constructed would be nothing less than an application of the practical experience acquired in Courts of law to the problem of enquiring into the truth as to controverted questions of fact (8) The law of evidence (which is contained mainly in Act I of 1872) (9) determines how the parties are to convince the Court of the existence of that state of facts which according to the provisions of the substantive law, would establish the existence of the right or liability which they allege to exist (10) This law, in so far as it is concerned, in the words of Rolfe, B. abstractedly considered is concerned with what, and of what is practicable, is in dispute, instead of sixty or seventy years, into dispute if all matters which have come generally gone into, and enquiries carried on from month to month as to the truth of

(1) Steph Introd 1 2 The same learned author (Dig xi) stated that Chief Baron Gilbert's work on the Law of Evidence (1756) the first of the recognised English text books on the subject is founded on Locke's Essay much as his own work is founded on Mill's Logic

(2) Benth Jud. Ev. 17

(3) Pur Jones Ev. 11

(4) Steph Introd these rules are closely connected with the institution of trial by jury see Thayer's Cases on Evidence 4 and Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law Part I Development of Trial by Jury, and per Lord Mansfield in the Earley Leverage Case 4 Camp 414

(5) 1 Greenleaf Ev. 11 Best Ev. 111 p 19; Steph Introd 7 as to the definition of the word as used in the Act

see Notes to s 3 post See also Steph Dig Art 1 Taylor Ev 11 and the definition given by Prof Thayer in his Cases on Evidence p 2

(6) Cal Code s 1823 See observations on the definitions given in the California Code (which are said to express and typify the judicial sentiment of the American Judiciary) in Rices General Principles of the Law of Evidence p 9

(7) Best Ev. 11 34 79

(8) Speech in Council of the Hon. Mr Stephen Gazette of India 18th April 1881 42 (Extra Supplement)

(9) Other Acts also contain provisions relating to evidence as to this see s 2 post

(10) Steph Introd 10

(11) In the Attorney General v Hitchcock 7 Exch. 91 105

everything connected with it I do not say how that would be, but such a course is found to be impossible at present' (1)

Rules respecting judicial evidence may be generally divided into those to be proved, and those relating to the evidence. It has been said that there is but one rule, and that the nature of the case will admit (3)

What the law of Evidence determines

This rule does not require the production of the greatest possible quantity of evidence, but is framed to prevent the introduction of any evidence which raises the supposition that there is better evidence behind, in the possession, or under the control, of the party, by which he might prove the same fact. The two chief applications of this principle are as follows (a) With regard to the quid probandum, the law requires as a condition to the admissibility of evidence (either direct or circumstantial) an open and visible connection between the principal and evidentiary facts (1). If the belief in the principal fact which is to be ascertained is to be after all, an inference from other facts, those facts must at all events be closely connected with the principal fact in some of certain specific modes (5). This connection must be reasonable and proximate not conjectural and remote. This, which is the theory of relevancy, is dealt with in the first Part of the Evidence Act (6). The first question therefore which the law of evidence should decide is what facts are relevant and may be proved (b) With regard to the modus probandi, the law rejects derivative evidence such as the so called 'hearsay evidence' (7) and exacts original evidence, prescribing that no evidence shall be received which shows on its face, that it only derives its force from some other which is withheld (8). In other words, the best evidence must be given. If a fact is proved by oral evidence it must be direct, that is to say, things seen must be deposed to by some one who says he saw them with his own eyes things heard by some one who says he heard them with his own ears (9), and original documents must be produced or accounted

In addition to the law of evidence, allegations, but it will be sufficient if the substance of the issues be proved. The rights of parties litigating must be determined secundum allegata et probata (according to what is averred and proved). This rule has not been incorporated in the Act, as it is one, strictly speaking, rather of the law of procedure proper than of evidence (11)

(1) See also R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R 91 (1874) per West J. One of the objects of a law of evidence is to restrict the investigations made by Courts within the bounds prescribed by general convenience. As to the utility of the rules see Best Ev §§ 35 et seq. Field Ev 13 et seq. sanctions Best Ev §§ 16 et seq. securities for insuring veracity and completeness of evidence ib §§ 54 et seq. 100

(2) Best Ev § 111. Mr Stephen said in his above mentioned speech of the 18th April 1871 — The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts.

(3) See Lord Hardwicke's Ch. J. Omychund v Barker 1 Atk. 71 49. See Raialakshmi v Sitanatha 14 M I A 570 588 (1872). Baboo Bodhnaran v Baboo Omrao 13 M I A 519 527 (1870) s.c., 15 W P 11 C. Baboo Gunga Pershad

v Baboo Inderjit 23 W R 390 P C (1875). Moleema Chunder v Poorno Chunder 11 W R 165 167 (1869). D. nomoy Deb v Luchmiput 7 f A 8. As to the meaning of the rule see Norton Ex 69. Best Ev pp 70 73 87 88 91 93 96 215 216 89 431 434 416 275 489 251 252. Steph. Intro 3 7

(4) Best Ev §§ 90 38.
(5) Gazette of India 18th April 1871.

supra

(6) v post Introduction to Ch II.
(7) See Steph. Intro 4 6, Best Ev, §§ 495 112.

(8) Best Ev § 9. Doe d Helsh v Langfield 16 M & W. 497, Doe d Gilbert v Ross 7 M & W. 107 106, McCannell v Evans 11 C B 930 942.

(9) s. ss. 59 60 post.

(10) s. ss. 59 61, 64, post.

(11) See cases cited in Field Ev.

3 - 369

The law of evidence thus determines —(a) The relevancy of facts(1) or what sort of facts may be proved in order to establish the existence of the right, duty, or liability defined by substantive law (b) The proof of facts(2) that is what sort of proof is to be given of those facts (c) The production of proof of relevant facts(3), that is, who is to give it and how it is to be given, and the effect of improper admission or rejection of evidence(4) (see post)

The sufficiency of evidence must be distinguished from its competency. By competent evidence is meant that which the very nature of the thing to be proved requires as the fit and appropriate proof in the particular case such as the production of a writing where its contents are the subject of enquiry. If satisfactory, or, as it is also called, sufficient, evidence is intended that amount of proof which ordinarily satisfies an unprejudiced mind beyond reasonable doubt. The circumstances which will amount to this degree of proof can never be previously defined, the only legal test of which they are susceptible is their sufficiency to satisfy the mind of an ordinary man, and so to convince him that he would venture to act upon that conviction in matters of the highest concern and importance to his own interests(5). The effect of evidence, considered from the point of view of the weight which should be attached to it, cannot be regulated by precise rules as the admissibility of evidence may be(6). For these reasons considerations upon the sufficiency of evidence have no place in the Act.

Sufficiency
of Evidence

The weight of evidence cannot be regulated by precise rules as the admissibility of evidence may be(7). It depends on rules of common sense(8) and the weight of the aggregate of many such pieces of evidence taken together is very much greater than the sum of the weight of each such piece of evidence taken separately(9). The Draft Bill contained the following section which though it was not thought necessary

“when any fact is hereinafter indicate in any way the weight being a matter solely for the discretion of the Commissioners, in the second paragraph of their Draft Bill said “Whenever any evidence is said to be admissible, it is not meant that it is to be regarded as conclusive but only that the weight, if any, which the deciding authority may consider due, shall be allowed to it.” In this connection a few dicta of general application may be here cited. When one witness deposes to a certain fact having occurred, and another witness stating that he was present at the same time denies that any such fact took place greater weight other things being equal is to be attached to the witness alleging the affirmative(10). Upon

(1) Evidence Act Part I v post s 3 and Introduction to Chapter II

(2) Evidence Act Part II v post and Introduction to Part II

(3) Evidence Act Part III see Introduction to this Part post

(4) See Introduction II

(5) Greenleaf Ev. 12

(6) See Farguharson v Dwarakanath 8 B. L. R., 504 508 (1871) Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre L. R., 4 App. Cas. 792 R v Madhub G. 21 W. R., Cr. 13 19 (1844) Townsend v Strangroom 6 Ves. 333 334 O'Horne v Holngbroke L. R. 2 H. L. 837 Test Ev., 181

(7) Farguharson v Dwarakanath 8 B. L. R., 504 508 (1871) Best Ev., 181

(8) Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre L. R., 4 App. Cas. “2” per Lord Blackburn “For weighing evidence and drawing inferences from it there can be no canon

Each case presents its own peculiarities and common sense and shrewdness must be brought to bear upon the facts elicited in every case—whch a Judge of fact in this country discharge the function of a jury in England have to weigh and decide upon” R v Madhub G. 21 W. R. Cr. 13 19 (1874) This inconvenience says Lord Eldon in Townsend v Strangroom (6 Ves., 333 334) belongs to the administration of justice that the minds of different men will differ upon the result of the evidence which may lead to different decisions upon the same case. See also remarks of Lord Blackburn in O'Rourke v Dolngbroke L. R. 2 H. L. 837

(9) Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre supra “2”

(10) De J. Tersad v Doris Singh 3 M. I. A. 34 357 (1814), s. c., 6 W. R. (P. C.) 55 Wills Cr. Ev., 270

general principles affirmative is better than negative evidence. A person deposing to a fact which he states he saw, must either speak truly, or must have invented his story, or it must be sheer delusion. Not so with respect to negative evidence, a fact may have taken place in the very sight of a person who may not have observed it, and if he did observe may have forgotten it" (1). As a general rule, should be attached numbered (2). More weight words which are acts than of their alleged cannot properly weigh evidence who starts with an assumption of the general bad character of the prisoners (4). nted (3). A Judge, however,

The Act in many of its sections leaves matters dealt with thereby to the Judicial discretion of the Court (5). "Discretion, when applied to a Court of law, means discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule and not by humour. It must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular" (6). "In using a judicial discretion, the Courts have to bear in mind not only the Statutes, but also the great rules and maxims of the law, such, for example, as those of logic or evidence, or public policy. The right discretion is not seire quid sit justum, but seire per legem, as Coke insisted (7)." discretion

The English system of Judicial evidence is comparatively of very modern date (8). Its progress is marked by the discarding of those restrictions of scholastic jurisprudence which firstly compelled much that was material to be excluded from the issue and then when the issue was thus arbitrarily narrowed shut out much evidence that was relevant and attached to the evidence received certain arbitrary valuations which the Courts were required to apply (9). The progress has, as in all cases of legal reform, been a slow one (10). But it has been said in England, where the traditional theories still possess some strength, that artificial rules upon matters of evidence are better avoided as much as that, with a few exceptions on the ground of light on the disputed transaction is ad- be regarded as being itself an application of these principles. "Under the Evidence Act admissibility is the rule and exclusion the exception, and circumstances which under other systems might operate to exclude are, under the Act, to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted" (13). Accordingly, where a Judge is in doubt as to the admissibility of a particular piece The English system

(1) The passage in quotation marks is per Sir H Jenner in Chandlers v The Queen's Proctor 2 Curt 415 434 see also Williams v Hall 1 Curt 606

(2) See notes to s 134 post

(3) Meer Usdoollah v Beeby Isaman 1 M L A 42 43 (1836)

(4) R v Kulu Mal 7 W R Cr 103 (1867) see further notes to s 165 post
(5) See ss 32 33 39 58 60 66 73 86 88 90 114 118 135 136 142 148 150 151 154 156 159 162 164 166

(6) Per Lord Mansfield in Blake's case 4 Burroughs Rep 2539 cited in Harbans Sahai v Bhairu Pershad 5 C 259 265 (1879)

(7) R v Chagan Dasaram 14 B 331 344 352 per Jardine J (1890) Best E s 86

(8) Best E s §§ 109 110 See Phillimore's History and Principles of the Law of Evidence (1850) pp 122 et seq

(9) Wharton P s 5

(10) See remarks of Lord Coleridge

C J in Blake v Albion Life Assurance Co 4 C P D 109 (1878). In any but an English Court and to the mind of any but an English lawyer the controversy whether this evidence is or is not evidence which a Court of Justice should receive would seem I think supremely ridiculous because every one would say that the evidence was most cogent and material to the plaintiff's claim

(11) Per Wills J in Hennessy v Wright L R 21 Q B D 518 (1883)

(12) Per Lord Coleridge C J in Blake v Albion Life Assurance Co, L R, 4 C P D 109 (1878) adding — "Not of course matters of mere prejudice not anything open to real moral or sensible objection but all things which fairly throw light on the case"

(13) R v Mona Puna 16 B 111 (1890) per Jardine J, citing Kanai Chunder Mitter and Field JJ, and see cases cited post of evidence, he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of non admissibility (1). The principle of exclusion enacted by the fifth section of this Act should not be so applied as to shut out matters which may be essential for the ascertainment of truth (2). The Privy Council in Ameerunnissa Khatoon v. Abdoonnissa Khatoon (3) said "Objections made with the view of excluding evidence are not received with much favour at this Board." But it must not be assumed either that all technical rules are unnecessary, or that all the rules of evidence are technical. It may be safely asserted that the enforcement of most of such technical rules as are contained in this Act is necessary, and that many other rules possess no element of technicality whatever. Thus as the Judicial Committee have also observed "It is a cardinal rule of evidence, not one of technicality but of substance, that where written documents exist, evidence of their own contents" (4) than those covered by what is technically known as 'the best evidence' rule. The Act would have been better had it not attempted to define what is Evidence and had limited itself to a declaration of what is not admissible. In that case all that was prebative would go in without discussion unless the objector could show that it was forbidden by the provisions of the Act.

History of the law of evidence in this country

The English rules of evidence were always followed in the Courts established by Royal Charter in the Presidency Towns of Calcutta Madras and Bombay. Such of these rules as were contained in the Common and Statute law which prevailed in England before 1726 were introduced by the Charter of that year, some others were rules to be found in subsequent Statutes expressly extended to India, while others, again had no greater authority than that of use and custom (5). In the Courts outside the Presidency Towns no complete rules of evidence were ever laid down or introduced by authority (6). The law on this subject rested in a state of great indefiniteness. In the Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of the Queen v. Akhyroolah (7) decided in 1866, it was held that the English law of evidence was not the law of the Mofussil, that at that time the Mahomedan criminal law, including the Mahomedan law of evidence, was no longer the law of the country, and that in the abolition of the Mahomedan law, the law of England was not established in its place. The Mofussil Courts were thus not required to follow the English law, although they were not debarred from following it where they regarded it as the most equitable.

The first Act of the Governor General in Council which dealt with evidence strictly so called, was Act X of 1835, which applied to all the Courts in British India and dealt with the proof of Acts of the Governor General in Council (8). This was followed by eleven enactments passed at intervals during the next twenty years, which effected various small amendments of the law and applied

(1) The Collector of Corakhpur v. Palakdhari 12 A. 26 (1889)

(2) R v. Abdullah 7 A. 40 (1885). See observations of the Hon. Mr. Maine in moving the reference of the Evidence Bill to Committee. Anything like a capricious administration of the law of evidence was an evil but it would be an equal or perhaps even a greater evil that such strict rules of evidence should be enforced as practically leave the Court without the materials for a decision.

(3) 23 W. R., 208 209 F. C. (1875)

(4) Dunmoye Deb v. Roy Luchmipur 7 I. A., 8 13 (1892)

(5) Field, l. v., 15. Whitley Stokes

Anglo Indian Codes Vol. II 812 See Report of Law Commissioners Appendix

(6) Regulations made between 1793 and 1834 contained a few rules others were derived from a vague customary law of evidence partly drawn from the Hedaya and the Mahomedan Law Officers, others from English text books. Whitley Stokes, l. v. 812 813 and see Act XIX of 1853.

(7) 10 L. R. Sup. Vol. App. II s. c., 6 W. I. Cr., 21 11ell. l. v. 16 18. Whitley Stokes, supra and see R v. Amurram 6 Bom. II C. R. Cr. 49 (1879)

(8) Whitley Stokes, II 813

to the Courts in India several of the reforms in the law of evidence made in England (1) In 1855, an Act was passed (2) for the further improvement of the law of evidence, which contained many provisions applicable to all Courts in British India (3) These provisions were repealed and re-enacted with certain modifications and alterations by the present Act While, therefore, within the Presidency Towns the English law of evidence was in force, modified by certain Acts of the Indian Legislature of which Act II of 1855 was the most important, the Mofussil Courts on the other hand, had, down to 1872 hardly any fixed rules of evidence save those contained in Acts XIX of 1853 and II of 1855 (4) Before and even for some time after 1872 the lax character of the evidence in the Mofussil Courts was the subject of frequent judicial comment (5) To remedy this unsatisfactory (6) state of the law a Draft Bill was drawn up by Her Majesty's Commissioners and introduced by Sir Henry Summer Maine then the Legal Member in Council This first Draft Bill did not, however meet with approval A new Bill was therefore prepared by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen which was ultimately passed as Act I of 1872 (The Indian Evidence India (7)

India (7) n on a reerge from that law (8) Together with certain Acts saved by (9) or enacted subsequent to it, this Act contains the law on the subject of evidence now in force in British India (10)

It has been said that with some few exceptions the Indian Evidence Act was intended to, and did, in fact consolidate the English law of evidence (11),

(1) Ib Act XIX of 1837 (abolished incompetency by reason of conviction) Act V of 1840 (affirmations) see also Acts XVIII of 1863 s 9 VI of 1872, X of 1873 Acts IX of 1840 VII of 1844 (incompetency by reasons of crime or interest) XV of 1852 (competency of parties and other matters) Act XIX of 1853 extended several of these reforms to the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Bengal Presidency

(2) Act II of 1855 As to this Act see R v Gopal Dass 3 M 271 282

(3) The following Acts were subsequently passed \ of 1855 (Attendance of Witnesses) VIII of 1859 (Civil Procedure contained like the present Code provisions as to witnesses) XXV of 1861 (Criminal Procedure contained provisions as to witnesses confessions police-diaries examination of accused and Civil Surgeon reports of Chemical officers and dying declarations which have been re enacted in the present Act or in the present Code), \ of 1869 (evidence of prisoners) see Whitley Stokes 817.

(4) Whitley Stokes 817 Field Ev 17 18 19 See Report of Law Commis s oners

(5) See other citations in Unide Rajaha v P... 7 M I A 128, 137 (1858) s c 4 W R P C 121, Hurce hur Mojumdar v Clurn Majhee 22 W R 355 356 357 (18 4) Naragunty v Lurgana 9 M I A 90 (1861) s c 1 W R P C 30 Cujju Lall v Fattah Lall 6 C 193 (1880)

Even as late as 1881 Stuart C J had cause to complain Phul Kuar v Surjan Pandey 4 A 249 250

(6) See remarks of Privy Council in Bunagree Lal v Malorajah Hetnarain, 7 M I A 148 168 (1858) s c 4 W R, P C 148 Unide Rajaha v Pemmasamy, 7 M I A 128 137 (1858) s c 4 W R, P C 121, Ajoodhya Proshad v Baboo Or Rao 13 M I A 519 (1870), s c 15 W R P C 1

(7) Report of Select Committee It is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India. Steph Introd 2 The differences between the Indian and English law will be found hereafter noted in the Commentary to the sections see also Whitley Stokes p 827, Vol II and Wilson's Comparative Tables English and Indian Law 1890 p 1 pointed out later f exist in the mode of English and Ind an law

(8) See last note Krishnadas v Bapu 439 442 (1886) Collector Pakisthahi Singh 12 R v Abdullah 7 A.

(9) S 2 post
(10) See note to s.
(11) Gujju Lall v 6 C, 171 185 (1880) per that the Act itself is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India(1), and that it was drawn up chiefly from Taylor on Evidence(2). It the lines of the English intended to be a servile n certain respects differ from English law. Moreover these dicta do not recognise the undoubted original character of sections (5-16) dealing with the relevancy of facts.

Although as all rules of evidence which were in force at the passing of the Act are repealed, the English decisions cannot be regarded as binding authorities, they may still serve as valuable guides, though of course English authorities upon the meaning of particular words are of little or no assistance when those words are very different from the ones to be considered (4).

Even where a matter has been expressly provided for by the Act recourse may be had to English or American decisions if as is not infrequently the case, the particular provision be of doubtful import owing to the obscurity or incompleteness of the language in which it has been enacted. Authority abounds for the use of the extraneous sources to which reference has been made in cases such as these (5). As was observed by Edge C J in The Collector of Gorakhpur v Paladdhari Sugi (6). No doubt cases frequently occur in India in which considerable assistance is derived from the consideration of the law of England and of other countries. In such cases we have to see how far such law was founded on common sense and on the principles of justice between man and man and may safely afford guidance to us here.

It must not, however be forgotten that the Indian Evidence Act is a Code which not only defines and amends but also consolidates the Law of Evidence repealing all rules other than those saved by the last portion of its second section (7). The method of construction to be adopted in the case of such a Code

(1) Sith v Ludia Ghella 17 B 129 141 (1892) per Bayley C J adopting the words of Sir James F Stephen Intro Ev Act 2

(2) Macclista v Boaz v Neo Dharmes Spinning & Weaving Company 4 B 576 581 (1880) per West J see remarks of Jackson J in R v Aslootosh Chuckerbitty supra 491 Taylor on Ev referred to in R v Pyari Lal 4 C L R 508 509 Gujju Lal v Fatteh Lal 6 C 179 17 v Rani Reddi 3 M 52 R v Ra a Birapa 3 B 17 (1878) R v Fakirapa 15 B 502 (1890) Fraisi v Molans ngi 18 B 279 (1893) and numerous other cases. Mr Norton however at p iv of the Preface to his Edition of the Act says that in his opinion it is a mere figure of speech to assert that the 167 sections of the Act contain all that is applicable in India of the two volumes of Taylor on Evidence and that a great mass of the principles and rules which Mr Taylor's work contains will have to be written back between the lines of the Code.

(3) Ranchoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Lalal 10 B 439 442 (1886) per Sargent C J see The Collector of Gorakhpur v Paladdhari 12 A 1 37 (1889) R v Abd Hal 7 A 400 401 (1885)

(4) Re Pyari Lal 4 C L R 508 509 R v Ghulei 7 A 44 (1884) English cases irrelevant when Indian Legislature has not followed English law

(5) See R v Vajira 16 B 433 (1892) Pershad Singh v Ran Pertab 22 C 8 (1894) and the cases cited post

(6) 12 A 11 17 (1889) and see also remarks of Strachey J at pp 19 20 in Fraisi v Molans Sigi 18 B 280 (1893) [reference to American Case law] R v Elal, Bir B L R Sup Vol F B 459 (1866) [English American and Scotch Law] 5 W R Cr 59 [Best Ev Gilbert on English Criminal Law] 7 W R 338 F B [Civil Law Austin Jur Gooley Ev] 11 W R Cr 21 [Roscoe numerous to mention. Concerning the weight to be given to American decisions see remarks of Cockburn L C J in Scaramanga v Siam 5 C P D 295 303

(7) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Paladdhari 12 A 35 (1889) and see post

has been expounded by Lord Herschell(1) in terms which have been adopted by the Privy Council(2) and cited and applied in other cases in this country (3)

A similar rule had been previously laid down in this country with reference to the construction of this Act. In the case of the R v Ashootosh Chucker butty(4) it was said "Instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence and then inquiring what changes the Evidence Act has made in it, the Act should be regarded as containing the scheme of the law, the principles and the application of these principles to the cases of most frequent occurrence, but in respect of matters expressly provided for in the Act we must, so to speak start from the Act and not deal with it as a mere modification of the law of evidence prevailing in England."

Questions, however may arise as regards matters not expressly provided for in the Act. It has been held that the second section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not specifically authorised by the Act itself(5) and that a person tendering evidence must show that it is admissible under some one or other of the provisions of this Act (6). It is to be regretted that the Act was not so framed as to admit other rules of evidence on points not specifically dealt with by it as was in effect done by the Commissioners in the second section of their Draft. In that case whenever omissions occur (and some do in fact occur) in the Act recourse might be had to the present or previous law on the point existing in England or the previous rules if any, in this country.

(1) In Bank of England v Pugh 10 L. R. App. Cas. (1891) 107 (at pp. 144-145).

(2) In Narendra Nath v Kamalbasini 23 I. A. 18-26 (1896).

(3) Dagdū v Pancham Singh 17 B. 382 (1892); Damodara Mudahar v The Secretary of State for India 18 M. 91 (1894); Kandayya Chetti v Narasimulu Chetti 20 M. 103 (1896); Lala Suraj v Golab Chaud 28 C. 517 (1901). This subject will be found fully discussed in the Author's Civil Procedure Code.

(4) 4 C. 941 (1888); per Jackson J.

(5) K. v. Abdullah 7 A. 385-392 (1885); Muhammad Allahdad v Muhammad Ismail 10 A. 325 (1886); R v Pilsamber Jina 2 B. 64 (1876) and in next note.

(6) Lekhraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh 7 I. A. 70 (1879); Collector of Gorakhpur v Palahdari Singh 12 A. 11-12-19-20, 34-35-43 (1882). And see last note. Though in R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C. 491 (1878) it was said that where a case arises for which no positive solution can be found in the Act itself recourse may be had to the English rules if any on the point.

that the Act itself is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order, with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India(1), and that it was drawn up chiefly from Taylor on Evidence(2) It is true that, although the Code is in the main, drawn on the lines of the English law of evidence, there is no reason to suppose that it was intended to be a servile copy of it(3); and indeed, as already stated, it does in certain respects differ from English law Moreover these dicta do not recognise the undoubted original character of sections (5-16) dealing with the relevancy of facts

Although as all rules of evidence which were in force at the passing of the Act are repealed, the English decisions cannot be regarded as binding authorities, they may still serve as valuable guides, though of course English authorities upon the meaning of particular words are of little or no assistance when those words are very different from the ones to be considered (4)

Even where a matter has been expressly provided for by the Act, recourse may be had to English or American decisions if as is not infrequently the case, the particular provision be of doubtful import owing to the obscurity or incompleteness of the language in which it has been enacted Authority abounds for the use of the extraneous sources to which reference has been made in cases such as these (5) As was observed by Fidge C J in The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh(6) 'No doubt, cases frequently occur in India in which considerable assistance is derived from the consideration of the law of England and of other countries In such cases we have to see how far such law was founded on common sense and on the principles of justice between man and man and may safely afford guidance to us here'

It must not, however, be forgotten that the Indian Evidence Act is a Code which not only defines and amends but also consolidates the Law of Evidence, repealing all rules other than those saved by the last portion of its second section (7) The method of construction to be adopted in the case of such a Code

(1) Smith v. India Ghella 17 B 129 141 (1892) per Bayley C J adopting the words of Sir James F Stephen Introduct. Ev Act 2

(2) Marchesla Re onyx Act Dharmsey Spinning & Weaving Company 4 B 576 581 (1880) per West J see remarks of Jackson J in R v Ashtash Chuckerbutty supra 491 Taylor on Ev referred to in R v Pyari Lal 4 C. L. R. 508 509 Gnyju Lal v Fateh Lal 6 C. 179 R v Ram Redds 3 M 52 R v Rama Birapa 3 B 17 (1878) R v Fakirapa 15 B 302 (1890) Fraji v Mohansingh 18 B 279 (1893) and numerous other cases Mr Norton however at p. iv of the Preface to his Edition of the Act says that in his opinion it is a mere figure of speech to assert that the 167 sections of the Act contain all that is applicable in India of the two volumes of Taylor on Evidence and that a great mass of the principles and rules which Mr Taylor's work contains will have to be written back between the lines of the Code

(3) Ranchoddas Krishnadass v Bapu Narhar 10 B 439 442 (1886), per Sargent C J see The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari 12 A 1 37 (1889) R v Abdullah A 400 401 (1885)

(4) Re Pyari Lal 4 C. L. R. 508 509 R v Ghulet 7 A 44 (1884) English cases irrelevant when Indian Legislature has not followed English law

(5) See R v Fajram 16 B 433 (1892) Pershad Singh v Ram Periah 22 C 3 (1894) and the cases cited post

(6) 12 A 11 12 (1889) and see also remarks of Straight J at pp 19 20 ib. Fraji v Mohan Singh 18 B 280 (1893) [reference to American Case law] R v Elahi Bux B L R Sup Vol. F B 459 (1866) [English American and Scotch Law] 5 W R Cr 59 [Best Ev Gilbert on Chittys Criminal law] 7 W R 338 F B [Civil law Austin Jur., Goodeve Ev] 11 W R Cr 21 [Roscoe Ev] R v Hedger Muty Lal and Michael (1852) p 132 (Starkie on Ev) and p 144 (Paley) 1 B 475 11 B H C, 93 [Russell on Crimes] 14 B 335 [Phillips Ev] 4 B 581 [Gresley on Ev] B L R F B Sup Vol. 422 [Norton on Ev] and other cases too numerous to mention Concerning the weight to be given to American decisions see remarks of Cockburn L C J in Scaramanga v Sia 5 C P D 295 303 (*) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari 12 A 35 (1889) and see post

has been expounded by Lord Herschell(1) in terms which have been adopted by the Privy Council(2) and cited and applied in other cases in this country (3)

A similar rule had been previously laid down in this country with reference to the construction of this Act. In the case of the R v Ashootosh Chucker butty(4) it was said. Instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence and then inquiring what changes the Evidence Act has made in it the Act should be regarded as containing the scheme of the law, the principles and the application of these principles to the cases of most frequent occurrence, but in respect of matters expressly provided for in the Act we must so to speak start from the Act and not deal with it as a mere modification of the law of evidence prevailing in England.

Questions, however, may arise as regards matters not expressly provided for in the Act. It has been held that the second section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not specifically authorised by the Act itself(5) and that a person tendering evidence must show that it is admissible under some one or other of the provisions of this Act (6). It is to be regretted that the Act was not so framed as to admit other rules of evidence on points not specifically dealt with by it as was in effect done by the Commissioners in the second section of their Draft. In that case whenever omissions occur (and some do in fact occur) in the Act recourse might be had to the present or previous law on the point existing in England or the previous rules, if any, in this country.

(1) In Bank of England v Vagliano Brothers L. R. App. Cas. (1891), 107 (at pp. 144-145).

(2) In Norenira Nath v Kamalbasini 23 I. A. 18-26 (1896).

(3) Dagdu v Pancham Singh 17 B. 382 (1892). Damadara Mudahar v The Secretary of State for India 18 M. 91 (1894). Kondayya Chetti v Narasimhulu Chetti 20 M. 103 (1896). Lala Suraj v Golab Chand 28 C. 517 (1901). This subject will be found fully discussed in the Author's Civil Procedure Code.

(4) 4 C. 941 (1888) per Jackson J.

(5) I v Abdullah 7 A. 383-399 (1885). Muhammad Allahdad v Muhammad Ismail 10 A. 325 (1886). R v Pstamber Jina 2 B. 64 (1876) and in next note.

(6) Lekhraj Agar v Mahpal Singh 7 I. A. 70 (1879). Collector of Gorakhpur v Palal dhar Singh 12 A. 11, 12, 19-20, 34-35-43 (1889). And see last note. Though in R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C. 491 (1878) it was said that where a case arises for which no positive solution can be found in the Act itself recourse may be had to the English rules if any on the point.

CHAPTER I *

GENERAL DISTRIBUTION OF THE SUBJECT

Technical and general elements of law

Almost every branch of law is composed of rules of which some are grounded upon practical convenience and the experience of actual litigation, whilst others are closely connected with the constitution of human nature and society. Thus the criminal law contains many provisions of no general interest, such as those which relate to the various forms in which dishonest persons tamper with or imitate coin, but it also contains provisions, such as those which relate to the effect of madness on responsibility, which depend on several of the most interesting branches of moral and physical learning. This is perhaps more conspicuously true of the law of evidence than of any other branch of the law. Many of its provisions, however useful and necessary, are technical, and the enactments in which they are contained can claim no other merit than those of completeness and perspicuity. The whole subject of documentary evidence is [2]† of this nature. Other branches of the subject, such as the relevancy of facts, are intimately connected with the whole theory of human knowledge and with logic, as applied to human conduct. The object of this introduction is to illustrate these parts of the subject by stating the theory on which they depend and on which the provisions of the Act proceed. As to more technical matters the Act speaks for itself, and I have nothing to add to its content.

Relation
of Evidence Act to English law of evidence

The Indian Evidence Act is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of Evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order, with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India.

English law
of evidence

Like almost every other part of English law, the English law of evidence was formed by degrees. No part of the law has been left so entirely to the discretion of the Legislature till very recently began to interfere, it has done so in a manner which has excluded the testimony of the parties but it has not attempted to deal with the main principle of the subject.

Its want of arrangement

It is natural that a body of law thus formed by degrees and with reference to particular cases, should be destitute of arrangement, and in particular that its leading terms should never have [3] been defined by authority, that general rules should have been laid down with reference rather to particular circumstances than to general principles, and that it should have been found necessary to qualify them by exceptions inconsistent with the principles on which they proceeded.

Difficulties
of amending it

When this confusion had once been introduced into the subject it was hardly capable of being remedied either by Courts of Law, or by writers of

* This and the following chapters down to p 78 are Sir James Fitzjames Stephen's introduction to the Evidence Act.

† This and the following numbers indicate the paging of the original book (Ed 1893) as referred to in this commentary.

text-books The Courts of Law could only decide the cases which came before them. The books could only collect, and, in doubt, have remedied questions of law has since then. It has in several well known cases been attended with signal success in India.

That part of the English law of evidence which professes to be founded upon anything in the nature of a theory on the subject may be reduced to the following rules —

Fundamental rules of English law of evidence

(1) Evidence must be confined to the matters in issue

(2) Hearsay evidence is not to be admitted

(3) In all cases the best evidence must be given

Each of these rules is very loosely expressed. The word evidence which is the leading term of each, is undefined and ambiguous.

It sometimes means the words uttered and things exhibited by witnesses before a court of justice

[4] At other times, it means the facts proved to exist by those words or things, and regarded as the groundwork of inferences as to other facts not so proved

Again, it is sometimes used as meaning to assert that a particular fact is relevant to the matter under inquiry

The word 'issue' is ambiguous. In many cases it is used with reference to the strict rules of English special pleading, the main object of which is to define, with great accuracy, the precise matter which is affirmed by the one party to a suit, and denied by the other

In other cases it is used as embracing generally the whole subject under inquiry

Again, the word 'hearsay' is used in various senses. Sometimes it means whatever a person is heard to say, sometimes it means whatever a person declares on information given by some one else, sometimes it is treated as being nearly synonymous with 'irrelevant'

If the rule that evidence must be confined to the matters in issue were constructed strictly, it would run thus: 'No witness shall ever depose to any fact, except those facts which by the form of the pleadings are affirmed on the one side and denied on the other'. So understood, the rule would obviously put a stop to the whole administration of justice, as it would exclude evidence of decisive facts.

Ambiguity of rule as to confining evidence to issue

A sues B on a promissory note. B denies that he made the note

A has a letter from B in which he admits that he made the note and promises to pay it. This admission could [5] not be proved if the rule referred to were constructed strictly, because the issue is whether B made the note, and not whether he admitted having made it

This absurd result is avoided by using the word 'evidence' as meaning not testimony but any fact from which any other fact may be inferred. Thus interpreted the rule that evidence must be confined to matters in issue will run thus: 'No facts may be proved to exist, except facts in issue or facts from which the existence of the facts in issue can be inferred', but if the rule is thus interpreted it becomes so vague as to be of little use, for the question naturally arises from what sort of facts may the existence of other facts be inferred? To this question the law of England gives no explicit answer at all though partial and confused answers to parts of it may be inferred from some of the exceptions to the rules which exclude hearsay

For instance, there are cases from which it may be inferred that evidence may sometimes be given of a fact from which another fact may be inferred although the fact upon which the inference is to be founded is a crime, and although the fact to be inferred is also a crime for which the person against whom the evidence is to be given is on his trial

The full answer to the question, 'what facts are relevant,' which is the most important of all the questions that can be asked about the law of evidence, has thus to be learnt partly by experience, and partly by collecting together such crooked and narrow illustrations of it as the one just given

Ambiguity
of the rule excluding hearsay

[6] The rule that 'hearsay is no evidence' is vague to the last degree as each of the meanings of which the word 'hearsay' is susceptible is sometimes treated as the true one. As the rule is nowhere laid down in an authoritative manner, its meaning has to be collected from the exceptions to it, and these exceptions, of which there are as many as twelve or thirteen, imply at least three different meanings of the word 'hearsay'

Thus it is a rule that evidence may be given of statements which accompany and explain relevant actions. As no rule determines what actions are relevant, this is in itself unsatisfactory, but as the rule is treated as an exception to the rule excluding hearsay, it implies that 'hearsay' means that which a man is heard to say. If this is the meaning of hearsay, the rule which excludes it would run thus: 'No witness shall ever be allowed to depose anything which he has heard said by any one else.' The result of this would be that no verbal contract could ever be proved, and that no one could ever be convicted of using threats with intent to extort money, or of defamation by words spoken, except in virtue of exceptions which stultify the rule.

Most of the exceptions indicate that the meaning of the word 'hearsay' is that which a person reports on the information of some one else, and not upon the evidence of his own senses. Thus, with certain exceptions, is no doubt a valuable rule, but it is not the natural meaning of the words 'hearsay' is no evidence, and it is in [7] practice almost impossible to divest words of their natural meaning.

The rules that documents which are admitted as evidence between persons who are not to the rule excluding hearsay. This is not quite equivalent to the word nothing which approaches to a definition of relevancy.

Rules as to best evidence

The rule which requires that the best evidence of which a fact is susceptible should be given, is the most distinct of the three rules referred to above, and it is certainly one of the most useful. It is simply an amplification of the obvious maxim that if a man wishes to know all that he can know about a matter his own senses are to him the highest possible authority. If a hundred witnesses of a sealed letter, and found that its intervention of any conscious process of reasoning at all, that they had sworn what was not true.

Ambiguity
of the word
evidence

The ambiguity of the word 'evidence' is the cause of a great deal of obscurity apart from that which it gives to the rules above mentioned. In scientific inquiries, and for popular and general purposes, it is no doubt convenient to have one word which includes —

- (1) the testimony on which a given fact is believed,
- (2) the facts so believed, and
- (3) the arguments founded upon them

For instance, in the title of "Paley's Evidences of Christianity," the word is used in this sense. The nature of the work was not such as to give much importance to the distinction which the word overlooks. So, in scientific inquiries it is seldom necessary (for reasons to which I shall have occasion to refer hereafter) to lay stress upon the difference between the testimony on which a fact is believed and the fact itself. In judicial inquiries however the distinction is most important, and the neglect to observe it has thrown the whole subject into confusion by causing English lawyers to overlook the leading distinction which ought to form the principle on which the whole law should be classified. I mean the distinction between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts.

The use of the one name 'evidence' by which it is to be proved has given which the word occurs. Thus for instance sometimes means a relevant fact, and sometimes the original of a document as opposed to a copy. Circumstantial evidence is opposed to direct evidence. But circumstantial evidence usually means a fact from which some other fact is inferred whereas direct evidence means testimony given by a man as to what he has himself perceived by his own senses. It would thus be correct to say that circumstantial evidence [9] must be proved by direct evidence—a clumsy mode of expression which is in itself a mark of confusion of thought. The evil however goes beyond mere clumsiness of expression. People have naturally enough supposed that circumstantial and direct evidence admit of being contrasted in respect of their cogency and that different canons can be laid down as to the conditions which they ought to satisfy before the Court is convinced by them. This I think confuses the theory of proof and is an error due entirely to the ambiguity of the word evidence.

It would be a mistake to infer from the unsystematic character and absence of arrangement which belongs to the English law of evidence that the substance of the law itself is bad. On the contrary, it possesses in the highest degree the characteristic merits of English case law. English case law as it is is to what it ought to be and might be if it were properly arranged what the ordinary conversation of a very clever man on all sorts of subjects written down as he uttered it, and as passing circumstances furnished him with a text would be to the matured and systematic statement of his deliberate opinions. It is full of the most vigorous sense and is the result of great sagacity applied to past and varied experience.

Merits of English law of evidence

The manner in which the law of evidence is related to the general theories which give it its interest can be understood only by reference [10] to the natural distribution of the subject which appears to be as follows—

Natural distribution of the subject

All rights and liabilities are dependent upon and arise out of facts.

Every judicial proceeding whatever has for its purpose the ascertaining of some right or liability. If the proceeding is Criminal the object is to ascertain the liability to punishment of the person accused. If the proceeding is Civil the object is to ascertain some right of property or of status or the right of one party and the liability of the other to some form of relief.

In order to effect this result provision must be made by law for the following objects—First the legal effect of particular classes of facts in establishing rights and liabilities must be determined. This is the province of what has been called substantive law. Secondly a course of procedure must be laid down by which persons interested may apply the substantive law to particular cases. The law of procedure includes amongst others two main branches: (1) the law of pleading which determines what in particular cases are the questions in dispute between the parties and (2) the law of evidence which determines how the parties are to convince the Court of the existence of that state of facts which according to the provisions of substantive law, would establish the existence of the right or liability which they allege to exist.

Illustration

The following is a simple illustration. A sues B on a bond for Rs 1,000. B says that the execution of the bond was procured by coercion.

[11] The substantive law is that a bond executed under coercion cannot be enforced.

The law of procedure lays down the method according to which A is to establish his right to the payment of the sum secured by the bond. One of its provisions determines the manner in which the question between the parties is to be stated.

The question stated under that provision is whether the execution of the bond was procured by coercion.

The law of evidence determines—

(1) What sort of facts may be proved in order to establish the existence of that which is defined by the substantive law as coercion?

(2) What sort of proof is to be given of those facts?

(3) Who is to give it?

(4) How it is to be given?

Thus, before the law of evidence can be understood or applied to any particular case, it is necessary to know so much of the substantive law as determines what, under given states of facts, would be the rights of the parties, and so much of the law of procedure as is sufficient to determine what questions it is open to them to raise in the particular proceeding.

Thus in general terms the law of evidence consists of provisions upon the following subjects—

(1) The relevancy of facts

(2) The proof of facts

(3) The production of proof of relevant facts

The foregoing observations show that this account of [12] the matter is exhaustive. For if we assume that a fact is known to be relevant, and that its existence is duly proved, then the question is how it affects the existence of the fact in issue. The Court has to determine the certainty of the fact.

The matter must, however, be carried further. The three general heads may be distributed more particularly as follows—

Relevancy of facts

I. The Relevancy of Facts—Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two ways—

1. Facts in issue

(1) They may by themselves, or in connection with other facts, constitute a fact in issue. For example, if the fact is that the eldest son of B, A, is liable to the heir of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances, and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B, and is liable to the punishment provided by law for murder.

Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue, unless their existence is undisputed.

2. Relevant facts

(2) Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained, may affect the [13] probability of the existence of facts in issue, and be used as the foundation of inferences respecting them. Such facts are described in the Evidence Act as relevant facts.

All the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of Justice to concern themselves, are included in these two classes.

The first great question, therefore, which the law of evidence should decide is, what facts are relevant. The answer to this question is to be learnt from the general theory of judicial evidence explained in the following chapter.

What facts are in issue in particular cases is a question to be determined by the substantive law or in some instances by that branch of the law of procedure which regulates the forms of pleading. Civil or Criminal.

II The Proof of Relevant Facts—Whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue or a relevant fact, the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist, and it is obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. The question is whether A wrote a letter. The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel. It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B. It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A. It may be an admission or a [14] confession of crime, but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceeding the Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter and that belief must obviously be produced in each of the cases mentioned by the same or similar means. If the Court requires the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact and not on the relation of the fact to the proceeding.

Some facts are too notorious to require any proof at all, and of these the Court will take judicial notice, but if a fact does require proof the instrument by which the Court must be convinced of it is evidence, by which I mean the actual words uttered, or documents, or other things actually produced in Court, and not the facts which the Court considers to be proved by those words and documents. Evidence in this sense of the word must be either (1) oral or (2) documentary. A third class might be formed of things produced in Court, not being documents, such as the instruments with which a crime was committed or the property to which damage had been done, but this division would introduce needless intricacy into the matter. The reason for distinguishing between oral and documentary evidence is that in many cases the existence of the latter excludes the employment of the former, but [15] the condition of material things, other than documents is usually proved by oral evidence, so that there is no occasion to distinguish between oral and material evidence.

It may be said that in strictness all evidence is oral as documents or other material things must be identified by oral evidence before the Court can take notice of them. It is unnecessary to discuss the justice of this criticism as the phrase 'documentary evidence' is not ambiguous, and is convenient and in common use. The only reason for avoiding the use of the word 'evidence' in the general sense in which most writers use it, is that it leads in practice to confusion as has been already pointed out.

III The Production of Proof—This includes the subject of the burden of proof, the rules upon which answer the question, by whom is proof to be given. The subject of witnesses, the rules upon which answer the question, who is to give evidence and under what conditions? The subject of the examination of witnesses, the rules upon which answer the question, how are the witnesses to be examined and how is their evidence to be tested? Lastly, the effect upon the subsequent proceedings of mistakes in the reception and rejection of evidence, may be included under this head.

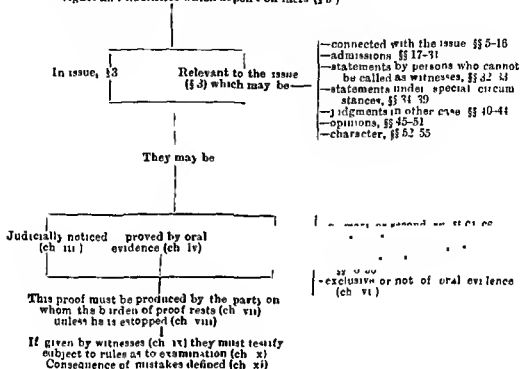

Proof of relevant facts

1 Judicial notice
2 Oral evidence
3 Documentary evidence

Production of proof

The following tabular scheme of the subject may be an assistance to the reader. The figures refer to the sections of the Act which treat of the matter referred to —

[16] The object of legal proceedings is the determination of rights and liabilities which depend on facts (§ 3)

[17] CHAPTER II

A STATEMENT OF THE PRINCIPLES OF INDUCTION AND DEDUCTION, AND A COMPARISON OF THEIR APPLICATION TO SCIENTIFIC AND JUDICIAL INQUIRIES

The general analysis given in the last chapter of the subjects to which the law of evidence must relate sufficiently explains the general arrangement of the Indian Evidence Act. To understand the substance of the Act it is necessary to have some acquaintance with the general theory of judicial evidence. The object of the present chapter is to explain this theory and to compare its application to physical science with its application to judicial inquiries.

Mr Huxley remarks in one of his latest works— The vast results obtained by science are won by no mystical faculties by no mental processes other than those which are practised by every one of us in the humblest and meanest affairs of life. A detective policeman discovers a burglar from the marks made by his shoe by a mental process identical with that by which Cuvier restored the extinct animals of Montmartre from fragments of their bones, nor does that process of induction and deduction by which a lady finding [18] a stain of a particular kind upon her dress concludes that somebody has upset the inkstand thereon differ in any way from that by which Adams and Leverrier discovered a new planet*. The man of science in fact, simply uses with scrupulous exactness the methods which we all habitually and at every moment use carelessly.

Mr Huxley on physical science and judicial inquiries

These observations are capable of an inverse application. If we wish to apply the methods in question to the investigation of matters of every-day occurrence with a greater degree of exactness than is commonly needed, it is necessary to know something of the theory on which they rest. This is specially important when as in judicial proceedings it is necessary to impose conditions by positive law upon such investigations. On the other hand when such conditions have been imposed it is difficult to understand their importance or their true significance unless the theory on which they are based is understood. It appears necessary for these reasons to enter to a certain extent upon the general subject of the investigation of the truth as to matters of fact before attempting to explain and discuss that particular branch of it which relates to judicial proceedings.

Application of his remarks to law of evidence

First then what is the general problem of science? It is to discover, to collect and arrange true propositions about facts. Simple as the phrase appears, it is necessary to enter upon some illustration of its terms namely, (1) facts, (2) propositions, (3) the truth of propositions.

General object of science

First then what are facts?

[19] During the whole of our waking life we are in a state of perception. Indeed consciousness and perception are two names for one thing according as we regard it from the passive or active point of view. We are conscious of everything that we perceive and we perceive whatever we are conscious of. Moreover our perceptions are distinct from each other some both in space and time as is the case with all our perceptions of the external world, others, in time only as is the case with our perceptions of the thoughts and feelings of our own minds.

Facts

* Lay Sermon, p. 78.

External
facts

Whatever may be the objects of our perceptions, they make up collectively the whole sum of our thoughts and feelings. They constitute, in short, the world with which we are acquainted for without entering upon the question of the existence of the external world, it may be asserted with confidence that our knowledge of it is composed, first, of our perceptions, and, secondly, of the inferences which we draw from them as to what we should perceive if we were favourably situated for that purpose. The human body supplies an illustration of this. No one doubts that his own body is composed not only of the external organs which he perceives by his senses, but of numerous internal organs, most of which it is highly improbable that either he or any one else will ever see or touch, and some of which he never can, from the nature of things, see or touch as long as he lives. When he affirms that his brain or his heart, what he has been told by other people, or other human bodies, that if his skull and chest were laid open, those organs would be perceived by the senses of persons who might direct their senses towards them.

Internal
facts

There is another class of perceptions, transient in their duration, and not perceived by the five best marked senses, which are nevertheless distinctly perceptible and of the utmost importance. These are thoughts and feelings, love, hatred, anger, intention, will, wish, knowledge, opinion, are all perceived by the person who feels them. When it is affirmed that a man is angry, that he intends to sell an estate, that he knows the meaning of a word, that he struck a blow voluntarily and not by accident, each proposition relates to a matter capable of being as directly perceived as a noise or a flash of light. The only difference between the two classes of propositions is this. When it is affirmed that a man has a given intention, the matter affirmed is one which he, and he only, can perceive, when it is affirmed that a man is sitting or standing, the matter affirmed is one which may be perceived not only by the man himself, but by any other person able to see, and favourably situated for the purpose. But the circumstance that either event is regarded as being or as having been capable of being, perceived by some one or other, is what we mean, and all that we mean when we say that it exists or existed, or when we denote the same thing by calling it a fact. The word 'fact' is sometimes [21] opposed to theory, sometimes to opinion, sometimes to feeling, but all these modes of using it are more or less rhetorical. When it is used with any degree of accuracy it implies something which exists, and it is as difficult to attach any meaning to the assertion that a thing exists which neither is, nor under any conceivable circumstances, can be so perceived does not, or at the

Definition
of facts in Evidence
Act

It is with reference to this that the word 'fact' is defined in the Evidence Act (§ 3) as meaning and including—

- (1) Any thing, state of things, or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses, and
- (2) Any mental condition of which any person is conscious

It is important to remember with respect to facts, that as all thought and language contains a certain element of generality, it is always possible to describe the same facts with greater or less minuteness, and to decompose every fact with which we are concerned into a number of subordinate facts. Thus we might speak of the presence of several persons in a room at one time as a fact, but if the fact were doubted, or if other circumstances rendered it desirable, their respective positions, their occupations, the position of the furniture, and many other particulars might have to be specified.

Such being the nature of facts, what is the meaning of a proposition? A proposition is a [22] collection of words so related as to raise in the minds of those who understand them a corresponding group of images or thoughts

The characteristic by which words are distinguished from other sounds is their power of producing corresponding thoughts or images. I say thoughts or images, because though most words raise what may be intelligibly called of words which qualify others, like 'although,' 'whereas,' and other adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions

The statement that a proposition, in order to be entitled to the name, must raise in the mind a distinct group of thoughts or images, may be explained by two illustrations. The words 'that horse is niger' form a proposition to everyone who knows that niger means black, but to no one else. The words 'I see a sound' form a proposition to no one unless some signification is attached to the word sound (for instance, an arm of the sea), which would make the words intelligible

Such being a proposition, what is a true proposition? A true proposition is one which excites in the mind, thoughts or images, corresponding to those which would be excited in the mind of a person so situated as to be able to perceive the facts to which the proposition relates. The words 'a man is riding down the road on a white horse' form a proposition because they raise in the mind [23] a distinct group of images. The proposition is true if all persons favourably situated for purposes of observation did actually perceive a corresponding group of facts

The next question is, How are we to proceed in order to ascertain whether any given proposition about facts is true, and in order to frame true propositions about facts? This, as already observed, is the general problem of science which is only another name for knowledge so arranged as to be easily understood and remembered

The facts in the first place, must be correctly observed. The observations made must, in the next place, be recorded in apt language, and each of these operations is one of far greater delicacy and difficulty than is usually supposed, for it is almost impossible to discriminate between observation and inference, or to make language a bare record of our perceptions instead of being a running commentary upon them. To go into these and some kindred points would extend this inquiry beyond all reasonable bounds, and I accordingly pass them over with this slight reference to their existence. Assuming, then, the existence of observation and language sufficiently correct for common purposes, how are they to be applied to inquiries into matters of fact?

An answer to these questions, sufficient for the present purpose, will be supplied by what is said on the [24] subject by Mr. Mill in the first great lesson learnt from the observation of the world in which we live, is that a fixed order prevails amongst the various things which surround us. The sun turns round the earth, the earth turns round the sun, and so on. The force of gravitation is the same in all cases, and the maintenance of the water of its properties as a fluid, are conditions necessary to the sinking of lead in water, that the maintenance by the

Propositions

Illustrations

True propositions

How true propositions are to be framed

Facts must be correctly observed and properly recorded

Mr. Mill's theory of logic — a fixed order prevails in the world heavely bodies of their respective positions, and the persistency of the various forces by which their paths are determined, are the conditions under which day and night succeed each other

Induction and deduc-tion

The great problem is to find out what particular antecedents and consequents are thus connected together, and what are the conditions of their connection? For this purpose two processes are employed, namely, induction and deduction. Deduction assumes and rests upon previous inductions, and derives a great part at least of its value from the means which it affords of carrying on the process of thought from the point at which induction stops. The questions—What is [25] the ultimate foundation of induction? Why are we justified in believing that all men will die because we have reason to believe that all men hitherto have died? Or that every particle of matter whatever will continue to attract every other particle of matter with a force bearing a certain fixed proportion to its mass and its distance, because other particles of matter have hitherto been observed to do so? are questions which lie beyond the limits of the present inquiry. For practical purposes it is enough to assume that such inferences are valid, and will be found by experience to yield true results in the shape of general propositions, from which we can argue downwards to particular cases according to the rules of verbal logic.

Mere observation of facts
insufficient

True general propositions, however, cannot be extracted directly from the observation of nature or of human conduct as every fact which we can observe, however apparently simple, is in reality so intricate that it would give us little or no information unless it were connected with and checked by other facts. What, for instance, can appear more natural and simple than the following facts? A tree is cut down. It falls to the ground. Several birds which were perched upon it fly away. Its fall raises a cloud of dust which is dispersed by the wind and splashes up some of the water in a pond. Natural and simple as this seems, it raises a host of questions. The tree falls all away? What becomes of the water? [26] In all these facts so many illustrations of the rules by which we can calculate the force of gravity, and the action of fluids on bodies immersed in them is the problem of science in general, and of induction and deduction in particular.

Proceeding of induction

Can it be that the method of induction is the method of deduction?

Methods of agreement and difference

The nature of these methods is as follows —
All events may be regarded as effects of antecedent causes.
Every effect is preceded by a group of events, one or more of which are its true cause or causes, and all of which are possible causes.
The problem is to discriminate between the possible and the true cause.
[27] If whenever the effect occurs one possible cause occurs the other possible causes varying the possible cause which is constant is probably the true cause, and the strength of this probability is measured by the persistency with which the one possible cause recurs, and the extent to which the other possible causes vary. Arguments founded on such a state of things are arguments on the method of agreement.

* 1 The method of agreement 2—The method of difference 3—The joint method of agreement and difference 4—The method of residues 5—The method of concomitant variation

If the effect occurs when a particular set of possible causes precedes its occurrence and does not occur when the same set of possible causes co-exist, one only being absent the possible cause which was present when the effect was produced, and was absent when it was not produced is the true cause of the effect. Arguments founded on such a state of things are arguments on the method of difference.

The following illustration makes the matter plain. Various materials are mixed together on several occasions. In each case soap is produced, and in each case oil and alkali are two of the materials so mixed. It is probable from this that oil and alkali are the causes of the soap, and the degree of the probability is measured by the number of the experiments and the variety of the ingredients other than oil and alkali. This is the method of agreement.

Various materials of which oil and alkali are two, are mixed, and soap is produced. The same materials with the exception of the oil and alkali, are mixed and soap is not produced. The mixture of the oil and alkali is the cause of the soap. This is the method of difference. The case [28] would obviously be the same if oil and alkali only were mixed. Soap was unknown, and upon the mixture being made other things being unchanged, soap came into existence.

These are the most important of the rules of induction, but induction is only one step towards the solution of the problems which nature presents. In the statement of the rules of induction it is assumed for the sake of simplicity that all the causes and all the effects under examination are separate and independent facts and that each cause is connected with some one single effect. This however is not the case. A given effect may be produced by any one of several causes. Various causes may contribute to the production of a single effect. This is peculiarly important in reference to the method of agreement. If that method is applied to a small number of instances its value is small. For instance other substances might produce soap by their combination besides oil and alkali, say for instance that the combination of A and B and that of C and D could do so. Then if there were two experiments as follows

Difficulties
—Several causes producing the same effect —result as to the method of agreement

(1) oil and alkali A and B produce soap,

(2) oil and alkali C and D produce soap, soap would be produced in each case, but whether by the combination of oil and alkali or by the combination of A and B or by that of C and D, or by the combination of oil or of alkali with A, B, C or D, would be altogether uncertain.

[29] A watch is stolen from a place to which A, B and C only had access. Another watch is stolen from another place to which A, D and E only had access.

In each instance A is one of three persons, one of whom must have stolen the watch but this is consistent with it having been stolen by any of the other persons mentioned.

This weakness of the method of agreement can be cured only by so great a multiplication of instances as to make it highly improbable that any other antecedent than the one present in every instance could have caused the effect present in every instance.

Weakest of the method of agreement
—how cured

For the statement of the theory of chances and its bearing on the probability of events I must refer those who wish to pursue the subject to the many works which have been written upon it, but its general validity will be inferred by every one from the common observation of life. If it was certain that cither A or B, A or C, A or D, and so forth, up to A and Z, had committed one of a large number of successive thefts of the same kind no one could doubt that A was the thief

It is extremely difficult, in practice, to apply such a test as this, and the test when applied is peculiarly liable to error, as each separate alternative requires distinct proof. In the case supposed, for instance, it would be necessary to ascertain separately in each of the cases relied upon, first, that a theft had been committed, then, that one of two persons must have committed it, and [30] lastly, that in each case the evidence bore with equal weight upon each of them

Inter-mixture of effects and interference of causes with each other

The intermixture of effects and the interference of causes with each other is a matter of much greater intricacy and difficulty

It may take place in one of two ways, viz —

(1) "In the one, which is exemplified by the joint operation of different forces in mechanics, the separate effects of all the causes continue to be produced, but are compounded together, and disappear in one total

(2) "In the other, illustrated by the case of chemical action the separate effects cease entirely and are succeeded by phenomena altogether different and governed by different laws

In the second case the inductive methods already stated may be applied, though it has difficulties of its own to which I need not now refer

In the first case i.e. where an effect is not the result of any one cause but the result of several causes modifying each other's operation the results cease to be separately discernible. Some cancel each other. Others merge in one sum and in this case there is often an insurmountable difficulty in tracing by observation any fixed relation whatever between the causes and the effects. A body for instance is at rest. This may be the effect of the action of two opposite forces exactly counteracting each other but how are such causes to be inferred from such an effect?

A balloon ascends into the air. This appears if it is [31] treated as an isolated phenomenon to form an exception to the theory of gravitation. It is in reality an illustration of that theory, though several concomitant facts and independent theories must be understood and combined together before this can be ascertained

The difficulty of applying the inductive methods to such cases arises from the fact that they assume the absence of the state of things supposed. The subsequent and antecedent phenomena must be assumed to be capable of specific and separate observation before it can be asserted that a given fact invariably follows another given fact, or that two sets of possible causes resemble each other in every particular with a single exception

Deductive
method

It is necessary of which is as follows as a premiss from as to what must drawn is compared with the deduction from the inductive premiss the inference is that the phenomenon is explained. The complete method inductive and deductive thus involves three steps — causal Establishing the premiss by induction, or what, in practice comes to the same thing by a previous deduction resting ultimately upon induction,

* 1 reasoning according to the rules of logic to a conclusion, of agreement variations

[32] (3) Verification of the conclusion by observation

The whole process is illustrated by the discovery and proof of the identity of the central force of the solar system with the force of gravity as known on the earth's surface. The steps in it were as follows — Illustration

(1) It was proved by deductions resting ultimately upon inductions that the earth attracts the moon with a force varying inversely as the square of the distance

This is the first step the establishment of the premiss by a process resting ultimately upon induction

(2) The moon's distance from the earth and the actual amount of her deflexion from the tangent being known it was ascertained with what rapidity the earth's attraction would cause the moon to fall if she were no further off and no more acted upon by extraneous forces than terrestrial bodies are

This is the second step the reasoning regulated by the rules of logic

(3) Finally this calculated velocity being compared with the observed velocity with which all heavy bodies fall by mere gravity towards the surface of the earth (sixteen feet in the first second forty eight in the second and so forth in the ratio of the old numbers) the two quantities are found to agree

This is the verification. The facts observed agree with the facts calculated, therefore the true principle of calculation has been taken

This paraphrase for it is no more of Mr Mill—is I hope [33] sufficient to show, in general the it aims at framing true to the present purpose illustrate the general their application to scientific inquiry. Before inquiring into the application of these principles to judicial investigations it will be convenient to compare the conditions under which judicial and scientific investigations are carried on

In some essential points they resemble each other. Inquiries into matters of fact of whatever kind and with whatever object are in all cases whatever, inquiries from the known to the unknown from our present perceptions or our present ideas to what had been Judicial and scientific inquiries compared—resemblances proceed upon the supposition that there is a general uniformity both in natural events and in human conduct that all events are connected together as cause and effect and that the process of applying this principle to particular cases and of specifying the manner in which it works, though a difficult and delicate operation can be performed

There are however several great differences between inquiries which are commonly called scientific inquiries that is into the order and course of nature and inquiries into isolated matters of fact whether [34] for judicial or historical purposes or for the purposes of every-day life. The differences must be carefully observed before we can undertake with much advantage the task of applying to the one subject the principles which appear to be true Differences

The first difference is that in reference to isolated events we can never or very seldom perform experiments but are tied down to a fixed number of relevant facts which can never be increased First difference as to amount of evidence

The great object of physical science is to invent general formulas (perhaps unfortunately called laws) which when ascertained sum up and enable us to understand the present and predict the future course of nature. These laws are ultimately deduced by the method already described from individual facts, but any one fact of an infinite number will serve the purpose of a scientific In scientific inquiries uniformity inquirer as well as any other, and in many, perhaps in most cases it is possible to arrange facts for the purpose. In order, for instance, to ascertain the force of terrestrial gravity, it was necessary to measure the time occupied by different bodies in falling through given spaces and every such observation was an isolated fact. If however, one experiment failed or was interfered with if an observation was inaccurate or if a disturbing cause as for instance the resistance of the atmosphere had not been allowed for, nothing could be easier than to repeat the process, and inferences drawn from any one set of experiments [35] were obviously as much to be trusted as inferences drawn from any other set. Thus with regard to inquiries into physical nature relevant facts can be multiplied to a practically unlimited extent and it may by the way be observed that the ease with which this has been assumed in all ages is a strong argument that the course of nature does impress mankind as being uniform under superficial variations. For many centuries before the modern discoveries in astronomy were made the motions of the heavenly bodies were carefully observed and inferences as to their future course were founded upon those observations. Such observations would have been useless and unmeaning but for the tacit assumption that what they had done in times past they would continue to do for the future.

In judicial inquiries
limited

In inquiries into isolated events this great resource is not available. Where the object is to decide what happened on a particular occasion we can hardly ever draw inferences of any value from what happened on similar occasions because the groups of events which form the subject of historical or judicial inquiry are so intricate that it can scarcely ever be assumed that they will repeat or that they have repeated themselves. If we wish to know what happened two thousand years ago when specific quantities of oxygen and hydrogen were combined under given circumstances we can obtain complete certainty by repeating the experiment but the whole course of human history must recur before we could witness a second assassination of Julius Caesar.

cannot be
cases

[36] With reference to such events we are tied down inexorably to a certain limited amount of evidence. We know so much of the assassination of Caesar as has been told us by the historians who are to us ultimate authorities and we know no more. Their testimony must be taken subject to all the deductions which experience shows to be necessary in receiving as true statements made by historical writers on subjects which interest their feelings and upon the authority of materials which are no longer extant and therefore cannot be weighed or criticized. Unless by some unforeseen accident new materials on the subject should come to light a few pages of general history will for ever comprise the whole amount of human knowledge upon this subject and any doubts about it whether they rise from inherent improbabilities in the story itself from differences of detail in the different narratives or from general considerations as to the untrustworthy character of historians writing on hearsay and at a considerable distance of time from the events which they relate are and must remain for ever unsolved and insoluble.

Object of scientific
inquiries

Besides this different and historical inquiries inquiries are directed fold—the satisfaction of a form of curiosity which to those who feel it at all is one of the most powerful and which happens also to be one of the most generally useful elements of human [37] nature and the attainment of practical results of very various kinds. Neither of these ends can be attained unless and until the problems stated by nature have been solved partially it may be but at all events truly as far as the solution goes. On the other hand there is no pressing or immediate necessity for their solution. Every scientific question is always open and the answer to it may be discovered after vain attempts to discover it have been made for thousands of years or an answer long accepted may be rejected and replaced by a better answer after an equally long period. In short, in scientific inquiries, absolute truth, or as near an approach to it as can be made, is the one thing needful, and is the constant object of pursuit. So one ascertained querer neither is, g the possibility of error, he is bound, to the extent, at least, of that possibility, to suspend his judgment.

In judicial inquiries (I need not here notice historical inquiries) the case is different. It is necessary for urgent practical purposes to arrive at a decision which after a definite process has been gone through, becomes final and irreversible. It is obvious that, under these circumstances, the patient suspension of judgment, and the high standard of certainty required by scientific inquirers, cannot be expected. Judicial decisions must proceed upon imperfect materials and must be made at the risk of error.

Object of judicial inquiries

[38] Finally inquirers into physical science have an additional advantage over those who conduct judicial inquiries, in the fact that the evidence before them in so far as they have to depend upon oral evidence is infinitely more trustworthy than that which is brought forward in Courts of Justice. The reasons of this are manifold. In the first place, the facts which a scientific observer has to report do not affect his passions. In the second place, his evidence about them is not taken at all unless his powers of observations have been more or less trained and can be depended upon. In the third place he can hardly know what will be the inference from the facts which he observes until his observations have been combined with those of other persons so that if he were otherwise disposed to misstate them he would not know what his statement would serve his purpose. In the fourth place, he knows that his observations will be confronted with others so that if he is careless or inaccurate and a fortiori if he should be dishonest, he would be found out. In the fifth place, the class of facts which he observes are, generally speaking, simple, and he is usually provided with means specially arranged for the purpose of securing accurate observations and a careful record of its results.

Evidence in scientific inquiries trustworthy

The very opposite of all this is true as regards witnesses in a Court of Justice. The facts to which they testify are as a rule facts in which they are more or less interested and which in many cases excite their strongest passions to the highest degree. [39] The witnesses are very seldom trained to observe any facts or to express themselves with accuracy upon any subject. They know what the point at issue is and how their evidence bears upon it so that they can shape it according to the effect which they wish to produce. They are generally so situated that a large part at least of what they say is a cure from contradiction and the facts which they have to observe being in most instances portions of human conduct are so intricate that even with the best intention on the part of the witness to speak the truth he will generally be inaccurate and almost always incomplete in his account of what occurred.

Evidence in judicial inquiries less trustworthy

So far it appears that our opportunities for investigating and proving the existence of isolated facts are much inferior to our opportunities for investigating and proving the formulas which are commonly called the laws of nature. There is however something to be said on the other side. Though the evidence available in judicial and historical inquiries is often scanty and is always lived in amount and though the facts which form the subject of such inquiries are far more intricate than those which attract the inquirer into physical nature, though the judge and the historian can derive no light from experiments, though in a word their apparatus for ascertaining the truth is far inferior to that of which physical inquirers dispose the task which they have to perform is proportionally easier and less ambitious. It is attended moreover by some special facilities which are great helps in performing it satisfactorily.

Advantages of judicial over scientific inquiries inquirer as well as any other, and in many, perhaps in most, cases it is possible to arrange facts for the purpose. In order, for instance, to ascertain the force of terrestrial gravity, it was necessary to measure the time occupied by different bodies in falling through given spaces, and every such observation was an isolated fact. If, however, one experiment failed, or was interfered with, if an observation was inaccurate, or if a disturbing cause, as, for instance, the resistance of the atmosphere had not been allowed for, nothing could be easier than to repeat the process, and inferences drawn from any one set of experiments [35] were obviously as much to be trusted as inferences drawn from any other set. Thus, with regard to inquiries into physical nature relevant facts can be multiplied to a practically unlimited extent, and it may, by the way, be observed that the ease with which this has been assumed in all ages is a strong argument that the course of nature does impress mankind as being uniform under superficial variations. For many centuries before the modern discoveries in astronomy were made, the motions of the heavenly bodies were carefully observed and inferences as to their future course were founded upon those observations. Such observations would have been useless and unmeaning but for the tacit assumption that what they had done in times past they would continue to do for the future.

In judicial inquiries
limited

In inquiries into isolated events this great resource is not available. Where the object is to decide what happened on a particular occasion, we can hardly ever draw inferences of any value from what happened on similar occasions, because the groups of events which form the subject of historical or judicial inquiry are so intricate that it can scarcely ever be assumed that they will repeat, or that they have repeated, themselves. If we wish to know what happened two thousand years ago when specific quantities of oxygen and hydrogen were combined under given circumstances we can obtain complete certainty by repeating the experiment, but the whole course of human history must recur before we could witness a second assassination of Julius Caesar.

It cannot be eased

[36] With reference to such events we are tied down inexorably to a certain limited amount of evidence. We know so much of the assassination of Caesar as has been told us by the historians who are to us ultimate authorities and we know no more. Their testimony must be taken subject to all the deductions which experience shows to be necessary in receiving as true statements made by historical writers on subjects which interest their feelings and upon the authority of materials which are no longer extant and therefore cannot be weighed or criticized. Unless by some unforeseen accident new materials on the subject should come to light a few pages of general history will for ever comprise the whole amount of human knowledge upon this subject, and any doubts about it whether they rise from inherent improbabilities in the story itself from differences of detail in the different narratives or from general considerations as to the untrustworthy character of historians writing on hearsay, and at a considerable distance of time from the events which they relate are and must remain for ever unsolved and insoluble.

Object of scientific
inquiries

fold,—the satisfaction of a form of curiosity which to those who feel it at all, is one of the most powerful and which happens also to be one of the most generally useful elements of human [37] nature, and the attainment of practical results of very various kinds. Neither of these ends can be attained unless and until the problems stated by nature have been solved, partially, it may be, but at all events truly, as far as the solution goes. On the other hand there is no pressing or immediate necessity for their solution. Every scientific question is always open and the answer to it may be discovered after many attempts to discover it have been made for thousands of years, or an answer long accepted may scientific which the is two

be rejected and replaced by a better answer after an equally long period. In short, in scientific inquiries, absolute truth, or as near an approach to it as can be made, is the one thing needful, and is the constant object of pursuit. So one ascertained quiver neither is, g the possibility of error, he is bound, to the extent, at least, of that possibility, to suspend his judgment.

In judicial inquiries (I need not here notice historical inquiries) the case is different. It is necessary for urgent practical purposes to arrive at a decision which, after a definite process has been gone through, becomes final and irreversible. It is obvious that under these circumstances the patient suspension of judgment, and the high standard of certainty required by scientific inquirers, cannot be expected. Judicial decisions must proceed upon imperfect materials and must be made at the risk of error.

[38] Finally inquirers into physical science have an additional advantage over those who conduct judicial inquiries, in the fact that the evidence before them in so far as they have to depend upon oral evidence is infinitely more trustworthily than that which is brought forward in Courts of Justice. The reasons of this are manifold. In the first place the facts which a scientific observer has to report do not affect his passions. In the second place his evidence about them is not taken at all unless his powers of observations have been more or less trained and can be depended upon. In the third place he can hardly know what will be the inference from the facts which he observes until his observations have been combined with those of other persons so that if he were otherwise disposed to misstate them he would not know what misstatement would serve his purpose. In the fourth place he knows that his observations will be confronted with others so that if he is careless or inaccurate and a fortiori if he should be dishonest, he would be found out. In the fifth place, the class of facts which he observes are, generally speaking simple, and he is usually provided with means specially arranged for the purpose of securing accurate observations and a careful record of its results.

The very opposite of all this is true as regards witnesses in a Court of Justice. The facts to which they testify are as a rule facts in which they are more or less interested and which in many cases excite their strongest passions to the highest degree. [39] The witnesses are very seldom trained to observe any facts or to express themselves with accuracy upon any subject. They know what the point at issue is and how their evidence bears upon it so that they can shape it according to the effect which they wish to produce. They are generally so situated that a large part at least of what they say is secure from contradiction and the facts which they have to observe being in most instances portions of human conduct are so intricate that even with the best intention on the part of the witness to speak the truth he will generally be inaccurate and almost always incomplete in his account of what occurred.

So far it appears that our opportunities for investigating and proving the existence of isolated facts are much inferior to our opportunities for investigating and proving the formulas which are commonly called the laws of nature. There is however something to be said on the other side. Though the evidence available in judicial and historical inquiries is often scanty and is always fixed in amount and though the facts which form the subject of such inquiries are far more intricate than those which attract the inquirer into physical nature, though the judge and the historian can derive no light from experiments, though in a word their apparatus for ascertaining the truth is far inferior to that of which physical inquirers dispose the task which they have to perform is proportionally easier and less ambitious. It is attended moreover, by some special facilities which are great helps in performing it satisfactorily.

inquirer as well as any other, and in many, perhaps in most, cases it is possible to arrange facts for the purpose. In order, for instance, to ascertain the force of terrestrial gravity, it was necessary to measure the time occupied by different bodies in falling through given spaces, and every such observation was an isolated fact. If, however, one experiment failed, or was interfered with, if an observation was inaccurate, or if a disturbing cause, as, for instance, the resistance of the atmosphere had not been allowed for, nothing could be easier than to repeat the process, and inferences drawn from any one set of experiments [35] were obviously as much to be trusted as inferences drawn from any other set. Thus, with regard to inquiries into physical nature relevant facts can be multiplied to a practically unlimited extent, and it may, by the way, be observed that the ease with which such experiments can be repeated is one of the chief reasons why the course of scientific variations in the physical sciences is so much more regular than in the social sciences. In the physical sciences, where the same experiments can be repeated over and over again, and inferences as to their future course were founded upon those observations. Such observations would have been useless and unmeaning but for the tacit assumption that what they had done in times past they would continue to do for the future.

In judicial inquiries limited

In inquiries into isolated events this great resource is not available. Where the object is to decide what happened on a particular occasion we can hardly ever draw inferences of any value from what happened on similar occasions because the groups of events which form the subject of historical or judicial inquiry are so intricate that it can scarcely ever be assumed that they will repeat, or that they have repeated themselves. If we wish to know what happened two thousand years ago when specific quantities of oxygen and hydrogen were combined under given circumstances we can obtain complete certainty by repeating the experiment but the whole course of human history must recur before we could witness a second assassination of Julius Caesar.

It cannot be repeated

[36] With reference to such events we are tied down inexorably to a certain limited amount of evidence. We know so much of the assassination of Caesar as has been told us by the historians who are to us ultimate authorities and we know no more. Their testimony must be taken subject to all the deductions which experience shows to be necessary in receiving as true statements made by historical writers on subjects which interest their feelings and upon the authority of materials which are no longer extant and therefore cannot be weighed or criticized. Unless by some unforeseen accident new materials on the subject should come to light a few pages of general history will for ever comprise the whole amount of human knowledge upon this subject and any doubts about it whether they rise from inherent improbabilities in the story itself, from differences of detail in the different narratives or from general considerations as to the untrustworthy character of historians writing on hearsay, and at a considerable distance of time from the events which they relate are and must remain for ever unsolved and insoluble.

Object of scientific inquiries

Besides this difference as to the quantity of evidence accessible in scientific and historical inquiries, there is a great difference as to the objects to which the course of nature is two those who feel it at all,

be one of the most general results of very various kinds. Neither of these ends can be attained unless and until the problems stated by nature have been solved, partially, it may be, but at all events truly, as far as the solution goes. On the other hand, there is no pressing or immediate necessity for their solution. Every scientific question is always open and the answer to it may be discovered after vain attempts to discover it have been made for thousands of years, or an answer long accepted may be rejected and replaced by a better answer after an equally long period. In short, in scientific inquiries, absolute truth, or as near an approach to it as can be made, is the one thing needful, and is the constant object of pursuit. So any one ascertained inquirer neither is, nor can be, ascertaining the possibility of error, he is bound, to the extent, at least, of that possibility, to suspend his judgment

In judicial inquiries (I need not here notice historical inquiries) the case is different. It is necessary for urgent practical purposes to arrive at a decision which, after a definite process has been gone through, becomes final and irreversible. It is obvious that under these circumstances the patient suspension of judgment, and the high standard of certainty required by scientific inquirers cannot be expected. Judicial decisions must proceed upon imperfect materials and must be made at the risk of error.

Object of judicial
inquiries

[38] Finally inquirers into physical science have an additional advantage over those who conduct judicial inquiries in the fact that the evidence before them in so far as they have to depend upon oral evidence is infinitely more trustworthy than that which is brought forward in Courts of Justice. The reasons of this are manifold. In the first place the facts which a scientific observer has to report do not affect his passions. In the second place his evidence about them is not taken at all unless his powers of observation have been more or less trained and can be depended upon. In the third place he can hardly know what will be the inference from the facts which he observes until his observations have been combined with those of other persons so that if he were otherwise disposed to misstate them he would not know what his statement would serve his purpose. In the fourth place he knows that his observations will be confronted with others so that if he is careless or inaccurate and a fortiori if he should be dishonest he would be found out. In the fifth place, the class of facts which he observes are generally speaking simple, and he is usually provided with means specially arranged for the purpose of securing accurate observations, and a careful record of its results.

Evidence in scientific inquiries trustworthy

The very opposite of all this is true as regards witnesses in a Court of Justice. The facts to which they testify are as a rule facts in which they are more or less interested and which in many cases excite their strongest passions to the highest degree. [39] The witnesses are very seldom trained to observe any facts or to express themselves with accuracy upon any subject. They know what the point at issue is, and how their evidence bears upon it so that they can wish to produce. They are generally what they say is secure from contradiction to observe being in most instances

Evidence in judicial inquiries
less trustworthy

portions of human conduct are so intricate that even with the best intention on the part of the witness to speak the truth he will generally be inaccurate and almost always incomplete in his account of what occurred.

So far it appears that our opportunities for investigating and proving the existence of isolated facts are much inferior to our opportunities for investigating facts which are commonly called the laws of nature. There are, on the other side, though the evidence available in scientific inquiries is often scanty, and is always fixed in amount, and though the facts which form the subject of such inquiries are far more intricate than those which attract the inquirer into physical nature, though the judge and the historian can derive no light from experiments, though in a word their apparatus for ascertaining the truth is far inferior to that of which physical inquirers dispose, the task which they have to perform is proportionally easier and less ambitious. It is attended moreover, by some special facilities which are not at all helpful in performing it satisfactorily.

Advantages of judicial over scientific inquiries

Maxims
more easily appreciated

[40] The question whether it is in the nature of things possible that general formulas should ever be devised by the aid of which human conduct can be explained and predicted in the short specific manner in which physical phenomena are explained and predicted has been the subject of great discussion and is not yet decided but no one doubts that approximate rules have been framed which are sufficiently precise to be of great service in estimating the probability of particular events. Whether or not any proposition as to human conduct can ever be enunciated approaching in generality and accuracy to the proposition that the force of gravity varies inversely as the square of the distance, no one would feel disposed to deny that a recent possessor of stolen property who does not explain his possession is probably either the thief or a receiver, or that if a man refuses to produce a document in his possession the contents of the document are probably unfavourable to him. In inquiries into isolated facts for practical purposes such rules as these are nearly as useful as rules of greater generality and exactness though they are of little service when the object is to interpret a series of facts either for practical or theoretical purposes. If for instance the question is whether a particular person committed a crime in the course of which he made use of water knowledge of the facts that there was a pump in his garden and that water can be drawn from a well by working the pump handle is as useful as the most perfect knowledge of hydrostatics. But if the question were as to the means by which water [41] could be supplied for a house and field during practice of hydrostatics the more extensive the knowledge required

Their limitations
more easily
perceived

To this it must be added that the approximate rules which relate to human conduct are warranted principally by each man's own experience of what passes in his own mind corroborated by his observation of the conduct of other persons which every one is obliged to interpret upon the hypothesis that their mental processes are substantially similar to his own. Experience appears to show that the results given by this process are correct within narrower limits of error than might have been supposed though the limits are wide enough to leave room for the exercise of a great amount of individual skill and judgment.

This circumstance invests the rules relating to human conduct with a very peculiar character. They are usually expressed with little precision and stand in need of many exceptions and qualifications but they are of greater practical use than rough generalizations of the same kind about physical nature because the personal experience of those by whom they are used readily supplies the qualifications and exceptions which they require. Compare two such rules as these heavy bodies fall to the ground the recent possessor of stolen goods is the thief. The rise of a balloon into the air would constitute an unexplained truth doing with out having stolen them. Every one would see at once that such a case formed one of the many unstated exceptions to the rule. The reason is that we know external nature only by observation of a neutral unsympathetic kind whereas every man knows more of human nature than any general rule on the subject can ever tell him.

Judicial
problems are simpler than scientific problems

To these considerations it must be added that to inquire whether an isolated fact exists is a far simpler problem than to ascertain and prove the rule according to which facts of a given class happen. The enquiry falls within a smaller compass. The process is generally deductive. The deductions depend which of
The

deductions, too are as a rule of various kinds and so cross and check each other and thus supply each other's deficiencies

For instance from one series of facts it may be inferred that A had a strong motive to commit a crime say the murder of B. From an independent set of facts it may be inferred that B died of poison and from another independent set of facts that A administered the poison of which B died. The question is whether [43] A falls within the small class of murderers by poison. If he does various propositions about him must be true no two of which have any necessary connection except upon the hypothesis that he is a murderer. In this case three such propositions are supposed to be true:— (1) the death of B by poison (2) the administration of it by A and (3) the motive for its administration. Each separate proposition as it is established narrows the number of possible hypotheses upon the subject. When it is established that B died of poison innumerable hypotheses which would explain the fact of his death consistently with A's innocence are excluded when it is proved that A administered the poison of which B died every supposition consistent with A's innocence except those of accident justification and the like are excluded when it is shown that A had any one of the difficulty of establishing increased and the number crowded in a corresponding degree

Illustrations

This suggests another remark of the highest importance in estimating real weight of judicial inquiries. It is that such inquiries in all civilized countries are or at least ought to be conducted in such a manner as to give every person interested in the result the fullest possible opportunity of establishing the conclusion which he wishes to establish. In the illustration just given A would have at once the strongest motive to explain the fact that he had administered the poison to [44] B and every opportunity to do so. Hence if he failed to do it he would either be a murderer or else a member of that infinitesimally small class of persons who having a motive to commit murder and having administered poison to the person whom they have a motive to murder are unable to suggest any probable reason for supposing that they did administer it innocently.

In judicial inquiries parties interested have opportunities to be heard

The results of the foregoing inquiry may be shortly summed up as follows — Summary of results

I The problem of discovering the truth in relation to matters which are judicially investigated is a part of the general problem of science—the discovery of true propositions as to matters of fact

II The general solution of this problem is contained in the rules of induction and deduction stated by Mr Mill and generally employed for the purpose of conducting and testing the results of inquiries into physical nature

III By the due application of these rules facts may be exhibited as standing towards each other in the relation of cause and effect and we are able to argue from the cause to the effect and from the effect to the cause with a degree of certainty and precision proportionate to the completeness with which the relevant facts have been observed or are accessible

IV The leading differences between judicial investigations and inquiries into physical nature are as follows —

1 In physical inquiries the number of relevant facts is generally unlimited and is capable of indefinite increase by experiments

[45] In judicial investigations the number of relevant facts is limited by circumstances and is incapable of being increased

2 Physical inquiries can be prolonged for any time that may be required in order to obtain full proof of the conclusion reached, and when a conclusion has been reached, it is always liable to review if fresh facts are discovered, or if any objection is made to the process by which it was arrived at

In judicial investigation it is necessary to arrive at a definite result in a limited time, and when that result is arrived at, it is final and irreversible with exceptions too rare to require notice

3 In physical inquiries the relevant facts are usually established by testimony open to no doubt, because they relate to simple facts which do not affect the passions which are observed by trained observers who are exposed to detection if they make mistakes, and who could not tell the effect of misrepresentation, if they were disposed to be fraudulent

In judicial inquiries the relevant facts are generally complex. They affect the passions in the highest degree. They are testified to by untrained observers who are generally not open to contradiction, and are aware of the bearing of the facts which they allege upon the conclusion to be established

4 On the other hand approximate generalizations are more useful in judicial than they are in scientific inquiries because in the case of judicial inquiries every man's [46] individual experience supplies the qualifications and exceptions necessary to adjust general rules to particular facts which is not the case in regard to scientific inquiries

5 Judicial inquiries being limited in extent, the process of reaching as good a conclusion as is to be got out of the materials is far easier than the process of establishing a scientific conclusion with complete certainty, though the conclusion arrived at is less satisfactory

Judicial
inquiries usually produce only a very high degree of probability

It follows from what precedes that the utmost result that can in any case be produced by judicial evidence is a very high degree of probability. Whether upon any subject whatever more than this is possible—whether the highest form of scientific proof amounts to more than an assertion that a certain order in nature has hitherto been observed to take place and that if that order continues to take place such and such events will happen, are questions which have been much discussed but which lie beyond the sphere of the present inquiry. However this may be the reasons given above show why Courts of Justice have to be contented with a lower degree of probability than is rightly demanded in scientific investigation. The highest probability at which a Court of Justice can under ordinary circumstances arrive is the probability that a witness or a set of witnesses affirming the existence of a fact which they say they perceived by their own senses and upon which they could not be mistaken tell the truth. It is difficult to measure the value of such a probability against those which the theories of physical inquirers produce nor would it serve [47] any practical purpose to attempt to do so. It is enough to say that the process by which a comparatively low degree of probability is shown to exist in the one case is identical in principle with that by which a much higher degree of probability is shown to exist in the other case.

Degrees of probability —moral certainty

The degrees of probability attainable in scientific and in judicial inquiries are infinite and do not admit of exact measurement or description. Cases might easily be mentioned in which the degree of probability obtained in either is so high, that if there is any degree of knowledge higher in kind than the knowledge of probabilities it is impossible for any practical purpose to distinguish between the two. Whether any higher degree of assurance is conceivable than that which may easily be obtained of the facts that the earth revolves round the sun and that Delhi was besieged and taken by the English in 1857, is a question which does not belong to this inquiry. For all practical purposes such conclusions as these may be described as absolutely certain. From these down to the faintest guess about the inhabitants of the stars, and the faintest suspicion that a particular person has committed a crime, there is a descending scale of probabilities which does not admit of any but a very rough measurement for practical purposes. The only point in it worth noticing is what is commonly called moral certainty, and this means simply such a degree of probability as a prudent man would act upon under the circumstances in which he [48] happens to be placed in reference to the matter of which he is said to be morally certain.

What constitutes moral certainty is thus a question of prudence and not a question of calculation. It is commonly said in reference to judicial inquiries that in criminal cases guilt ought to be proved 'beyond all reasonable doubt,' and that in civil cases the decision ought to be in favour of the side which is most probably right. To the latter part of this rule there is no objection though it should be added that it cannot be applied absolutely without reserve. For instance a Civil case in which character is at stake partakes more or less of the nature of a Criminal proceeding but the first part of the rule means nothing more than that in most cases the punishment of an innocent man is a great evil and ought to be carefully avoided but that on the other hand it is often ough undefinable degree of uncertainty. The danger of punishing the innocent no doubt the necessity of running some degree of risk of doing so in certain cases is intimated by the word 'reasonable.' The question what sort of doubt is reasonable in Criminal cases is a question of prudence. Hardly any case ever occurs in which it is not possible for an ingenious person to suggest hypotheses consistent with the prisoner's innocence. The hypotheses of falsehood on the part of the witnesses can never be said to be more than highly improbable.

Moral certainty is a question of prudence

[49] Though it is impossible to invent any rule by which different probabilities can be precisely valued it is always possible to say whether or not they fulfil the conditions of what Mr Mill describes as the method of Difference, and if not how nearly they approach to fulfilling it. The principle is precisely the same in all cases however complicated or however simple and whether the nature of the inquiry is scientific or judicial. In all cases the known facts must be arranged and classified with reference to the different hypotheses or unknown or suspected facts by which the existence of the known facts can be accounted for. If every hypothesis except one is inconsistent with one or more of the known facts that one hypothesis is proved. If more than one hypothesis is consistent with the known facts but one only is reasonably probable—that is to say if one only is in accordance with the common course of events that one in judicial inquiries may be said to be proved beyond all reasonable doubt. The word 'reasonable' in this sentence denotes a fluctuating and uncertain quantity of probability (if the expression may be allowed) and shows that the ultimate question in judicial proceedings is and must be in most cases a question of prudence.

Principle of estimating probabilities is that of Mr Mill's method of difference

Let the question be whether A did a certain act the circumstances are such that the act must have been done by somebody but it can have been done only by A or by B. If A and B are equally likely to have done the act the matter cannot be carried further [50] and the question 'Who did it?' must remain undecided. But if the act must have been done by one person if it required great physical strength and if A is an exceedingly powerful man and B a child it may be said to be proved that A did it. If A is stronger than B, but the proportion between their strength is less it is probable that A did it but not impossible that B may have done it and so on. In such a case as this a nearer approach than usual to a distinct measurement of the probability is possible but no complete and definite statement on the subject can be made.

Illustration

2 Physical inquiries can be prolonged for any time that may be required in order to obtain full proof of the conclusion reached, and when a conclusion has been reached, it is always liable to review if fresh facts are discovered or if any objection is made to the process by which it was arrived at

In judicial investigation it is necessary to arrive at a definite result in a limited time and when that result is arrived at, it is final and irreversible with exceptions too rare to require notice

3 In physical inquiries the relevant facts are usually established by testimony open to no doubt because they relate to simple facts which do not affect the passions which are observed by trained observers who are exposed to detection if they make mistakes and who could not tell the effect of misrepresentation if they were disposed to be fraudulent

In judicial inquiries the relevant facts are generally complex. They affect the passions in the highest degree. They are testified to by untrained observers who are generally not open to contradiction and are aware of the bearing of the facts which they allege upon the conclusion to be established

4 On the other hand approximate generalizations are more useful in judicial than they are in scientific inquiries because in the case of judicial inquiries every man's [46] individual experience supplies the qualifications and exceptions necessary to adjust general rules to particular facts, which is not the case in regard to scientific inquiries

5 Judicial inquiries being limited in extent the process of reaching as good a conclusion as is to be got out of the materials is far easier than the process of establishing a scientific conclusion with complete certainty, though the conclusion arrived at is less satisfactory

It follows from what precedes that the utmost result that can in any case be produced by judicial evidence is a very high degree of probability. Whether upon any subject whatever more than this is possible—whether the highest form of scientific proof amounts to more than an assertion that a certain order in nature has hitherto been observed to take place and that if that order continues to take place such and such events will happen—are questions which have been much discussed but which lie beyond the sphere of the present inquiry. However this may be, why Courts of Justice have to be contented with a degree of probability less than is rightly demanded in scientific investigation is a question which a Court of Justice can under ordinary circumstances arrive at. The probability that a witness or a set of witnesses affirming the existence of a fact which they say they perceived by their own senses and upon which they could not be mistaken tell the truth. It is difficult to measure the value of such a probability against those which the theories of physical inquirers produce nor would it serve [47] any practical purpose to attempt to do so. It is enough to say that the process by which a comparatively low degree of probability is shown to exist in the one case is identical in principle with that by which a much higher degree of probability is shown to exist in the other case

The degrees of probability attainable in scientific and in judicial inquiries are infinite and do not admit of exact measurement or description. Cases might easily be mentioned in which the degree of probability obtained in either is so high that if there is any degree of knowledge higher in kind than the knowledge of probabilities it is impossible for any practical purpose to distinguish between the two. Whether any higher degree of assurance is conceivable than that which may easily be obtained of the facts that the earth revolves round the sun and that Delhi was besieged and taken by the English in 1857, is a question which does not belong to this inquiry. For all practical purposes such conclusions as these may be described as absolutely certain. From these

Judicial inquiries usually produce only a very high degree of probability

Degrees of probability—moral certainty

down to the faintest guess about the inhabitants of the stars and the faintest suspicion that a particular person has committed a crime there is a descending scale of probabilities which does not admit of any but a very rough measurement for practical purposes. The only point in it worth noticing is what is commonly called moral certainty, and this means simply such a degree of probability as a prudent man would act upon under the circumstances in which he [48] happens to be placed in reference to the matter of which he is said to be morally certain.

What constitutes moral certainty is thus a question of prudence and not a question of calculation. It is commonly said in reference to judicial inquiries that in criminal cases guilt ought to be proved 'beyond all reasonable doubt,' and that in civil cases the decision ought to be in favour of the side which is most probably right. To the latter part of this rule there is no objection though it should be added that it cannot be applied absolutely without reserve. For instance a Civil case in which character is at stake partakes more or less of the nature of a Criminal proceeding but the first part of the rule means nothing more than that in most cases the punishment of an innocent man is a great evil and ought to be carefully avoided but that on the other hand it is often a rough undefinable degree of uncertainty.

Moral certainty is a question of prudence

The danger of punishing the innocent no doubt the necessity of running some degree of risk of doing so in certain cases is intimated by the word 'reasonable.' The question what sort of doubt is reasonable in Criminal cases is a question of prudence. Hardly any case ever occurs in which it is not possible for an ingenious person to suggest hypotheses consistent with the prisoner's innocence. The hypotheses of falsehood on the part of the witnesses can never be said to be more than highly improbable.

[49] Though it is impossible to invent any rule by which different probabilities can be precisely valued it is always possible to say whether or not they fulfil the conditions of what Mr. Mill describes as the method of Difference, and if not how nearly they approach to fulfilling it. The principle is precisely the same in all cases however complicated or however simple and whether the nature of the inquiry is scientific or judicial. In all cases the known facts must be arranged and classified with reference to the different hypotheses or unknown or suspected facts by which the existence of the known facts can be accounted for. If every hypothesis except one is inconsistent with one or more of the known facts that one hypothesis is proved. If more than one hypothesis is consistent with the known facts but one only is reasonably probable—that is to say if one only is in accordance with the common course of events that one in judicial inquiries may be said to be proved beyond all reasonable doubt. The word 'reasonable' in this sentence denotes a fluctuating and uncertain quantity of probability (if the expression may be allowed) and shows that the ultimate question in judicial proceedings is and must be in most cases a question of prudence.

Principle of estimating probabilities is that of Mr. Mill's method of difference

Let the question be whether A did a certain act, the circumstances are such that the act must have been done by somebody but it can have been done only by A or by B. If A and B are equally likely to have done the act the matter cannot be carried further [50] and the question 'Who did it?' must remain undecided. But if the act must have been done by one person if it required great physical strength and if A is an exceedingly powerful man and B a child it may be said to be proved that A did it. If A is stronger than B but the disproportion between their strength is less it is probable that A did it but not impossible that B may have done it and so on. In such a case as this a nearer approach than usual to a distinct measurement of the probability is possible but no complete and definite statement on the subject can be made.

Illustration

down to the faintest guess about the inhabitants of the stars, and the faintest suspicion that a particular person has committed a crime, there is a descending scale of probabilities which does not admit of any but a very rough measurement for practical purposes. The only point in it worth noticing is what is commonly called moral certainty, and this means simply such a degree of probability as a prudent man would act upon under the circumstances in which he [48] happens to be placed in reference to the matter of which he is said to be morally certain.

What constitutes moral certainty is thus a question of prudence and not a question of calculation. It is commonly said in reference to judicial inquiries that in criminal cases guilt ought to be proved beyond all reasonable doubt, and that in civil cases the decision ought to be in favour of the side which is most probably right. To the latter part of this rule there is no objection though it should be added that it cannot be applied absolutely without reserve. For instance, a Civil case in which character is at stake partakes more or less of the nature of a Criminal proceeding but the first part of the rule means nothing more than that in most cases the punishment of an innocent man is a great evil and ought to be carefully avoided but that on the other hand it is often impossible to eliminate an appreciable though undefinable degree of uncertainty from the decision that a man is guilty. The danger of punishing the innocent is marked by the use of the expression no doubt the necessity of running some degree of risk of doing so in certain cases is intimated by the word reasonable. The question what sort of doubt is reasonable in Criminal cases is a question of prudence. Hardly any case ever occurs in which it is not possible for an ingenious person to suggest hypotheses consistent with the prisoner's innocence. The hypotheses of falsehood on the part of the witnesses can never be said to be more than highly improbable.

Moral certainty is a question of prudence

[49] Though it is impossible to invent any rule by which different probabilities can be precisely valued it is always possible to say whether or not they fulfil the conditions of what Mr Mill describes as the method of Difference and if not how nearly they approach to fulfilling it. The principle is precisely the same in all cases however complicated or however simple and whether the nature of the inquiry is scientific or judicial. In all cases the known facts must be arranged and classified with reference to the different hypotheses or unknown or suspected facts by which the existence of the known facts can be accounted for. If every hypothesis except one is inconsistent with one or more of the known facts that one hypothesis is proved. If more than one hypothesis is consistent with the known facts but one only is reasonably probable—that is to say if one only is in accordance with the common course of events that one in judicial inquiries may be said to be proved beyond all reasonable doubt. The word reasonable in this sentence denotes a fluctuating and uncertain quantity of probability (if the expression may be allowed) and shows that the ultimate question in judicial proceedings is and must be in most cases a question of prudence.

Principle of estimating probabilities is that of Mr Mill's method of difference

Let the question be whether A did a certain act the circumstances are such that the act must have been done by somebody but it can have been done only by A or by B. If A and B are equally likely to have done the act the matter cannot be carried further [50] and the question Who did it? must remain undecided. But if the act must have been done by one person if it required great physical strength and if A is an exceedingly powerful man and B a child it may be said to be proved that A did it. If A is stronger than B, but the disproportion between their strength is less it is probable that A did it but not impossible that B may have done it and so on. In such a case as this a nearer approach than usual to a distinct measurement of the probability is possible but no complete and definite statement on the subject can be made.

Illustration

Judicial
inquiries involve two classes of inferences

Such being the general nature of the object towards which judicial inquiries are directed, and the general nature of the process by which they are carried on, it will be well to examine the chief forms of that process somewhat more particularly

It will be found upon examination that the inferences employed in judicial inquiries fall under two heads —

(1) Inferences from an assertion, whether oral or documentary, to the truth of the matter asserted

(2) Inferences from facts which, upon the strength of such assertions, are believed to exist to facts of which the existence has not been so asserted

For the sake of simplicity, I do not here distinguish various subordinate classes of inferences, such as inferences from the manner in which assertions are made, from silence, from the absence of assertion, and from the conduct of the parties. They may be regarded as so many forms of assertion, and may therefore be classed [51] under the general head of inferences from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted

Direct and circumstantial evidence

This is the distinction usually expressed by saying that all evidence is either direct or circumstantial. I avoid the use of this expression, partly because, as I have already observed, direct evidence means direct assertion whereas circumstantial evidence means a fact on which an inference is to be founded, and partly for the more important reason that the use of the expression favours an unfounded notion that the principles on which the two classes of inference depend are different, and that they have different degrees of cogency, which admit of comparison. The truth is that each inference depends upon precisely the same general theory, though somewhat different considerations apply to the investigation of cases in which the facts testified to are many, and to cases in which the facts testified to are few

The general theory has been already stated. In every case the question is, are the known facts inconsistent with any other than the conclusion suggested? The known facts in every case whatever are the evidence in the narrower sense of the word. The Judge hears with his own ears the statements of the witnesses and sees with his own eyes the documents produced in Court. His task is to infer from what he thus sees and hears the existence of facts which he neither sees nor hears on ra

Let the question be whether a will was executed. Three witnesses, entirely above suspicion come [52] and testify that they witnessed its execution. These assertions are facts which the Judge hears for himself. Now there are three facts which the Judge has to consider in connection with these assertions:—
the Judge has to consider in witnesses that they saw the execution of the will —

(1) The witnesses may be speaking the truth

(2) The witnesses may be mistaken

(3) The witnesses may be telling a falsehood

The circumstances may be would be commonly called a case of direct evidence

Identity of this process with
Mr. Mills theory

Let the question be whether A committed a crime. The facts which the Judge actually knows are that certain witnesses made before him a variety of statements which he believes to be true. The result of these statements is to establish certain facts which show that either A or B or C must have committed the crime and that neither B nor C did commit it. In this case the facts before the Judge would be inconsistent with any other reasonable hypothesis except that A committed the crime. This would be commonly called a case of circumstantial evidence, yet it is obvious that the principle on which the [53] investigation proceeds as in the last case is identically the same. The only difference is in the number of inferences, but no new principle is introduced.

It is also clear that each case is identical in principle with the method of difference as explained by Mr. Mill.

Mr. Mill's illustration of the application of that method to the motions of the planets is as follows:—The planets with a central force give areas proportional to the times. The planets without a central force give a different set of motions, but areas proportional to the times are observed. Therefore there is a central force.

Similarly in the cases suggested. The assertions of the witnesses give the execution of a will, i.e. no other cause can account for those assertions having been made. If the will had not been executed those assertions would not have been made. But the assertions were made. Therefore the will was executed.

Though inferences from an assertion to its truth, and inferences from facts taken as true to other facts not asserted to be true, rest upon the same principle, each inference has its peculiarities.

The inference from the assertion to the truth of the matter asserted is usually regarded as an easy matter calling for little remark.

Though in particular cases it is really easy, and though in a certain sense it rightly is by far the most difficult, scarrings of justice are almost [54] This requires full explanation.

To infer from an assertion the truth of the matter asserted is in one sense the easiest thing in the world. The intellectual process consists of only one step, and that is a step which gives no trouble, and is taken in most cases unconsciously. But to draw the inference in those cases only in which it is true is a matter of the utmost difficulty. If we were able to affirm the proposition

All men upon all occasions speak the truth, the remaining propositions—This man says so and so. Therefore it is true—would present no difficulty. The major premiss, however, is subject to wide exceptions, which are not forced upon the Judge's attention. Moreover, if they were, the Judge has often no means of ascertaining whether or not, and to what extent, they apply to any particular case.

How is it possible to tell how far the powers of observation and memory of a man seen once for a few minutes enable him, and how far the innumerable motives by any one or more of which he may be actuated dispose him, to tell the truth upon the matter on which he testifies? Cross examination supplies a test to a certain extent, but those who have seen most of its application will be disposed to trust it least as a proof that a man not taken by it ought to be believed. A cool steady liar who happens not to be open to contradiction willaffle the most skilful cross-examiner in the absence of accidents which are not so common in practice as [55] persons who take their notions on the subject from anecdotes or fiction would suppose.

No rules of evidence which the legislator can enact can perceptibly affect this difficulty. Judges must deal with it as well as they can by the use of their natural faculties and acquired experience, and the misarrangements of justice in which they will be involved by reason of it must be set down to the imperfection of our means of arriving at truth. The natural and acquired shrewdness, and inference from assertion to matter asserted

Cannot be affected by rules of evidence experience by which an observant man forms an opinion as to whether a witness is or is not lying, is by far the most important of all a Judge's qualifications, infinitely more important than any acquaintance with law or with rules of evidence. No trial ever occurs in which the exercise of this faculty is not required, but it is only in exceptional cases that questions arise which present any legal difficulty or in which it is necessary to exercise any particular ingenuity in putting together the different facts which the evidence tends to establish. This pre-eminently important power for a Judge is not to be learnt out of books. In so far as it can be acquired at all, it is to be acquired only by experience, for the acquisition of which the position of a Judge is by no means peculiarly favourable. People come before him with their cases ready prepared, and give the evidence which they have determined to give. Unless he knows them in their unrestrained and familiar moments he will have great difficulty in finding any good reason for believing one man rather than another. The [56] rules of evidence may provide tests, the value of which has been proved by long experience, by which Judges may be satisfied that the quality of the materials upon which their judgments are to proceed is not open to certain obvious objections; but they do not profess to enable the Judges to know whether or not a particular witness tells the truth or what inference is to be drawn from a particular fact. The correctness with which this is done must depend upon the natural sagacity, the logical power and the practical experience of the Judge, not upon his acquaintance with the law of evidence.

Grounds for believing and disbelieving a witness
Power

The grounds for believing or disbelieving particular statements made by particular people under particular circumstances may be brought under three heads—those which affect the power of the witness to speak the truth, those which affect his will to do so, and those which arise from the nature of the statement itself and from surrounding circumstances. A man's power to speak the truth depends upon his knowledge and his power of expression. This knowledge depends partly on his accuracy in observation, partly on his memory, partly on his presence of mind; his power of expression depends upon an infinite number of circumstances and varies in relation to the subject of which he has to speak.

III

A man's will to speak the truth depends upon his education, his character, his courage, his sense of duty, his relation to the particular facts as to which he is to testify, his humour for the moment, and a thousand [57] other circumstances as to the presence or absence of which in any particular case it is often difficult to form a true opinion.

The third set of reasons are those which depend upon the probability of the statement.

Probability of statement

Many discussions have taken place on the effect of the improbability of a statement upon its credibility in cases which can never fall under judicial consideration. It is unnecessary to enter upon that subject here. Looking at the matter merely in relation to judicial inquiries it is sufficient to observe that whilst the improbability of a statement is always a reason and may be, in practice, a conclusive reason for disbelieving it, its probability is a poor reason for believing it if it rests upon uncorroborated testimony. Probable falsehoods are those which an artful liar naturally tells, and the fact that a good opportunity for telling such a falsehood occurs is the commonest of all reasons for its being told.

Experience is the only guide on the subject

Upon the whole, it must be admitted that little that is really serviceable, can be said upon the inference from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted. The observations of which the matter admits are either generalities too vague to be of much practical use, or they are so narrow and special that they can be learnt only by personal observations and practical experience. Such observations are seldom, if ever, thrown by those who make them into the form of express propositions. Indeed, for obvious reasons, it would be impossible to do so. The most acute observer would never be able [58] to catalogue the tones of voice, the passing shades of expression or the unconscious gestures which he had learnt to associate with falsehood, and if he did, his observations would probably be of little use to others. Every one must learn matters of this sort for himself, and though no sort of knowledge is so important to a Judge, no rules can be laid down for its acquisition (1).

If the opinion here advanced appears strange, I would invite attention to the following illustration — Is there any class of cases in which it is, in practice, [59] so difficult to come to a satisfactory decision as those which depend upon the explicit, direct testimony of a single witness uncorroborated, and, by the nature of the case, incapable of corroboration? For instance, a man and a woman are travelling alone in a railway carriage. The train stops at a station and the woman charges the man with indecent conduct which he denies. Nothing particular is known about the character or previous history of either. The woman is not betrayed on cross examination into any inconsistency. There are no cases in which the difficulty of arriving at a satisfactory decision is anything like so great. It is easy to decide them as it is easy to make a bet, but it is easier to deal satisfactorily with the most complicated and lengthy chain of inference. Illustration.

The uncertainty of inferences from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted may be shown by stating them logically. They may be considered as being the conclusions of syllogisms in this form —

All men situated in such and such a manner speak the truth or speak falsely (as the case may be)

A B, situated in such and such a manner, says so and so

Therefore, in saying so and so, he speaks truly or falsely (as the case may be)

This is a deduction resting on a previous induction and it is obvious that the induction which furnishes the major premiss must always be exceedingly imperfect, and that the truth of the minor premiss, which is essential to the deduction, is always more or less conjectural.

[60] In many cases the defects of inferences of the first kind may be incidentally remedied by inferences of the second kind, namely, inferences from facts which are asserted, and, on the ground of such assertion, believed by the Court to exist, to facts not asserted to exist, and these I now proceed to examine. Inference from facts proved to facts not otherwise proved

I have observed that the inference from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted often is as easy as it always appears to be. In very many Inference from assertion to truth sometimes really easy

(1) I may give a few anecdotes which have no particular value in themselves but which show what I mean. I always used to look at the witnesses' toes when I was cross examining them. I said a friend of mine who had practised at the bar in Ceylon. As soon as they began to lie they always fidgeted about with them. I know a Judge who formed the opinion that a letter had been forged because the expression "that woman" which it contained appeared to him to be one which a woman and not a man would use and the question was whether the letter in question had been forged by a woman. In the life of Lord Keeper Guilford it is said that he always acted on the principle that a man was to be believed in what he said when he was in a passion. The common places about the evidence of police men, children, women and the natives of particular countries belong to this subject. The only remark I feel inclined to add to what is commonly said on it is that according to my observation the power to tell the truth which implies accurate observation knowledge of the relative importance of facts and power of description properly proportioned to each other is much less common than people usually suppose it to be. It is extremely difficult for an untrained person not to mix up inference and assertion. It is also difficult for such a person to distinguish between what they themselves saw and heard and what they were told by others unless their attention is specially directed to the distinction.

instances which it is much easier to recognise when they occur than to reduce to rule a direct assertion even by a single witness of whom little is known is entitled to great weight. Suppose for instance that the matter asserted is of a

which the witness is or for aught he can single assertion of this sort may outweigh

Suppose for instance that a number of witnesses have been called to prove an alibi and that they allege that on a given day they were all present together with the person on behalf of whom the alibi is to be proved at a fair held at a certain place. If the Magistrate of the district whose duty it was to superintend the fair were to depose that the fair did not begin to be held till a day subsequent to the one in question no one would doubt that the witnesses had conspired together to give false evidence by the familiar trick of changing the day. In this case one direct assertion would outweigh many direct assertions. Why? Because the Magistrate of the district would be a man of [61] character and position, because he would (we must assume) be quite indifferent to the particular case in issue because he would be deposing to a fact of which it would be his official duty to be cognizant and on which he could hardly be mistaken, and lastly, because the fact would be known to a vast number of people and he would be open to contradiction, detection and ruin if he spoke falsely. Change these circumstances and the equally explicit testimony of the very same man might be worthless. Suppose for instance that he was asked whether he had committed adultery? His denial would carry hardly any weight in any conceivable case, inasmuch as the charge is one which a guilty man would always deny and an innocent man could do so more. In other words since the course of conduct supposed is one which a man would certainly take whether he were innocent or not the fact of his taking it would afford no criterion as to his guilt or innocence.

Now in almost all judicial proceedings a certain number of facts are established by direct assertions made under such circumstances that no one would seriously doubt their truth. Others are rendered probable in various degrees and thus the judge is furnished with facts which he may use as a basis for his inferences as to the existence of other facts which are either not asserted to exist or are asserted to exist by unsatisfactory witnesses.

h infer
ce com paratively easy

the case are more difficult to draw than ted. In [62] fact it is far than to ascertain that they guidance can be laid down. No process is gone through the correctness of which can afterwards be independently tested. The Judge has nothing to trust to but his own natural and acquired sagacity. In the other case all that is required is to go through a process with which as Mr Huxley remarks every one has a general superficial acquaintance tested by every day practice and the theory of which it is easy to understand and interesting to follow out and apply.

Facts must fulfil test of method of difference

The facts supposed to be proved must ultimately fulfil the conditions of the method of difference but they may be combined by any of the recognised logical methods or by a combination of them all. The object indeed at which they are all directed is the same though they reach it by different roads. A few illustrations will make this plain. The question is whether A has embezzled a small sum of money, say a particular rupee which he received on account of his employer and did not enter in a book in which he ought to have entered it. His defence is that the omission to make the entry was accidental. No account book is examined and it is found that in a long series of instances omission of small sums have been made each of which omissions is in A's favour. This in the absence of explanation would leave no reasonable doubt of A's guilt in each and every case. It would be practically impossible to account for such facts except upon the assumption of [63] systematic fraud. Logically, this is an instance of the Method of Agreement applied to so great a number of instances as to exclude the operation of chance. When however, this is done the Method of Agreement becomes a case of the Method of Difference.

The well known cases in which guilt is inferred from a number of separate independent and so to speak converging probabilities may be regarded as an illustration of the same principle. Their general type is as follows —

B was murdered by some one

Whoever murdered B had a motive for his murder

I had a motive for murdering B

Whoever murdered B had an opportunity for murdering B

I had an opportunity for murdering B

Whoever murdered B made preparations for the murder of B

I acted in a manner which might amount to a preparation for murdering B

In each of these instances which might of course be indefinitely multiplied one item of agreement is established between the ascertained fact that B was murdered and the hypothesis that I murdered him and it does sometimes happen that these coincidences may be multiplied to such an extent and may be of such a character as to exclude the supposition of chance and justify the inference that I was guilty (1). The case however is a [64] rare one and there is always a great risk of injustice unless the facts proved go beyond the mere multiplication of circumstances separately indicating guilt and amount to a substantial exclusion of every reasonable possibility of innocence.

The celebrated passage in Lord Macaulay's Essays in which he seeks to prove that Sir Philip Francis was the author of Junius's letters is an instance of an argument of this kind. The letters he says show that five facts can be predicated of Junius whoever he may have been. But these five facts may also be predicated of Sir Philip Francis and of no one else. Whether any part of this argument can in fact be sustained is a question to which it would be impertinent to refer here but that the method on which it proceeds is legitimate there can be no doubt.

The cases in which it is most probable that injustice will be done by the application of the method of agreement to judicial inquiries are those in which the existence of the principal fact has to be inferred from circumstances pointing to it. This is the foundation of the well known rule that the corpus delicti should not in general in criminal cases be inferred from other facts but should be proved independently. It has been sometimes narrowed to the proposition that no one should be convicted of murder unless the body of the murdered person has been discovered. Neither of these rules is more than a rough and partial application of the general principle stated above. If the circumstances are [65] such as to make it morally certain (within the definition given above) that a crime has been committed the inference that it was so committed is as safe as any other such inference.

The captain of a ship, a thousand miles from any land and with no other help by several mutinous sailors. The sailors soon afterwards open the cabin windows. The cabin windows are opened. The cabin is in confusion and the captain is never seen or heard of again.

A person looks at his watch and returns it to his pocket. Immediately afterwards a man comes past and makes a snatch at the watch which disappears. The man being pursued runs away and swims across a river, he is arrested on the other side. He has now watch in his possession and the watch is never found.

(1) See Richardson's case p. 89 (i.e. 45 of this introduction).

In these cases it is morally certain that murder and theft respectively were committed, though in the first case the body, and in the second the watch is not producible.

Existence of corpus delicti sometimes wrongly inferred

Cases, however, do undoubtedly occur in which the inference that a crime has been committed at all is a mistake. They may often be resolved into a case of begging the question. The process is this: suspicious that a crime has been committed is excited, upon inquiry a number of circumstances are discovered which, if it is assumed that a crime has been committed, are suspicious, but which are not suspicious unless the assumption is made.

[66] A ship is cast away under such circumstances that her loss may be accounted for either by fraud or by accident.

The captain is tried for making away with her. A variety of circumstances exist which would indicate preparation and expectation on his part if the ship really was made away with, but which would justify no suspicion at all if she was not. It is manifestly illogical first to regard the antecedent circumstances as suspicious, because the loss of the ship is assumed to be fraudulent and next to infer that the ship was fraudulently destroyed from the suspicious character of the antecedent circumstances. This, however, is a fallacy of very common occurrence, both in judicial proceedings and in common life (1).

The modes in which facts may be so combined as to exclude every hypothesis other than the one which it is intended to establish are very numerous, and are, I think, better learnt from specific illustrations and from actual practice than from abstract theories. One of the objects of the illustrations given in the next chapter is to enable students to understand this matter.

Summary of conclusions

The result of the foregoing inquiries may be summed up as follows —

I In judicial inquiries the facts which form the materials for the decision of the court are the facts that certain persons assert certain things under certain circumstances [67] These facts the Judge hears with his own ears. He also sees with his own eyes documents and other things respecting which he hears certain assertions.

II His task is to infer—

(1) From what he himself hears and sees the existence of the facts asserted to exist,

(2) From the facts which on the strength of such assertions he believes to exist other facts which are not so asserted to exist.

III The inferences which he is to draw are of two kinds—

(a) The inferences contained in the following paragraphs) with the existence of any other cause for it than the cause of which the existence is proposed to be proved.

IV The highest results of judicial investigation must generally be, for the reasons already given, to show that certain conclusions are more or less probable.

V The question—what degree of probability is it necessary to show, in order to warrant a judicial decision in a given case? is a question not of logic, but of prudence, and is identical with the question “What risk of error is it wise to run, regard being had to the consequence of error in either direction?”

VI This degree of probability varies in different cases to an extent which cannot be strictly defined, but wherever it exists it may be called moral certainty.

(1) An illustration of this form of error occurred in the case of R v Steward and two others who were convicted at Singapore in 1867 for casting away the Schooner Erin and subsequently received a free pardon on the ground of their innocence.

(68) CHAPTER III.

THE THEORY OF RELEVANCY, WITH ILLUSTRATIONS

An intelligence of sufficient capacity might perhaps be able to conceive of all events as standing to each other in the relation of cause and effect, and though the most powerful of human minds are unequal to efforts which fall infinitely short of this, it is possible not only to trace the connection between cause and effect, both in regard to human conduct and in regard to inanimate matter, to very considerable lengths but to see that numerous events are connected together, although the precise nature of the links which connect them may not be open to observation. The connection may be traced in either direction, from effect to cause or from cause to effect, and if these two words were taken in their widest acceptation it would be correct to say that when any theory has been formed which alleges the existence of any fact all facts are relevant which if that theory was true, would stand to the fact alleged to exist either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect.

Relevancy means connection of events as cause and effect

It may be said that this theory would extend the limits of relevancy beyond all reasonable bounds, inasmuch as all events whatever are or may be more or [69] less remotely connected by the universal chain of cause and effect so that the theory of gravitation would upon this principle be relevant, wherever one of the facts in issue involved the falling of an object to the ground.

Objections

The answer to this objection is, that wide, general causes which apply to all occurrences, are, in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof, but no doubt if their application to the matter in question were doubtful or were misunderstood, it might be necessary to investigate them. For instance suppose that in an action for infringing a patent the defence set up was that the patent was invalid, because the invention had been anticipated by some one who preceded the patentee. The issue might be whether an earlier machine was substantially the same as the patentee's machine. All the facts, therefore, which went to make up each machine would be facts in issue. But each machine would be constructed with reference to the general formulae called laws of nature and thus the existence of an alleged law of nature might well become, not merely relevant, but a fact in issue. If the first inventor of barometers had taken out a patent, and had had to defend its validity, the variation of atmospheric pressure, according to the height of a column of air and the fact that air has weight, might have been facts in issue.

Answer.

With regard to the remark that all events are connected together more or less, it is true that though this is or may be the case, the influence of causes on effects is narrow. A knife is used to commit a murder, and it is notched and stained with blood in the process. The knife is carefully washed, the water is thrown away and the notch in the blade is ground out. It is obvious that, unless each link in this chain of cause and effect could be separately proved, it would be impossible to trace the connection between the knife cleaned and ground and the purpose for which it had been used. On the other hand if the first step—the fact that the knife was bloody at a given time and place—was proved there would be no use in inquiring into the further effects produced by that fact such as the staining of the water in which it was washed, the infinitesimal effects produced on the river into which the water was thrown, and so forth.

Traceable influence of causes on effects narrow

Rule as to cause and effects true subject to caution that every step in the connection must be made out illustration

The rule, therefore, that facts may be regarded as relevant which can be shown to stand either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect to the fact to which they are said to be relevant may be accepted as true, subject to the caution that, when an inference is to be founded upon the existence of such a connection every step by which the connection is made must either be proved, or be so probable under the circumstances of the case that it may be presumed without proof. Footmarks are found near the scene of a crime. The circumstances are such that they may be presumed to be the footmarks made by the criminal. These marks [71] correspond precisely with a pair of shoes found on the feet of the accused. The presumption founded upon common experience though its force may vary indefinitely, is that no two pairs of shoes would make precisely the same marks. It may further be presumed, though this presumption is by no means conclusive, that shoes were worn by the owner on a given occasion. Here the steps are as follows —

- (1) The person who committed the crime probably made those marks by pressing the shoes which he wore on the ground
- (2) The person who committed the crime probably wore his own shoes
- (3) The shoes so pressed were probably the x shoes
- (4) These shoes are A B's shoes

Therefore A B probably made those marks with those shoes

Therefore A B probably committed the crime

These facts may be exhibited in the relation of cause and effect thus —

- (1) A's owning the shoes was the cause of his wearing them
- (2) His wearing them at a given place and time caused the marks
- (3) The marks were caused by the flight of the criminal
- (4) The flight of the criminal was caused by the commission of the crime

[72] (5) Therefore the marks were caused by the flight of A the criminal after committing the crime

Though this mode of describing relevancy might be correct it would not be readily understood. For instance it might be asked how is an alibi relevant under this definition? The answer is that a man's absence from a given place at a given time is a cause of his not having done a given act at that place and time. This mode of using language would however be obscure and it was for this reason that relevancy was very fully defined in the Evidence Act (ss 6-11 both inclusive). These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are designedly worded very widely and in such a way as to overlap each other. Thus a motive for a fact in issue (s 8) is part of its cause (s 7). Subsequent conduct influenced by it (s 8) is part of its effect (s 7). Facts relevant under s 11 would in most cases be relevant under other sections. The object of drawing the Act in this manner was that the general ground on which facts are relevant might be stated in as many and as popular forms as possible, so that if a fact is relevant its relevancy may be easily ascertained.

of this definition

Importance of these sections

These sections are by far the most important as they are the most original part of the Evidence Act as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this in [73] to be known and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved.

Important as these sections are for purposes of study, and in order to make the whole body of law in which they belong easily intelligible to students and practitioners not trained in English Courts they are not likely to give rise to litigation or to make distinction. The reason is that s 167 of the Evidence Act which was formerly s 57 of Act II of 1855 renders it practically a matter of little importance whether evidence of a particular fact is admitted or not. The extreme intricacy and minuteness of the law of England on this subject is principally due to the fact that the improper admission or rejection of a single question and answer would give a right to a new trial in a civil case and would upon a criminal trial be sufficient ground for the quashing of a conviction before the Court for Crown Cases reserved.

The improper admission or rejection of evidence in India has no effect at all unless the Court thinks that the evidence improperly dealt with either turned or ought to have turned the scale. A Judge moreover if he doubts as to the relevancy of a fact suggested can if he thinks it will lead to any thing relevant, ask about it himself under s 165.

In order to exhibit fully the meaning of these sections to show how the Act was intended to be worked and to furnish students with models by which they may be guided in the discharge of the most important of their duties abstracts are appended of the evidence given at the following remarkable trials --

- [74] 1 R v Donellan
 2 R v Belaney
 3 R v Richardson
 4 R v Patch
 5 R v Palmer

To every fact proved in each of these cases the most intricate that I could discover a note is attached showing under what section of the Evidence Act it would be relevant.

I may observe upon these cases that the general principles of evidence are perhaps more clearly displayed in trials for murder than in any others. Murders are usually concealed with as much care as possible and on the other hand they must from the nature of the case leave traces behind them which render it possible to apply the argument from effects to causes with greater force in these than in most other cases. Moreover as they involve capital punishment and excite peculiar attention the evidence is generally investigated with special care. There are accordingly few cases which show so distinctly the sort of connection between fact and fact which makes the existence of one fact a good ground for inferring the existence of another.

I

[75] CASE OF R v DONELLAN (1)

John Donellan Esq. was tried at Warwick Spring Assizes 1781 before Mr Justice Buller for the murder of Sir Theodosius Broughton his brother in law (1) who up to the moment was the sister of the deceased and lived with him at Lawford Hall

(1) Wills on Circumstantial Evidence pp 197 6

(2) Introductory fact (section 9)

(3) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7)

In the event of Sir T Broughton's death, unmarried and without issue, the greater part of his fortune would descend to Mrs Donellan(1), but it was stated, though not proved, by the prisoner in his defence that he on his marriage entered into articles for the immediate settling of her whole fortune on herself and children, and deprived himself of the possibility of enjoying even a life-estate in [76] case of her death, and that this settlement extended not only to the fortune but to expectancies (2)

For some time before the death of Sir Theodosius the prisoner had on several occasions falsely represented his health to be very bad and his life to be precarious (3) On the 29th of August the apothecary in attendance sent him a mild and harmless draught to be taken the next morning (4) In the evening the deceased was out fishing(5), and the prisoner told his mother that he had been out with him, and that he had imprudently got his feet wet, both of which assertions were false (6) When Sir Theodosius was called on the following morning he was in good health(7), and about seven o'clock his mother went to his chamber to give him his draught(8), of which he immediately complained(9), and she remarked that it smelt like bitter almonds (10) [77] In about two minutes he struggled very much as if to keep the medicine down, and Lady Broughton observed a gurgling in his stomach(11), in ten minutes he seemed inclined to doze(12), but in five minutes afterwards she found him with his eyes fixed, his teeth clenched, and froth running out of his mouth, and within half an hour after taking the dose he died (11)

Lady Broughton ran downstairs to give orders to a servant to go for the apothecary, who lived about three miles distant(12), and in less than five minutes after Sir Theodosius had been taken Donellan asked where the physician was, and Lady Broughton showed him the two bottles The prisoner then took up one of them and said "Is this it?" and being answered "Yes," he poured some water out of the water bottle which was near into the phial, shook it, and then emptied it into some dirty water which was in a wash hand basin Lady Broughton said, "You should not meddle with the hottle," upon which the prisoner snatched up the other bottle and poured water into that also, and shook it, and then put his finger into it and tasted it Lady Broughton again asked what he was about, and said he ought not to meddle with the hottles, on which he replied that he did it to taste it(13) though (14) he had not tasted the first bottle (13) The prisoner ordered a [78] servant to take away the basin, the dirty things and the hottles, and put the hottles into her hands, for that purpose, she put them down again on being directed by Lady Broughton to do so, but subsequently removed them on the peremptory order of the

(1) Motive (section 8)

(2) Fact rebutting an inference suggested by a relevant fact (section 9) These facts are omitted by Mr Wills but are mentioned in my account of the case. Gen View Crim Law p 338

(3) Facts showing preparation for fact in issue (section 8) The statements are also admissions as against the prisoner (section 17)

(4) A fact affording an opportunity for facts in issue (section 7)

(5) Introductory to what follows (section 9)

(6) Preparation (section 8) Admission (section 17)

(7) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7)

(8) It was suggested that Donellan changed the apothecary's draught for a poisoned one administered by Lady Broughton an innocent agent Therefore the administration of the draught suggested to be poisoned was a fact in issue (section 5)

(9) As to this see section 14

(10) i.e. of prussic acid Lady Broughton perceived by smell the presence of the poison Therefore she smelt a fact in issue (section 5)

(11) Effects of facts in issue (section 7) All these facts go to make up the fact of his death which was a fact in issue

(12) Introductory to next fact as fixing the time (section 9)

(13) Subsequent conduct influenced by a fact in issue and statements explanatory of conduct (section 8)

(14) This word is Mr Wills comment prisoner (1) On the arrival of the apothecary, the prisoner said the deceased had been out the preceding evening fishing, and had taken cold, but he said nothing of the draught which he had taken (1) The prisoner had a still in his own room which he used for distilling roses (2), and a few days after the death of Sir Theodosius he brought it full of wet lime to one of the servants to be cleaned (3) The prisoner made several false and inconsistent statements to the servants as the cause of the young man's death (4), and on the day of his death he wrote to Sir W Wheeler, his guardian to inform him of the event, but made no reference to its suddenness (4) The coffin was soldered up on the fourth day after the death (5) Two days afterwards Sir W Wheeler in consequence of the rumours which had reached him of the manner of Sir Theodosius's death, and that suspicions were entertained that he had died from the effects of poison (6), wrote a letter to the prisoner requesting [79] that an examination might take place whom he wished it to be conducted (7) The letter did not exhibit Sir W Wheeler's deceased had been poisoned, nor did he mention to them that they were sent for at his request Having been induced by the prisoner to suppose the case to be one of ordinary death (8), and finding the body in an advanced state of putrefaction, the medical gentlemen declined to make the examination on the ground that it might be attended with personal danger On the following day a medical man who had heard of their refusal to examine the body offered to do so but the prisoner declined his offer on the ground that he had not been directed to send for him (9) On the same day the prisoner wrote to Sir W Wheeler a letter in which he stated that the medical men had fully satisfied the family and endeavoured to account [80] for the event by the ailment under which the deceased had been suffering, but he did not state that they had not made the examination (10) Three or four days after, Sir W Wheeler having been informed that the body had not been examined (11) wrote to the prisoner insisting that it should be done (12), which, however, he prevented by various disingenuous contrivances (13), and the body was interred without examination (14) In the meantime, the circumstances having become known to the coroner he caused the body to be disinterred and examined on the eleventh day after death Putrefaction was found to be far advanced, and the head was not opened, nor the bowels examined, and in other respects the examination was incomplete (15) When Lady Broughton

(1) Subsequent conduct and explanatory statements (section 8)

(2) Opportunity to distil rose-water the poison said to have been used (section 7)

(3) Subsequent conduct (section 8)

(4) Admission 17 18

(5) Introductory to what follows (section 9)

(6) Introductory to and explanatory of what follows (section 9) It should be observed that proof of the rumours and suspicions for the purpose of showing the truth of the matters rumoured and suspected would not be admissible The fact that there were rumours and suspicions explains Sir W Wheeler's letter

(7) Statement to the prisoner and affecting his conduct (section 8 ex 2)

(8) Subsequent conduct of prisoner (section 8) and Mr Wills comment on the conduct

(9) Subsequent conduct (section 8) The fact that the first set of doctors refused explains the prisoner's conduct by showing that it had the effect of preventing examinations (section 7) The ground on which they refused tends to rebut this inference (section 9) but the second doctors offer and the prisoner's conduct thereon tend to confirm it (section 9)

(10) Subsequent conduct (section 11) and admission (section 17)

(11) Introductory (section 9)

(12) Statement to the prisoner affecting his conduct (section 8 ex 2)

(13) Each contrivance and each circumstance which showed that it was disingenuous would come under the head of subsequent conduct (section 8)

(14) The burial was part of the transaction (section 6) The absence of examination is explanatory of parts of the medical evidence The whole is introductory to medical evidence (section 9)

(15) Introductory to opinions of experts (sections 9 45 46)

in giving evidence before the coroner's inquest, related the circumstance of the prisoner having rinsed the bottles, he was observed to take hold of her sleeve and endeavour to check her, and he afterwards told her that she had no occasion to have mentioned that circumstance, but only to answer such questions as were put to her, and in a letter to the coroner and jury he [81] endeavoured to impress them with the belief that the deceased had inadvertently poisoned himself with arsenic, which he had purchased to kill fish (1) Upon the trial four medical men—three physicians and an apothecary—were examined on the part of the prosecution, and expressed a very decided opinion mainly grounded upon the symptoms, the suddenness of the death, the post mortem appearances, the smell of the draught as observed by Lady Broughton, and the similar effects produced by experiments upon animals, that the deceased had been poisoned with laurel water (2), one of them stating that on opening the body he had been affected with a biting acrimonious taste like that which affected him in all the subsequent experiments with laurel water (3) An eminent (4) surgeon and anatomist stated a positive opinion that the symptoms did not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the deceased had been poisoned, and that the appearances presented upon dissection explained nothing but putrefaction (2) The prisoner was convicted and executed

II

[82] CASE OF R v BELANEY (5)

at the Central Criminal Court, August 1844, the murder of his wife. They left their place in London on the 1st of June (having a few days previously made mutual wills in each other's favour) (6) where on the 5th of that month they went into lodgings (7) The deceased, who was advanced in pregnancy, was slightly indisposed after the journey, but not sufficiently so to prevent her going about with her husband (8) On the 8th, being the Saturday morning after the arrival in town the prisoner rang the bell for some hot water a tumbler, and a spoon (9) and he and his wife were heard conversing in their chamber about seven o'clock About a quarter before eight the prisoner called the landlady upstairs saying that his wife was very ill, and she found her lying motionless on the bed with her eyes shut and her teeth closed and foaming at the [83] mouth On being asked if she was subject to fits, the prisoner said she had fits before but none like this,

(1) Subsequent conduct (section 8) and admissions (section 17)

(2) Opinion of experts (section 45)

(3) This is a case of testing a fact in issue viz the laurel water present in the body See definition of fact section 3

(4) This was the famous John Hunter

(5) Wills on Circumstantial Evidence pp 175—178

(6) Motive (section 8)

(7) Introductory (section 9)

(8) State of things under which fact in issue happened (section 7)

(9) Preparation (section 8)

and that she would not come out of it. On being pressed to send for a doctor, the prisoner said he was a doctor himself, and should have let blood before, but there was no pulse. On being further pressed to send for a doctor and his friends he assented, adding that she would not come to, that this was an affection of the heart, and that her mother died in the same way nine months ago. The servant was accordingly sent to fetch two of the prisoner's friends, and on her return she and the prisoner put the patient's feet and hands in warm water and applied a mustard plaster to her chest. A medical man was sent for, but before his arrival the patient had died (1). There was a tumbler close to the head of the bed, about one third full of something clear, but whiter than water, and there was also an empty tumbler on the other side of the table, and a paper of Epsom salts (2). In reply to a question from a medical man whether the deceased had taken any medicine that morning, the prisoner stated that she had taken nothing but a little salts (3). On the same morning the prisoner ordered a grave for interment on the following Monday (4). In the [84] meantime the contents of the stomach were examined and found to contain prussic acid and Epsom salts. It was deposed that the symptoms were similar to those of death by prussic acid, but might be the result of any powerful sedative poison and that the means resorted to by the prisoner were not likely to promote recovery, but that cold of brandy or ammonia (which in house) and other stimulants would have been effectual. No smell of prussic acid had been discovered in the room, though it has a very strong odour, but the window was open, and it was stated that the odour is soon dissipated by a current of air (5). The prisoner had purchased prussic acid, as also acetate of morphine, on the preceding day, from a vendor of medicines with whom he was intimate, but he had been in the habit of using these poisons under advice for a complaint in the stomach (6). Two days after the fatal event the prisoner stated to the medical man, who had been called in and who had assisted in the examination of the body, that on the

to take some prussic acid, that on endeavour

1 [85] some difficulty, and used some force with at in consequence of breaking the neck of the bottle by the force, some of the acid was spilt, that he placed the remainder in the tumbler on the drawers at the end of the bed room, that he went into the front room to fetch a bottle wherein to place the acid but instead of so doing began to write to his friends in the country, when in a few minutes he heard a scream from his wife's bed room calling for cold water, and that the prussic acid was undoubtedly the cause of her death. Upon being asked what he had done with the bottle, the prisoner said he had destroyed it, and on being asked why he had not mentioned the circumstances before he said he had not done so because he was so distressed and ashamed at the consequence of his negligence. To various persons in the north of England the prisoner wrote false and suspicious accounts of his wife's illness. In one of them dated from the Custon Hotel on the 6th of June, he stated that his wife was unwell, and that two medical men attended her, and that in consequence

(1) The death and attendant circumstances are facts in issue and part of the transaction (sections 5-26). The other facts are conduct (section 8) and admissions (sections 17-18).

(2) State of things at death or cause or effect of administration of poison (section 7).

(3) Admissions (sections 17-18).

(4) Conduct (section 8).

(5) Effect of poisoning (section 7); opinions of experts (sections 45-46). The absence of the smell of prussic acid and the presence of the draughts are respectively a fact suggesting the absence of prussic acid, and a fact rebutting that inference (section 9).

(6) Preparation (section 8) and fact rebutting inference from purchase of poison (section 9).

he should give up an intended visit to Holland, and intimated his apprehension of a miscarriage. For these statements there was no foundation. At that time moreover he had removed from the Enston Hotel into lodgings, and on the same day he had made arrangements for leaving his wife in London, and proceeding himself on his visit to Holland. In another letter, dated 8th of June, and posted after his wife's death, though it could not be determined whether it was written before or after, the prisoner stated that [86] he had had his wife removed from the hotel to private lodgings, where she was dangerously ill and attended by two medical men, one of whom had pronounced her heart to be diseased, these representations were equally false. In another letter, dated the 9th of June, but not posted until the 10th, he stated the fact of his wife's death, but without any allusion to the cause, and in a subsequent letter he stated the reason for the suppression to be to conceal the shame and reproach of his negligence. The prisoner's statements to his landlady that his wife's mother had died from disease of the heart was also a falsehood the prisoner having himself stated in writing to the registrar of burials that brain fever was the cause of death (1). It was, however, proved that the prisoner was of a kind disposition, that he and his wife had lived upon affectionate terms and that he was extremely careless in his habits (2), and no motive for so horrible a deed was clearly made out, though it was urged that it was the desire of obtaining her property by means of her testamentary disposition (3). Upon the whole, it was certainly possible, suggested, and the jury

Remarks in cases of Donellan
and Belaney

The two cases of Donellan and Belaney are not merely curious in themselves, but throw light upon one of the most important of the [87] points connected with judicial evidence, the point namely as to the amount of uncertainty which constitutes what can be called reasonable doubt. This I have already said is a question not of calculation, but of prudence. The cases in question show that different tribunals at different times do not measure it in precisely the same way. In Donellan's case the jury did not think the possibility that Sir Theodosius Broughton might have died of a fit sufficiently great to constitute reasonable doubt as to his having been poisoned. In Belaney's case the jury thought that the possibility that the prisoner gave his wife the poison by accident did constitute a reasonable doubt as to his guilt. If the chances of the guilt and innocence of the two men could be numerically expressed, they would, I think be as nearly as possible equal, and it might be said that both or that neither ought to have been convicted if it were not for the all important principle that every case is independent of every other, and that no decision upon facts forms a precedent for any other decision. If two juries were to try the very same case, upon the same evidence and with the same summing up and the same arguments by counsel they might very probably arrive at opposite conclusions and yet it might be impossible to say that either of them was wrong. Of the moral qualifications for the office of a Judge few are more important than the strength of mind which is capable of admitting the unpleasant truth that it is often necessary to act upon probabilities, and to run some risk of error. The cruelty of the old criminal law of Europe, and of [88] England as well as of other countries produced many bad effects, one of which was that it intimidated those who had to put it in force. The saying that it is better that ten criminals should escape than that one innocent man should be convicted expresses this sentiment, which has I think been carried too far, and has done much to enervate the administration of justice.

(1) All these are admissions (sections 17, 18) and conduct (section 3)

(2) Character (section 53)
(3) Motive (section 8)

III

[89] CASE OF R. v. RICHARDSON.(1)

In the autumn of 1786 a young woman, who lived with her parents in a remote district in the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright(2), was one day left alone in the cottage(3), her parents having gone out to the harvest-field (4) On their return home a little after mid day(5), they found their daughter murdered(5), with her throat cut(6) in a most shocking manner

The circumstances in which she was found, the character of the deceased, and the appearance of the wound, all concurred in excluding all supposition of suicide(7); while the surgeons who examined the wound were satisfied that [90] it had been inflicted by a sharp instrument, and by a person who must have held the weapon in his left hand (8) Upon opening the body the deceased appeared to have been some months gone with child(9), and on examining the ground about the cottage there were discovered the footsteps of a person who had seemingly h a quagmire or however, that t

stepped into the mire, by which he must have been wet nearly to the middle of the leg(11) The prints of the footsteps were accurately measured and an exact impression taken of them(12), and it appeared that they were those of a person, who must have worn shoes, the soles of which had been newly mended, and which, as is usual in that part of the country, had iron knobs or nails in them(12) There were discovered also along the track of the footsteps, and at certain intervals, drops of blood, and on a stile or small gateway near the cottage, and in the line of the footsteps some marks resembling those of a hand which had been bloody(12) Not the slightest suspicion at this time [91] attached to any particular person as the murderer, nor was it even suspected who might be the father of the child of which the girl was pregnant(13) At the funeral a number of persons of both sexes attended(14), and the steward-der possible, to dis cov whoever he was he e called together,

after the interment, the whole of the men who were present, being about sixty in number(14) He caused the shoes of each of them to be taken off and measured, and one of the shoes was found to resemble pretty nearly the impression of the footsteps near to the cottage The wearer of the shoe was the school-master of the parish, which led to a suspicion that he must have been the father of the child, and had been guilty of the murder to save his character On a closer examination of the shoe, it was discovered that it was pointed at the toe,

(1) Wills pp 225—229 Mr Wills observes, "This case is also concisely stated in the 'Memoirs of the Life of Sir Walter Scott' IV, p 52 and it supplied one of the most striking incidents in 'Guy Ranner ing'"

(2) Introductory (section 9)

(3) Opportunity (section 7)

(4) Explanatory (section 9)

(5) Mr Wills comment They found her with the throat cut and Mr Wills says she was murdered but her murder was then an inference, not a fact (section 3)

(6) Fact in issue (section 5)

(7) Suicide would be a relevant fact as being inconsistent with murder The facts which exclude suicide are relevant as inconsistent with a relevant fact (section

11)

(8) Opinion of experts (section 45)

(9) State of things under which death happened (section 7)

(10) Effects of facts in issue (section 7)

(11) This is so stated as to mix up inference and fact Stripped of inference the fact might have been stated thus— There were such marks in the bog as would have been produced if a person crossing the stepping stones had slipped with one foot. The mud was of such a depth that a person so slipping would get wet to the middle of the leg

(12) Effects of fact in issue (section 7)

(13) Observation

(14) Introductory (section 9)

whereas the impression of the footstep was round at that place (1) The measurement of the rest went on and after going through nearly the whole number one at length was discovered which corresponded exactly with the impression in dimensions, shape of the foot, form of the sole and the number and position of the nails (2) William Richardson, the young man to [92] whom the shoe belonged on being asked where he was the day deceased was murdered, replied, seemingly without embarrassment, that he had been all that day employed at his master's work (3),—a statement which his master and fellow servants who were present confirmed (4) This going so far to remove suspicions a warrant of commitment was not then granted, but some circumstances occurring a few days afterwards having a tendency to excite it anew, the young man was apprehended and lodged in jail (5) Upon his examination (6) he acknowledged that he was left handed (7), and some scratches being observed on his cheek, he said he had got them when pulling nuts in a wood a few days before (8) He still adhered to what [93] he had said of his having been on the day of the murder employed constantly in his master's work (9), but in the course of the inquiry it turned out that he had been absent from his work about half an hour the time being distinctly ascertained, in the course of the forenoon of that day, that he called at a smith's shop under the pretence of wanting something which it did not appear that he had any occasion for, and that this smith's shop was in the way to the cottage of the deceased (9) A young girl, who was some hundred yards from the cottage, said that, about the time when the murder was committed (and which corresponded to the time when Richardson was absent ly with his dress and appear not see him return, though he would intercept him from her view and which was the very track where the footsteps had been traced (10)

His fellow servants now recollected that on the forenoon of that day they were employed with Richardson in driving their master's cart, and that when passing by a wood which they named, he said that he must run to the [94] smith's shop and would be back in a short time He then left his cart under their which one of the servants ch, they remarked on his he said he would be, to

1) Irrelevant

(2) The making of the footmark was an effect of or conduct subsequent to and effected by a fact in issue (section 7) The measurement of the sixty shoes of which one only corresponded exactly with the mark was a fact or rather a set of facts making highly probable the relevant fact that that shoe made that mark (section 11) The experiment itself is an application of the method of difference This shoe would make the mark and no other of a very large number would

(3) This would be relevant against him but not in his favour as an admission (sections 17, 18)

(4) The fact that his master and fellow servants confirmed his statement is irrelevant If they had testified afterwards to the fact itself it would have been relevant.

(5) Irrelevant

(6) By Scotch law as well as by the Code of Criminal Procedure a prisoner may be examined

(7) The fact that he was left handed would be a cause of a fact in issue viz the peculiar way in which the fatal wound was given The admission that he was left handed would be relevant as proof of the fact 1, sections 17, 18

(8) If it was suggested that the scratches were made in a struggle with the girl they would be an effect of a fact in issue (section 7) and the statement would be relevant as against the prisoner as an admission (sections 17, 18)

(9) Opportunity (section 7) Admissions (sections 17, 18) The call at the shop was preparation by making evidence (section 8) illustration (c)

(10) There is here a mixture of fact and inferences the girl could not know that a murder was committed at the time when it was committed Probably she mentioned the time and it corresponded with the time when Richardson was away This would be preparation and opportunity (section 7) The existence of the small eminence explains her not seeing him return (section 9) which he realised that he had stepped in the mud to gather some mad or drunk if he stepped into that marsh, as there was a footpath which went along the side of it." It then appeared by comparing the time he was absent with the distance of the cottage from the place where he had left his fellow-servants that he might have gone there, committed the murder, and returned to them (1). A search was then made for the stockings he had worn that day (2). They were found concealed in the thatch of the apartment where he slept, and he had assisted in bleeding a horse but it was proved that he had not assisted [95] and had stood at such a distance that the blood could not have reached him (1). On examining the mud or sand upon the stockings, it appeared to correspond precisely with that of the mire or puddle adjoining the cottage, and which was of a very particular kind, none other of the same kind being found in that neighbourhood (5). The shoe maker was then discovered who had mended his shoes a short time before, and he spoke distinctly to the shoes of the prisoner which were exhibited to him as having been those he had mended (6). It then came out that Richardson had been acquainted with the deceased, who was considered in the country as of weak intellect, and had on one occasion been seen with her in a wood in circumstances that led to a suspicion that he had criminal intercourse with her, and, on being taunted with having such connection with one in her situation, he seemed much ashamed and greatly [96] hurt (7). It was proved further by the person who sat next him when his shoes were measuring, that he trembled much and seemed a good deal agitated, and that, in the interval between that time and his being apprehended, he had been advised to fly, but his answer was, "Where can I fly to?" (8).

On the other hand, evidence was brought to show that about the time of the murder a boat's crew from Ireland had landed on that part of the coast near to the dwelling of the deceased (9), and it was said that some of the crew might have committed the murder, though their motive for doing so it was difficult to explain, it not being alleged that robbery was their purpose, or that any thing was missing from the cottages in the neighbourhood. The prisoner was convicted, confessed, and was hanged.

(1) All these facts are either opportunity or preparation or subsequent or previous conduct or admissions (sections 7, 8 17).

(2) Introductory to next fact (section 91).

(3) The concealment is subsequent conduct (section 8). The state of the stockings is the effect of a fact in issue (section 7).

(4) The falsehoods are subsequent conduct (section 8) or admissions (sections 17 & 18). The prisoner's allegation about the horse is an allegation of a fact explaining the relevant fact that there was blood on the stockings (section 9) and the fact proved about his distance from the horse is a fact rebutting the inference suggested thereby that the blood was the horse's (section 7).

(5) Effect of a fact in issue (section 7). The probability of the blood on the stockings to the sand in the marsh was one of the effects of the slip which was the effect of the murder.

(6) That the marks were made by the prisoner's shoe was relevant as an effect of facts in issue. That the shoes which made the marks were the prisoner's had been already proved by their being found on his feet. This further proof seems superfluous unless it was suggested that they belonged to some one else.

(7) The opinion about her would be irrelevant. The fact that her intellect was weak would be part of the state of things under which the murder happened, and with what follows would show motive (sections 7 & 8).

(8) Subsequent conduct (section 10). The weight of this is very slight.

(9) Opportunity for the murder (section 27).

Remarks on
Richardson's case

This case illustrates the application of what Mr Mill calls the method of agreement upon a scale which excludes the supposition of chance, thus —

- (1) The murderer had a motive,—Richardson had a motive
- (2) The murderer had an opportunity at a certain hour of a certain day in a certain place,—Richardson had an opportunity on that hour of that day at that place
- [97] (3) The murderer was left handed,—Richardson was left handed
- (4) The murderer wore shoes which made certain marks,—Richardson wore shoes which made exactly similar marks
- (5) If Richardson was the murderer and wore stockings they must have been soiled with a peculiar kind of sand,—he did wear stockings which were soiled with that kind of sand
- (6) If Richardson was the murderer, he would naturally conceal his stockings,—he did conceal his stockings
- (7) The murderer would probably get blood on his clothes —Richardson got blood on his clothes
- (8) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about the blood —he did tell lies about the blood
- (9) If Richardson was the murderer, he must have been at the place at the time in question —a man very like him was seen running towards the place at the time
- (10) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about his proceedings during the time when the murder was committed,—he told such lies

Here are ten separate marks, five of which must have been found in the murderer one of which must have been found on the murderer if he wore stockings whilst others probably would be found in him

All ten were found in Richardson Four of them were so distinctive that they could hardly have met in more than one man It is hardly imaginable that two left handed men wearing precisely similar shoes and closely [98] resembling each other should have put the same leg into the same hole of the same marsh at the same time that one of them should have committed a murder, and that the other should have causelessly hidden the stockings which had got soiled in the marsh Yet this would be the only possible supposition consistent with Richardson's innocence

IV

[99] CASE OF R v PATCH (1)

A man named Patch had been received by Mr Isaac Blight, a ship breaker, near Greenland Dock into his service in the year 1803 Mr Blight having become embarrassed in his circumstances in July 1805, entered into a deed of composition with his creditors and in consequence of the failure of this arrangement, he made a colourable transfer of his property to the prisoner (2) It was afterwards agreed between them that Mr Blight was to retire nominally from the business, which the prisoner was to manage, and the former was to have two thirds of the profits and the prisoner the remaining third, for which he was to pay £1,250. Of this amount, £250 was paid in cash, and a draft was given for the remainder upon a person named Goom, which would become payable on the 16th of September, the prisoner representing that he had received the purchase money of an estate and lent it to Goom (1). On the 16th of September the prisoner represented to Mr. Blight's bankers that Goom could not take [100] up the bill, and withdrew it, substituting his own draft upon Goom, to fall due on the 20th September (2). On the 19th of September the deceased went to visit his wife at Margate, and the prisoner accompanied him as far as Deptford (3), and then went to London and represented to his bankers that Goom would not be able to face his draft, but that he had obtained from him a note which satisfied him, and therefore they were not to present it (4). The prisoner hoarded in Mr. Blight's house, and the only other inmate was a female servant, whom the prisoner about eight o'clock the same evening (the 19th) sent out to procure some oysters for his supper (5). During her absence a gun or pistol ball was fired through the shutter of a parlour fronting the Thames, where the family, when at home, usually spent their evenings. It was low water, and the mud was so deep that any person attempting to escape in that direction must have been suffocated and a man who was standing near the gate of the wharf which was the only other mode of escape, heard the report, but saw no person (6). From the manner in which [101] the ball entered the shutter it was clear that it had been discharged by some person who was close to the shutter, and the river was so much below the level of the house, that the ball, if it had been fired from thence must have reached a much higher part than that which it struck. The prisoner declined the offer of the neighbours to remain in the house with him that night (7). On the following day he wrote to inform the deceased of the transaction, stating his hope that the shot had been accidental, that he knew of no person who had any animosity against him, that he wished to know for whom it was intended, and that he should be happy to hear from him, but much more so to see him (8). Mr. Blight returned home on the 23rd September, having previously been to London to see his bankers on the subject of the £1,000 draft (9). Upon getting home, the draft became the subject of conversation, and the deceased desired the prisoner to go to London, and not to return without the money (10). Upon his return the prisoner and the deceased spent the evening in the back parlour, a different one from that in which the family usually sat (11). About eight o'clock the prisoner went from the parlour into the kitchen, and asked [102] the servant for a candle (12), complaining that he was disordered (13). The prisoner's way from the kitchen was through an outer door which fastened by a spring lock, and across a paved court in front of the house which was enclosed by palisades, and through a gate over a wharf in front of that court, on which there was the kind of soil peculiar to premises for breaking up ships, and then through a

- (1) Motive (section 8)
- (2) Preparation (section 8)
- (3) Introductory (section 9) but unimportant
- (4) Preparation (section 8)
- (5) Explains what follows (section 9)
- (6) Preparation (section 8)
- (7) Explains what follows (section 9)
- (8) Preparation (section 8)
- (9) Explains what follows (section 9)
- (10) Preparation (section 8)
- (11) Explains what follows (section 9)
- (12) Preparation (section 8)
- (13) Preparation (section 8)

The last fact illustrates the remarks made at pages 40-41. The inference from the facts stated assuming them to be true is necessary but suppose that the man standing near the gate saw some one running and for reasons of his own denied it how could he be contradicted?

- (7) Conduct (section 8)
- (8) Preparation (section 8)
- (9) Hardly relevant except as introductory to what follows (section 9)
- (10) Motive (section 8)
- (11) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7)
- (12) Preparation (section 8).
- (13) Preparation (section 8).

Remarks on
Richardson's case

This case illustrates the application of what Mr Mill calls the method of agreement upon a scale which excludes the supposition of chance, thus —

(1) The murderer had a motive,—Richardson had a motive

(2) The murderer had an opportunity at a certain hour of a certain day in a certain place,—Richardson had an opportunity on that hour of that day at that place

[97] (3) The murderer was left-handed,—Richardson was left handed

(4) The murderer wore shoes which made certain marks,—Richardson wore shoes which made exactly similar marks

(5) If Richardson was the murderer and wore stockings, they must have been soiled with a peculiar kind of sand,—he did wear stockings which were soiled with that kind of sand

(6) If Richardson was the murderer, he would naturally conceal his stockings,—he did conceal his stockings

(7) The murderer would probably get blood on his clothes,—Richardson got blood on his clothes

(8) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about the blood,—he did tell lies about the blood

(9) If Richardson was the murderer, he must have been at the place at the time in question,—a man very like him was seen running towards the place at the time

(10) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about his proceedings during the time when the murder was committed,—he told such lies

Here are ten separate marks, five of which must have been found in the murderer, one of which must have been found on the murderer if he wore stockings, whilst others probably would be found in him

All ten were found in Richardson. Four of them were so distinctive that they could hardly have met in more than one man. It is hardly imaginable that two left handed men, wearing precisely similar shoes and closely [98] resembling each other, should have put the same leg into the same hole of the same marsh at the same time that one of and that the other should have causeless soiled in the marsh. Yet this would be with Richardson's innocence

IV

[99] CASE OF R v PATCH (1)

A man named Patch had been received by Mr Isaac Blight, a ship breaker, near Greenland Dock, into his service in the year 1803. Mr Blight having become embarrassed in his circumstances in July 1805, entered into a deed of composition with his creditors, and in consequence of the failure of this to the prisoner (2) It was to retire nominally and the former was to have two thirds of the profits, and the prisoner the remaining third, for which he was to pay £1,250. Of this amount, £250 was paid in cash, and a draft was given for the remainder upon a person named Goom, which would become payable on the 16th of September, the prisoner representing that he had received the purchase money of an estate and lent it to Goom (1). On the 16th of September the prisoner represented to Mr Blight's bankers that Goom could not take [100] up the bill, and withdrew it, substituting his own draft upon Goom, to fall due on the 20th September (2). On the 19th of September the deceased went to visit his wife at Margate and the prisoner accompanied him as far as Deptford (3), and then went to London and represented to his bankers that Goom would not be able to face his draft, but that he had obtained from him a note which satisfied him, and therefore they were not to present it (4). The prisoner boarded in Mr Blight's house, and the only other inmate was a female servant whom the prisoner about eight o'clock the same evening (the 19th) sent out to procure some oysters for his supper (5). During her absence a gun or pistol ball was fired through the shutter of a parlour fronting the Thames, where the family, when at home, usually spent their evenings. It was low water, and the mud was so deep that any person attempting to escape in that direction must have been suffocated and a man who was standing near the gate of the wharf which was the only other mode of escape, heard the report, but saw no person (6). From the manner in which [101] the ball entered the shutter it was clear that it had been discharged by some person who was close to the shutter, and the river was so much below the level of the house, that the ball, if it had been fired from thence must have reached a much higher part than that which it struck. The prisoner declined the offer of the neighbours to remain in the house with him that night (7). On the following day he wrote to inform the deceased of the transaction, stating his hope that the shot had been accidental, that he knew of no person who had any animosity against him, that he wished to know for whom it was intended and that he should be happy to hear from him, but much more so to see him (8). Mr Blight returned home on the 23rd September, having previously been to London to see his bankers on the subject of the £1,000 draft (9). Upon getting home, the draft became the subject of conversation, and the deceased desired the prisoner to go to London, and not to return without the money (10). Upon his return the prisoner and the deceased spent the evening in the back parlour, a different one from that in which the family usually sat (11). About eight o'clock the prisoner went from the parlour into the kitchen, and asked [102] the servant for a candle (12), complaining that he was disordered (13). The prisoner's way from the kitchen was through an outer door which fastened by a spring lock, and across a paved court in front of the house which was enclosed by palisades, and through a gate over a wharf in front of that court, on which there was the kind of soil peculiar to premises for breaking up ships, and then through a

(1) Motive (section 8)

(2) Preparation (section 8)

(3) Introductory (section 9) but unimportant

(4) Preparation (section 8)

(5) Explains what follows (section 9)
Preparation (section 8)

(6) The suggestion was that Patch fired the shot himself in order to make evidence in his own favour. This would be preparation (section 8). Hence his firing the shot would be a relevant fact. The facts in the text are facts which taken together make it highly probable that he did so as they show that he and no one else had the opportunity and that it was done by some one (section 11)

The last fact illustrates the remarks made at pages 40-41. The inference from the facts stated assuming them to be true, is necessary but suppose that the man standing near the gate saw some one running and for reasons of his own denied it how could he be contradicted?

(7) Conduct (section 8)

(8) Preparation (section 8)

(9) Hardly relevant except as introductory to what follows (section 9).

(10) Motive (section 8)

(11) State of things under which the issue happened (section 7)

(12) Preparation (section 8).

(13) Preparation (section 8)

first shot arose from the suggestion that it was an act of preparation. The proof that it was fired by Patch consisted of independent facts showing that it was fired, and that he, and no one else, could have fired it. The firing of the second shot by which the murder was committed was a fact in issue. The proof of it by a strange [105] combination of circumstances was precisely similar in principle to the proof as to the first shot.

the way in which the chain of st dissimilar kind, and this relevant and irrelevant facts, otherwise than by enumerating as completely as possible the more common forms in which the relation of cause and effects displays itself. In Patch's case the firing of the first shot was an act of preparation by way of what is called 'making evidence' but the fact that Patch fired it appeared from a combination of circumstances which showed that he might, and that no one else could, have done so. It is easy to conceive that some one of the facts necessary to complete this proof might have had to be proved in the same way. For instance, part of the proof that Patch fired the shot consisted in the fact that no one left certain premises by a certain gate which was one of the suppositions necessary to should have been spun after the shot was fired and [106] before the gate was examined. In that case the proof would have stood thus — Patch's preparations for the murder were relevant to the question whether he committed it. Patch's firing the first shot was one of his preparations for the murder. The facts inconsistent with his not having fired the shot were relevant to the question whether he fired it. The fact that a certain door was not opened between certain hours was one of the facts which, taken together, were inconsistent with his not having fired the shot. The fact that a spider's web was whole overnight and also in the morning was inconsistent with the door having been opened.

Inversely the integrity of the spider's web was relevant to the opening of the door, the opening of the door was relevant to the firing of the first shot, the firing of the first shot was relevant to the firing of the second shot, and the firing of the second shot was a fact in issue, therefore the integrity of the spider's web was relevant to a fact in issue.

V

[107] CASE OF R v PALMER (1)

On the 14th of May, 1856, William Palmer was tried at the Old Bailey under powers conferred on the Court of Queen's Bench by 19 Vic, c 16, for the murder of John Parsons Cook at Rugeley, in Staffordshire. The trial lasted twelve days, and ended on the 27th May, when the prisoner was convicted, and received sentence of death, on which he was afterwards executed at Stafford

Palmer was a general medical practitioner at Rugeley, much engaged in sporting transactions. Cook, his intimate friend, was also a sporting man, and died at the Talbot Arms Hotel, at that time, on the 13th November, 1855, under circumstances which raised a suspicion that he had been poisoned by Palmer. The case against Palmer was that he had a strong motive to murder his friend, and that his conduct before, at the time of, and after his death, coupled with the circumstances of the death itself, left no reasonable doubt [108] that he did murder him by poisoning him with antimony and strychnine administered on various occasions—the antimony probably being used as a preparation for the strychnine

The evidence stood as follows.—At the time of Cook's death, Palmer was involved in bill transactions which appeared to have begun in the year 1853. His wife died in September, 1851, and on her death he received £13,000 on policies on her life, nearly the whole of which was applied to the discharge of his liabilities (1). In the course of the year 1855 he raised other large sums, amounting in all to £13,500, on what purported to be acceptances of his mother's. The bills were renewed from time to time at enormous interest (usually sixty per cent per annum) by a money lender named Pratt, who, at the time of Cook's death, held eight bills—four on his own account and four on account of his client, two already overdue and six others falling due—some in November and others in January. About £1,000 had been paid off in the course of the year, so that the total amount then due or shortly to fall due to Pratt, was £12,500. The only means which Palmer had by which these bills could be provided for was a policy on the life of his brother, Walter Palmer, for £13,000. Walter Palmer died in August, 1855 (2) and William Palmer had instructed Pratt to recover the amount from the insurance office, but the office refused to pay. In consequence of this difficulty, Pratt earnestly [109] pressed Palmer to pay something in order to keep down the interest or diminish the principal understood that more money was to be raised as early as possible

Besides the money £10,400 Part of these, Palmer, were collateral property. These bills Mr Padwick also held remained unpaid, and which was twelve months overdue on the 16th of October, 1855. Palmer, on the 12th November, had given Esplan a cheque ante-dated on the 28th November, for the other £1,000. Mrs Sarah Palmer's acceptance was on nearly all these bills, and in every instance was forged.

The result was, that about the time of the Shrewsbury races, Palmer was being pressed for payment on forged acceptances to the amount of nearly £20,000 and that his only resources were a certain amount of personal property, over which Wright held a bill of sale, and a policy for £13,000, the payment of

(1) A bill was found against him for her murder

(2) A bill was found against Palmer for his murder

ed in obtaining payment there still remained the necessary to provide for ds of his own was proved by the fact that his balance at the bank on the 19th November was £9, 6s, and that he had to borrow £25 of a farmer named Walbank, to go to Shrewsbury races. It follows that he was under the most pressing necessity to obtain a considerable sum of money, as even a short delay in obtaining it might involve him not only in insolvency, but in a prosecution for uttering forged acceptances.

Besides the embarrassment arising from the bills in the hands of Pratt, Wright and Padwick, Palmer was involved in a transaction with Cook, which had a bearing on the rest of the case. Cook and he were parties to a bill for £500 which Pratt had discounted, giving £365 in cash, and a wine warrant for £65, and charging £60 for discount and expenses. He also required an assignment of two race horses of Cook's—Pole star and Sirius—as a collateral security. By Palmer's request the £365, in the shape of a cheque payable to Cook's order and the wine warrant, were sent by post to Palmer at Doncaster. Palmer wrote Cook's endorsement on the cheque and paid the amount to his own credit at the Bank at Rugeley. On the part of the prosecution it was said that this transaction afforded a reason why Palmer should desire to be rid of Cook, inasmuch as it amounted to a forgery by which [111] Cook was defrauded of £375. It appeared, however, on the other side, that there were £300 worth of notes relating to some other transaction in the letter which enclosed the cheque, and as it did not appear that Cook had complained of getting no consideration for his acceptance it was suggested that he had authorized Palmer to write his name on the back of the cheque, and had taken the notes himself. This arrangement seems not improbable, as it would otherwise be hard to explain why Cook acquiesced in receiving nothing for his acceptance, and there was evidence that he meant to provide for the bill when it became due. It also appeared later in the case that there was another bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested (1).

Such was Palmer's position when he went to Shrewsbury races on Monday, the 12th November, 1855. Cook was there also, and on Tuesday, the 13th, his mare Pole-star won the Shrewsbury Handicap, by which he became entitled to the stakes, worth about £380, and bets to the amount of nearly £2,000. Of these bets he received £700 or £800 on the course at Shrewsbury. The rest was to be paid at Tattersall's on the following Monday, the 19th November (1). After the race Cook invited some of his friends to dinner at the Raven Hotel, and on that occasion and on the following day he was both sober and well (2). On the Wednesday night a man named Ishmael Fisher came into the sitting room, which Palmer shared with Cook, and [112] found them in company with some other men drinking brandy and water. Cook complained that the brandy "burned his throat dreadfully," and put down his glass with a small quantity

Read
What s
rwards

left the room called out Fisher and told him that he had been dosed with brandy and "He thought that damned Palmer had dosed him." He also handed over to Fisher £700 or £800 in notes to keep for him (3). He then became sick again, and was ill all night, and had to be attended by a doctor. He told the doctor,

(1) All these facts go to show motive (section 8)

(2) State of things under which the following facts occurred (section 7)

(3) Conduct of person against whom offence was committed and statement explanatory of such conduct (section 2 exp 1)

lasted twelve days, and ended on the 27th May, when the prisoner was convicted, and received sentence of death, on which he was afterwards executed at Stafford

Palmer was a general medical practitioner at Rugeley, much engaged in sporting transactions. Cook, his intimate friend, was also a sporting man, and after attending Shrewsbury races with him on the 13th November, 1855, returned in his company to Rugeley and died at the Talbot Arms Hotel, at that place, soon after midnight, on the 21st November, 1855, under circumstances which raised a suspicion that he had been poisoned by Palmer. The case against Palmer was that he had a strong motive to murder his friend, and that his conduct before, at the time of, and after his death, coupled with the circumstances of the death itself, left no reasonable doubt [108] that he did murder him by poisoning him with antimony and strychnine administered on various occasions—the antimony probably being used as a preparation for the strychnine.

The evidence stood as follows.—At the time of Cook's death, Palmer was involved in bill transactions which appeared to have begun in the year 1853. His wife died in September, 1851, and on her death he received £13,000 on policies on her life, nearly the whole of which was applied to the discharge of his liabilities (1). In the course of the year 1855 he raised other large sums, amounting in all to £13,500, on what purported to be acceptances of his mother's. The bills were renewed from time to time at enormous interest (usually sixty per cent per annum) by a money lender named Pratt, who, at the time of Cook's death, held eight bills—four on his own account and four on account of his client, two already overdue and six others falling due—some in November and others in January. About £1,000 had been paid off in the course of the year, so that the total amount then due or shortly to fall due to Pratt, was £12,500. The only means which Palmer had by which these bills could be provided for was a policy on the life of his brother, Walter Palmer, for £13,000. Walter Palmer died in August, 1855 (2) and William Palmer had instructed Pratt to recover the amount from the insurance office, but the office refused to pay. In consequence of this difficulty, Pratt earnestly [109] pressed Palmer to pay something in order to keep down the interest or diminish the principal due on the bills. He issued writs against him and his mother on the 6th November, and informed him in substance that they would be served at once, unless he would pay something on account. Shortly before the Shrewsbury races he had accordingly paid three sums, amounting in all to £800, of which £600 went in reduction of the principal, and £200 was deducted for interest. It was understood that more money was to be raised as early as possible.

Best

£10,400

Palmer,

property. These bills would fall due on the first or second week of November. Mr. Padwick also held a bill of the same kind for £2,000, on which £1,000 was due on the 16th of October, due ante-dated on acceptance was on nearly all these bills, and in every instance was forged.

The result was, that about the time of the Shrewsbury races, Palmer was being pressed for payment on forged acceptances to the amount of nearly £20,000 and that his only resources were a certain amount of personal property, over which Wright held a bill of sale, and a policy for £13,000, the payment of

(1) A bill was found against him for her murder

(2) A bill was found against Palmer for his murder

ed in obtaining payment there still remained the necessary to provide for at once by some means or other. That he had no funds of his own was proved by the fact that his balance at the bank on the 19th November was £9, 6s, and that he had to borrow £25 of a farmer named Walbank, to go to Shrewsbury races. It follows that he was under the most pressing necessity to obtain a considerable sum of money, as even a short delay in obtaining it might involve him not only in insolvency, but in a prosecution for uttering forged acceptances.

Besides the embarrassment arising from the bills in the hands of Pratt, Wright and Padwick, Palmer was involved in a transaction with Cook, which had a bearing on the rest of the case. Cook and he were parties to a bill for £500 which Pratt had discounted, giving £365 in cash, and a wine warrant for £65, and charging £60 for discount and expenses. He also required an assignment of two race horses of Cook's—Pole star and Sirius—as a collateral security. By Palmer's request the £365, in the shape of a cheque payable to Cook's order and the wine warrant, were sent by post to Palmer at Doncaster. Palmer wrote Cook's endorsement on the cheque and paid the amount to his own credit at the Bank at Rugeley. On the part of the prosecution it was said that this transaction afforded a reason why Palmer should desire to be rid of Cook inasmuch as it amounted to a forgery by which [111] Cook was defrauded of £375. It appeared however on the other side that there were £300 worth of notes relating to some other transaction in the letter which enclosed the cheque, and as it did not appear that Cook had complained of getting no consideration for his acceptance, it was suggested that he had authorized Palmer to write his name on the back of the cheque, and had taken the notes himself. This arrangement seems not improbable as it would otherwise be hard to explain why Cook acquiesced in receiving nothing for his acceptance and there was evidence that he meant to provide for the bill when it became due. It also appeared later in the case that there was another bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested (1).

Such was Palmer's position when he went to Shrewsbury races on Monday the 12th November, 1835. Cook was there also and on Tuesday the 13th, his mare Pole-star won the Shrewsbury Handicap by which he became entitled to the stakes worth about £380 and bets to the amount of nearly £2,000. Of these bets he received £700 or £800 on the course at Shrewsbury. The rest was to be paid at Tattersalls on the following Monday the 19th November (1). After the race Cook invited some of his friends to dinner at the Raven Hotel, and on that occasion and on the following day he was both sober and well (2). On the Wednesday night a man named Ishmael Fisher came into the sitting room, which Palmer shared with Cook and [112] found them in company with some other men drinking brandy and water. Cook complained that the brandy "burned his throat dreadfully" and put down his glass with a small quantity

Read
What s
rwards
and,

* He thought that damned Palmer had dosed him. He also handed over to Fisher £700 or £800 in notes to keep for him (3). He then became sick again, and was ill all night, and had to be attended by a doctor. He told the doctor,

(1) All these facts go to show motive (section 8)

(2) State of things under which the following facts occurred (section 7)

(3) Conduct of person against whom offence was committed and statement explanatory of such conduct (section 8 exp 1)

Mr Gibson, that he thought he had been poisoned, and he was treated on that supposition (1) Next day Palmer told Fisher that Cook had said that he (Palmer) had been putting something into his brandy. He added that he did not play such tricks with people, and that Cook had been drunk the night before—which appeared not to be the case (2) Fisher did not expressly say that he returned the money [113] to Cook, but from the course of the evidence it seems that he did (3), for Cook asked him to pay Pratt £200 at once, and to repay himself on the following Monday out of the bets which he would receive on Cook's account at the settling at Tattersall's.

About half past ten on the Wednesday, and apparently shortly before Cook drank the brandy and water which he complained of, Palmer was seen by a Mrs Brooks in the passage looking at a glass lamp, through a tumbler which contained some clear fluid like water, and which he was shaking and turning in his hand. There appears, however, to have been no secrecy in this, as he spoke to Mrs Brooks, and continued to hold and shake the tumbler as he did so (4) George Myatt was called to contradict this for the prisoner. He said that he was in the room when Palmer and Cook came in, that Cook made a remark about the brandy, though he gave a different version of it from Fisher and Read, that he did not see anything put in it, and that if anything had been put in it he should have seen. He also swore that Palmer never left the room from the time he came in till Cook went to bed. He also put the time later than Fisher and Read (5) All this, however, came to very little. It was the sort of thing that Myatt was a friend of Cook's and was honestly enough.

Brooks, and also from that of Cook were taken ill at Shrewsbury symptoms Mrs Brooks said, might have been poisoned in any back to Rugeley according to Myatt (6)

The evidence as to what passed at Shrewsbury clearly proves that Palmer being then in great want of money, Cook was to his knowledge in possession of £700 or £800 in bank notes and was also entitled to receive on the following Monday about £1 400 more. It also shows that Palmer may have given him a dose of antimony, though the weight of the evidence to this effect is weakened by the proof that diarrhoea and vomiting were prevalent in Shrewsbury at the time. It is, however, important in connection with subsequent events.

On Thursday November 15th, Palmer and Cook returned together to Rugeley, which they reached about ten at night. Cook went to the Talbot Arms, and Palmer to his own house immediately opposite. Cook still came a company with about ten in the evening. Palmer came given to Cook 11.

(1) The administration of antimony by Palmer would be a fact in issue as being one of a set of acts of poisoning which finally caused Cook's death. Cook's feelings were relevant as the effect of his being poisoned (section 7), and his statement as to them was relevant under section 14 as a statement showing the existence of a relevant bodily feeling.

(2) Admission (sections 17-18)

(3) Motive (section 8)

(4) Preparation (section 8)

(5) Evidence against last fact (section 5)

(6) Facts rebutting inference suggested by preceding fact (section 9)

(7) Introductory to what follows (section 9) and shows state of things under which following facts occurred (section 7)

by Mills, the chambermaid, in Palmer's presence. When she next went to his room, an hour or two afterwards, it had been vomited (1). In the course of the day, and apparently about the middle of the day, Palmer sent a charwoman, named Rowley, to get some broth for Cook at an inn called the Albion. She put it by the fire to warm, and left the room. She poured it into a cup and sent it to the Talbot Arms from Mr Jeremiah Smith. The broth was given to Cook, who at first refused to take it, Palmer, however, came in, and said he must have it. The chambermaid brought back the broth which she had taken downstairs and left it in the room. It also was thrown up (1). In the course of the afternoon Palmer called in Mr Bamford, a surgeon, eighty years of age, to see Cook, and told him that when Cook dined at his (Palmer's) house he had taken too much champagne (2). Mr Bamford, however, found no bilious symptoms about him, and he said he had only drunk two glasses (3). On the Saturday night Mr Jeremiah Smith slept in Cook's room, as he was still ill. On the Sunday, between twelve and one, Palmer sent over his gardener, [116] Hawley, with some more broth for Cook (4). Elizabeth Mills, the servant at the Talbot Arms, tasted it, taking two or three spoonfuls. She became exceedingly sick about half an hour afterwards and vomited till 5 o'clock in the afternoon. She was so ill that she had to go to bed. This broth was also taken to Cook, and the cup afterwards returned to Palmer. It appears to have been taken and vomited, though the evidence is not quite explicit on that point (5). By the Sunday's post Palmer wrote to Mr Jones, an apothecary and Cook's most intimate friend, to come and see him. He said that Cook was "confined to his bed with a severe bilious attack, combined with diarrhoea." The servant Mills said there was no diarrhoea (6). It was observed on the part of the defence that this letter was strong proof of innocence. The prosecution suggested that it was "part of a deep design, and was meant to make evidence in the prisoner's favour." The fair conclusion seems to be that it was an ambiguous act which ought to weigh neither way, though the falsehood about Cook's symptoms is suspicious as far as it goes.

On the night between Sunday and Monday Cook had some sort of attack. When the servant Mills went into his room on the Monday he said, "I was just mad for two minutes." She said, "Why did you not ring the bell?" He said, "I thought that you would be all fast asleep, [117] and not hear it." He also said he was disturbed by a quarrel in the street. It might have waked and disturbed him, but he was not sure. This incident was not mentioned at first by Barnes and Mills, but was brought out on their being recalled at the request of the prisoner's counsel. It was considered important for the defence, as proving that Cook had had an attack of some kind before it was suggested that any strychnine was administered, and the principal medical witness for the defence, Mr Nunneley, referred to it, with this view (7).

On the Monday, about a quarter past or half past seven, Palmer again visited Cook, but as he was in London about half past two, he must have gone to town by an early train. During the whole of the Monday Cook was much

(1) Fact in issue and its effect as this was an act of poisoning (section 5)

(2) Conduct and statements explaining conduct (section 8)

(3) Rebutts inference in Palmer's favour suggested by preceding fact and explains the object of his conduct by showing that his statement was false (section 9). Cook's statement relates to his state of body

(section 14)

(4) Fact in issue—administration of poisons (section 5)

(5) Effect of facts in issue (section 7)

(6) Conduct (section 8) and explanation of it (section 9)

(7) Fact tending to rebut inference from previous fact (section 9)

better. He dressed himself, saw a jockey and his trainer, and the sickness ceased (1)

In the meantime Palmer was in London. He met by appointment a man named Herring, who was connected with the turf. Palmer told him he wished to settle Cook's account and read to him from a list, which Herring copied as Palmer read it, the particulars of the bets which he was to receive. They amounted to £984 clear. Of this sum Palmer instructed Herring to pay £450 to Pratt and £350 to Padwick. The nature of the debt to Padwick was not proved in evidence, as Padwick himself was not called. Palmer told Herring [118] the £450 was to settle the bill for which Cook had assigned his horses. He wrote Pratt on the same day a letter in these words,—"Dear Sir,—You will place the £50 I have just paid you, and the £450 you will receive from Mr Herring, together £500, and the £200 you received on Saturday" (from Fisher) "towards payment of my mother's acceptance for £2 000, due 25th October"(2)

Herring received upwards of £800, and paid part of it away according to Palmer's directions. Pratt gave Palmer credit for the £450, but the £350 was not paid to Padwick, according to Palmer's directions, as part was retained by Mr Herring for some debts due from Cook to him, and Herring received less than he expected. In his reply the Attorney General said that the £350 intended to be paid to Padwick was on account of a bet, and suggested that the motive was to keep Padwick quiet as to the ante dated cheque for £1,000 given to Esplan on Padwick's account. There was no evidence of this, and it is not of much importance. It was clearly intended to be paid to Padwick on account, not of Cook (except possibly as to a small part), but of Palmer. Palmer thus disposed, or attempted to dispose, in the course of Monday, November 19th, of the whole of Cook's winnings for his own advantage (3)

This is a convenient place to mention the final result of the transaction relating to the bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested. On the Friday [119] when Cook and Palmer dined together (November 16th), Cook wrote to Fisher (his agent) in these words—"It is of very great importance to both Palmer and myself that a sum of £500 should be paid to a Mr Pratt of 5, Queen Street, Mayfair, 300l has been sent up to night, and if you would be kind enough to pay the other £200 to-morrow, on the receipt of this, you will greatly oblige me. I will settle it on Monday at Tattersall's." Fisher did pay the £200, expecting, as he said, to settle Cook's account on the Monday, and repay himself. On the Saturday, November 17th (the day after the date of the letter), "a person," said Pratt, "whose name I did not know, called on me with a cheque, and paid me 300l on account of the prisoner that" (apparently the cheque, not the 300l) "was a cheque of Mr Fisher's." When Pratt heard of Cook's death he wrote to Palmer, saying, "The death of Mr Cook will now compel you to look about as to the payment of the bill for £500 due the 2nd of December"(4)

Great use was made of these letters by the defence. It was argued that they proved that Cook was helping Palmer, and was eager to relieve him from "the consequence of this he not only took apply the £800 to similar purposes, instead of Fisher, so that Fisher he had advanced to Pratt, it was asked how it could be [120] Palmer's interest, on this supposition, that Cook

(1) Supports the inference suggested by the previous fact that Palmer's doses caused Cook's illness (section 9)

(2) Conduct and statement explanatory thereof (section 8 ex 2)

(3) All this is Palmer's conduct and is explanatory of it (sections 7, 9)

(4) Motive for not poisoning Cook (section 8) should die, especially as the first consequence of his death was Pratt's application for the money due on the £500 bill.

These arguments were, no doubt, plausible; and the fact that Cook's death compelled Pratt to look to Palmer for the payment of the £500 lends them weight; but it may be asked, on the other hand, why should Cook give away the whole of his winnings to Palmer? Why should Cook allow Palmer to appropriate to the diminution of his own liabilities the £200 which Fisher had advanced to the credit of the bill on which both were liable? Why should he join with Palmer in a plan for defrauding Fisher of his security for this advance? No answer to any of these questions was suggested. As to the £300, Cook's letter to Fisher says, "£300 has been sent up this evening." There was evidence that Pratt never received it, for he applied to Palmer for the money on Cook's death. Moreover, Pratt said that on the Saturday he did receive £300 on account of Palmer, which he placed to the account of the forged acceptance for £2,000. Where did Palmer get the money? The suggestion of the prosecution was that Cook gave it him to pay to Pratt on account of their joint bill, and that he paid it on his own account. This was probably the true view of the case. The observation that Pratt, on hearing of Cook's death, applied to Palmer to pay the £500 bill, is met by the reflection that that bill was genuine, and collaterally secured by the assignment of the race-horses, and that the other bill bore a forged acceptance, and must be satisfied at all hazards. [121] The result is that on the Monday evening Palmer had the most imperious interest in Cook's death, for he had robbed him of all he had in the world, except the equity of redemption in his two horses.

and went to Salt's ordinarily before next and with was improper, but nothing appeared on cross-examination to suggest that the witness was wilfully perjured

Cook had y, and on Monday evening Mr Bamford, pills for him, which he left at the hotel for strychnine. They were taken up in the box in which they came to Cook's room by the chambermaid, and were left there on the dressing table about eight o'clock. Palmer came (according to Barnes the waitress) between eight and nine, and Mills said she saw him sitting by the fire between nine and ten (2)

[122] If this evidence were believed, he would have had an opportunity of substituting poisoned pills for those sent by Mr Bamford just after he had, according to Newton, procured strychnine. The evidence, however, was contradicted by a witness called for the prisoner, Jeremiah Smith the attorney. He said that on the Monday evening, about ten minutes past ten, he saw Palmer coming in a car from the direction of Stafford, that they went up to Cook's room together, stayed two or three minutes, and went with Smith to the house of old Mrs Palmer, his mother. Cook said Bamford sent him some pills, and he had taken them, and Palmer was late, intimating that he should not have taken them if he had thought Palmer would have called in before. If this evidence were believed it would of course have proved that Cook took the pills which Bamford sent as he sent them (1) Smith, however, was cross examined by the Attorney General at great length. He admitted with the greatest reluctance that he had witnessed the assignment of a policy for £13,000 by Walter to William Palmer, that he wrote to an office to effect an insurance for £10,000 on the life of Bates, who was Palmer's groom, at £1 a week, that he tried, after Walter Palmer's death to get his widow to give up her claim on the policy, that he was applied to to attest other proposals for insurances on Walter Palmer's life for similar amounts, and that he had got a cheque for £5 for attesting the assignment (2)

[123] Lord Campbell said of this witness in summing up, "Can you believe a man who so disgraces himself in the witness box? It is for you to say what faith you can place in a witness, who, by his own admission, engaged in such fraudulent proceedings."

It is curious that though the credit of this witness was so much shaken in cross examination, and though he was contradicted both by Mills and Newton, ~~he was not~~ wrong as to the time when Palmer came down ~~at~~ ^{athews}, the inspector of police at the Euston in ~~h~~ ^h which Palmer could have left London

"between nine and ten" Nothing, however, is more difficult than to speak accurately to time, on the other hand, if Smith spoke the truth, Newton could not have seen him at all that night and Mills, if at all, must have seen him for a moment only in Smith's company. Mills never mentioned Smith, and Smith would not venture to swear that she or any one else saw him at the Talbot Arms. It was a suspicious circumstance that Serjeant Shee did not open Smith's evidence to the jury. An opportunity for perjury was afforded by [124] the mistake made by the witnesses as to the time which the defence were able to prove by the evidence of the police inspector. If Smith were disposed to tell an untruth, the knowledge of this fact would enable him to do so with an appearance of plausibility.

Whatever view is taken as to the effect of this evidence it was clearly proved that about the middle of the night between Monday and Tuesday Cook had a violent attack of some sort. About twelve or a little before, his bell rang, he screamed violently. When Mills, the servant, came in he was sitting up in bed, and asked that Palmer might be fetched at once. He was beating the bed clothes, he said he should suffocate if he lay down. His head and neck and his whole body jumped and jerked. He had great difficulty in breathing, and his eyes protruded. His hand was stiff, and he asked to have it rubbed. Palmer came in, and gave him a draught and some pills. He snapped at the glass, and got both it and the spoon between his teeth. He had also great difficulty in swallowing the pills. After this he got more easy, and Palmer stayed by him some time, sleeping in an easy chair (4).

Great efforts were made in cross examination to shake the evidence of Mills by showing that she had altered the evidence which she gave before the coroner, so as to make her description of the symptoms tally with those of poisoning by

(1) Evidence against the existence of the fact last mentioned (section 5)

(2) This cross examination tended to test the veracity of the witness and to test his credit (section 146)

(3) Facts inconsistent with a relevant fact (section 11) and fixing the time of the occurrence of a relevant fact (section 9)

(4) Effect of fact in issue ~~vis~~, the administration of poison (section 7) strychnine, and also by showing that she had been drilled as to the evidence which she was to give by [125] persons connected with the prosecution. She denied most of the suggestions conveyed by the questions asked her, and explained others (1). As to the differences between her evidence before the coroner and at the trial, a witness (Mr Gardner an attorney) was called to show that the depositions were not properly taken at the inquest (2).

On the following day, Tuesday, the 20th, Cook was a good deal better. In the middle of the day he sent the hoots to ask Palmer if he might have a cup of coffee. Palmer said he might, and came over, tasted a cup made by the servant, and took it from her hands to give it to Cook. This coffee was afterwards thrown up (3).

A little before or after this, the exact hour is not important, Palmer went to the shop of Hawkins, a druggist at Rugeley, and was there served by his apprentice Roberts with two drachms of prussic acid, six grains of strychnine and two drachms of Batley's Sedative (4). Whilst he was making the purchase, Newton from whom he had obtained the other strychnine the night before came in, Palmer took him to the door saying he wished to speak to him, [126] and when he was there asked him a question about the firm of a Mr Edwin Salt—a matter with which he had nothing at all to do. Whilst they were there a third person came up and spoke to Newton, on which Palmer went back into Hawkins shop and took away the things, Newton not seeing what he took. The obvious suggestion upon this is that Palmer wanted to prevent Newton from seeing what he was about. No attempt even was made to shake, or in any way discredit, Roberts, the apprentice (5).

At about four P.M. Mr Jones, the friend to whom Palmer had written, arrived from Lutterworth (6). He examined Cook in Palmer's presence, and remarked that he had not the tongue of a bilious patient, to which Palmer replied, 'You should have seen it before.' Cook appeared to be better during the Tuesday, and was in good spirits (7). At about seven P.M. Mr Bamford came in and Cook told him in Palmer's presence that he objected to the pills, as they had made him ill the night before. The three medical men then had a private consultation. Palmer proposed that Bamford should make up the pills as on the night before, and that Jones should not tell Cook what they were made of, as he objected to the morphine which they contained. Bamford agreed, and Palmer went up to his house with him and got the pills and was present whilst they were made up, put into a pill box [127] and directed. He took them away with him between seven and eight (8). Cook was well and comfortable all the evening, he had no bilious symptoms, no vomiting, and no diarrhoea (7).

Towards eleven Palmer came with a box of pills directed in Bamford's hand. He called Jones 'a man of eighty' (9). It was his wish to impress Jones with Bamford's evidence. With reference to Smith's evidence it is remarkable that Bamford on the second

(1) Former statements inconsistent with evidence (section 155)

(2) The depositions before the coroner would be a proper mode of proof as being a record of a relevant fact made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty (section 35) and any document purporting to be such a deposition would on production be presumed to be genuine and the evidence would be presumed to be duly taken (sections 79 and 80) but this might be rebutted (section 4) definition of shall presume)

(3) Part of the transaction of poisoning (section 8)

(4) Preparation (section 8)

(5) Conduct (section 8)

(6) Introductory (section 9)

(7) State of things under which Cook was poisoned (section 7)

(8) Preparation (section 8)

(9) Conduct and statement (section 8, et 2)

night sent the pills, not "between nine and ten," but at eleven Palmer pressed Cook to take the pills, which at first he refused to do, as they had made him so ill the night before. At last he did so, and immediately afterwards vomited. Jones and Palmer both examined to see whether the pills had been thrown up, and they found that they had not. This was about eleven. Jones then had his supper, and went to bed in Cook's room about twelve. When he had been in bed a short time, perhaps ten minutes, Cook started up and called out, "Doctor, get up, I am going to be ill; ring the bell for Mr. Palmer." He also said, "Ruh my neck." The back of his neck was stiff and hard. Mills ran across the road to Palmer's and rang the bell. Palmer immediately came to the bed room window and said he would come at once. Two minutes afterwards he was in Cook's room, and [128] said he had never dressed so quick in his life. He was dressed as usual. The suggestion upon this was that he had been sitting up expecting to be called (1).

By the time of Palmer's arrival Cook was very ill. Jones, Elizabeth Mills, and Palmer were in the room, and Barnes stood at the door. The muscles of his neck were stiff, he screamed loudly. Palmer gave him what he said were two ammonia pills. Immediately afterwards—too soon for the pills to have any effect—he was dreadfully convulsed. He said, when he began to be convulsed, "Raise me up, or I shall be suffocated." Palmer and Jones tried to do so, but could not, as the limbs were rigid. He then asked to be turned over, which was done. His heart began to beat weakly. Jones asked Palmer to get some ammonia to try to stimulate it. He fetched a bottle, and was absent about a minute for that purpose. When he came back, Cook was almost dead, and he died in a few minutes, quite quietly. The whole attack lasted about ten minutes. The body was twisted back into the shape of a how, and would have rested on the head and heels had it been laid on its back. When the body was laid out it was very stiff. The arms could not be kept down by the sides till they were tied behind the back with tape. The feet also had to be tied, and the fingers of one hand were very stiff, the hand being clenched. This was about one A.M., half or three quarters of an hour after the death (2).

[129] As soon as Cook was dead, Jones went out to speak to the house-keeper, leaving Palmer alone with the body. When Jones left the room he sent the servant Mills in and she saw Palmer searching the pockets of Cook's coat and searching also under the pillow and bolster. Jones shortly afterwards returned, and Palmer told him that as Cook's nearest friend, he (Jones) ought to take possession of his property, containing five pounds of his watch and no other money. Palmer said, Mr. Jones, as I am responsible for £3,000 or £4,000 and I hope Mr. Cook's friends will not let me lose it. If they do not assist me all my horses will be seized. The betting book was mentioned. Palmer said "It will be no use to any one," and added that it would probably be found (3).

Wetherby was to receive for him. This cheque had been drawn on the Tuesday, about seven o'clock in the evening under peculiar circumstances. Palmer wrote to Rugeley, telling him to bring a receipt to write out, from a copy which he produced. He said it was for money which

(1) Fact in issue (section 15) Conduct (section 8)

(2) Cook's death, in all its detail, was a fact in issue (section 5)

(3) Conduct (section 8)

Cook owed him, and that he was going to take it [130] over for Cook to sign Cheshire wrote out the body of the cheque, and Palmer took it away. When Mr Wetherby received the cheque, the stakes had not been paid to Cook's credit. He accordingly returned the cheque to Palmer, to whom the prosecution gave notice to produce it at the trial (1). It was called for, but not produced (2). This was one of the strongest facts against Palmer in the whole of the case. If he had produced the cheque, and if it had appeared to have been really signed by Cook, it would have shown that Cook, for some reason or other, had made over his stakes to Palmer, and this would have destroyed the strong purpose of the bets to his own almost upset the case as to the production of the cheque. It amounted to an admission that it was a forgery, and if that were so, Palmer was forging his friend's name for the purpose of stealing his stakes at the time when to all outward appearance there was every prospect of his speedy recovery, which must result in the detection of the fraud. If he knew that Cook would die that night this was natural. On any other supposition it was inconceivable rashness (3).

Either on Thursday, 22nd or Friday, 23rd, Palmer sent for Cheshire again, and produced a paper which he [131] said Cook had given to him some days before. The paper purported to be an acknowledgment that certain bills—the particulars of which were stated—were all for Cook's benefit and not for Palmer's. The amount was considerable as at least one item was for £1,000, and another for £500. This document purported to be signed by Cook, and Palmer wished Cheshire to attest Cook's execution of it, which he refused to do. This document was called for at the trial, and not produced. The same observations apply to it as to the cheque (4).

Evidence was further given to show that Palmer, who, shortly before, had but £9, 6s at the bank, and had borrowed £25 to go to Shrewsbury, paid away large sums of money soon after Cook's death. He paid Pratt £100 on the 21st, he paid a farmer named Spilsbury £46, 2s with a bank of England note for £50 on the 22nd, and Bown, a draper, a sum of £60 or thereabouts in two £50 notes, on the 20th (5). The general result of these money transactions is, that Palmer appropriated to his own use all Cook's bets, that he tried to appropriate his stakes, and that shortly before, or just after his death, he was in possession of between £400 and £600, of which he paid Pratt £100, though very shortly before he was being pressed for money.

On Wednesday, November 21st, Mr Jones went up to London, and informed Mr Stephens, Cook's step-father, of his step-son's death. Mr Stephens went to Lutterworth, found a will by which Cook appointed him his executor, [132] and then went on to Rugeley, where he arrived about the middle of the day on Thursday (6). He asked Palmer for information about Cook's affairs and he replied, "There are £4,000 worth of bills out of us, and I am sorry to say my name is to them, but I have got a paper drawn up by a lawyer and signed by Mr Cook to show that I never had any benefit from them." Mr Stephens said that at all events he must be buried. Palmer offered to do so himself and said that the body ought to be fastened up as soon as possible. The conversation then ended for the time. Palmer went

(1) Conduct (section 8)

(2) See section 66 as to notice to produce

(3) As to these inferences see section 114 illust. (g)

(4) Conduct (section 8) See section 66

as to notice to produce. As to these inferences see section 114 illust. (g)

(5) Conduct (section 8)

(6) Introductory and explanatory (section 9) out and without authority from Mr Stephens ordered a shell and a strong oak coffin (1)

In the afternoon Mr Stephens, Palmer, Jones, and n Mr Gradford, Cook's brother in law, dined together, and after dinner Mr. Stephens desired Mr Jones to fetch Cook's betting book Jones went to look for it, but was unable to en by the chambermaid, Mills, who when he took a stamp from a pocket < could not be found, Palmer said it was of no manner of use Mr Stephens said he understood Cook had won a great deal of money at Shrewsbury, to which Palmer replied: "It's no use, I assure you, when a man dies his bets are done with" He did not mention the fact that Cook's bets had been paid to Herring on the Monday Mr Stephens then said that the book must be found, and [133] Palmer answered that no doubt it would be (2) Before leaving the inn Mr Stephens went to look at the body, before the coffin was fastened, and observed that both hands were clenched He returned at once to town and went to his attorney He returned to Rugeley on Saturday, the 24th, and informed Palmer of his intention to have a post mortem examination, which took place on Monday, 26th (3)

The post mortem examination was conducted in the presence of Palmer by Dr Harland, Mr Devonshire, a medical student, assisting Mr Monkton and Mr Newton The heart was contracted and empty There were numerous small yellowish white spots, about the size of mustard seed, at the larger end of the stomach The upper part of the spinal cord was in its natural state, the lower part was not examined till the 25th January, when certain granules were found There were many follicles on the tongue, apparently of long standing The lungs appeared healthy to Dr Harland, but Mr Devonshire thought that there was some congestion (4) Some points in Palmer's behaviour, both before and after the post mortem examination attracted notice Newton said that on the Sunday night he sent for him and asked what dose of strychnine would kill a dog Newton said a grain He asked whether it would be found in the [134] stomach and what would be the appearance of the stomach after death Newton said there would be no inflammation, and he did not think it would be found Newton thought he replied "It's all right," as if speaking to himself and added that he snapped his fingers Whilst Devonshire was opening the stomach Palmer pushed against him, and part of the contents of the stomach was spilt Nothing particular being found in the stomach, Palmer observed to Bamford, "They will not hang us yet" As they were all crowding together to see what passed the push might have been an accident, and as Mr Stephens' suspicions were well known the remark was natural, though coarse After the examination was completed the intestines, etc, were put into a jar over the top of which were tied two bladders Palmer removed the jar from the table to a place near the door, and when it was missed said he thought it would be more convenient When replaced it was found that a slit has been cut through both the bladders (5)

After the examination Mr Stephens and an attorney's clerk took the jars containing the viscera, etc, in a fly to Stafford (6) Palmer asked the postboy if he was going to drive them to Stafford? The postboy said, "I believe I am," Palmer said, "Is it Mr Stephens yon are going to take?" He said, "I

(1) Admission and conduct (sections 17 18 section 8)

(2) These facts and statements together make it highly probable that Palmer stole the betting book which would be relevant as conduct (sections 8 11)

(3) Introductory to what follows (section 9)

(4) Facts supporting opinions of experts (section 46)

(5) Conduct (section 8)

(6) Introductory (section 9)

believe it is " Palmer said, "I suppose you are going to take the jars?" He said, "I am " Palmer asked if he would upset them? He said, "I shall [135] not " Palmer said if he would, there was a £10 note for him He also said something about its being "a humbugging concern"(1) Some confusion was introduced into this evidence by the cross-examination, which tended to show that Palmer's object was to upset Mr Stephens and not the jars, but at last the postboy (J Myatt) repeated it as given above Indeed, it makes little difference whether Palmer wished to upset Stephens or the jars, as they were all in one fly, and must be upset together if at all

Shortly after the post mortem examination an inquest was held before Mr Ward, the coroner It began on the 29th November and ended on the 5th Decem^{br} Cheshire, the postmaster, "if he could not open a letter

Afterw^{ards} Alfred Taylor, who had analyzed the contents of the stomach, etc., to Mr Gardiner, the attorney for the prosecution, and informed Palmer that Dr Taylor said in that letter that no traces of strychnine were found Palmer said he knew they would not and he was quite innocent Soon afterwards Palmer wrote to Mr Ward, suggesting various questions to be put to witnesses at the inquest and saying that he knew Dr Taylor had told Mr Gardiner there were no traces of strychnia prussic acid, or opium A few days before this, on the 1st December, Palmer had sent Mr Ward, as a present, a codfish, a harrel of oysters a brace of [136] pheasants, and a turkey (2) These circumstances certainly prove improper and even criminal conduct Cheshire was imprisoned for his offence, and Lord Campbell spoke in severe terms of the conduct of the coroner, but a bad and unscrupulous man, as Palmer evidently was, might act in the manner described, even though he was innocent of the particular offence charged

A medical hook found in Palmer's possession had in it some MS notes on the subject of strychnine, one of which was, "It kills by causing tetanic contraction of the respiratory muscles" It was not suggested that this memorandum was made for any particular purpose It was used merely to show that Palmer was acquainted with the properties and effects of strychnine (3)

This completes the evidence as to Palmer's behaviour before, at and after the death of Cook It proves beyond all question that, having the strongest possible motive to obtain at once a considerable sum of money, he robbed his friend of the whole of the bets paid to Herring on the Monday by a series of ingenious devices, and that he tried to rob him of the stakes, it raises the strongest presumption that he robbed Cook of the £300 which, as Cook supposed was sent up to Pratt on the 16th, and that he stole the money which he had on his person, and had received at Shrewsbury, it proves that he forged his name the night before he died, and that he tried to procure a fraudulent attestation to [137] another forged document relating to his affairs the day after he died It also proves that he had every opportunity of administering poison to Cook, that he told repeated lies about his state of health, and that he purchased deadly poison, for which he had no lawful use, on two separate occasions shortly before two paroxysms of a similar character to each other, the second of which deprived him of life

The rest of the evidence was directed to prove that the symptoms of which Cook died were those of poisoning by strychnine, and that antimony, which was never prescribed for him, was found in his body Evidence was also given in the course of the trial as to the stage of Cook's health

(1) Conduct (section 8)

(2) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8, 9)

(3) Fact showing knowledge (section

14)

believe it is" Palmer said, "I suppose you are going to take the jars?" He said, "I am" Palmer asked if he would upset them? He said, "I shall [135] not" Palmer said if he would, there was a £10 note for him. He also said something about its being "a lumbugging concern"(1) Some confusion was introduced into this evidence by the cross examination, which tended to show that Palmer's object was to upset Mr Stephens and not the jars, but at last the postboy (J Myatt) repeated it as given above. Indeed, it makes little difference whether Palmer wished to upset Stephens or the jars, as they were all in one fly, and must be upset together if at all.

Shortly after the post mortem examination an inquest was held before Mr Ward, the coroner. It began on the 29th November and ended on the 5th December. On Sunday, 3rd December, Palmer asked Cheshire, the postmaster, "if he had anything fresh" Cheshire replied that he could not open a letter. Afterwards, however, he did open a letter from Dr Alfred Taylor, who had analyzed the contents of the stomach, etc, to Mr Gardiner the attorney for the prosecution, and informed Palmer that Dr Taylor said in that letter that no traces of strychnine were found. Palmer said he knew they would not, and he was quite innocent. Soon afterwards Palmer wrote to Mr Ward suggesting various questions to be put to witnesses at the inquest and saying that he knew Dr Taylor had told Mr Gardiner there were no traces of strychnine, prussic acid, or opium. A few days before this, on the 1st December, Palmer had sent Mr Ward, as a present, a codfish, a barrel of oysters, a brace of [136] pheasants, and a turkey (2). These circumstances certainly prove improper and even criminal conduct. Cheshire was imprisoned for his offence, and Lord Campbell spoke in severe terms of the conduct of the coroner, but a bad and unscrupulous man, as Palmer evidently was, might act in the manner described, even though he was innocent of the particular offence charged.

A medical book found in Palmer's possession had in it some MS notes on the subject of strychnine, one of which was, "It kills by causing tetanic contraction of the respiratory muscles." It was not suggested that this memorandum was made for any particular purpose. It was used merely to show that Palmer was acquainted with the properties and effects of strychnine (3).

This completes the evidence as to Palmer's behaviour before, at and after the death of Cook. It proves beyond all question that, having the strongest possible motive to obtain at once a considerable sum of money, he robbed his friend of the whole of the bets paid to Herring on the Monday by a series of ingenious devices, sent up to Pratt person, and had the night before he died, and that he tried to procure a fraudulent attestation to [137] another forged document relating to his affairs the day after he died. It also proves that he had every opportunity of administering poison to Cook, that he told repeated lies about his state of health, and that he purchased deadly poison, for which he had no lawful use, on two separate occasions shortly before two paroxysms of a similar character to each other, the second of which deprived him of life.

The rest of the evidence was directed to prove that the symptoms of which Cook died were those of poisoning by strychnine and that antimony which was never prescribed for him, was found in his body. Evidence was also given in the course of the trial as to the stage of Cook's health.

(1) Conduct (section 8)
(2) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8, 9)
(3) Fact showing knowledge (section 14)

At the time of his death Cook was about twenty eight years of age Both his father and mother died young and his sister and half brother were not robust He inherited from his father about £12,000 and was articled to a solicitor Instead of following up that profession he betook himself to sporting pursuits, and appears to have led a rather dissipated life He suffered from syphilis, and was in the habit of occasionally consulting Dr Savage on the state of his health Dr Savage saw him in November 1854, in May, in June, towards the end of before his death, &c the subject especially Savage said that he had large teeth, that he had a red and tender, and at these symptoms were syphilitic, but Dr Savage thought decidedly that they were not He also noticed an indication of pulmonary affection under the left lung Wishing to get him away from his turf associates, Dr Savage recommended him to go abroad for the winter His general health Dr Savage considered good for a man who was not robust Mr Stephens said that when he last saw him alive he was looking better than he had looked for some time, and on his remarking "You do not look anything of an invalid now," Cook struck himself on the breast and said he was quite well His friend, Mr Jones, also said that his health was generally good, though he was not very robust, and that he both hunted and played at cricket (1)

On the other hand witnesses were called for the prisoner who gave a different account of his health A Mr Sargent said he was with him at Liverpool a week before the Shrewsbury races, that he called his attention to the state of his mouth and throat and the back part of his tongue was in a complete state of ulcer I said," added the witness "I was surprised he could eat and drink in the state his mouth was in He said he had been in that state for weeks and months and now he did not take notice of it" This was certainly not consistent with Dr Savage's evidence (2)

Such being the state of health of Cook at the time of his [139] death, the next question was as to its cause The prosecution contended that the symptoms which attended it proved that he was poisoned by strychnia Several eminent physicians and surgeons—Mr Curling, Dr Todd, Sir Benjamin Brodie, Mr Daniel and Mr Solly—gave an account of the general character and causes of the disease of tetanus Mr Curling said that tetanus consists of spasmodic affection of the voluntary muscles of the body which at last ends in death, produced either by suffocation caused by the closing of the windpipe or by the wearing effect of the severe and painful struggles which the muscular spasm produce Of this disease there are three forms,—idiopathic tetanus, which is produced without any assignable external cause, traumatic tetanus, which results from wounds, and the tetanus which is produced by the administration of strychnia, hircinia, and nuxvomica, all of which are different forms of the same poison Idiopathic tetanus is a very rare disease in England Sir Benjamin Brodie had seen only one doubtful case of it Mr Daniel, who for twenty eight years was surgeon to the Bristol Hospital, saw only two, Mr. Nunneley, professor of surgery at Leeds, had seen four In India, however, it is comparatively common Mr Jackson, in twenty five years' practice there saw about forty cases It was agreed on all hands, that though the exciting cause of the two diseases is different, their symptoms are the same They were described in similar terms by several of the witnesses Dr Todd said the disease begins with stiffness about the jaw, the symptoms [140] then extend themselves to the other muscles of the trunk and body. They gradually develop themselves. When once the disease has begun there are remissions of severity, but not complete intermission of the symptoms. In acute cases the disease terminates in three or four days. In chronic cases it will go on for as much as three weeks. There was some question as to what was the shortest case upon record. In a case mentioned by one of the prisoner's witnesses Mr. Ross the patient was said to have been attacked in the morning either at eleven or some hours earlier, it did not clearly appear which, and to have died at half past seven in the evening. This was the shortest case specified on either side, though its duration was not accurately determined. As a rule, however, tetanus, whether traumatic or idiopathic, was said to be a matter not of minutes or even of hours, but of days (1).

(1) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8 9)

(2) State of things under which crime was committed (section 7)

Such being the nature of tetanus, traumatic and idiopathic, four questions arose. Did Cook die of tetanus? Did he die of traumatic tetanus? Did he die of idiopathic tetanus? Did he die of the tetanus produced by strychnia? The case for prosecution upon these questions was, first, that he did die of tetanus. Mr. Curling said no doubt there was spasmodic action of the muscles (which was his definition of tetanus) in Cook's case, and even Mr. Nunneley, the principal witness for the prisoner, who contended that the death of Cook was [141] caused neither by tetanus in its ordinary forms nor by the tetanus of strychnia, admitted that the paroxysm described by Mr. Jones was "very like" the paroxysm of tetanus. The close general resemblance of the symptoms to those of tetanus was indeed assumed by all the witnesses on both sides, and was proved by the various distinctions which were stated on the side of the Crown between Cook's symptoms and those of traumatic and idiopathic tetanus, and on the side of the prisoner between Cook's symptoms and the symptoms of the tetanus of strychnia. It might, therefore, be considered to be established that he died of tetanus in some form or other.

The next point asserted by the prosecution was, that he did not die of traumatic or idiopathic tetanus, because there was no wound on his body, and also because the course of the symptoms was different. They further asserted that the symptoms were those of poison by strychnia.

Upon these points the evidence was as follows.—Mr. Curling was asked, Q "Were the symptoms consistent with any form of traumatic tetanus which has ever been known?" A "No."

Q "And of idiopathic tetanus which you have described?" A "No."

In all cases that have fallen under my notice the disease has been preceded by the milder symptoms of tetanus." Q "Gradually progressing to their complete development, and completion and death?" A "Yes." He also [142] mentioned "the sudden onset and rapid subsidence of the spasms" as inconsistent with the theory of either traumatic or idiopathic tetanus, and he said he had never known a case of tetanus which ran its course in less than eight or ten hours. In the one case which occupied so short a time the true period could not be ascertained. In general, the time required was from one to several days. Sir Benjamin Brodie was asked, "In your opinion, are the symptoms those of traumatic tetanus or not?" He replied, "As far as the spasmodic contraction of the muscles goes, the symptoms resemble those of traumatic tetanus, as to the course which the symptoms took, that was entirely different." He added, "The symptoms of traumatic tetanus always begin as far as I have seen, very gradually, the stiffness of the lower jaw being I believe, the symptom first complained of—at least, so it has been in my experience, then the contraction of the muscles of the back is always a later symptom, generally much later; the muscles of the extremities are affected in a much less degree than those of the neck and trunk, except in some cases, where the injury has been in a limb, and an early symptom has been a contraction of the muscles of that limb. I do not myself recollect a case in which in ordinary tetanus there was that contraction of the muscles of the hand which I understand was stated to have existed in this instance. The ordinary tetanus rarely runs its course in less than two or three days, and often is protracted to a much longer period, I know one case only in which the disease was [143] said to have terminated in twelve hours." He said, in conclusion, "I never saw a case in which the symptoms described arose from any disease, when I say that, of course, I refer not to the particular symptoms, but to the general course which the symptoms took." Mr Daniel being asked whether the symptoms of Cook could be referred to idiopathic or traumatic tetanus, said, "In my judgment they could not." He also said that he should repeat Sir Benjamin Brodie's words if he were to enumerate the distinctions. Mr Solly said that the symptoms were not referable to any disease he ever witnessed, and Dr Todd said, "I think the symptoms were those of strychnia." The same opinion was expressed with equal confidence by Dr Alfred Taylor, Dr Rees, and Mr Christison.

(1) Opinions of experts and facts on which they were founded (Sections 45, 46). The rest of the evidence falls under this head.

In order to support this general evidence witnesses were called who gave account of three fatal cases of poisoning by strychnia, and of one case in which the patient recovered. The first of the fatal cases was that of Agnes French, or Senet, who was accidentally poisoned at Glasgow Infirmary, in 1845, by some pills which she took, and which were intended for a paralytic patient. According to the nurse, the girl was taken ill three quarters of an hour, according to one of the physicians (who, however was not present) twenty minutes, after she swallowed the pills. She fell suddenly back on the floor, when her clothes were cut off she was stiff, "just like a poker," her arms were stretched out, her hands clenched, she vomited slightly, she had no lockjaw, [144] there was a retraction of the mouth and face, the head was bent back, the spine curved. She went into severe paroxysms every few seconds, and died about an hour after the symptoms began. She was perfectly conscious. The heart was found empty on examination.

The second case described was that of Mrs Serjeantson Smyth who was accidentally poisoned at Romsey in 1848, by strychnine put into a dose of ordinary medicine instead of salicane. She took the dose about five or ten minutes after seven, in five or ten minutes more the servant was alarmed by a violent ringing of the bell. She found her mistress leaning on a chair, went out to send for a doctor, and on her return found her on the floor. She screamed loudly, or her lover,
The hands were clenched, the feet contracted and on a post mortem examination the heart was found empty.

The third case was that of Mrs Dove, who was poisoned at Leeds by her
She had five aturday of the and twitchings

semi bent, feet strongly arched. The lungs were congested, the spinal cord was also much congested. The head being opened first, a good deal of blood flowed out, part of which might flow from the heart.

The case in which the patient recovered was that of a paralytic patient of Mr Moore's. He took an overdose of strychnia, and in about three quarters of an hour Mr Moore found him stiffened in every limb. His head was drawn back; he was screaming and "frequently requesting that we should turn him, move him, rub him." His spine was drawn back. He snapped at a spoon with which an attempt was made to administer medicine, and was perfectly conscious during the whole time.

Dr Taylor and Dr Owen Rees examined Cook's body. They found no strychnia but they found antimony in the liver, the left kidney, the spleen and also in the blood.

The case for the prosecution upon this evidence was, that the symptoms were those of tetanus, and of tetanus produced by strychnia. The case for the prisoner was, first, that several of the symptoms observed were inconsistent with strychnia, and secondly, that all of them might be explained on other hypotheses. Their evidence was given in part by their own witnesses, and in part by the witnesses for the Crown in cross examination. The replies suggested by the Crown were founded partly on the evidence of their own witnesses given by way of anticipation and partly by the evidence obtained from the witnesses for the prisoner on cross examination.

[146] The first and most conspicuous argument on behalf of the prisoner was, that the fact that no strychnia was discovered by Dr Taylor and Dr Rees was inconsistent with the theory that any had been administered. The material part of Dr Taylor's evidence upon this point was, that he had examined the stomach and intestines of Cook for a variety of poisons, strychnia among others, without success. The contents of the stomach were gone, though the contents of the intestines remained, and the stomach itself had been cut open from end to end, and turned inside out, and the mucous surface on which poison, if present, would have been found was rubbing against the surface of the intestines. This Dr Taylor considered a most unfavourable condition for the discovery of poison and Mr Christison agreed with him. Several of the prisoner's witnesses on the contrary—Mr Nunneley, Dr Letheby, and Mr Rogers—thought that it would only increase the difficulty of the operation and not destroy its chance of success.

Apart from this, Dr Taylor expressed his opinion that from the way in which strychnia acts, it might be impossible to discover it even if the circumstances were favourable. The mode of testing its presence in the stomach is to treat the stomach in various ways, until at last a residue is obtained which, upon the application of certain chemical ingredients, changes its colour if strychnia is present. All the witnesses agreed that strychnia acts by absorption—that is, it is taken up from the stomach by the absorbents thence it passes into the blood thence into the solid [147] part of the body, and at some stage of its progress causes death by its action on the nerves and muscles. Its noxious effects do not begin till it has left the stomach. From this Dr Taylor argued that if a minimum dose were administered, none would be left in the stomach at the time of death, and therefore none could be discovered there. He also said that if the strychnia got into the blood before examination, it would be diffused over the whole mass, and so no more than an extremely minute portion would be present in any given quantity. If the dose were half a grain, and there were twenty five pounds of blood in the body, each pound of blood would contain only one fiftieth of a grain. He was also of opinion that the strychnia undergoes some chemical change by reason of which its presence in small quantities in the tissues cannot be detected. In short, the result of his evidence was that if a minimum dose were administered, it was uncertain whether strychnia would be present in the stomach after death, and that if it was not in the stomach, there was no certainty that it could be found at all. He added that he considered the colour tests fallacious, because the colours might be produced by other substances.

Dr. Taylor further detailed some experiments which he had tried upon administered at intervals, he obtained proof of the presence of strychnia both by a bitter [148] taste and by the colour. In a case where one grain was administered he obtained the taste but not the colour. In the other two cases, where he administered one grain and half a grain respectively, he obtained no indication at all of the presence of strychnia. These experiments proved to demonstration that the fact that he did not discover strychnia did not prove that no strychnia was present in Cook's body.

Mr Nunneley, Mr Herapath, Mr Rogers, Dr Letheby and Mr Wrightson contradicted Dr Taylor and Dr Rees upon this part of their evidence. They denied the theory that strychnine undergoes any change in the blood and they professed their own ability to discover its presence even in most minute quantities in any body into which it had been introduced, and their belief that the colour tests were satisfactory. Mr Herapath said that he had found strychnine in the blood and in a small part of the liver of a dog poisoned by it, and he also said that he could detect with organic matter. Mr Campbell for the way in expect to find strychnia if it were present, and that he had found it in the tissues of an animal poisoned by it.

Here, no doubt, there was a considerable conflict of evidence upon a point on which it was difficult for unscientific persons to pretend to have any opinion. The evidence given for the prisoner, however, tended to prove not so much that there was no strychnia in Cook's body, [149] as that Dr Taylor ought to have found it if there was. In other words, it has less to do with the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, than with the question whether Mr Nunneley and Mr Herapath were or were not better analytical chemists than Dr Taylor. The evidence could not even be considered to shake Dr Taylor's credit, for no part of the case rested on his evidence except the discovery of the antimony, as to which he was corroborated by Mr Brande, and was not contradicted by the prisoner's witnesses. His opinion as to the nature of Cook's symptoms was shared by many other medical witnesses of the highest eminence, whose credit was altogether unimpeached. The prisoner's counsel were placed in a curious difficulty by this state of the question. They had to attack, and did attack, Dr Taylor's credit vigorously for the purpose of rebutting his conclusion that Cook might have been poisoned by strychnine, yet they had also to maintain his credit as a skilful analytical chemist, for if they destroyed it, the fact that he did not find strychnine went for nothing. This dilemma was fatal. To admit his skill was to admit their client's guilt. To deny it was to destroy the value of nearly all their own evidence. The only possible course was to admit his skill and deny his good faith, but this too was useless, for the reason just mentioned.

Another argument used on behalf of the prisoner was that some of the symptoms of Cook's death were inconsistent with poisoning by strychnine. Mr. Nunneley and Dr. Letheby thought that the facts that Cook sat up in [150] bed when the attack came on, that he moved his hands, and swallowed, and asked to be rubbed and moved, showed more power of voluntary motion than was consistent with poisoning by strychnia. But Mrs Sergeantson Smyth got out of bed and rang the bell, and both she, Mrs Dove and Mrs Moore's patient begged to be rubbed and moved before the spasms came on. Cook's movements were before the paroxysm set in, and the first paroxysm ended his life.

Mr Nunneley referred to the fact that the heart was empty, and said that, in his experiments, he always found that the right side of the heart of the poisoned animals was full

Both in Mrs Smyth's case, however, and in that of the girl Senet the heart was found empty, and in Mrs Smyth's case the chest and abdomen were opened first, so that the heart was not emptied by the opening of the head. Mr Christison said that if a man died of spasms of the heart, the heart would be emptied by them, and would be found empty after death, so that the presence or absence of the blood proved nothing

Mr Nunneley and Dr Letheby also referred to the length of time before the symptoms appeared, as inconsistent with poisoning by strychnine. The time between the administration of the pills and the paroxysm was not accurately measured. It might have been an hour, or a little less, or more, but the poison, if present at all, was administered in pills, which would not begin to operate till they were broken up, and the rapidity with which they [151] would be broken up, would depend upon the materials of which they were made. Mr Christison said that if the pills were made up with resinous materials, such as are within the knowledge of every medical man, their operation would be delayed. He added "I do not think we can fix, with our present knowledge, the precise time for the poison beginning to operate." According to the account of one witness in Agnes French's case, the poison did not operate for three quarters of an hour, though probably her recollection of the time was not very accurate after ten years. Dr Taylor also referred (in cross examination) to cases in which an hour and a half, or even two hours elapsed, before the symptoms showed themselves

These were the principal points in Cook's symptoms said to be inconsistent with the administration of strychnia. All of them appear to have been satisfactorily answered. Indeed, the inconsistency of the symptoms with strychnia was faintly maintained. The defence turned rather on the possibility of showing that they were consistent with some other disease

In order to make out this point various suggestions were made. In the cross examination of the different witnesses for the Crown, it was frequently suggested that the case was one of traumatic tetanus, caused by syphilitic sores, but to this there were three fatal objections. In the first place, there were no syphilitic sores. In the second place, no witness for the prisoner said that he third place several [152] Dr Lee the heard of syphilitic sores producing tetanus. Two witnesses for the prisoner were called to show that a man died of tetanus who had sores on his elbow and elsewhere which were possibly syphilitic, but it did not appear whether he had rubbed or hurt them, and Cook had no symptoms of the sort

Another theory was that the death was caused by general convulsions. This was advanced by Mr Nunneley, but he was unable to mention any case in which a person was ying conscious ne met with one
Dr red the case to be But he also failed to mention an instance in which epilepsy did not destroy consciousness. This witness assigned the most extraordinary reasons for supposing that it was a case of this form of epilepsy. He said that the fit might have been caused by sexual excitement though the man was ill at Rugeley for nearly a week before his death, and that it was within the range of possibility that sexual intercourse might produce a convulsion fit after an interval of a fortnight

Both Mr Nunneley and Dr McDonald were cross examined with great closeness. Each of them was taken separately through all the various symptoms of the case, and asked to point out how they differed from those of poisoning by strychnia, and what were the reasons why they should be supposed to arise from anything else. After [153] a great deal of trouble Mr Nunneley was ose of likely id, for instance, that excitement and depression of spirits might predispose to convulsions, but the only excitement under which Cook had laboured was on winning the race a week before, and as for depression of spirits, he was laughing and joking with Mr Jones a few hours before his death. Dr McDonald was equally unable to give satisfactory explanation of these difficulties. It is impossible by any abridgment to convey the full effect which these cross examinations produced. They deserve to be carefully studied by any one who cares to understand the full effect of this great instrument for the manifestation not merely of truth, but of accuracy and fairness.

Of the other witnesses for the prisoner, Mr Herapath admitted that he had said that he thought that there was strychnine in the body, but that Dr Taylor did not know how to rom newspaper reports, but it d nce given at the trial. Dr Le ,re-
 concilable with everything that he was acquainted with—strychnia poison included. He admitted, however, that they were not inconsistent with what he had heard of the symptoms of Mrs Serjeantson Smyth who was undoubtedly poisoned by strychnine. Mr Partridge was called to [154] show that the case might be one of arachnitis, or inflammation of one of the membranes of the spinal cord caused by two granules discovered there. In cross examination he instantly admitted with perfect frankness, that he did not think the case was one of arachnitis, as the symptoms were not the same. Moreover, on being asked whether the symptoms described by Mr Jones were consistent with poisoning by strychnia, he said, 'Quite', and he concluded by saying that in the whole course of his experience and knowledge he had never seen such a death proceed from natural causes. Dr Robinson, from Newcastle, was called to show that tetanic convulsions preceded by epilepsy were the cause of death. He, however, expressly admitted in cross-examination that the symptoms were consistent with strychnia, and that some of them were inconsistent with epilepsy. He said that in the absence of any other cause, if he 'put aside the hypothesis of strychnia,' he would ascribe it to epilepsy, and that he thought the granules in the spinal cord might have produced epilepsy. The degree of importance attached to these granules by different witnesses varied. Several of the witnesses for the Crown considered them unimportant. The last of the prisoner's witnesses was Dr Richardson, who said the disease might have been angina pectoris. He said, however, that the symptoms of angina pectoris were so like those of strychnine that he should have great difficulty in distinguishing them from each other.

The fact that antimony was found was never seriously disputed, nor could it be denied that its administration [155] would account for all the symptoms of sickness, etc., which occurred during the week before Cook's death. No one but the prisoner could have administered it.

The general result of the whole evidence on both sides appears to be to prove beyond all reasonable doubt that the symptoms of Cook's death were perfectly consistent with those of poisoning by strychnine and that there was strong reason to believe that they were inconsistent with any other cause. Coupling this with the proof that Palmer bought strychnia just before each of the two attacks, and that he robbed Cook of all his property, it is impossible to doubt the propriety of the verdict

Palmer's case is remarkable on account of the extraordinary minuteness and labour with which it was tried, and on account of the extreme ability with which the trial was conducted on both sides

Remarks on Palmer's
case

The intricate set of facts which show that Palmer had a strong motive to commit the crime, his behaviour before it, at the time when it was being committed, and after it had been committed, the various considerations which showed that Cook must have died by tetanus produced by strychnine, that Palmer had the means of administering strychnine to him, that he did actually administer what in all probability was strychnine, that he also administered antimony on many occasions, and that all the different theories by which Cook's death otherwise than by strychnine could be accounted for were open to fatal objections, form a collection of eight or ten different sets of facts, all connected [156] together immediately or remotely either as being, or as being shown not to be, the causes or the effects of Cook's murder, or as forming part of the actual murder itself

The scientific evidence is remarkable on various grounds but particularly because it supplies a singularly perfect illustration of the identity between the ordinary processes of scientific research, and the principles explained above, as being those on which Judicial Evidence proceeds. Take, for instance the question, did Cook die of tetanus, either traumatic or idiopathic? The symptoms of those diseases are in the first place ascertained inductively and their nature was proved by the testimony of Sir Benjamin Brodie and others. The course of the symptoms being compared with those of Cook, they did not correspond. The inference by deduction was that Cook's death was not caused by those diseases. Logically the matter might be stated thus —

All persons who die either of traumatic or of idiopathic tetanus exhibit a certain course of symptoms

Cook did not exhibit that course of symptoms, therefore Cook did not die of traumatic or of idiopathic tetanus

Everyone of the arguments and theories stated in the case may easily be shown by a little attention to be so many illustrations of the rules of evidence on the one hand, and of the rules of induction and deduction on the other

On the other hand, a flood of irrelevant matter apparently connected with the trial pressed, so to speak for admittance, and if it had been admitted, would have swollen the trial to unmanageable proportions, and thrown no real [157] light upon the main question. Palmer was actually indicted for the murder of his wife, Ann Palmer, and for the murder of his brother, Walter Palmer. Every sort of story was in circulation as to what he had done. It was said that twelve or fourteen persons had at different times been buried from his house under suspicious circumstances. It was said that he had poisoned Lord George Bentinck who died very suddenly some years before. He had certainly forged his mother's acceptance to bills of exchange and had carried on a series of gross frauds on insurance offices. There was the strongest reason to suspect that the evidence of Jeremiah Smith referred to in the case, was plotted and artful perjury. If Palmer had been tried in France, every one of these and innumerable other topics would have been introduced, and the real matter in dispute would not have been nearly so fully discussed.

No case sets in a clearer light either the theory or the practical working of the principles on which the Evidence Act is based

One special matter on which Palmer's trial throws great light is the nature of the evidence of experts. The provisions relating to this subject are contained in sections 45 and 46 of the Evidence Act. The only point of much importance in connection with them is that it should be borne in mind that their evidence is given on the assumption that certain facts occurred but that it does not in common cases show whether or not the facts on which the expert gives his opinion did really occur. For instance [158] Sir Benjamin Brodie and other witnesses in Palmer's case said that the symptoms they had heard described were the symptoms of poisoning by strychnine but whether the maid servants and others who witnessed and described Cook's death were or were not speaking the truth was not a question for them but for the jury. Strictly speaking, an expert ought not to be asked, 'Do you think that the deceased may attribute the his death to would account matter of form. The substance of the rules as to experts is that they are only witnesses, not judges, that their evidence however important is intended to be used only as materials upon which others are to form their decision and that the fact which they have to prove is the fact that they entertain certain opinions on certain grounds and not the fact that grounds for their opinions do really exist.

[159] IRRELEVANT FACTS

Having thus described and illustrated the theory of relevancy it will be desirable to say something of irrelevant facts which might at first sight be supposed to be relevant.

From the explanations given in the earlier part of the chapter it follows that facts are irrelevant unless they can be shown to stand in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect to facts in issue every step in the connection being either proved or of such a nature that it may be presumed without proof.

The vast majority of ordinary facts simply co-exist without being in any assignable manner connected together. For instance at the moment of the commission of a crime in a great city numberless other transactions are going on in the immediate neighbourhood, but no one would think of giving evidence of them unless they were in some way connected with the crime. Facts obviously irrelevant therefore present little difficulty. The only difficulty arises in dealing with facts which are apparently relevant but are not really so. The most important of these are three —

- 1 Statements as to facts made by persons not called as witnesses
- [160] 2 Transactions similar to but unconnected with the facts in issue
- 3 Opinions formed by persons as to the facts in issue or relevant facts

None of these are relevant within the definition of relevancy given in sections 6—11, both inclusive. It may possibly be argued that the effect of the second paragraph of section 11* would be to admit proof of such facts as these.

* Sect. on 11 is as follows —
Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant —

(1) If they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact

(2) If by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable

What facts are irrelevant

Facts apparently relevant

It may, for instance be said A (not called as a witness) was heard to declare that he had seen B commit a crime. This makes it highly probable that B did commit that crime. Therefore A's declaration is a relevant fact under section 11. This was not the intention of the section as is shown by the elaborate provisions contained in the following part of the Chapter II (sections 32—39) as to particular classes of statements which are regarded as relevant facts either because the circumstances under which they are made invest them with importance or because no better evidence can be got. The sort of facts which the section was intended to include are facts which either exclude or imply more or less distinctly the existence of the facts sought to be proved. Some degree of latitude was designedly left in the working of the section (in compliance with a suggestion from the Madras Government) [161] on account of the variety of matters to which it might apply. The meaning of the section would have been more fully expressed if words to the following effect had been added to it —

An statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be a relevant fact under some other section of this Act

The reasons why statements as to facts made by persons not called as witnesses are excluded except in certain specified cases (see sections 17—39), are various. In the first place it is matter of common experience that statements in common conversation are made so lightly and are so liable to be misunderstood or misrepresented that they cannot be depended upon for any important purpose unless they are made under special circumstances. Reason for exclusion of hearsay

It may be said that this is an objection to the weight of such statements and not to their relevancy and there is some degree of truth in this remark. No doubt when a man has to inquire into facts of which he receives in the first instance very confused accounts it may and often will be extremely important for him to trace the most cursory and apparently futile report. And facts relevant in the highest degree to facts in issue may often be discovered in this manner. A policeman or a lawyer engaged in getting up a case Criminal or Civil might neglect his duty altogether if he shut his ears to everything which was not relevant within the meaning of [162] the Evidence Act. A Judge or Magistrate in India frequently has to perform duties which in England would be performed by police officers or attorneys. He has to sift out the truth for himself as well as he can and with little assistance of a professional kind. Section 165 is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth. The effect of this section * is that in order to get to the bottom of the matter before it the Court will be able to look at and inquire into every fact whatever. It will not however be able to found its judgment upon the class of statements in question for the following reason — Objection

If this were permitted it would present a great temptation to indolent Judges to be satisfied with second hand reports

It would open a wide door to fraud. People would make statements for which they were made stated. E tell a lie a

Effect of section 165

* Section 165 is as follows —

The Judge may in order to discover or obtain proper proof of relevant facts ask any question he pleases in any form at any time of any witness or of the party about any fact relevant or irrelevant and may order the production of any document or thing

Suppose that A, B, C, and D give to E, F, and G a minute detailed account of a crime which they say was [163] committed by Z, E, F, and G repeat what they have heard correctly A, B, C, and D disappear or are not forthcoming. It is evident that Z would be altogether unable to defend himself in this case, and that the Court would be unable to test the statement of A, B, C, and D. The only way to avoid this is to exclude such evidence altogether, and so to put upon both Judges and Magistrates as strong a pressure as possible to get to the bottom of the matter before them.

It would waste an incalculable amount of time To try to trace unauthorized and irresponsible gossip, and to discover the grains of truth which may lurk in it is like trying to trace a fish in the water.

Unconnected transactions

The exclusion of evidence as to transactions similar to, but not specially connected with, the facts in issue, rests upon the ground that if it were not enforced, every trial, whether civil or criminal, might run into an inquiry into the whole life and character of the parties concerned. Litigants have frequently many matters in difference besides the precise point legally at issue between them, and it often requires a good deal of rigour to prevent them from turning Courts of Justice into theatres in which all their affairs may be discussed. A very slight acquaintance with French procedure is enough to show the evils of not keeping people close to the point in judicial proceedings.

Exclusion of evidence of opinion Exception to rules as to irrelevancy

As to evidence of opinion it is excluded because its admission would in nearly all cases be mere waste of time.

[164] The concluding part of the chapter on the relevancy of facts enumerates the exceptions which are to be made to the general rules as to irrelevancy. The rules as to admissions, statements made by persons who cannot be called as witnesses, and statements made under circumstances which in themselves afford a guarantee for their truth are an exception to the exclusion of statements as proof of the matter stated.

Judgments in Courts of Justice on other occasions form an exception to the exclusion of evidence of transactions not specifically connected with facts in issue, and the provisions as to the admission of evidence of opinions in certain cases are contained in sections 45—55. I will notice very shortly the principle on which these provisions proceed.

Admissions

I. The general rule with regard to admissions, which are defined to mean all that the parties or their representatives in certain degrees say about the matter in dispute, or facts relevant thereto, is that they may be proved as against those who made them, but not in their favour. The reason of the rule is obvious. If A says, "B owes me money," the mere fact that he says so does not even tend to prove the debt. If the statement has any value at all, it must be that A is a reliable witness. A's recollection can testify that his statement is true. If, on the other hand, A is a liar, his statement is a fact of which no one can testify.

Confessions

Admissions in reference to crimes are usually called confessions. I may observe upon the provisions relating to them that sections 25, 26, and 27 were transferred to the Evidence Act verbatim from the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861. They differ widely from the law of England, and were inserted in the Act of 1861 in order to prevent the practice of torture by the police for the purpose of extracting confessions from persons in their custody.

Statements by witness who cannot be called ¶ Statements made by persons who are dead or otherwise incapacitated from being called as witnesses are admitted in the cases mentioned in sections 32 and 33. The reason is that in the cases in question no better evidence is to be had.

In certain cases statements are made under circumstances which in themselves seem to be true, and in these cases there is no special investigation by whom the statement was made under special circumstances.

It may be well to point out here the manner in which the Evidence Act affects the proof of evidence given by a witness in a Court of Justice. The relevancy of the fact that such evidence was given, depends partly on the general principles of relevancy. For instance, if a witness were accused of giving false testimony, the fact that he gave the testimony alleged to be false would be a fact [166] in issue. But the Act also provides for cases in which the fact that evidence was given on a different occasion is to be admissible, either to prove the matter stated (section 33), or in order to contradict (section 155 3) or in order to corroborate (section 157) the witness. By reference to these sections it must be ascertained whether the fact that the evidence was given is relevant. If it is relevant, section 35 enacts that an entry of it in a record made by any public servant in the discharge of his duty shall be relevant as a mode of proving it. The Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure direct all judicial officers to make records of the evidence given before them, and section 80 of the Evidence Act provides that a document purporting to be a record of evidence shall be presumed to be genuine, that statements made as to the circumstances under which it was taken shall be presumed to be true, and the evidence to have been duly taken. The result of these sections taken together is that when proof of evidence given on previous occasions is admissible, it may be proved by the production of the record or a certified copy (see section 76).

The sections as to judgments (40, 41) designedly omit to deal with the question of the effect of judgments in preventing further proceedings in regard of the same matter. The law upon this subject is to be found in section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure and in section 460 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The cases which the Evidence Act provides [167] for are cases in which the judgment of a Court is in the nature of a law, and creates the right which it affirms to exist.

The opinions of any person, other than the Judge by whom the fact is to be decided, as to the existence of facts in issue or relevant facts are, as a rule, irrelevant to the decision of the cases to which they relate for the most obvious reasons. To show that a person had been committed or not would invest the person some few cases specified in sections 45—51

Opinions
In
They

The sections as to character require little remark. Evidence of character is, generally speaking only a makeweight, though there are two classes of cases in which it is highly important —

(1) Where conduct is equivocal, or even presumably criminal. In this case evidence of character may explain conduct and rebut the presumptions which it might raise in the absence of such evidence. A man is found in possession of stolen goods. He says he found them and took charge of them to give them to the owner. If he is a man of very high character this may be believed.

(2) When a charge rests on the direct testimony of a single witness and on the bare denial of it by the person charged. A man is accused of an indecent assault by a [163] woman with whom he was accidentally left alone. He denies it. Here a high character for morality on the part of the accused person would be of great importance.

formed a part, affect English law, but substantially the result is somewhat as follows —

Presumptions are of four kinds according to English law.

1 Conclusive presumptions These are rare, but when they occur they provide that certain modes of proof shall not be liable to contradiction

2 Presumptions which affect the ordinary rule as to the burden of proof that he who affirms must prove He [174] who affirms that a man is dead must usually prove it, but if he shows that the man has not been heard of for seven years, he shifts the burden of proof on his adversary

3 There are certain presumptions which, though liable to be rebutted, are regarded by English law as being something more than mere maxims though it is by no means easy to say how much more An instance of such a presumption is to be found in the rule that recent possession of stolen goods unexplained raises a presumption that the possessor is either the thief or a receiver

4 Bare presumptions of facts, which are nothing but arguments to which the Court attaches whatever value it pleases

Presump-
tions

Chapter VII of the Evidence Act deals with this subject as follows — First it lays down the general principles which regulate the burden of proof (sections 101—106) It then enumerates the cases in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases, not by the relation of the parties to the cause but by presumptions (sections 107—111) It notices two cases of con-from birth during marriage ession of territory from the Gazette of India (section 113)

This is one of several conclusive Statutory presumptions which will be found in different parts of the Statutes and Acts Finally, it declares in section 114, that the Court may in all cases whatever draw from the facts before it whatever inferences it thinks just The terms of this section are such [175] as to reduce to their proper position of mere maxims which are to be applied to facts by the Courts in their discretion, a large number of presumptions to which English law gives to a greater or less extent, an artificial value Nine of the most important of them are given by way of illustration

All notice of certain general legal principles which are sometimes called presumptions, but which in reality belong rather to the substantive law than the law of Evidence, was designedly omitted, not because the truth of those principles was denied, but because it was not considered that the Evidence Act was the proper place for them The most important of these is the presumption, as it is sometimes called that every one knows the law The principle is far more correctly stated in the maxim that ignorance of the law does not excuse a breach of it, which is one of the fundamental principles of Criminal Law

The subject of estoppels (Chapter VIII) differs from that of presumptions in the circumstance that an estoppel is a personal disqualification laid upon a person peculiarly circumstanced from proving peculiar facts A presumption is a rule that particular inferences shall be drawn from particular facts whoever proves them Much of the English learning connected with estoppels is extremely intricate and technical, but this arises principally from two causes, the effect of prior judgment and of the law

[176] The remainder of the Act consists of a reduction to express propositions of rules as to the examination of witnesses, which are well established and understood They call for no commentary or introduction, as they sufficiently explain their own meaning, and do not materially vary the existing law and practice discriminating, of others may be divided into two classes. Some there are who approve of the general principle upon which the Act proceeds (viz., that it is both possible and advisable positively to determine what is Evidence), but criticise the actual terms in which such determination is made. Others disapprove, preferring the more practical and historical method of English law which confines itself mainly to the negative task of declaring not what is but what is not Evidence.

SOME CRITICISMS ON THE ACT

Of the first class Mr Whitworth in his able pamphlet on the theory of relevancy⁽²⁾ while of opinion that probably no enactment in such few words as sections 6—16 brought so much assistance to the administration of Justice says that the question yet suggests itself whether even these rules give the theory of relevancy in its simplest form and states that they certainly do not show in themselves upon what principle it is that they have been founded. Differing from the author of the Act in regard to the adequacy of his definition of relevancy as the connection of events as cause and effect, he works out from the rules propounded under the Act what he conceives to be a fuller and more satisfactory statement. He arrives by this process of exposition at exactly the same result as Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, but claims for the new rules which he suggests that although different in form they are identical with those of the Act in their effect⁽³⁾.

Mr Whitworth uses the word "relevant" as Sir James Fitzjames Stephen uses it in the third chapter of his Introduction, and not as it is sometimes used as co-extensive with "admissible." What is thus meant by a relevant fact is a fact that has a certain degree of probative force. All such facts are not admissible. They may be excluded under rules of Evidence other than those which treat of relevancy. For example, as he points out, a fact may be relevant, but it may be one of a kind so easy to fabricate, or so difficult to test, or of so suspicious an origin, that it is more convenient to declare that it shall not be taken into consideration at all. With such questions he is not concerned, but only with the simpler and narrower question as to what facts are relevant in the strict sense of the term.

He points out that the word is its wide sense, Chapter II of Part I with relevancy in its strict sense. The ambiguity is unfortunate. Sir Fitzjames Stephen has said that relevancy is fully defined in sections 6—11 of the Act, and until the double meaning of the

(1) Reynolds's Theory of the Law of Evidence 3rd Ed 1897 Preface vi. See also observations in Preface to Rice's General Principles of the Law of Evidence.

(2) The theory of relevancy for the purpose of Judicial Evidence by George Clifford Whitworth 2nd Ed 1881.
'Mr George Clifford Whitworth of the Bombay Civil Service has lately criticised this theory in an ingenious and able pamphlet and the frank acceptance of it

Thus the statement that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, requires some addition, if the words are used in any ordinary sense, and some limitation, if they are given a transcendent sense

Mr Stephen, using the words in the latter sense, imposes one limitation and declares the practical existence of another. He says, (a) the rule is to be subject to the caution that every step in the connection must be made out and (b) that wide, general causes, which apply to all occurrences, are in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof. The first of these limitations goes far to get rid of the objection that everything is relevant. The connection must be discernible, and every step in the connection proved or pre-umable. But if it is meant that each step must be recognizable as a proceeding from cause to effect, then, as shown above, things really relevant will be excluded. And if any other kind of connection will suffice, then it may be said of both the limitations, that they are of little service, that the help they give in deducing practical rules from the general principle is small. For those rules are least likely to be appealed to in the case of wide general causes, or occurrences, the connection of which with the fact in issue is not traceable. The object of the rules is to keep out irrelevant matter that is brought forward. As a fact, such matter is submitted as evidence every day. Such matter does not usually consist of wide general causes that are admitted, nor of occurrences that have no connection with the facts in issue, and therefore these limitations do not exclude it. Therefore these limitations are not sufficient.

Now as the theory propounded falls short of defining what relevancy is, so we may expect to find in the rules themselves things that cannot be explained by the theory. Again, as the rules are not deduced from first principles but are generalization from actual experience, it is possible that in some unusual cases the language of the rules may not prescribe with accuracy the true limit of the relevancy. And, thirdly, and for the same reason, it is possible that the rules laid down may not be in every part strictly confined to the subject of relevancy.

Thus it is not immediately apparent, from the theory set forth, why one part of a transaction throws light upon another part which is so distinct from the first as to form in itself a fact in issue. When Mr Hall shot three or four Gaekwan sowars, and it was a fact in issue whether he shot a particular one, no doubt the fact that he shot the others increased the probability of his having shot the one in question. But the theory does not afford a ready explanation of this.

By section 7 those facts are relevant to facts in issue 'which constitute the state of things under which they happened' 'and some persons of not no, and the object of the his vn to

before whom the case came on appeal, remarked upon the irrelevancy of this, and of course it was utterly useless, but the rule quoted does not seem to exclude evidence of it. By the same section, facts which afford an 'opportunity' for the occurrence of a fact in issue, or relevant facts, are relevant. The theory does not explain why. When Mr Hall shot the sowars, the fact that he had a rifle, gave him an opportunity of shooting the men he shot, but it gave him equal opportunity of shooting other persons whom he did not shoot. Its particular bearing upon the fact in issue to make it relevant is not explained.

Section 8 is partly concerned with the admissibility of evidence of statements. It includes the substance of the English rule that declarations which are part of the res gestæ may be proved. But this has nothing to do with relevancy strictly so called. (i post, remarks upon III (j) of this section.)

word is observed, it seems, as Mr Whitworth points out, inconsistent with this that many subsequent sections should declare certain things to be relevant as do sections 22, 23, 24, 28, 32, etc. What such sections as these have to declare is really not that the things they mention are relevant or irrelevant (using the words strictly), but (that question being decided by sections 6—16), that those things are not to be excluded or admitted under rules relating to subjects other than relevancy, which would without the provision made, exclude or admit them.

The theory of relevancy is concerned with the question —Why is one thing relevant and another thing irrelevant? There must, Mr Whitworth says, be some principle applicable to all cases by which it may be determined whether a particular fact is or is not relevant to another fact, without reference to a number of rules framed to meet different classes of cases. The purpose of judicial enquiries is not a purpose peculiar to them. All men upon occasion endeavour to ascertain, as quickly and as satisfactorily as they can, whether facts unknown to them personally have or have not happened. And what is calculated to aid the human mind in such inquiries must be something capable of being defined by the enunciation of its essential difference, as well as by an enumeration of its details. Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, in the third Chapter of his Introduction to this Act, has briefly considered this question, and has said that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect. "If these two words were taken in their widest acceptation, it would be correct to say that when any theory has been formed which alleges the existence of any fact, all facts are relevant which, if that theory was true, would stand to the fact alleged to exist either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect." Mr Whitworth criticises this definition as follows —"But the proviso that the words 'cause' and 'effect' must be taken in their widest acceptation does not seem to be sufficient. It seems necessary rather to take them in a transcendental sense. Suppose a man is charged with stabbing another, and it is alleged that at the moment of striking he uttered a certain expression. What he said is by the rules of Evidence relevant (not merely upon the issue as to his intention, but also) upon the issue whether he stabbed the man or not. But in what acceptation of the words is his expression a cause or effect of the act of stabbing? Or consider the case of the Whitechapel murder in London. Upon the issue, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? it is offered in evidence that the body before the Court is that of a woman who never bore children. How is this a cause or effect of the fact in issue? The widest acceptation of the words 'cause' and 'effect' will not include such facts as these. And if we give them the meaning necessary to make true the statement that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, then the statement itself becomes of no use, because every fact will be relevant. No doubt to a being of such capacity of intelligence as to see the whole cause of every effect and the whole effect of every cause, everything that ever happened becomes one rigid fact and nothing is irrelevant. But for human purposes there is no question that relevancy and irrelevancy are realities; the difference between the two is recognizable by an ordinarily human capacity, and must be something expressible in ordinary language.

The definition that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, leaves us, then, in this difficulty that if we take the words in any, even the widest comprehensible sense, the definition does not include all facts which we know from our experience to be really relevant.

IS

IS

exist at the same time, then the definition includes everything, and so ceases to be a definition.

Thus the statement that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, requires some addition, if the words are used in any ordinary sense, and some limitation, if they are given a transcendent sense

Mr Stephen, using the words in the latter sense, imposes one limitation and declares the practical existence of another. He says, (a) the rule is to be subject to the caution that every step in the connection must be made out and (b) that wide, general causes, which apply to all occurrences, are in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof. The first of these limitations goes far to get rid of the objection that everything is relevant. The connection must be discernible, and every step in the connection proved or presumable. But if it is meant that each step must be recognizable as a proceeding from cause to effect, then, as shown above, things really relevant will be excluded. And if any other kind of connection will suffice, then it may be said of both the limitations, that they are of little service, that the help they give in deducing practical rules from the general principle is small. For those rules are least likely to be appealed to in the case of wide general causes, or occurrences, the connection of which with the fact in issue is not traceable. The object of the rules is to keep out irrelevant matter that is brought forward. As a fact, such matter is submitted as evidence every day. Such matter does not usually consist of wide general causes that are admitted, nor of occurrences that have no connection with the facts in issue, and therefore these limitations do not exclude it. Therefore these limitations are not sufficient.

Now as the theory propounded falls short of defining what relevancy is, so we may expect to find in the rules themselves things that cannot be explained by the theory. Again, as the rules are not deduced from first principles but are generalization from actual experience, it is possible that in some unusual cases the language of the rules may not prescribe with accuracy the true limit of the relevancy. And, thirdly, and for the same reason, it is possible that the rules laid down may not be in every part strictly confined to the subject of relevancy.

Thus it is not immediately apparent, from the theory set forth, why one part of a transaction throws light upon another part which is so distinct from the first as to form in itself a fact in issue. When Mr Hall shot three or four Gaekwari sowars, and it was a fact in issue whether he shot a particular one, no doubt the fact that he shot the others increased the probability of his having shot the one in question. But the theory does not afford a ready explanation of this.

By section 7 those facts are relevant to facts in issue 'which constitute the state of things under which they happened' 'some persons of rioting, and, the object of the Hindu religious Reformers, he commenced his of Religion and religious Reformation down to before whom the case came on appeal, remarked upon the irrelevancy of this, and of course it was utterly useless, but the rule quoted does not seem to exclude evidence of it. By the same section, facts which afford an 'opportunity' for the occurrence of a fact in issue, or relevant facts, are relevant. The theory does not explain why. When Mr Hall shot the sowars, the fact that he had a rifle, gave him an opportunity of shooting the men he shot, but it gave him equal opportunity of shooting other persons whom he did not shoot. Its particular bearing upon the fact in issue to make it relevant is not explained.

Section 8 is partly concerned with the admissibility of evidence of statements. It includes the substance of the English rule that declarations which are part of the res gestæ may be proved. But this has nothing to do with relevancy strictly so called. (i post, remarks upon Ill. (j) of this section.)

Section 9 declares facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue to be relevant, but prescribes no test of the necessity. Is there no danger of useless matter being brought upon the record under this rule on the ground that it explains or introduces something to follow? It is true there is a provision, under the law for the examination of witnesses, that when either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask in what manner the fact would be relevant, and need not admit it unless he thinks it would be relevant (section 136, Evidence Act), but still whether or not the fact is necessary to explain or introduce may be a disputable matter. The first illustration says that when the question is whether a given document is the Will of A, the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts. Now, it is obvious that some particulars about the property would be useful to be known, and some would be useless. So the rule seems partly to fail of its object, in that it does not define what class of particulars is relevant.

Section 10 is a rule relating to one particular kind of transaction, conspiracy, and section 12 refers only to the question of damages. But the mind sets to work to ascertain such facts as these in just the same way as any other facts, and it does not appear why special rules are requisite. When any person is charged with conspiracy, one of the facts in issue is the existence of the conspiracy, its absolute existence without reference to the accused person, and from the nature of the thing itself, requiring as it does the action of more than one mind it is to be expected that causes of it and effects of it will be found existing outside the mind, and without the knowledge, of a particular person. Therefore no rule is required to make such causes or effects or other connected facts relevant to the fact in issue.

But the rule goes on to declare that such facts are relevant also for the purpose of showing that the accused person was a party to the conspiracy. Well, if such facts will show that, clearly they are in very truth relevant. But it is obvious that very many such facts will have no bearing whatever upon the question of the accused person's complicity. And it seems an error in the rule to declare all such facts relevant for that purpose, instead of showing which are and which are not. Consider some such conspiracy as that which went by the name of Fenianism. Suppose a man is being tried in Ireland for so conspiring. Suppose he had been in prison for a month before trial. Suppose the Court had received abundant evidence of the existence, nature and objects of the conspiracy. Still, under this rule the Court could not refuse to listen to witnesses just arrived from America stating that a party of Fenians had burnt a farm there a fortnight before the day of trial—thus to prove the accused person's complicity in the conspiracy.

Section 14 declares that facts which show the existence of any state of mind are relevant when the existence of such 'state of mind' is in issue or relevant. Looking at the illustration, it seems doubtful whether the expression 'state of mind' is wide enough. One of the states of mind mentioned is 'knowledge.' Illustration (c) is an example of this. There the question is whether a man knew that his dog was ferocious, and the facts that the dog had bitten several persons and that they had complained to the owner are relevant. These facts are really connected with the fact in issue through the owner's knowledge. But Illustration (a) also purports to be an example of fact being relevant as tending to show knowledge. The question there is whether a person found in possession of a stolen article knew that it was stolen, and it is said that the fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles to be stolen. No doubt the fact is relevant, but it is not through the receiver's knowledge that it is connected with the fact in issue. What it proves is not a state of mind, but a habit, a habit which makes the receiving with a guilty knowledge a more likely fact than it would be without proof of the habit."

Mr Whitworth then proceeds to propound his theory of relevancy with the new rules which he deduces from it.—

“Every fact in issue may be affirmed or denied, and that not merely in the bare form in which it may be stated as a fact in issue, but in every detail of the meaning of that statement. The whole includes the part; if any fact is affirmed as a whole, any part of it may be affirmed or denied; anything implied by an affirmation is really part of that affirmation and may be expressly affirmed or denied. It may be in issue merely, Did A murder B? But if, as the affirmation is inquired into, it is found to mean that A murdered B at a particular hour and a particular place, then, that A was in that place at that hour may be affirmed or denied. The issue may be merely, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? But if those affirming it produce a body saying it is Harriet Lane's, then anything showing that it is or is not may be put forward. Or the issue may be, did the accused person attempt to poison Colonel Phayre? But if it is found that the charge means that the accused person put arsenic into a glass of sherbet which, from his knowledge of Colonel Phayre's habits, he knew Colonel Phayre would drink, then Colonel Phayre's habit of drinking sherbet at a particular time and the prisoner's knowledge of this are parts of the fact in issue.

But besides the matters expressly or virtually in issue, some surrounding matters may aid in determining an unknown fact. Knowing that the progress of events is from cause to effect, any fact that seems likely to have caused the fact to be determined, or any fact that suggests the fact to be determined as a cause of it, may be of use.

Again one cause may have many effects and the cause may be ascertainable from one effect as well as from another. If then in endeavouring to ascertain whether a particular event has happened we see some other event that suggests as its cause something that would probably have caused the thing we want to ascertain then that event will be of use. For example, we want to ascertain whether A stabbed B, and we hear on the occasion on which he is said to have done so, A said to B, “then die.” Now this seems to imply just such volition employing the tongue as would employing an armed hand stab B. The words and the fact in issue are effects of the same volition. Similarly were A charged with poisoning B, the fact that before the death of B he procured poison of the kind that was administered to B would be relevant. The procuring the poison is an effect of a cause which might be the cause of the fact in issue.

Thus there are four classes of fact which aid in determining a fact in issue

- (1) Any part of the fact alleged or any fact implied by the fact alleged,
- (2) Any cause of the fact,
- (3) Any effect of the fact,
- (4) Any fact having a common cause with the fact in issue

But it is not the whole of these facts that are of use. Some facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways mentioned may be of a general nature, existing whether or not the fact in issue happened and therefore indicating nothing as to whether it happened or not. For example A is charged with the murder of B by pushing him over a precipice. Here the fall of B to the ground after he was pushed over is as much a cause of his death as the pushing over, and as much an effect of the push as his death is. But gravitation is a general fact and exists all the same whether B went over the precipice or not and proof of it is therefore needless.

Besides such general facts there may be facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways, but with such a very slight bearing upon it that their probative force is quite insignificant, as, for instance, if a boyish quarrel

Section 9 declares facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue to be relevant, but prescribes no test of the necessity. Is there no danger of useless matter being brought upon the record under this rule on the ground that it explains or introduces something to follow? It is true there is a provision, under the law for the examination of witnesses, that when either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask in what manner the fact would be relevant, and need not admit it unless he thinks it would be relevant (section 136, Evidence Act), but still whether or not the fact is necessary to explain or introduce may be a disputable matter. The first illustration says that when the question is whether a given document is the Will of A, the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts. Now, it is obvious that some particulars about the property would be useful to be known, and some would be useless. So the rule seems partly to fail of its object, in that it does not define what class of particulars is relevant.

Section 10 is a rule relating to one particular kind of transaction conspiracy, and section 12 refers only to the question of damages. But the mind sets to work to ascertain such facts as these in just the same way as any other facts, and it does not appear why special rules are requisite. When any person is charged with conspiracy, one of the facts in issue is the existence of the conspiracy, its absolute existence without reference to the accused person, and from the nature of the thing itself, requiring as it does the action of more than one mind, it is to be expected that causes of it and effects of it will be found existing outside the mind, and without the knowledge, of a particular person. Therefore no rule is required to make such causes or effects or other connected facts relevant to the fact in issue.

But the rule goes on to declare that such facts are relevant also for the purpose of showing that the accused person was a party to the conspiracy. Well, if such facts will show that, clearly they are in very truth relevant. But it is obvious that very many such facts will have no bearing whatever upon the question of the accused person's complicity. And it seems an error in the rule to declare all such facts relevant for that purpose, instead of showing which are and which are not. Consider some such conspiracy as that which went by the name of Fenianism. Suppose a man is being tried in Ireland for so conspiring. Suppose he had been in prison for a month before trial. Suppose the Court had received abundant evidence of the existence, nature and objects of the conspiracy. Still, under this rule the Court could not refuse to listen to witnesses just arrived from America stating that a party of Fenians had burnt a farm there a fortnight before the day of trial—thus to prove the accused person's complicity in the conspiracy.

Section 14 declares that facts which show the existence of any state of mind are relevant when the existence of such state of mind is in issue or relevant. Looking at the illustration, it seems doubtful whether the expression 'state of mind' is wide enough. One of the states of mind mentioned is 'knowledge'. Illustration (c) is an example of this. There the question is whether a man knew that his dog was ferocious, and the facts that the dog had bitten several persons and that they had complained to the owner are relevant. These facts are really connected with the fact in issue through the owner's knowledge. But Illus. (a) also purports to be an example of fact being relevant as tending to show knowledge. The question there is whether a person found in possession of a stolen article knew that it was stolen, and it is said that the fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles to be stolen. No doubt the fact is relevant, but it is not through the receiver's knowledge that it is connected with the fact in issue. What it proves is not a state of mind, but a habit, a habit which makes the receiving with a guilty knowledge a more likely fact than it would be without proof of the habit."

Mr Whitworth then proceeds to propound his theory of relevancy with the new rules which he deduces from it —

“Every fact in issue may be affirmed or denied, and that not merely in the bare form in which it may be stated as a fact in issue, but in every detail of the meaning of that statement. The whole includes the part, if any fact is affirmed as a whole, any part of it may be affirmed or denied, anything implied by an affirmation is really part of that affirmation and may be expressly affirmed or denied. It may be in issue merely, Did A murder B? But if, as the affirmation is inquired into, it is found to mean that A murdered B at a particular hour and a particular place, then, that A was in that place at that hour may be affirmed or denied. The issue may be merely, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? But if those affirming it produce a body saying it is Harriet Lane's, then anything showing that it is or is not may be put forward. Or the issue may be did the accused person attempt to poison Colonel Phayre? But if it is found that the charge means that the accused person put arsenic into a glass of sherbet which from his knowledge of Colonel Phayre's habits he knew Colonel Phayre would drink, then Colonel Phayre's habit of drinking sherbet at a particular time and the prisoner's knowledge of this are parts of the fact in issue.

But besides the matters expressly or virtually in issue, some surrounding matters may aid in determining an unknown fact. Knowing that the progress of events is from cause to effect any fact that seems likely to have caused the fact to be determined, or any fact that suggests the fact to be determined as a cause of it, may be of use.

Again one cause may have many effects and the cause may be ascertainable from one effect as well as from another. If then in endeavouring to ascertain whether a particular event has happened we see some other event that suggests as its cause something that would probably have caused the thing we want to ascertain then that event will be of use. For example, we want to ascertain whether A stabbed B, and we hear on the occasion on which he is said to have done so, A said to B, ‘then die’. Now this seems to imply just such a volition employing the tongue as would employing an armed hand stab B. The words and the fact in issue are effects of the same volition. Similarly were A charged with poisoning B, the fact that before the death of B he procured poison of the kind that was administered to B would be relevant. The procuring the poison is an effect of a cause which might be the cause of the fact in issue.

Thus there are four classes of fact which aid in determining a fact in issue

- (1) Any part of the fact alleged or any fact implied by the fact alleged,
- (2) Any cause of the fact
- (3) Any effect of the fact,
- (4) Any fact having a common cause with the fact in issue

But it is not the whole of these facts that are of use. Some facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways mentioned may be of a general nature, existing whether or not the fact in issue happened and therefore indicating nothing as to whether it happened or not. For example A is charged with the murder of B by pushing him over a precipice. Here the fall of B to the ground after he was pushed over is as much a cause of his death as the pushing over, and as much an effect of the push as his death is. But gravitation is a general fact and exists all the same whether B went over the precipice or not and proof of it is therefore needless.

Besides such general facts there may be facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways, but with such a very slight bearing upon it that their probative force is quite insignificant, as, for instance, if a boyish quarrel

Section 9 declares facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue to be relevant, but prescribes no test of the necessity. Is there no danger of useless matter being brought upon the record under this rule on the ground that it explains or introduces something to follow? It is true there is a provision, under the law for the examination of witnesses, that when either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask in what manner the fact would be relevant, and need not admit it unless he thinks it would be relevant (section 136, Evidence Act), but still whether or not the fact is necessary to explain or introduce may be a disputable matter. The first illustration says that when the question is whether a given document is the Will of A, the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts. Now, it is obvious that some particulars about the property would be useful to be known, and some would be useless. So the rule seems partly to fail of its object, in that it does not define what class of particulars is relevant.

Section 10 is a rule relating to one particular kind of transaction—conspiracy, and section 12 refers only to the question of damages. But the mind sets to work to ascertain such facts as these in just the same way as any other facts, and it does not appear why special rules are requisite. When any person is charged with conspiracy, one of the facts in issue is the existence of the conspiracy, its absolute existence without reference to the accused person, and from the nature of the thing itself, requiring as it does the action of more than one mind, it is to be expected that causes of it and effects of it will be found existing outside the mind, and without the knowledge, of a particular person. Therefore no rule is required to make such causes or effects or other connected facts relevant to the fact in issue.

But the rule goes on to declare that such facts are relevant also for the purpose of showing that the accused person was a party to the conspiracy. Well, if such facts will show that, clearly they are in very truth relevant. But it is obvious that very many such facts will have no bearing whatever upon the question of the accused person's complicity. And it seems an error in the rule to declare all such facts relevant for that purpose, instead of showing which are and which are not. Consider some such conspiracy as that which went by the name of Fenianism. Suppose a man is being tried in Ireland for so cons
 the
 of it
 witnesses just arrived from America stating that a party of Fenians had burnt a farm there a fortnight before the day of trial—thus to prove the accused person's complicity in the conspiracy.

Section 14 declares that facts which show the existence of any state of mind are relevant when the existence of such 'state of mind' is in issue or relevant. Looking at the illustration, it seems doubtful whether the expression 'state of mind' is wide enough. One of the states of mind mentioned is 'knowledge'. Illustration (c) is an example of this. There the question is whether a man knew that his dog was ferocious, and the facts that the dog had bitten several persons and that they had complained to the owner are relevant. These facts are really connected with the fact in issue through the owner's knowledge. But Illus. (a) also purports to be an example of fact being relevant as tending to show knowledge. The question there is whether a person found in possession of a stolen article knew that it was stolen, and it is said that the fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles to be stolen. No doubt the fact is relevant, but it is not through the receiver's knowledge that it is connected with the fact in issue. What it proves is not a state of mind, but a habit, a habit which makes the receiving with a guilty knowledge a more likely fact than it would be without proof of the habit."

Mr Whitworth then proceeds to propound his theory of relevancy with the new rules which he deduces from it —

“Every fact in issue may be affirmed or denied, and that not merely in the bare form in which it may be stated as a fact in issue, but in every detail of the meaning of that statement. The whole includes the part, if any fact is affirmed as a whole any part of it may be affirmed or denied, anything implied by an affirmation is really part of that affirmation and may be expressly affirmed or denied. It may be in issue merely. Did A murder B? But if as the affirmation is inquired into it is found to mean that A murdered B at a particular hour and a particular place then that A was in that place at that hour may be affirmed or denied. The issue may be merely, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? But if those affirming it produce a body saying it is Harriet Lane's then anything showing that it is or is not may be put forward. Or the issue may be did the accused person attempt to poison Colonel Phayre? But if it is found that the charge means that the accused person put arsenic into a glass of sherbet which from his knowledge of Colonel Phayre's habits he knew Colonel Phayre would drink then Colonel Phayre's habit of drinking sherbet at a particular time and the prisoner's knowledge of this are parts of the fact in issue.

But besides the matters expressly or virtually in issue some surrounding matters may aid in determining an unknown fact. Knowing that the progress of events is from cause to effect any fact that seems likely to have caused the fact to be determined or any fact that suggests the fact to be determined as a cause of it, may be of use.

Again one cause may have many effects and the cause may be ascertainable from one effect as well as from another. If then in endeavouring to ascertain whether a particular event has happened we see some other event that suggests as its cause something that would probably have caused the thing we want to ascertain then that event will be of use. For example we want to ascertain whether A stabbed B, and we hear on the occasion on which he is said to have done so A said to B ‘then die’. Now this seems to imply just such volition employing the tongue as would employing an armed hand stab B. The words and the fact in issue are effects of the same volition. Similarly were A charged with poisoning B the fact that before the death of B he procured poison of the kind that was administered to B would be relevant. The procuring the poison is an effect of a cause which might be the cause of the fact in issue.

Thus there are four classes of fact which aid in determining a fact in issue

- (1) Any part of the fact alleged or any fact implied by the fact alleged
- (2) Any cause of the fact
- (3) Any effect of the fact
- (4) Any fact having a common cause with the fact in issue

But it is not the whole of these facts that are of use. Some facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways mentioned may be of a general nature, existing whether or not the fact in issue happened and therefore indicating nothing as to whether it happened or not. For example A is charged with the murder of B by pushing him over a precipice. Here the fall of B to the ground after he was pushed over is as much a cause of his death as the pushing over and as much an effect of the push as his death is. But gravitation is a general fact and exists all the same whether B went over the precipice or not and proof of it is therefore needless.

Besides such general facts there may be facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways but with such a very slight bearing upon it that their probative force is quite insignificant, as, for instance, if a boyish quarrel of fifty years ago were brought forward to prove ill feeling between two men who had joined in partnership twenty years before

To meet both these classes of cases, one proviso only is requisite, namely, that no fact is relevant to another unless it makes the existence of that other more likely. It is not necessary that the fact must raise the probability of the fact. The test is whether the fact in issue is eventually to decide whether the fact offered in evidence will, if proved, aid him in that decision.

The theory, then, so far as we have gone, is this. Those facts are relevant to a fact in issue, the existence of which makes the existence of the fact in issue more probable, and they are found to be connected with the fact in issue in one of these ways, as being, (a) part of the fact in issue, (b) cause of it, (c) effect of it, or (d) an effect of a cause of it.

But as, relying upon the principle that effects follow causes, we take from the surrounding circumstances facts that appear to be probable causes or probable effects of a fact unknown, as a means of proving it, so, upon the same principle we may first consider what would be probable causes or effects of the fact unknown and look upon their absence as a means of disproving it.

Therefore in addition to the four classes of facts above mentioned, which may be said to be positively relevant, — (a) facts which may be called negatively relevant, — (b) facts showing the absence of cause of the fact in issue, (c) facts showing the absence of effect of the fact in issue, (d) facts showing the absence of effects (other than the fact in issue) of the probable cause of the fact in issue. And as it is essential to facts positively relevant that they make the fact in issue more likely, so those facts only are negatively relevant which make the existence of the fact in issue less likely.

Again, as facts are relevant only by reason of their being connected with the fact in issue, it follows, that to disprove the connection of an alleged relevant fact with the fact in issue, the fact must be proved not really to be connected with the fact in issue. And as the connection of an alleged relevant fact may be disputed, so it may be affirmed in anticipation of dispute. That is to say, all facts which tend to prove or disprove the connection in the way of relevancy between facts in issue and alleged relevant facts are themselves relevant.

As relevant facts may be proved and as the mode of proof of any fact is (beyond the affirmation of witnesses of the fact) by means of facts relevant to it, it follows that facts relevant to relevant facts are themselves relevant.

These considerations suggested to Mr Whitworth the following rules, which he considered sufficient to decide, and the simplest test by which to decide, whether any fact offered in evidence is relevant —

RULE I — No fact is relevant which does not make the existence of a fact in issue more likely or unlikely, and that to such a degree as the Judge considers will aid him in deciding the issue.

RULE II — Subject to Rule I, the following facts are relevant —

- (1) Facts which are part of, or which are implied by, a fact in issue, or which show the absence of what might be expected as a part of, or would seem to be implied by, a fact in issue,
- (2) Facts which are a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as a cause, of a fact in issue,

(3) Facts which are an effect, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect, of a fact in issue,

(4) Facts which are an effect of a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect of a cause, of a fact in issue

RULE III—Facts which affirm or deny the relevancy of facts alleged to be relevant under Rule II are relevant

RULE IV—Facts relevant to relevant facts are relevant

Mr Whitworth gives a single example of each kind of relevancy according to his classification, taking all examples from a simple case, that of Muller, who was tried for the murder of an old gentleman, a banker, named Briggs, by beating him with a life-preserver, as they were travelling together by rail, and then throwing him out of the train. Muller tried to make his escape to America, but was pursued and arrested on his arrival there. One point urged in the prisoner's defence was that he was not physically strong enough to commit the murder as alleged. His object appeared to be robbery.

The kinds of relevancy according to Rule II are four, but, as the first clause contains two classes with an apparent difference, they may, Mr Whitworth says, be taken for the purpose of illustration as five, and as each kind may be either positive or negative, the number becomes ten. And as by Rule III the connection of a fact with the fact in issue may be disputed as well as its existence, the number of illustrations required is twenty.

These he gives in order as cited in the footnote(1) —

(1) (a) Part of fact in issue—It would be relevant to prove that at the time the offence was said to be committed a witness by the roadside got a glimpse as the train passed of the prisoner standing up in the carriage with his hand raised above his head.

(b) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that at the time in question the prisoner had occasion to close a ventilator in the top of the carriage.

(c) Absence of what might be expected as part of the fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that no noise was heard by the occupants of the next compartment.

(d) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that the occupants of the next compartment were fast asleep.

(e) Fact implied by a fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller was armed with a weapon.

(f) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that such a weapon could not have caused the marks found on the body.

(g) Absence of fact implied by fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller was physically a very weak man.

(h) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that under the circumstances but little strength was required.

(i) Cause—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs had done Muller some great injury.

(j) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller was not aware that it was Mr Briggs who had done him an injury.

(k) Absence of cause—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs had nothing valuable about him to tempt a robber.

(l) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had reason to believe that Mr Briggs had valuables in his possession.

(m) Effect—It would be relevant to show that immediately after the occurrence Muller took passage for America.

(n) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had sudden and urgent business that called him to America.

(o) Absence of effect—It would be relevant to show that the railway carriage bore no marks of a struggle.

(p) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs was too old and feeble to offer any considerable resistance.

(q) Effect of a cause of a fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller had just before provided himself with a life preserver.

(r) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller anticipated violence to himself on the day in question.

(s) Absence of effect of cause of fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller and Mr Briggs had travelled together for a long distance before the

After giving this single example of each kind of relevancy according to his classification Mr Whitworth proceeds to decide by reference to the above rules all the cases quoted in illustration of the rules set forth in this Act, and shows that his rules are identical in effect with the Law by reference to them of the illustrations in the Act as follows —

SECTION 6 Illustration (a) (1)—For upon examination every part of a transaction will be found to be connected with every other part as cause or effect or as effects of one cause

Illustration (b) (2)—That war was waged is one of the facts in issue These occurrences are part of that fact

Illustration (c) (3)—Besides the fact of the publication, there may be in issue the question of B's good faith or malice of the sense in which the words were used whether the occasion was privileged or not Other parts of the correspondence may be causes or effects of the publication or effects of B's good faith or malice or effects of the words having been used in a particular sense or effects of a relationship between the parties showing that the occasion was or was not privileged Illustration (d) (4)—Each delivery is a relevant fact as being part of the fact in issue Did the goods pass from B to A?

SECTION 7 Illustration (a), (5)—The first fact is relevant as a fact implied by the fact in issue and the second is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue

Illustration (b) (6)—The marks are relevant facts as effects of part of the act in issue

Illustration (c), (7)—That B was ill before the symptoms ascribed to poison is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and the fact that B was well is relevant as being alleged that the opportunity was not availed of the habits are not relevant) fatal occurrence and that through all that time Muller had equal opportunity to attack Mr Briggs and had not done so

(1) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had ascertained how far Mr Briggs was going to travel and that he (Muller) could best effect his escape by getting out at some place the train came to after the occurrence

(2) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him Whatever was said or done by A to B or the bystanders at the beating or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is a relevant fact

(3) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed troops are attacked and gaols are broken open The occurrence of these facts is relevant as forming part of the general transaction though A may not have been present at all of them

(4) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence

Letters between the parties relating to the object out of which the libel arose and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained are relevant facts though they do not contain the libel itself

(5) The question is whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A The goods were delivered to several intermediate parties successively Each delivery is a relevant fact

(6) The question is whether A robbed B The facts that shortly before the robbery B went to a fair with money in his possession and that he showed it or mentioned the fact that he had it to a third person are relevant

(7) The question is whether A murdered B Marks on the ground produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed are relevant facts

(8) The question is whether A poisoned B The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison and habits of B known to A which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison are relevant facts

SECTION 8: Illustration (a), (1)—The facts are relevant as causes of the fact in issue

Illustration (b), (2)—The fact is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue

Illustration (c), (3)—The fact is relevant as an effect of a cause of the fact in issue

Illustration (d), (4)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue

Illustration (e), (5)—The facts are relevant; for they are all effects of the immediate cause (namely, A's resolution to commit the offence) of the fact in issue

Illustration (f), (6)—The latter fact is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue, and the former as a cause of the latter. As to the sense in which C's statement is relevant, see remarks below, illustration (j), post

Illustration (g), (7)—For A's going away without making any answer is an effect of the fact in issue, and the other two facts are causes of that effect

Illustration (h), (8)—The first fact is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue and the second as a cause of that effect

Illustration (i), (9)—The facts are relevant as effects of a fact in issue

Illustration (j), (10)—The facts are relevant as effects of the fact in issue. The illustration goes on to say that the fact that without making a complaint she said that she had been ravished, is not relevant as conduct under section 8 though it may be relevant as a dying declaration or as corroborative evidence. Nowhere, as Mr Whitworth points out, the strict use of the term 'relevant'

(1) A is tried for the murder of B. That A murdered C that B knew that A had murdered C and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public are relevant.

(2) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond. The fact that at the time when the bond was alleged to be made B required money for a particular purpose is relevant.

(3) A is tried for the murder of B by poison. The fact that before the death of B A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B is relevant.

(4) The question is whether a certain document is the Will of A. The facts that not long before the date of the alleged Will A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared of which he did not approve are relevant.

(5) A is accused of a crime. The facts that either before or at the time of or after the alleged crime A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself or that he destroyed or concealed evidence or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses or returned persons to give false evidence respecting it are relevant.

(6) The question is whether A robbed B. The facts that after B was robbed C said in A's presence "The police are coming to look for the man who robbed B" and that immediately afterwards A ran away are relevant.

(7) The question is whether A owes B 10 000 rupees. The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing "I advise you not to trust A for he owes B 10 000 rupees" and that A went away without making any answer are relevant facts.

(8) The question is whether A committed a crime. The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal and the contents of the letter are relevant.

(9) A is accused of a crime. The facts that after the commission of the alleged crime he absconded or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it are relevant.

(10) The question is whether A was ravished. The facts that shortly after the alleged rape she made a complaint relating to the crime the circumstances under which and the terms in which the complaint was made are relevant.

has been departed from. That the woman said she had been ravished is relevant though it does not follow that it is admissible. The Act declares when statements of fact in issue or relevant facts may be proved. When the statement is a dying declaration is one instance that such statements may under certain circumstances be proved as corroborative evidence is another and another is to this effect that when the conduct of any person is a relevant fact using that conduct or statements made at that conduct may be proved. This has no rule seems out of place in section 8. It is because the woman's statement without complaint is not admissible under this rule that the Act says that statement is not relevant as conduct under this section. So above in Illustrations (f) (g) (h) some of the relevant facts are statements. They are also admissible as being connected with conduct. They are simply pronounced relevant. It is plain that it is meant that they may be proved. But that the statements are relevant in the strict sense is sufficient for the present purpose.

Illustration (i) (1)—The facts in the first sentence of the illustration are relevant as effects of the fact in issue. The fact that he said he had been robbed without making any complaint is relevant though whether it is admissible or not depends upon the law relating to the question what statements may be proved.

SECTION 9 Illustration (a) (2)—The Act says the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts. But it may be stated absolutely that so much of the state of A's property or of his family as shows probable cause for his making such a Will as the alleged one or as shows the absence of such probable cause is relevant.

Illustration (b) (3)—Upon this issue so much of the position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published as shows cause for B's publishing a true libel or a false one or the absence of such causes and so much as bears upon the matter asserted in the libel as cause of its truth or otherwise is relevant.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the issue are irrelevant because they do not show the position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published.

positions of the parties defined above.

Illustration (c) (4)—The absconding is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue.

The fact of the sudden call is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and the alleged relevant fact.

The details further than as stated in the illustration do not make the fact in issue more likely or unlikely to have happened.

(1) The question is whether A was robbed. The fact that soon after the alleged robbery he made a complaint relating to the offence the circumstances under which and the terms in which the complaint as made are relevant.

(2) The question is whether a given document is the Will of A.

(3) A sues B for a libel imputing to B disgraceful conduct to A. B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

(4) A is accused of a crime. The fact that soon after the commission of the crime A absconded from his house is relevant under s. 8 as conduct subsequent to, and affected by facts in issue. The fact that at the time he left home he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went is relevant as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly. The details of the business on which he left are not relevant except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden or urgent.

Illustration (d), (1)—This statement is relevant as affirming the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue (B's persuasion) and the relevant fact (C's leaving A's service)

Illustration (e), (2)—B's statement is relevant as an effect of a fact in issue

Illustration (f), (3)—That the riot occurred is a fact in issue, and the cries of the mob are relevant as parts or as effects of the fact

SECTION 10 Illustration, (4)—And any of these facts that are so connected with the other fact in issue, A's complicity, as to make it more or less likely, are relevant for that purpose also

SECTION 11 Illustration (a), (5)—Presence at Lahore is relevant as denying a part of the fact in issue. The other fact is relevant as making a part of the fact in issue unlikely

Illustration (b), (6)—That the crime was committed is adduced as an effect of the fact in issue that A committed it. To show that some other person committed it is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and relevant fact, and to show that no other person committed it is relevant as affirming that connection

SECTION 12 (7)—For the amount of damages is a fact in issue, and any fact which will enable the Court to determine it will be found to be connected with the fact in issue in one of the ways specified

SECTION 13 Illustration (8)—The deed is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue. The mortgage is relevant as an effect of the father's right, which is relevant as a cause of A's right. The subsequent grant of A's is relevant as denying a fact implied by that relevant fact. Particular instances of exercise

(1) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C on leaving A's service says to A: "I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer." This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct which is relevant as a fact in issue.

(2) A accused of theft is seen to give the stolen property to B who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says as he delivers it A says you are to hide this. B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(3) A is tried for a riot and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob. The cries of the mob are relevant as explanatory of the nature of the transaction.

(4) Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

The fact that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy. C collected money in Calcutta for a like object. D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay. E published writing advocating the object in view in Agra and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Cabul the money which C had collected at Calcutta and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy are each relevant to prove the existence of the conspiracy although he may have been ignorant of all of them and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it.

(5) The question is whether A committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day. The fact that on that day A was at Lahore is relevant. The fact that near the time when the crime was committed A was at a distance from the place where it was committed which would render it highly improbable though not impossible that he committed it is relevant.

(6) The question is whether A committed a crime. The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed by A, B, C or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else and that it was not committed by either B, C or D is relevant.

(7) In suits in which damages are claimed any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded is relevant.

(8) The question is whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors a mortgage of the fishery by A's father a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father irreconcilable with the mortgage particular instances in which A's father exercised the right or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours are relevant facts.

of the right are relevant facts as effects of the father's right. And instances in which the exercise of the right were stopped are relevant as contradicting those relevant facts.

SECTION 14 Illustration (a) (1)—The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as an effect of a habit of receiving stolen goods, the habit being relevant as a cause of his receiving the particular article with a knowledge that it was stolen.

Illustration (b), (2)—The fact is relevant as effects of a habit, which habit is a cause of his delivering the particular piece with a knowledge that it was counterfeit.

Illustration (c), (3)—The facts are relevant as the causes of a fact in issue, B's knowledge that the dog was ferocious.

Illustration (d), (4)—For A's knowledge on the previous occasions is a cause of his knowledge on the occasion in question, and that there was not time for the previous bills to be transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person is a cause of his knowledge on previous occasions, and the fact that A accepted the bills is an affirmation of the connection of cause and effect between the fact concerning time and the fact of A's knowledge.

Illustration (e), (5)—The fact of previous publications is relevant as an effect of the same cause as that of which the fact in issue is an effect.

The fact that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, is relevant as alleging absence of fact in issue. The fact that A reported the matter as he heard it is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the two facts, the malicious intention and the publication.

Illustration (f), (6)—For A's good faith is in issue: i.e. did A, when he represented C as solvent, think him solvent? is in issue. C's insolvency may be put forward on one side as a cause of A's thinking him not solvent, so, that his neighbours and persons dealing with him supposed him to be solvent, may be put forward as effects of causes which are causes also of A's thinking him solvent. Thus the neighbours' suppositions are effects of causes of a fact in issue.

(1) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article. The fact that at the same time he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen.

(2) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a piece of counterfeit coin which at the time when he delivered it he knew to be counterfeit. The fact that at the time of its delivery A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin is relevant. (The rest of the illustration was added after Mr. Whitworth's pamphlet by Act III of 1891.)

(3) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's which B knew to be ferocious. The fact that the dog had previously bitten Y, Y and Z and that they had made complaints to B are relevant.

(4) The question is whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payee was fictitious.

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person.

(5) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B. The fact of previous publications by A respecting B showing ill will on the part of A towards B is relevant as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question. The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B and that B repeated the matter complained of as he heard it are relevant as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B.

(6) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B being induced to trust C who was insolvent suffered loss. The fact that at the time when A represented C to be solvent C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him is relevant as showing that A made the representation in good faith.

Illustration (g), (1)—The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant. For it is in issue—was B's contract with A? Therefore that A contracted for the same piece of work with C is relevant as showing absence of cause to contract with B, and that he paid C is relevant as an effect of the relevant fact that he contracted with C.

Illustration (h), (2)—The fact of notice is relevant as a cause of his knowledge that the real owner could be found.

The other fact is relevant as showing that the alleged cause of the fact in issue had not the effect of causing the fact in issue.

Illustration (i), (3)—For A's intention is a fact in issue. The fact is one which may continue through a space of time, and the previous shooting is an effect of it.

Illustration (j), (4)—For the intention to cause fear is a fact in issue. It is a fact capable of prolonged existence, and the previous letters may be effects of it.

Should it, however, be objected that the fact in issue is intention at a particular moment and not intention through a space of time, Mr Whitworth's reply is that previous intention is a cause of subsequent intention, or both are effects of the same cause.

Illustration (l), (5)—The expressions are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue or as showing absence of cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (l), (6)—The statements are relevant as effects of effects of the fact in issue.

Illustration (m), (7)—The statements are relevant as effects of the fact in issue.

Illustration (n), (8)—The drawing of B's attention is relevant as a cause of B's knowledge which is a fact in issue.

The fact that B was habitually negligent is irrelevant, for it is not connected with the fact in issue.

(1) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B upon a house of which A is owner by the order of C a contractor. A's defence is that B's contract was with C. The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant as proving that A did in good faith make over to C the management of the work in question so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's account and not as agent for A.

(2) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found and the question is whether when he appropriated it he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found. The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was is relevant as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found. The fact that A knew or had reason to believe that the notice was given fraudulently by C who had heard of the loss of the property and wished to set up a false claim to it is relevant as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith.

(3) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. The fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved.

(4) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B. Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved as showing the intention of the letters.

(5) The question is whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B his wife. Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty are relevant facts.

(6) The question is whether A's death was caused by poison. Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms are relevant facts.

(7) The question is what was the state of his health at the time when an assurance on his life was effected. Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts.

(8) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use whereby A was injured. The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant. The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let for hire is irrelevant.

Illustration (o), (1)—The fact is relevant as an effect of a fact in issue, B's intention

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people is irrelevant, for it is not connected with a fact in issue

Mr Whitworth adds that this case, in which a habit is declared irrelevant, has some resemblance to that of Illustration (a), where a habit is relevant, but that there is a real difference between the two. He says "The man who habitually shoots at people with intent to murder them has in each case a definite intention of killing the particular person shot at. There is not, as far as the facts are stated, any ulterior common object to connect together the fact of the previous shooting and the fact in issue. But in the case of receiving stolen property the ulterior common object of making dishonest gain by receiving supplies the connection."

Illustration (p), (2)—The first fact is relevant as an effect of the cause of his committing the crime

The second fact is irrelevant, as it is not connected with the fact in issue, namely, whether he committed the particular crime

SECTION 15 Illustration (a), (3)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue

Illustration (b), (4)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of A's making the particular false entry intentionally

Illustration (c), (5)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the intentional delivery of the rupee in question

SECTION 16 Illustration (a), (6)—The facts are relevant as causes of the fact in issue

Illustration (b), (7)—The facts are relevant, the first as a cause of the fact in issue, and the second as affirming the connection of cause and effect between the first and the fact in issue

Mr Whitworth was unfortunately prevented by want of leisure from dealing generally with the criticisms which his essay provoked. One of these was that his first rule was a practical abandonment of the scientific form of

(1) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead. The fact that A on other occasions shot at B is relevant as showing his intention to shoot B. The fact that he was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant.

(2) A is tried for a crime. The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime is relevant. The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class is irrelevant.

(3) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured. The facts that A lived in several houses successively each of which he insured in each of which a fire occurred and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office are relevant as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.

(4) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is his duty to make entries in a book showing the amount received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive. The question is whether this false entry was accidental or intentional. The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false and that the false entry is in each case in favour of A are relevant.

(5) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee. The question is whether the delivery of the rupee was accidental. The facts that soon before or soon after the delivery to B A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E are relevant as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental.

(6) The question is whether a particular letter was despatched. The facts that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post and that that particular letter was put into that place are relevant.

(7) The question is whether a particular letter reached A. The fact that it was posted in due course and was not returned through the Dead Letter Office are relevant.

the others Mr Whitworth's answer to this in his Preface to the Second Edition of his Pamphlet was that an examination of the connection of the first with the other rules would show that their scientific form was of independent value. The second, third and fourth rules supplied, he contended, a definition of relevancy and would be complete if the subject were the theory of relevancy absolutely. The qualification applied by the first rule was required, because the subject is the theory of relevancy for the purpose of judicial evidence. The theory is one thing: its application to a particular purpose is another. He added — "It might be well to have rules that would express at once both the principle and its limitation. Failing this, I have propounded one rule (an unscientific one) as to the limitation and three others (scientific in form) as to the principle. But the importance or unimportance of the failure is to be measured by considering whether questions of difficulty in actual practice usually relate to the limitation of the principle or to the principle itself, in other words, whether, for the solution of such questions unscientific or scientific rules are provided. Now the first rule relates chiefly to what Sir James Stephen speaks of as "wide general causes which apply to all occurrences, and, in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof, and the test in cases of disputed relevancy will, I think, usually be found to be one of the other, the scientific rules."

The theory contained in Mr Whitworth's essay was subsequently adopted by Sir James Stephen himself in the earlier edition of his Digest of the Law of Evidence (1). In the present edition Sir J F Stephen substituted another definition of relevancy in place of that contained in the earlier editions and Sir J F Stephen observes, because it gave rather the principle practical rule (2)

Dr Wharton (3) while defining relevancy as that which conduces to the proof of a pertinent hypothesis, a pertinent hypothesis being one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue, and adopting several of Sir J F Stephen's positions, offers two criticisms as explaining why he cannot accept his scheme as affording a complete solution of the difficulties which beset this branch of evidence. In the first place, the words "cause," and "effect" are open, when used in this connection, to an objection which, though subtle is in some cases fatal. The "cause" of a fact in issue, it is alleged, is relevant, yet whether such a cause produced such a fact is the question the action is often instituted to try, and it is a petitio principii to say that the "cause" is relevant because it is the "cause" and that it is shown to be the cause because it is relevant. In the second place, the distinction between "facts in issue" and "fact relevant to fact in issue" cannot be sustained. An issue is never raised as to an evidential fact, the only issues the law knows are those which affirm or deny conclusions from one or more evidential facts. Thus, Sir J F Stephen when explaining the supposed distinction says "A is indicted for the murder of B and pleads guilty. The following facts may be in issue: the fact that A killed B, etc." But if the group of facts classified as facts in issue be scrutinized it will be found that, as they are facts which could not be put in evidence, they are not relevant facts, though they might be relevant hypotheses to be sustained by relevant fact. If Counsel should ask a witness whether "A killed B" the question would, if excepted to, be ruled out, on the ground that it called not for "facts," but for a conclusion from facts, and to such conclusions witnesses are not permitted to testify (4). The only way of proving "facts

(1) Steph Dig pp 156 157

(2) Ib p 158. The substituted definition is given post in the Introduction to Ch II

(3) A Commentary on the Law of Evidence in Civil Issues by F Wharton 2d Ed 3rd Ed 1888 Philadelphia §§ 20 26

(4) See Wharton Ev § 507

when he has to consider whether a fact is relevant? In the first place I answer that this is a question which he has very rarely to consider. Parties to a litigation or their advocates very rarely attempt to offer irrelevant evidence to waste time. They hope to influence what is really irrelevant he would certainly not resort to any abstruse consideration about cause and effect. He would simply consult his own experience." The real discussions which take place before a Judge upon evidence are, as he points out, not as to its relevancy but as to its admissibility. And this Act would have been far more intelligible if the language of it had corresponded with a collection of rules not upon relevancy but upon admissibility. In that case whilst their own reason and common sense would have told the Judge and parties what was relevant, it would only have been necessary on an objection to look into the provisions of the Act to see whether there was any rule prohibiting the reception of the particular evidence in question. Whether or no certain kinds of evidence shall be admissible depends on a variety of considerations besides relevancy and the putting forward of relevancy in the Act as if it were the only test is not only erroneous but unfortunate, as it makes the Act difficult to explain and adds to the mystery by which this branch of the law is usually supposed to be surrounded. There is, however, no mystery about the matter if it be remembered that the ordinary processes of reasoning or argument are not left at the door of the Court House and that within it the law does not properly undertake to regulate these processes except as helping by certain rules which may be presented in a readily intelligible manner to discriminate and select the material of fact upon which these are to operate. Legal reasoning, at bottom, is like all other reasoning, though practical considerations come in to shape it. Rules, principles and methods of legal reasoning have, however, figured as rules of evidence to the perplexity and confusion of those who sought for a strong grasp of the subject. The notion may be dismissed that legal reasoning is some natural process by which the human mind is required to infer what does not logically follow. What is called the "legal mind" is still the human mind and must reason according to the laws of its constitution. But to understand properly the Law of Evidence one must detach and hold apart from it all that belongs to that other untechnical and far wider subject (1). The position may be summed up by saying that the laws of reasoning indicate what facts are relevant. The Law of Evidence declares which of those facts are admissible. These latter should be concisely stated and codified. But just as other organic processes are ordinarily and in most cases are the better carried on unconsciously, so little of use is attained and the risk of confusion is involved in an attempted analysis of the reasons. The common-sense and experience of both the parties and the Judge will tell them what they have to prove and what should be proved and what is relevant for that purpose. And if these do not, abstract considerations of causality will not help them, interesting though these may be in inquiries less practical than those which come before a Court of Justice (2).

to contain the whole law of evidence two at least of the general rules of exclusion (including that against hearsay) are not treated in it. The language of s 60 he contends does not as is generally supposed exclude hearsay.

(1) Thayer op cit, Ch VI and the same Author's Select Cases on Evidence 14

(2) As matters now stand on an objection to evidence the party tendering it has to search the Act for the section which justifies its reception. This is not always an easy matter and it is probably owing to this and a not unnatural reluctance to enter into the mazes of the law of causality that there is such popular resort to s 11. In a Code which aimed merely at embodying the rules of exclusion all evidence would be prima facie admissible unless the objecting party could show some positive rule in the Code excluding it.

ACT No. I OF 1872.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 15th March 1872)

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT, 1872.

The Title of an Act may be resorted to, to explain an enacting clause when doubtful (1) As to the title of an Act giving colour to, and controlling its provisions, vide note (2)

The law of evidence applicable in every case is that of the lex fori which governs the Courts whether a witness is competent or not, whether a certain matter requires to be proved by writing or not, whether certain evidence proves a certain fact or not, these and the like questions must be determined, not lege loci contractus but by the law of the country where the question arises, where the remedy is sought to be enforced and where the Court sits to enforce it (3) As to the law applicable in this country (vide post)

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, define and amend the Law of Evidence; it is hereby enacted as follows.—

COMMENTARY.

The Preamble shows that this Act is not merely a fragmentary enactment but a consolidatory enactment repealing all rules of evidence other than those saved by the last part of the second section (1)

The Act contains in this Act relating to the subject of evidence, or enacted subsequent to the Law of Evidence and in British India evidence is admitted under some provision either of this Act or of the Acts abovementioned for there are no other rules of evidence in force in British India except such as are contained in these Acts Thus it has been held that since, under

(1) Hurro Chunder v Shooro Dhoney, 9 W R 402 404 405 (F B) (1868) see Salkeld v Johnson 2 Exch 256 282 283

(2) Uda Begam v Imam ud din 2 A 90 (1878) and see Alangamonjori v Sonamoni 8 C 637 639 643 (1882) Crauford v Spooner, 4 M L A. 179

187 (1846)

(3) Bain v Whitehead & Railway Co., 3 H L Cas 1 19 per Lord Brougham.

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palak dhar Singh 12 A 35 (1889) As to construction of consolidating Acts, see Introduction section 2, the English Extradition Act, which is applicable to this country, is part of the lex fori, records authenticated in the manner prescribed by that Act are admissible (1) So where certain administration-papers were tendered on behalf of the plaintiff, the Privy Council observed and held: "The Indian Evidence Act has repealed all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute or Regulation, and the plaintiff must therefore show that these papers are admissible under some provision of the Indian Evidence Act" (2) "Instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence, and then inquiring what changes the complete Code of the Law of Evidence for British India (4)

Headings

The Headings prefixed to sections or sets of sections are regarded as preambles to those sections (5) The headings are not to be treated as if they were marginal notes, or were introduced into the Act merely for the purpose of classifying the enactments. They constitute an important part of the Act itself, and may be read not only as explaining the sections which immediately follow them, as a preamble to a Statute may be looked to, to explain its enactments, but as affording a better way to the construction of the sections which follow than might be afforded by a mere preamble (6)

Interpretation-clauses

Legislative definitions or interpretations, being necessarily of a very general nature, not only do not control, but are controlled by, subsequent and express provisions on the subject matter of the same definition, they are by no means to be strictly construed; they must yield to enactments of a special and precise nature, and, like words in Schedules, they are received rather as general examples than as overruling provisions (7) The effect of an interpretation-clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places of the Act in which that word occurs, wherever that word appears it must, unless the contrary plainly appear, be understood in accordance with the meaning so assigned. But it is by no means defined shall have annexed to it by any other Act of the Legislature (8) Where a definition "includes" certain persons or things, it does not, therefore, necessarily exclude other persons and things not so included; for when a definition is intended to be exclusive, it would seem the form of words (as in the definition of "fact") is "means and includes" (9) Where a word is defined in a special technical sense, it is to be understood in that sense, and a defining clause in the Act,

(1) In the matter of Rudolf Stallman, 39 C., 164 (1911)

(2) See Lekhraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, 7 I A 70 (1879), 5 C., 754, 6 C L R 593, also Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A., 11, 12 19, 20 34, 35 43 (1889) This section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not specifically authorised by the Act itself R v Abdullah 7 A., 399 (1885) (but see also ib, p 401) Muhammad Allahabad v Muhammad Ismail, 10 A., 235 (1888), R v Pitamber Jena 2 B., 64 (1877)

(3) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 491 (1878) per Jackson, J

(4) R v Kartick Chunder, 14 C., 721, 778 F B (1887)

(5) Maxwell on Statutes, 6th Ed 92

(6) Eastern Counties, etc., Companies v Marriage 9 H L C 41, Dwarkanath Chaudhuri v Tafeszar Rahman Sarkar, 44 C 267 (1917), Woodroffe, J

(7) Uda Begam v Imam ud din, 2 A., 74 86 (1878), Dwarrao on Statutes 2nd Ed (1848) 509 R v Justice of Cambridgehire, 7 A & E, 480, 491

(8) Uma Churn v Ajadnissa Bibee, 12 C 430, 432 433 (1885), see also R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 492 (1878)

(9) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 493 (1878)

(10) Ruckmabaye v Lulloobhoy Motichand 5 M I A., 234 (1852), Futteshangji Jastantsangji v Dessai Kulhan rays, 21 W R., 178 (1874)

The words of the section are not limited to the illustrations given. The plain meaning of the section would be that the effect would be to curtail the power of the Legislature to confer (1) Illustrations, in form part of the Acts and are merely go to show the intention or respects they may be useful, provided they are correct (2) The practice of looking more at the illustrations than at the words of the section of the Act is a mistake. The illustrations are only intended to assist in construing the language of the Act (3)

It has been held in England that marginal notes are no part of sections so as to throw light upon questions of construction and that they are merely abstracts of the clauses intended to catch the eye and to make the task of reference easier and more expeditious (4) As regards Indian Acts there appears to have been some difference of opinion. In the undermentioned case (5) the Court was disposed to think that such notes might be used for the purpose of interpreting Indian Acts, the Statute Publication of such Acts being framed with marginal notes. In a subsequent case (6) Pethuram, C J, referred to the marginal notes to s 5, Act XXI of 1870, and s 149, Act V of 1881, and said that although the marginal notes were not any part of the Act, they did indicate the object of the sections, and in a later decision (7), it was said with reference to s 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code — 'The only reference to easements is in the marginal note, which is no part of the enactment, but even the marginal note does not restrict the application of the section in the manner suggested.' In both of these cases the Court, while holding that marginal notes formed no part of an enactment, appear to have referred to the same on the question of construction. In, however, the latest reported decisions the Court held that marginal notes did not form part of the section and could not be referred to for the purpose of construing it (8)

General observations on this matter are contained in the Introduction to which the reader is referred. The modern general rule is that Statutes must be construed according to their plain meaning, neither adding to, nor subtracting from, them (9). The Court will put a reasonable construction upon an Act, and will not allow the strict language of a section to prevent their giving

(1) Koylash Chunder v Sonatun Chun 7 C 137 135 (1881), s. c. 8 C L R 283. Exempla illustrant non restringunt legem Co Litt 24 (a)

(2) Nanak Ram v Mohin Lal 1 A 487 495 496 (1877) see also Dubey Sahai v Ganesh Lal 1 A 34 36 (1875)

(3) Slakh Omed v Nidhee Ram 22 W R 367 (1874) see also R v Rahmat 1 B 147 155 (1876) Soorjo Narain v Bissambhur Singh 23 W R 311 (1875) Gujju Lal v Fatteh Lal 6 C 171 185 187 (1880) [illustration referred to to show meaning of word in s 13 post] R v Chidda Khan 3 A 573 575 (1881) (id)

(4) Wilberforce 293 214 Maxwell 6th Ed 76, Hardcastle 3rd Ed 205 Claydon v Green 3 C P 511 Sutton v Sutton 22 Ch D 511 (1882) correcting dictum in In re Venour's Settled Estates 2 Ch D 522 525

(5) Kameshar Prasad v Bhikan Narain 20 C 609 (1893) per Pigot J at p 629

(6) Administrator General Bengal v

Press Lal 21 C 758 (1894)

(7) Dulhi Mullah v Halsey 23 C 55 59 (1895)

(8) Punardea Narain v Ram Sarup, 25 C 858 (1898) Tikura n Balraj v Rai Jagatpal 8 C W N 699 (1904) s c 6 A 393

(9) Maxwell 2 Gureebullah Sirkar v Mohin Lal 7 C 127 (1881) when the terms of an Act are clear and plain it is the duty of the Court to give effect to it as it stands Pilpott v St George's Hospital 6 H L Cas 338, Bu-lloor Ruheem v Slumsoonnissa Begum 8 W R P C 3 12 (1867) s c 11 M 1 A 551 604 R v Bal Krishna 17 B 577 578 (1893) but many cases may be quoted, in which in order to avoid injustice or absurdity words of general import have been restricted to particular meanings ib 578 Bamasoondere v Verner 13 B L R, 193 (18 4) Wells v L T & S Ry Co 5 Ch D 126 130 Eastern Counties etc Companies v Murrage 9 H L C 32 36

it such a construction (1) In considering the rules of evidence it is necessary to look to the reason of the matter (2) A construction effecting a most important departure from the English rule of evidence was considered in the under mentioned case (3) Whatever be the meaning of a word in one portion of a section, the meaning of the same word in another portion must, according to the principles of construction, be the same (4) The meaning of a word may be ascertained by reference to the words with which it is associated, and its use and to its allocation in a construction making inclusion on a question of construction, it is relevant that the Indian Evidence Act was passed by the Legislature under the direction of a skilled lawyer that the construction of the Act is marked by careful and methodical arrangement, and that many of the more important expressions used in it are plainly interpreted. It would be wholly inconsistent with the plan of such an enactment that a specific rule contained in one part of it should at the same time be contained in or deducible from, one or more other rules relating apparently to topics quite distinct which rules should be at the same time so expressed as to include not merely the specific rule in question, but also matters which that rule taken by itself would specifically exclude (8) A construction may be adopted by reference to the entirety of a section and also to other sections (9) The word "may" in a Statute is sometimes, for the purpose of giving effect to the intention of the Legislature interpreted as equivalent to 'must' or 'shall,' but in the absence of proof of such intention it is construed in its natural and therefore in a permissive and not in an obligatory sense (10) It is not for a Civil Court to speculate upon what was in the mind of the Legislature in passing a law but the Court must be bound by the words of the law judicially construed (11) The intention of the Legislature must be ascertained

(1) Gureebullah Sirkar v Mohun Lall, supra 130 as to latent propositions of law see Leman v Damodaraya 1 M 138 (1876)

(2) Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall 6 C 171, 182 (1880) All rules must be construed with reference to their object, per Erle J in Plelps v Preu 3 E & B, 441 So also Couch C J in Beharce Lall v Kannee Soondaree 14 W R 319 320 (18 0) in dealing with the subject matter of s 92 post said in applying the rule we must always consider what is the reason of it

(3) Ranchoddas Krishnadas v Bopu Narhar 10 B 439 442 (1886), Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall supra 189 (intention to depart entirely from English rule), Prothabhablat v Visambhar Pandit 8 B 313 371 (1884) R v Gopal Dass 3 M 271 279 283 (1881) [construction from consideration of alteration called for in English Law of Evidence ib 279] See remarks of Lord Herschell as to the interpretation of codes in Bank of England v Vagliano Brothers L R App Cas (1891) 107 at pp 144 145, cited ante in Introduction

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhar Singh supra 14 so with reference to ss 26 and 80 of this Act the Court in R v Nagla Kala 22 B 235 238 (1896) observed that it would be unreasonable to hold that the Legislature used the same word in different senses in the same Act

(5) Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall supra 166 181

(6) In re Pjari Lall 4 C L R 504 506 (1879)

(7) Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall supra 183 In re Pjari Lall supra 506—508 Alangamonjori Dabee v Sonanoni Dabee 8 C 637 640 642 (1882), [no clause sentence or word shall be superfluous void or insignificant] Mohar Sheikh v R 21 C 399 400 (1893)

(8) Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall, supra, 183 184

(9) In re Asgar Houssein 8 C L R 125 (1880)

(10) Dell and London Bank v Orchard 3 C 47 (1877) see also R v Aloo Paroo 3 M 1 A 488 497 493 (1847) Anund Chunder v Pinchoo Lall 14 W R, F B 33 36 (1870) see 5 B L R 691 699, Julius v Bishop of Oxford L R 5 App Cas 214 Ram Dayal v Modan Mohan 21 A 432 (1899)

(11) Mohesh Chunder v Madhub Chunder 13 W R 85 (1870), Crawford v Spooner supra 187, Buclur Raheem v Shumsoonnissa Begum supra 12 Eastern Counties etc Companies v Warrage supra 40 [judicature trespassing on province of Legislature]

from the words of a Statute and not from any general inferences to be drawn from the nature of the objects dealt with by the Statute (1) The Court knows nothing of the intention of an Act except from the words in which it is expressed applied to the facts existing at the time (2) In case of doubt or difficulty over the interpretation of any of the sections of the Evidence Act, reference for help should be made both to the case law of the land which existed before the passing of the Act, and also to juristic principles, which only represent the common consensus of juristic reasoning (3) When the rules of exclusion and the exception to them are definitely laid down, the exception is not to be extended to cases not properly falling within it (4) Where a clause in an Act which has received a judicial interpretation is re enacted in the same terms the Legislature is to be deemed to have adopted that interpretation (5) It is an elementary rule of construction that a thing which is within the letter of a Statute is not within the Statute unless it be also within the meaning of a subsequent Statute on the same branch of the law it is perfectly legitimate to under mentioned case (9) Lord perfectly clear that in an Act of its any more than there are such as having a greater retrospective action than its language plainly indicates (10) When an Act does not expressly purport to supersede an earlier one, it should be interpreted so as to avoid conflict with it if possible (11)

(1) Nanak Ran v Mehim Lall 1 A, 496 supra Fordyce v Bridges, 1 H L Cas 14

(2) Ib Lagan v Courtoun 13 Beav, 22 and see Crauford v Spooner supra 187 188 per Lord Brougham as to cases dealing with the intention under this Act see e.g. Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall supra 181 In re Pjari Lall supra 508 Framji v Mahansing 18 B 263 278 279 (1893) [identity of language used in section with that employed in Taylor on Ev] R v Gopal Doss supra

(3) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palak dhari Singh supra 37 38

(4) R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R 242 (1874)

(5) Re Campbell 5 Ch App 703 cf

following sections of this Act with those of Act II of 1855 —18 32 37 57 81, 83 84 118 120 123 124 126 129 131 162 167 and 25 26 27 with ss 148—150 Act XXV of 1861

(6) R v Bal Krishna 17 B 577 (1893)

(7) R v Sitaram Vithal 11 B 658 (1887)

(8) Collector of Sea Customs v P Chithambaram 1 M, 114 (1876)

(9) Duke of Devonshire v O Connor L R 24 Q B D 478

(10) Munchoori Bibi v Akel Mahmud 27 C L J 316 (1913) Budhu Kaer v Hafiz Husain 28 C L J 274 (1913)

(11) Rangacharya v Dasacharya 37 B 231 (1913)

PART I.

RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short Title,
Commencement of Act,
Extent of
Act.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Evidence Act, 1872." It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court(1), including Court-Martial, "other than Courts-Martial convened under the Army Act" (amended by Act XVIII of 1919) but not to affidavits presented to any Court or Officer, nor to proceedings before an Arbitrator; and it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872.

COMMENTARY.

Extent of
Act

The Act extends to the whole of "British India" which means the territories see 5 while British
(3).

Provinces (5) The Act has also been declared to be in force in Upper Hill District of Arakan(7) Territories(9); in the
and has been applied to

(1) Defined in s 3, post As to the meaning of 'judicial enquiry' and 'judicial proceeding' see R v Tulja, 12 B, 36, 41, 42 (1887), Atchayya v Ganapaya, 15 M, 138, 143 (1891), Cr Pr Code, s 4 (m), Mayne's Criminal Law of India, 1896, 4th Ed, pp 372-379, R v Price, L R, 6 Q B, 418, R v Ghalam Ismail, 1 A, 1, 13 (1875)

(2) See Act X of 1897; Act I of 1903, and Act X of 1914

(3) i Acts XIV and XV of 1874 As to Act XIV of 1874 (Scheduled Districts) see Act XXXVIII of 1920, Act II of 1893 and earlier amending Acts As to Act XV of 1874 (Laws Local Extent) see Act I of 1903 and earlier amending

Acts, Bengal Act II of 1913, B & O Act I of 1913

(4) Gazette of India, Oct 22 1881, Pt I, p 504

(5) Ib., Sept 23, 1876, Pt I, p 505

(6) Act XIII of 1898, s 4 [Burma Code Ed, 1898 p 364], and Act IV of 1909

(7) Reg I of 1916, s 2

(8) Reg II of 1913 s 3, Regs VIII & IX of 1896; Reg II of 1919 (Baluchistan).

(9) Baluchistan Agency Laws Law, 1890 s 4 [ib, p 137]

(10) Reg III of 1872 as amended by Reg III of 1899, s 3

(11) Reg III of 1913, s 3

certain Native States in India or places therein The Act has been made applicable by Her Majesty in Council in certain places beyond the limits of India for the purposes of cases in which Her Majesty has jurisdiction and has been adopted by certain Native States of India as their law

In the Appendix will be found a complete list revised by the Legislative Department of the Native States in India or places therein to which the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) has been applied by the Governor General in Council

The Act only applies to Native Courts Martial (1) In the case of European Courts Martial, a Court Martial is not, as respects the conduct of its proceedings or the reception or rejection of evidence or as respects any other matter or thing whatsoever, subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act The rules of evidence to be adopted in proceedings before such Courts Martial shall be the same as those which are followed in Civil Courts in England (2) This is therefore an exception to the general rule that the lex fori determines the law of evidence (vide post) The Act is (subject to such modification as the Governor General in Council may direct) applicable to all proceedings before Indian Marine Courts (3)

The Civil Procedure Code regulates the matters to which affidavits must be confined These are such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications on which a statement of his belief may be admitted, provided that reasonable grounds thereof be set forth (4) The exception here mentioned does not apply to any proceeding where the rights of the parties (5) are in issue or where evidence given on information at so short a notice (6) So too, in interlocutory proceedings cross-examination will not be allowed on affidavit because it would defeat the object of the whole proceedings which is despatched (7) The costs of every affidavit unnecessarily setting forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter or copies of or extracts from documents, are (unless the Court otherwise directs) payable by the party filing the same (8) The safeguards for truth in affidavits are the provisions for the production of the witness for cross examination (9), and the provisions of the Penal Law relating to the giving of false evidence (10)

Proceedings before arbitrators are regulated by the Civil Procedure Code (11) As an arbitrator is not in procedure bound by technical rules of Court and is appointed to give an equitable award (12) so also he is unfettered by technical rules of evidence, and it is not a valid objection to an award that

Courts-Martial and Marine Courts

Affidavits

Arbitration

(1) Under Act V of 1869 Repealed by Act VIII of 1911

(2) 44 & 45 Vic cap 58 ss 127 & 128 et also ss 163—165 (Army Discipline and Regulation Act 1881)

(3) Act XIV of 1887 s 68 V of 1898 XVII of 1898 I of 1899

(4) Civ. Pr. Code O XIV r 3 (1) p 851 see Whitley Stokes 33 Cr. Pr. Code s 539 In the matter of the petition of Iswar Chandra 14 C 653 On evidence by affidavit, see Powell Ev. 9th Ed. 695—697 Best Ev. §§ 101 118 121 et seq. Taylor Ev. § 1394 et seq. Legal Remembrancer v. Matlal Ghose S B 41 C 173 (1914) A statement on information and belief is not admissible in a case of contempt of Court

(5) Gilbert v. Endean L R, 9 Ch Div. 259 Taylor Ev. § 1396 B

(6) Gilbert v. Endean L R 9 Ch Div. 259 at p 266 per Jessel M R see also Chard v. Jarvis 9 Q B D 178 180 Bonnard v. Perryman (1891) 2 Ch 269 re J. L. Young Manufacturing Co (1900) 2 Ch 753 and Lumley v. Osborne (1901) 1 K B 537

(7) Civ. Pr. Code supra
(8) Civ. Pr. Code O XIV r 1 2 p 850

(9) O XIV
(10) Penal Code Ch XI

(11) Civ. Pr. Code The Second Schedule pp 1463—1474

(12) Reedoy Kruto v. Puddo Lochun 1 W R 1^o (1864) But as to stamp see now Act II of 1899 ss 33 34 (See also the various provincial laws passed in 1922 the law is in Bengal contained in Beng. Act II of 1922)

the arbitrator has not acted in strict conformity to the rules of evidence (1) The word "Court" in this Act does not include an arbitrator (2) Though the Act does not apply to proceedings before an arbitrator, yet the latter must not receive and act upon evidence or decide upon grounds which render his award utterly unfair or worthless. He must not import his own knowledge into a case or base his decision upon information obtained otherwise than from the evidence submitted to him by the parties to the cause. Where on the face of an award it appeared that the arbitrator principally relied on an admission (3) which he alleged was made to him by the defendant when a former suit between the plaintiff's mortgagee and the defendant was pending, and the arbitrator further stated that he relied on enquiries made by him before the reference to arbitration, and that he made further enquiries since the reference not stating of whom these different enquiries were made, and not seeming to have taken evidence and examined witnesses in the ordinary way, it was held that he acted improperly in importing the previous enquiry alleged to have been made by him, and was quite wrong in relying on what he called admissions, made to him by the defendant in the former proceedings, and that an award based upon such a foundation was utterly unfair and useless (4) An arbitrator must not receive affidavits instead of viva voce evidence when he is directed to examine the witnesses on oath. He must not make his award, or having allowed the party reasonable time to produce evidence, or a party privately, or in the absence of his opponent, unless the irregularity be waived by the parties. If the arbitrator proceed, ex parte, without sufficient cause, or without giving the party absenting himself clear notice of his intention so to proceed, the award will be avoided. So likewise if he refused to hear the evidence on a claim within the scope of a reference on a mistaken supposition that it is not within it, but not if he erroneously reject admissible, or receive inadmissible, evidence. His refusing to bear additional evidence tendered when the whole case is referred back to him by a Court is fatal, but not so when the award is sent back with a view to a particular amendment only being made (5) The rule of law which excludes communications made "without prejudice" is as binding upon arbitrators as upon Courts of Justice, notwithstanding the first section of the Evidence Act, and an arbitrator is wrong in receiving and acting upon such a communication (6) As much as possible the arbitrator should decline to receive private communications from either litigant respecting the subject matter of the reference. Except in the few cases where exceptions are unavoidable, as where the arbitrator is justified in proceeding ex parte, both sides must be heard and each in the presence of the other (7) Refusal by an arbitrator to call witnesses produced by either party amounts to judicial misconduct (8) Lastly, arbitrators ought only to take such evidence as is required by the terms of the agreement referring the question in dispute to arbitration (9)

(1) Suppu v Govinda Charjar, 11 M 87 (1887)

(2) S 3 post

(3) As to the use of evidence in a subsequent suit of admissions by parties in a former arbitration see Huronath Sircar v Preonath Sircar, 7 W R 249 (1867) and notes to ss 17, 18 33 post

(4) Kanhya Chand v Ram Chander, 24 W R 81 (1875)

(5) Russell on The Power and Duty of an Arbitrator, 4th Ed p 646 cited and adopted in Gunga Sahai v Lekhraj Singh

9 A 264 265 (1886) Cursetji Khambatta v Crowder 18 B 299 (1894) [arbitrator ought not to receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other]

(6) Howard v Wilson 4 C p 231 (1878) See s 23 post

(7) Russell op cit pp 181 and 182, cited and adopted in Gunga Sahai v Lekhraj Singh 9 A 565 (1886)

(8) Rughoobur Doyal v Maina Koer, 12 C L R 564 (1883)

(9) Krishna Kanta v Bidya Sundaree 2 B L R App 25 (1869)

2. On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed:—

Repeal of Enactments

- 1 All rules of Evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India;
- 2 All such rules, laws and regulations as have acquired the force of law under the 25th Section of the "Indian Councils Act, 1861" (1), in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for; and
- 3 The enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto, to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed

See Introduction and notes on Preamble

3. In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context —

Interpretation Clause

"Court" includes all Judges(2) and Magistrates(3), and all persons, except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence

Court

s 1 (Proceedings before Arbitrators)

s 3 (Evidence)

COMMENTARY.

See notes to Preamble

The definition of Court is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Special laws must be confined in their operation to their special object (4). The definition is not meant to be exhaustive (5). The word means not only the Judge in a trial by a Judge and jury (6). A Commissioner is a person herefore the provisions of the Act will under the Civil or Criminal Procedure an enquiry under the Bengal Land

Court

(1) 24 & 25 Vic cap 67 Clause (2) repeals rules relating to evidence enacted in Non Regulated Provinces prior to this Statute and which acquired the force of Law under the 25th section thereof

(2) Penal Code s 19 General Clauses Act

(3) Cf General Clauses Act Cr Pr Code s 3

(4) R v Tilja 12 B 43 (1887)
Attorney General v Moore L R 3 Ex Div 276
R v Rani Lall 15 A 141

(1893) but see Atchayya v Gangayya 15 M 138 144 147 148 (1891) and In re Sardars Lall 13 B L R App 40 (1874) s c 22 W R Cr 10

(5) R v Aslootash Chuckerbutty 4 C. 488 493 (1878)

(6) Ib 490

(7) C Pr Code O XXXI r 1—10 pp 1088—1097 Cr Pr Code ss. 503—508 see also Atchayya v Gangayya 1ra at p 147

Registration Act, for the purpose of registering the names of rival claimants is a Court within the meaning of this Act and the enquiry held by him is a judicial enquiry (1)

“Fact” means and includes —

Fact

- 1 Any thing, state of things, or relation of things, capable of being perceived by the senses,
- 2 Any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

Illustrations

(a) That there are certain objects arranged in a certain order in a certain place is a fact

(b) That a man heard or saw something is a fact

(c) That a man said certain words is a fact

(d) That a man holds a certain opinion has a certain intention acts in good faith or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular sensation is a fact

(e) That a man has a certain reputation is a fact

§ 3 (Relevant fact)

§ 3 (Fact in issue)

COMMENTARY

Fact

The first clause refers to external facts the subject of perception by the five “best marked” senses, and the second to internal facts the subject of consciousness (2), (a), (b) and (c) are illustrations of the first clause (d) and (e) of the second. Facts are thus (adopting the classification of Bentham) (3) either physical, e.g., the existence of visible objects, or psychological, e.g., the intention or animus of a particular individual in doing a particular act. The latter class of facts are incapable of direct proof by the testimony of witnesses, their existence can only be ascertained either by the confession of the party whose mind is their seat or by presumptive inference from physical facts (4). This constitutes their only difference. “When it is affirmed that a man has a given intention, the matter affirmed is one which he and only he can perceive, when it is affirmed that a man is sitting or standing the matter affirmed is one which may be perceived not only by the man himself but by any other person able to see and favourably situated for the purpose. But the circumstance that either event is regarded as being or as having been, capable of being perceived by some one or other, is what we mean and all that we mean, when we say that it exists or existed, or when we denote the same thing by calling it a fact. The word ‘fact’ is sometimes opposed to theory, sometimes to opinion, sometimes to feeling, but all these modes of using it are more or less rhetorical” (5). Facts may also be either events or states of things. By an “event” is meant “some motion or change considered as having come about either in the course of nature or through the agency of human will,” in which latter case it is called an “act” or “action.” The fall of a tree is an “event,” the existence of the tree is a “state of things” both are alike facts (6). The remaining division of facts is into positive or affirmative and negative. The existence of a certain state of things is a positive or affirmative fact—the non-existence of it is a negative fact. “This distinction unlike both the former,

(1) Rana Singh v Harakdhars Singh
47 I C 710

(2) Steph Introd 19—21 Norton Ev
93 Steph Dig Art. 1 Fact is any thing that is the subject of testimony
Ram on Facts 3

(3) 1 Benth Jud Ev 45

(4) Best Ev 6 7

(5) Steph Introd 20 21

(6) Best Ev 7 1 Benth Jud. Ev.
47 48

does not belong to the nature of facts themselves but to that of the discourse which we employ in speaking of them' (1) 'Matter of fact has been defined to be anything which is the subject of testimony, "matter of law, is the general law of the land of which Courts will take judicial cognisance (2) The fact sought to be proved or factum probandum is termed the principal fact," the means of proof or the facts which tend to establish it 'evidentiary facts' (3)

One fact is said to be relevant to another when the one is connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts (4)

Relevant

The expression "facts in issue" means and includes—

Facts in issue

any fact from which, either by itself or in connection with other facts, the existence non existence nature or extent of any right, liability or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows

Explanation —Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure, any Court records an issue of fact, the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue (5)

Illustrations

4 is accused of the murder of B At his trial the following facts may be an issue —
That A caused B's death
That A intended to cause B's death,
That A had received grave and sudden provocation from B
That A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death was by reason of unsoundness of mind incapable of knowing its nature

s 3 (Fact)

COMMENTARY

¹ Relevant in this Act means it has been said admissible (6) Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two ways —(a) They may by themselves or in connection with other facts that the existence of the disputed right or liability from them From the fact that A is the eldest son the inference that A is by the law of England the heir at law of B and that he has such rights as that status involves From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B and is

Relation of facts to rights and liabilities

7 (1) 1 Benth Jud Ev 49 Best Ev
(2) Best Ev 19
(3) 1 Benth Jud Ev 18 cf Steph Dig Art 1 Steph Intro 19—21 Best Ev 6 7 19 Norton Ev 93 Goodeve Ev 4—16
(4) See ss 5—55 post Steph Dig p 2 Relevant cognate expressions occur in ss 8 13² 3² cl (8) 155 147 14² 153 the expression irrelevant oc curs in ss 24 29 43 5² 54 16² Whitley Stokes 851

(5) Cr Pr Code O \IX rr 1—7 pp 813—872 The expression facts (or fact) in issue occurs in ss 5 6 7 8 9 11 1 21 ill (d) 33 36 43 questions in issue s 33 matter in issue s 132 Whitley Stokes 85²
(6) Lala Lakshmi v Sayed Ha der 3 C W N 22411 (1899) per Lord Hobhouse liable to the punishment provided by law for murder. Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue, unless their existence is undisputed — (b) Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained, may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue and be used as the foundation of inferences respecting them, such facts are described in the Evidence Act as relevant facts (1). All the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of Justice to concern themselves, are included in these two classes. What facts are in issue in particular cases is a question to be determined by the substantive law, or in some instances by that branch of the law of procedure which regulates the forms of pleading, Civil or Criminal" (2). A judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant and duly proved (3).

' Document '

"Document" means any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter (4).

s 3 (Document produced for inspection of Court)

Illustrations

- A writing is a document,
- Words printed, lithographed or photographed are documents
- A map or plan is a document,
- An inscription on a metal plate or stone is a document
- A caricature is a document

"Evidence" means and includes —

' Evidence '

1. All statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses, in relation to matters of fact under enquiry such statements are called oral evidence
2. All documents produced for the inspection of the Court such documents are called documentary evidence (5)

Ch IV (Oral Evidence)

ss 62, 64 165 (Primary Evidence)

Ch V (Documentary Evidence) ss 63, 65 66 (Secondary Evidence) s 60 (Direct Evidence)

COMMENTARY.

' Evidence '

The word "evidence" as generally employed is ambiguous (a) It some times means the words uttered and things exhibited by witnesses before a Court of Justice, (b) at other times it means the facts proved to exist by those words or things, and regarded as the groundwork of inferences as to other facts not so proved, (c) again it is sometimes used as meaning to assert that a particular fact is relevant to the matter under enquiry (6). The word in this

(1) For example of a fact in issue and a relevant fact see Kaung Hla Pru v San Pa 3 L B R 90

(2) Steph Introd 12, 13 cf Goodeve, F 316 et seq., Best Ev, 20, Steph Dig 2

(3) S 165 post

(4) Cf Indian Code s 29

(5) Steph Introd 3 s D g Art I

The expression Documentary Evidence occurs only in the headings to Chapters V and VI Whitley Stokes 852, as to oral evidence v post ss 59 60 91, Expl (3) 119 44 Expl The meaning of the term is not confined to proof before a judicial tribunal, Srimatya v R, 4 M 395 (1881)

(6) Steph Introd, 3, 4

Act is used in the sense of the first clause. As thus used it signifies only the instruments by means of which relevant facts are brought before the Court (viz, witnesses and documents), and by means of which the Court is convinced of these facts (1).

Instruments of evidence or the media through which the evidence of facts, either disputed or required to be proved, is conveyed to the mind of a judicial tribunal have been divided into—(a) witnesses, (b) documents, (c) real evidence, including evidence furnished by things as distinguished from persons, as well as evidence furnished by persons considered as things, i.e., in respect of such properties as belong to them in common with things (2).

This real evidence may be (a) reported, or (b) immediate (3). Cl (a) properly falls under the first class of instruments (witnesses). Cl (b) describes that limited portion of real evidence of which the tribunal is the original percipient witness, e.g., where an offence or contempt is committed in presence of a tribunal, it has direct real evidence of the fact (4). The demeanour of witnesses (5), the demeanour, conduct and statements of parties (6), local investigation by the Judge (7), a view by jury or assessors (8), are all instances of real evidence. Cl (b) thus also includes material things other than documents produced for the inspection of the Court (called in the Draft Bill material evidence"), e.g., the property stolen, models, weapons or other things to be produced in evidence and which are required to be transmitted to the Court of Sessions or High Court (9). This "real evidence" does not form part of the definition of "evidence" given in the Act, inasmuch as the Court is in all cases the original percipient witness, and further in the case of material evidence in so far as it is spoken to by witnesses (10), it falls properly under the first class of instruments. The things so produced are relevant facts to be proved by "evidence," i.e., by oral testimony of those who know of them (11). The Court may require the production of such material things for its inspection (12). Professor Wigmore discards the phrase "real evidence" as misleading, and substitutes "autoptic preference" explaining that a fact is evidenced autoptically when it is offered for direct perception by the senses of the tribunal

(1) Norton Ev 95, Field Ev 6th Ed 14, as to instruments of evidence see Best Ev § 123.

(2) Best Ev pp 109 196 Goodeve Ev 11. Personal Evidence is that which is reported by witnesses. Another division of evidence is that into 'original or immediate and hearsay or mediate'. The former is that which a witness reports himself to have seen or heard through the medium of his own senses, the latter that which is not arrived at by the personal knowledge of the witness see Norton Ev 23 29 Best Ev §§ 27 31 and text post.

(3) Best Ev pp 183 184 Goodeve Ev 11 12 14 16.

(4) Best Ev p 187.

(5) Woodroffes Civ Pr Code O XXIII r 12 p 846 Cr Pr Code s 363. As to the importance of observation of demeanour see R v Madhub Chunder 21 W R Cr 13 14 (1874). Starkie Ev 818 Best Ev § 21. Field Ev 6th Ed 29 R v Bertrand L P 1 P C 515. In all cases in which the evidence is conflicting it is the duty of a Court of Appeal to have great regard to the opinion formed by the Judge in whose presence the witnesses gave their evidence as to the degree of credit to be given to it. Woomesh Chunder v Rashmohini Dassi (1893) 21 C 279. Shrimanigoro Mudal ar v Manikka Mudal ar (P C) 1909 32 M 400, Imdad Ahmad v Pateshri Parlap Narain Singh P C (1909) 32 A 241.

(6) & Whitley Stokes 852.

(7) Woodroffes Civ Pr Code O XXVI r 9 p 1093. Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall 9 C 363 (1882). Oomut Fatima v Bhunjo Gopal 13 W R 51 (1870). Harikshar Mitra v Abdul Baki 21 C 920 (1894). Lakmidas Khatal v Bai Khushat 35 B 317 (1911).

(8) Cr Pr Code s 293. See R v Clutterdare Singl 5 W R Cr 57 (1866). Ordh Behari 1 C L R 143 (1871). Kalash Chunder v Kari Lal 26 C 569 (1899).

(9) Cr Pr Code s 218. See Whitley Stokes 814 ss 60. Prov. (2) 65 (d) et seq.

(10) Steph Introd 15.

(11) & Norton Ev 95.

(12) & s 60 post.

The definition has been objected to (1) for incompleteness, in so far as by its terms it does not include the whole material on which the decision of the Judge may rest. Thus, in so far as a statement by a witness only is "evidence," the verbal statements of parties and accused in Court by way of admission or confession or in answer to questions by the Judge (2), a confession by an accused person affecting himself and his co-accused (3), the real evidence abovementioned, and the presumptions to be drawn from the absence of producible witnesses or evidence (4), are not "evidence" according to the definition given. The answer to this objection, however, is that this clause is an interpretation clause, and the Legislature only explains by it what it intended to denote whenever the word "evidence" is used in the Act (5). This definition must be considered together with the following definition of "proved." (6) "It seems to follow therefore that if a relevant fact is proved and the law expressly authorises its being taken into consideration that is, considered for a certain purpose or against persons, in a certain situation, the fact in question is 'evidence' for that purpose or against such persons, although

(7) by a Munsiff is matter before the Court which may be taken into consideration (8), and the confession of a prisoner affecting himself and another person charged with the same offence is, when duly proved, admissible as evidence against both. (See next section) (9)

Evidence has been further divided into direct evidence and circumstantial evidence (10). Direct (11) evidence is the testimony of a witness to the existence or non-existence of the fact or facts in issue. By circumstantial evidence is meant the testimony of a witness to other facts (relevant facts) from which the fact in issue may be inferred (12). As regards admissibility, direct and

(1) v. Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence (1898) 263, Whitely Stokes 852.

(2) s. 165 post

(3) s. 30 post

(4) v. s. 114 ill (g) post

(5) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 492 (F B)

(6) Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall 9 C 366 and see R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 492 supra

(7) Per Jackson J in R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 492 supra

(8) Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall 9 C, 366 supra

(9) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C 493 supra referred to in R v Krishna Bhat 10 B, 326 (1885), R v Dada Ana 15 B, 459 (1889), v. s. 30 post, see also generally as to "evidence" following sections—Ss. 5 (evidence of facts in issue and relevant facts), 59–60 (oral) 60 (must be direct) 61–100 (documentary) 91–100 (exclusion of oral by documentary), 114 (g) (produced but not produced) 101–166 (production and effect of) 118–166 (witnesses), 167 (improper admission and rejection of evidence) as to the meaning of "evidence to go to the jury" see Pratt v Blunt Corn foot 2 Cox C C 242, Jewell v Parr, 13 C B 909 916 Ryder v Wombell L R,

4 Ex 32 38 Steward v Young L R 5 C P 122 128, R v Vajiram 16 B 414 (1892) as to verdict against evidence R v Dada Ana supra and v. post

(10) See William Wills Essay on Circumstantial Evidence 4th Ed (1862), A M Burrill's Treatise on Circumstantial Evidence 1868 Phillips Famous Cases of Circumstantial Evidence 4th Ed (1879), it is used in s. 60 post which does not exclude circumstantial evidence. Neel Kanto v Juggobundha Ghose 12 B L R App, 18 (1874). In the latter sense circumstantial evidence must always be direct i.e. the facts from which the existence of the fact in issue is to be inferred must be proved by direct evidence. See Steph Intro 8 51 Best Ev. §§ 293–295 Wills Circumstantial Ev. 6th Ed 19 20. The term 'presumptive' is frequently used as synonymous with 'circumstantial' evidence. But they differ as genus and species Wills Circ Ev. 6th Ed 22.

(12) v. post Introduction to Ch II e.g. — A is indicted for the murder of B the apparent cause of death being a wound given with a sword. If C saw A kill circumstantial evidence stand, generally speaking, on the same footing(1), and the testimony, whether to the factum probandum or the facta probantia, is equally as original and direct. As to the several values and cogency of direct and circumstantial evidence much has been both written and said, but both forms admit of every degree of probability. Abstractedly considered, however, the former is of superior cogency; in so far as it contains only one source of error, fallibility of testimony, while the latter has, in addition, fallibility of inference (2) But "when circumstances connect themselves closely with each other, when they form a large and strong body, so as to carry conviction to the minds of a jury, it may be proof of a more satisfactory sort than that which is direct. When the proof arises from the irresistible force of a number of circumstances, which we cannot conceive to be fraudulently brought together to bear upon one point, that is less fallible than, under some circumstances, direct evidence may be" (3) It has been said that "facts cannot lie" (4) but men can. And as we only know facts through the medium of witnesses the truth of the fact depends upon the truth of the witness (5) Primary evidence is that which its own production shows to admit of no higher or superior source of evidence. Secondary evidence is that which from its production implies the existence of evidence superior to itself (6)

A fact is said to be proved(7) when, after considering the "Proved" matter before it, the Court either believes it to exist, or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

B with a sword, his evidence of the fact would be direct. If, on the other hand A walking with a drawn sword towards the spot where the body was found, and after the lapse of a time long enough to allow the murder to be committed, saw him returning with the sword bloody, these circumstances are wholly independent of the evidence of C (they derive no force whatever from it) and, coupled with others of a like nature, might generate quite as strong a persuasion of guilt" Best, Ev. § 294 Nibaran Chandra Roy v R (1907), 11 C W N. 1085, see Legal Remembrancer v Maisal Ghose, S B, 41 C 173 (1914) "positive" evidence defined and distinguished from indirect or circumstantial

(1) Best Ev § 294

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 2, Norton, Ev., pp 14 18 et seq, 71, Phillips' Famous Cases of Circumstantial Evidence 4th Edition, Introduction, Best Ev § 295, Taylor, Ev §§ 65—69, Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed, 48, see remarks of Alderson B in R v Hodges 2 Lewin C C 227 "Probatio per eidentiam res omnis bus est potentior et inter omnes ejus generis major est illa quae fit per testis de visu" (Mascardus De probationibus v 1 q 3, n 8) So also Menochius who displays a partiality for that circumstantial proof which is the subject of his treatise, yet says "probatio seu fides quae

testibus fit, ceteris excellit" (De praesumptionibus, L 1, q 1), Phillips op cit, Burnell op cit

(3) Per Lord Chief Baron Macdonald in R v Patch and R v Smith, cited in Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed 46 47, 39—52, Norton, Ev, 18, et seq, Cunningham, Ev 16, and v Surendra Narayan Adhikary v R (1911), 39 C, 522, See also charge of Bullen, J., in the trial of Captain Donnellan cited and criticised in Phillips' Circ Ev, xv, but evidence of a circumstantial nature can never be justifiably resorted to except where evidence of a direct and therefore of a superior nature is unattainable, Wills Circ Ev, 6th Ed 39, 40 308, "if men have been convicted erroneously on circumstantial evidence so have they on direct testimony, but is that a reason for refusing to act on such testimony?" Greenleaf Ev 1 c 4, as to the disregard of circumstantial evidence by Mofussil juries see remarks in R v Elahi Bux B L R Sup Vol 481 482 (1866)

(4) Per Baron Legge in the trial of Mary Blandy, State Trials (1752)

(5) Phillips' Circ Ev xiv xvii

(6) Best Ev pp 70 416

(7) Cognate expressions occur in the following sections—68 104—111; 22, 50 101 101—4 101 102 165, 77, 91, 82 Whitley Stokes 853 Halmahand Ram v Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 407 (1894),

Disprov-
ed

A fact is said to be disproved⁽¹⁾ when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist

Not prov
ed

A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved

Part II (Of Proof)

Part III (Production and Effect of Evidence)

Ch VII (Of the Burden of Proof)

COMMENTARY.

Proof

Whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue or a relevant fact the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist, and it is obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact, ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. Ev

in strictness

he establish legal means to the satisfaction of the Court is effected by —(a) evidence or statements of witnesses, admissions or confessions of parties and production of documents⁽³⁾, (b) presumption⁽⁴⁾, (c) judicial notice⁽⁵⁾ (d) inspection,—which has been defined as the substitution of the eye for the ear in the reception of evidence⁽⁶⁾, as in the case of observation of the demeanour of witnesses⁽⁷⁾ local investigation⁽⁸⁾ or in the inspection of the instruments used for the commission of a crime⁽⁹⁾ The extent to which any individual material of evidence aids in the establishment of the general truth is called its probative force This force must be sufficient to induce the Court either (a) to believe in the existence of the fact sought to be proved, or (b) to consider its existence so probable that a prudent man ought to act upon the supposition that it exists Thus it has been recently held that in this country the proof necessary to establish a Will is not an absolute or conclusive one, but such a proof as would satisfy a reasonable man⁽¹⁰⁾ So if after examining a fair number of samples taken from different portions of a bulk, it is found that the samples are all of inferior quality, the probability that the bulk is of the same quality is so great that every prudent and if that is so inferior quality is

is not, whether it is possible that the testimony may be false, but whether there is sufficient

(1) The expression 'disproved' occurs only in ss 3 and 4 the expression not to be proved or not proved does not occur at all, Whitley Stokes 853

(2) Steph Introd 13 id Dig, 67, Art 58 Goodey Ev 3 4 judgment is to be based on facts duly proved r s 165 post burden of proof r ss 101—114

(3) See ss 3 5—55 58 59 60 (oral proof) 61—100 (documentary proof) 15* (former statement) 158 (statements under ss 32 33) R v Asiatosh Chukkerberty 4 C 492 (1878) v ante "Evidence

(4) Ss 4 79—90 117 114 post

(5) Ss 56 57 post

(6) Wharton Ev s 345 Phipson Ev

5th Ed 3 Best Ev 5 v ante, v s 60 post

(7) r Civ Pr Code O XVIII r 12 p 846 Cr Pr Code s 363 (v ante) as to demeanour of witnesses and discrepancies see remarks of Lord Langdale in Johnston v Todd 5 Beav, 601

(8) r Woodroffe Civ Pr Code O XVI r 9 p 1093 Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall 9 C 363 supra remarks in Lecl v Schcedor 43 L J Ch 232, Cr Pr Code s 293 (v ante)

(9) r s 60 post Cr Pr Code s 218

(10) Jarat Kumari Dass v Bissessar Dutt (1911) 39 C 245

(11) Bolsogomoff v Nahapiet Jute Co 6 C W N 495 at p 505 (1902)

probability of its truth, that is, whether the facts are shown by competent and satisfactory evidence "(1) When there is sufficient evidence of a fact, it is no objection to the proof of it that more evidence might have been adduced (2) The incidence of the burden of proof of a fact means that the person on whom it lies must prove the same. But the meaning of 'proof' in this section is not affected by the incidence of the burden of proof (3)

The expression "matters before it" includes matters which do not fall within the definition of "evidence" in the third section. Therefore, in determining what is evidence other than "evidence" in the phraseology of the Act, the definition of 'evidence' must be read with that of "proved" "It would appear, therefore, that the Legislature intentionally refrained from using the word 'evidence' in this definition, but used instead the words 'matters before it' For instance a fact may be orally admitted in Court. The admission would not come within the definition of the word 'evidence' as given in this Act, but still it is a matter which the Court before whom the admission was made would have to take into consideration in order to determine whether the particular fact was proved or not" (4) So the result of a local investigation under the Civil Procedure Code, must be taken into consideration by the Court though not "evidence" within the definition given by the Act (5) The judgment must be based on facts before the Court relevant and duly proved (6) upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence and the probabilities of the case (7) It must not be based on the personal knowledge of the Judge or on materials which are not in evidence or have been improperly admitted (8) The Judge may not, without giving evidence as a witness, import into a case his own knowledge of particular facts (9), and should decide the rights of the parties litigating secundum allegata et probata (according to what is averred and proved) (10) But a Judge is entitled to use his general knowledge and experience, as in determining the value of evidence, and to apply them to the facts in dispute (11) The Court should abstain from looking at what is not

* Matters
before the Courts

(1) Greenleaf on Ev 5th Ed, p 4, cited in Goodeve Ev 6 Probability, in the words of Locke is likelihood to be true—see Ram on Facts Ch VIII As to the probabilities of a case v Bunworree Lol v Maharajah Helnaroin 7 I A, 155, s c 4 W R 128, Sri Raghunadha v Sri Brojo 3 I A, 176, Mudhoo Soodun v Suroop Chunder, 4 M I A 441, s c, 7 W R 37, Lala Jho v Bibee Tullebmatool 21 W R 436, Meer Usdaalah v Beebe Imaman, 1 M I A, 44 45, s c, 5 W R 29, Mussamut Edun v Mussamut Bechn 11 W R, 345, Uman Parshad v Gandharp Singh, 15 C 20, 23, Best Ev §§ 24, 100, see also Wills Circ Ev 6th Ed, 7; Steph Intro 46 Glassford's Essay on the Principles of Evidence 105

(2) Ramalinga Pillai v Sadassu Pillai, 9 M I A 506, s c 1 W R (P C), 20 (1864), see Field Ev, 6th Ed, 22—23.

(3) Muhammad Yunus v Emp, 50 C, 318

(4) Per Mitter, J Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall 9 C 366 (1882), and see R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 492 supra

(5) Id For local inspection by Judge see Raikishori Ghose v Kumudini Kant Ghose 15 C L J, 138 (1912)

(6) S 165, post

(7) See remarks of Mitter, J, in Leela nund Singh v Bashceroomissa, 16 W R, 102 (1871), v Field, Ev, 6th Ed, p 41, see notes to s 16 post

(8) Durga Prasad Singh v Ram Doyal Chaudhuri, 38 C 153 (1910), per Woodroffe J

(9) Hurfurshad v Sheo Dyal 3 I A, 286 Mstham Bibi v Bashir Khan 11 M I A, 213, s c 7 W R, 27, Soaraj Kant v Khadeer Narain 22 W R 9, Kankha Chand v Ram Chandra 24 W R 81 (arbitrator), R v Ram Charan 24 W R Cr 28 (assessor), v s 294 Cr Pr Code, Rousseau v Pinto 7 W R, 190, see notes to s 21, post

(10) Eshan Chandra v Shama Charan 11 M I A 20, 6 W R, P C, 57, see Ramdayal Khan v Ajodhya Khan 2 C, 15, Joytara Dassee v Mohamed Mobaruck 8 C, 975, Ranga Clara v Jegna Dikshatur, 1 M, 526, Chooa Kara v Isa bin Khalifa 1 B, 213, Mukhoda Soon dury v Ram Churn 8 C 875, Athar Reza v Hydar Reza 16 C 291 Thirtha sam v Gafala, 13 M, 33 Best Ev, §§ 78 et seq, notes to s 165 post

(11) Lakshmayya v Sri Raja Veredaraya Apparao, 36 M, 168 (1913) See Best on Ev s 187, p 176 strictly evidence. In this connection may be noted the dicta of two English Judges. "In this case I have found myself upon two different occasions where it has come before me, in that difficulty into which a Judge will always bring himself when his curiosity or some better motive disposes him to know more of a cause than judicially be ought"(1) Again, "I shall decline to look at what is not regularly in evidence before the Court. The proceedings before the Commissioners are, in my opinion, no evidence of an act of bankruptcy. I purposely abstain in all these cases from looking at the proceedings, for my mind is so constituted that I cannot in forming my judgment on any matter before me separate the regular from the irregular evidence"(2)

Proof in Civil and Criminal Cases

Certain provisions of the Law of Evidence are peculiar to Criminal trials, e.g., the provisions relating to confessions(3) character(4), and the incompetency of parties as witnesses(5), but apart from these, the rules of evidence are the same in Civil and Criminal cases(6). But there is a strong and marked difference as to the effect of evidence in Civil and Criminal proceedings(7). 'The circumstances of the particular case' must determine whether a prudent man ought to act upon the supposition that the facts exist from which liability is to be inferred. What circumstances will amount to proof can never be matter of general definition(8). But with regard to the proof required in Civil and Criminal proceedings there is this difference that in the former a mere preponderance of probability is sufficient(9), but in the latter (owing to oth to the accused and a moral certainty as beyond all reasonable doubt'(10) 'It is the business of the prosecution to bring home guilt to the accused to the satisfaction of the minds of the jury, but the doubt to the benefit of which the accused is entitled must be such as rational thinking sensible doubts of a vacillating mind lters itself in a vain and idle honestly and conscientiously entertain (11) the same principle which requires a greater degree of proof

(1) Per The Lord Chancellor in Rich v Jockson note to 6 Ves 334

(2) Per Sir John Cross Ex parte Foster, 3 Deacon 178

(3) Ss 24—30 post

(4) Ss 53 54 post

(5) S 120 post and note

(6) R v Murphy, 8 C & P 297 306
R v Burdett 4 B & A 95 112 per Best
J Leach v Simson 5 M & W 309 312 per Park B Trial of William Stone
25 How St Tr 1314 Trial of Lord
Melville 29 id 764 Best Ev § 94

(7) Best Ev § 95

(8) Starkie Ev 865 differences in the proof required of the same fact in different cases very often arise out of the circumstances of the case, R v Madhub Chunder 21 W R Cr 13 17 (1874) See Arthur P Wills Treatise on the Law of Circumstantial Evidence (1896) Ch IV (quantity of evidence necessary to convict)

(9) Cooper v Slade 6 H L Cas 77 per Willes J Starkie Ev 818 and see remarks of Sir Lawrence Peel in R v Hedger Mutty Lall v Michael (1852) pp 132 133 R v Madhub Chunder post

(10) Per Parke B in R v Sterne cited in Best Ev p 76 v Starkie Ev 817 865 Taylor J v § 112, R v White 4 Fost & Fin 383 see same principle laid down in R v Madhub Chunder 21 W R Cr 13 19 20 (1874) R v Hedger supra 132 133 135 per Sir Lawrence Peel C J quoting and adopting Starkie Ev 817 818 R v Sorab Roy 5 W R Cr 28 31 (1866), R v Beharee 3 W R 23 25 (1865) [prisoner not to be convicted on surmise] It is a maxim of English law that it is better that ten guilty men should escape than that one innocent man should suffer per Holroyd J. in Sarah Hobson's case 1 Lewin C C 261 see also Best Ev §§ 49 440

(11) R v Castor Vol II 816 per Cockburn C J If said L C Baron Pollock to the jury in R v Manning and Wife (cited in Wills Circ Ev 6th Ed 318 319) the conclusion to which you are conducted be that there is that degree of certainty in the case that you would act upon it in your own grave and important concerns that is the degree of certainty which the law requires and which will justify you in returning a verdict of guilty. See also the other cases cited in Wills ib and the R v Madhub

demands a strict adherence to the formalities prescribed by the law of procedure. For "in a Criminal proceeding the question is not alone whether substantial justice has been done, but whether justice has been done according to law. All proceedings in panam are, it need scarcely be observed, strictissimi juris" (1) Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law, and if they are substantially bad, the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner (2) Sir Elijah Impey in his charge to the jury in Nuncomar's Case said "You will consider on which side the weight of evidence lies, always remembering that, in Criminal, and more especially in capital, cases you must not weigh the evidence in golden scales, there ought to be a great difference of weight in the opposite scale before you find the prisoner guilty. In cases of property the stake on each side is equal and the least preponderance of evidence ought to turn the scale, but in a capital case, as there can be nothing of equal value to life, you should be thoroughly convinced that there does not remain a possibility of innocence before you give a verdict against the prisoner (3) Even as between Criminal cases a distinction has been declared to exist. Thus "the fouler the crime is, the clearer and plainer ought the proof of it to be (4) 'As the crime is enormous, and dreadfully enormous, indeed it is, so the proof ought to be clear (5) But the more atrocious the more flagrant the crime is, the more clearly and satisfactorily you will expect that it should be made out to you' (6) "The greater the crime, the stronger is the proof required for the purpose of conviction" (7) These and the like dicta, however, in so far as they may be said to imply that the rules of evidence may be modified according to the enormity of the crime or the weightiness of the consequences which attach to conviction (for if they may be made more stringent in one direction, it is said they may be relaxed in another) have been severely criticised (8) To quote the language of L. C. J. Dallas in the Ex parte of a prisoner of which the latter part as to the effect of the dicta, e of the against Every Criminal charge involves two things first, that a crime has been committed, and secondly, that the accused is the author of it. If a Criminal fact is ascertained—an actual corpus delicti established—presumptive proof is admissible to fix the criminal (10) A restriction has been said to exist against the use of circumstantial evidence in the case of the well known rule that the corpus delicti (that is, the fact that a crime has been committed) should not in general be inferred from other facts, but should be proved independently. But it is not necessary (and indeed in the case of some crimes it would be

Chunder supra 20 R v Gokool Kahar, 25 W R Cr 36 (1876) Weston v Peary Mohan Dass 40 C 898 (1913)

(1) Per Cockburn C J in Martin v Mackonochie L R 3 Q B D 730 775 (1892) R v Kola Lalang 8 C 214 (1881) R v Bhista Bin 1 B 308 (1876) Jetha Parkha v Ram Chandra 16 B 693 694 (1892) R v Bholanath 2 C 23—27 (1876) 25 W R Cr 57, but see also ss 529—538 Cr Pr Code

(2) R v Bholanath 2 C 23 (1876) R v Allen 6 C 83 (1880), Hossein Buksh v R 6 C 96 99 see also notes to ss 5 121 post

(3) The story of Nuncomar and the impeachment of Sir Elijah Impey by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen Vol 1 p 168 See also Lord Cowper's speech on the

Bishop of Rochester Trial Phillips Circ Ev xxvii

(4) Trial of Lord Cornwallis 7 State Trials 149

(5) Trial of R T Crossfield 26 State Trials 218

(6) Trial of Mary Blandy 18 State Trials 1186

(7) Sarah Hobson's case per Holroyd J 1 Lewin's Crown cases 261 See also R v Jigs 33 St Tr 1135 and Madeleine Smitt's case cited in Wills Circ. Ev. 6th Ed 319—322

(8) Wills Circ Ev 6th Ed 319—322 (9) R v Ings 33 St Tr., 1135

(10) R v Ahmed Ally 11 W R Cr 75 79 (1869) R v Ram Rachea, 4 W R Cr 27 (1865)

impossible) to prove the corpus delicti by direct and positive evidence. If the circumstances are such as to make it morally certain that a crime has been committed, the inference that it was committed, is as safe as any other inference. More accurately stated, the rule is that no person shall be required to answer or be involved in the consequences of guilt without satisfactory proof of the corpus delicti either by direct evidence or by cogent and irresistible grounds of presumption (1).

(a) The onus of proving everything essential to the establishment of the charge against the accused lies upon the prosecutor. Every man is to be regarded as legally innocent until the contrary be proved. Criminality is therefore never to be presumed (2). (b) The evidence must be such as to exclude, to a moral certainty, every reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused (3). If there be any reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused, he is entitled as of right to be acquitted (4). The above hold universally, but there are two others peculiarly applicable when the proof is presumptive (v ante). (c) There must be clear and unequivocal proof of the corpus delicti (v ante) (5). (d) In order to justify the inference of guilt, the inculcating facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused, and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt (6). While the concurrence of though the relative effect of which are the innocence as with the guilt of an accused person, cannot have any probative force. The principle is a fundamental one and of universal application in cases dependent

(1) Steph Introd 66, Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 323—411, Arthur Wills Circ Ev (1896), Part V (Proof of the corpus delicti) and cases there cited, Norton, Ev, 74, Cunningham, Ev, 17, Best Ev, § 441, et seq, Powell, Ev, 72. See Evans v Evans, 1 Hagg, C R, 35 105, the Courts may act upon presumptions as well in Criminal as in Civil cases. Burdett's case 4 B & Ald 95. So in cases of adultery it is not necessary to prove the fact by direct evidence, Lovedon v Lovedon, 2 Hagg, C R, 1, Williams v Williams 1 ib, 299, followed in Allen v Allen, L R P D (1894), 248 252, even in a criminal case, R v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R Cr 13 16 17 (1874). See provision of Cr Pr Code s 174, and also Bengal Reg XX of 1817 s 14, and generally as to the corpus delicti, R v Petta Gazi, 4 W R Cr, 19 (1865), R v Ram Rucka ib, 29 (1865), R v Poorosullah Sikhdar, 7 W R, Cr 14 (1867), R v Budder-uddeen 11 W R, Cr, 20 (1869), R v Ahmad Ally, supra, R v Dredge, 1 Cox, C C, 235, Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C, 642 (1885), R v Behari Singh 7 W R Cr 3 4 (1867), in which case the alleged dead man re-appeared upon the scene at the cutcherry.

(2) Lawson's Presumptive Ev, 93, 432, Wharton Cr Ev §§ 319, 717, Best Ev § 440, Greenleaf, Ev I, 34, Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed, 305, Powell Ev, 9th Ed 403. Best Treatise on Presumptions of law and fact (1844), see ss 101, 102 103, 105, 106 114, post. As to the meaning of the presumption of innocence in Criminal cases see Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on evidence (1898) 551. See also R v Ahmad Ally 11 W R, Cr, 25 27 (1869), where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt. Innocence must be presumed, and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law, R v Nobokisto Ghose, 8 W R, Cr, 87 (1867), R v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R Cr, 13 20 (1874) [the accused is entitled to the benefit of the legal presumption in favour of innocence, the burden of proof is undoubtedly upon the prosecutor]. The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Boustobi, 22 C, 174 (1894), Panchu Das v R (1907) 34 C 698, 11 C W N, 666.

(3) Best Ev ib and v ante.

(4) Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed 315, Best, Ev, § 440 and v ante, Loht Mohun v R, 22 C, 323 (1894), R v Madhub Chunder, supra, 20, R v Panchanun, 5 W R Cr, 97 (1866).

(5) Best Ev, §§ 440 441, Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed 323—411.

(6) Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed, 311, Best Ev, § 451, rule approved in Balmakund v Ghansam, 22 C, 409 (1894), R v Ishri (1907) 29 A 46.

on circumstantial evidence that in order to justify the inference of guilt the incriminating facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt (1) It is not, however, correct to say that before circumstantial evidence can be made the basis of a safe inference of guilt it must exclude every possible hypothesis except that of the guilt of the accused (2) But if the possibility is remote and one which he is able to explain the absence of explanation may be taken into account (3)

"Even where the appeal turns on a question of fact, the Court of Appeal has to bear in mind that its duty is to re hear the case, and the Court must re consider the materials before the Judge with such other materials as it may have decided to admit. The Court must then make up its own mind, not disregarding the judgment appealed from, but carefully weighing and considering it, but not shrinking from overruling it, if, on full consideration, the Court comes to the conclusion that the judgment is wrong. When, as often happens, much turns on the relative credibility of witnesses, who have been examined and cross examined before the Judge, the Court is sensible of the great advantage he has had in seeing and hearing them. It is often very difficult to estimate correctly the relative credibility of witnesses from written depositions, and when the question arises which witness is to be believed rather than another, and that question turns on manner and demeanour, the Court of Appeal always is and must be guided by the impression made on the Judge who saw the witnesses. But there may obviously be other circumstances, quite apart from manner and demeanour, which may show whether a statement is credible or not, and these circumstances may warrant the Court in differing from the Judge even on questions of fact turning on the credibility of witnesses whom the Court has not seen" (4) But it has been laid down in a recent decision of the Privy Council that it is always difficult for Judges who have not seen or heard the witnesses to refuse to adopt the conclusions of those who have done so, and that the difficulty is all the greater when the latter have formed an opinion adverse to the witnesses in question (5) In a recent case in the Allahabad High Court it was said that as a general rule a trial Judge importance to the demeanour this country many trials are written some time after the evidence is heard (6)

"The sound rule to apply in trying a Criminal appeal where questions of fact are in issue is to consider whether the conviction is right, and in this respect Court must be at the find in before him

(1) Hurjee Mull v Iman Ali Sircar 8 C W N 278 (1904) 1 All L J 28
Emp v Jagat Ram 19 Cr L J 987

(2) Balnakund v Ghansam supra
 'the hypothesis of the prisoners guilt should flow naturally from the facts proved and be consistent with them all'
R v Belarce 3 W R Cr 23 26 (1865)

(3) Smith v Emp 19 Cr L J 189
 see S 106 post

(4) Per Barnes J in Coghlan v Cum berland (1898) 1 Ch, 705 Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co v Motilal Shilal 42 I A., 110 (1915)

(5) Sumnugaraja Mudaliar v Man kka Mudaliar P C (1909) 32 M 400 and Lundad Ahmad v Pateshri Fortap

Narain Singh P C (1909) 32 A 241

(6) Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sattar 39 A 476 (1917)

(7) Protap Chunder v R 11 C L R. 25 (1882) per White J referred to in Pahimuddi v R 20 C 353 357 (1892), but see R v Ramlochan 18 W R Cr., 15 (1872). The case of Protap Chunder v R 11 C L R 25 (1882) was followed in Milan Khan v Sagai Bepari 23 C 347 349 (1895) Laljee Mahomed v Gudar, 43 C 838 (1914). The Court is bound in forming its conclusions as to the credibility of the witnesses to attach great weight to the opinion which the Judge who heard them has expressed upon that matter R v Madhub Chunder 21 W R Cr., 13 (1874)

more as if it was a special appeal than a regular appeal, and because he did not find sufficient on the record to convince him that the Magistrate was entirely wrong, he therefore affirmed his decision. But the Judge was in the situation of an Appellate Court in which the matter came before him on regular appeal, and he ought to have judged as best he could, from the materials put before him in the Magistrate's written judgment, whether or not as a matter of fact the prisoners had committed the offence of which they had been convicted. If the evidence which came before him—whatever its shape—was not sufficient to reasonably satisfy him that the prisoners had been rightly convicted, he ought to have acquitted them' (1). An Appellate Court is bound precisely in the same way as the Court of first instance to test evidence extrinsically as well as intrinsically (2).

While there is a prerogative right in the Crown to review the course of Justice in Criminal Cases the Privy Council will only exercise it when injustice of a serious or substantial character has occurred and will not intervene merely because some evidence has been improperly admitted when without such evidence, the same conclusion might have been properly reached (3).

As for the admissibility of additional evidence on appeal under O. XLI, r 27, of the Civil Procedure Code, it has been held that the legitimate occasion for this arises only when on examining the evidence as it stands some defect becomes apparent (4) and that the refusal by an Appellate Court to admit such additional evidence in the exercise of its discretion will not afford ground for a Second Appeal (5) and that a defendant who did not object at the time cannot object on the ground that the admission of such evidence is not in accordance with O. XLI, r 27 (6), and that if it impeaches testimony it should not be admitted without giving the impeached witness an opportunity to contradict it (7). As for the 'strict proof' required in Review under section 626 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (now represented by O. XLVII, r 4), it has been recently held by the Calcutta High Court that the word 'strict' here refers to the formality and not to the sufficiency of the evidence (8), and it was said that strict proof means anything which may serve directly or indirectly to convince a Court and has been brought before it in strict compliance with this Act.

4. Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume (9) a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved (10), or may call for proof of it.

(1) Kheraj Mullah v Janab Mullah 20 W R Cr 13 (1873) per Phear J referred to in Rahimuddin v R, supra see also remarks of Mitter J in the petition of Goomanee 17 W R Cr 59 (1872) Shitappa v Shidlingappa 15 B 11 (1891), Kanchan Mallik v Emperor 42 C. 374 (1915).

(2) In re Goomanee 17 W R Cr 59 (1872).

(3) Dal Singh v King Emperor 44 I A 137 (1917) see Chifard v King Emperor 19 C L J 107 (1914) In re Dillet 12 App Cas 459 (1887).

(4) Krishna a Chariar v Narasimha Chariar (1908) 31 M 114 Daji Babaji v Sakharam Krishna 38 B 665 (1914) Jeremiah v Vas 36 M 457 (1911) Garden Reach Spinning Co v Secretary of State 42 C 675 (1915).

(5) Durga Prasad v Jas Narain (1911)

33 A 379 Ram Piar v Kallu (1910) 23 A 121.

(6) Jagannath Pershad v Hanuman Pershad (1909) 36 C 833 and on this question of admissibility of additional evidence on appeal see also Kessowji Issur v Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co P C (1907) 31 B 381, and 34 I A, 115, and Secretary of State for India v Manjeshwar Krishnaya (1908) 31 M 415.

(7) Jagrani Koer v Kuar Durga Prasad 41 I A 76 (1913) 36 A 93.

(8) Ahid Khondkar v Mahendra Lal De 42 C 831 (1915) Jenkins C. J and Woodroffe J.

(9) Shafiqunnissa v Shaban Ali 26 A 581 586 (1904).

(10) That which rebuts or tends to rebut a presumption which is not declared to be conclusive is relevant and may be proved v s 9 post.

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact it shall regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it ss 86, 87, 88 90, 114 ('May presume') ss 79, 80, 81 82, 83, 84 85, 89 105

('Shall presume')

ss 112 113 ("Conclusive proof") s 41 (Judgment when conclusive proof)

COMMENTARY

Inferences or presumptions are always necessarily drawn wherever the testimony is circumstantial, but presumptions, specially so called, are based upon that wide experience of a connection existing between the facta probantia and the factum probandum which warrants a presumption from the one to the other

Presumptions according to fact are arbitrary inferences from particular facts and may be either conclusive or rebuttable. They are founded either on the connection usually found by experience to exist between certain things, or on natural law, or on the principles of conclusive presumptions of law are requisite for the support of any proposition to be overcome by any proof that the fact is otherwise. They consist chiefly of those cases in which the long experienced connection just alluded to has been found so general and uniform as to render it expedient for the common good that this connection should be taken to be inseparable and universal. They have been adopted by common consent, from motives of public policy, for the sake of greater certainty, and the promotion of peace and quiet in the community, and therefore it is that all corroborating evidence is dispensed with and all opposing evidence is forbidden⁽²⁾. Rebuttable presumptions of law are as well as the former, "the result of the general experience of a connection found to be the common to this class is not to exist in every case, a jury, infers the one fact from the proved existence of the other in the absence of all opposing evidence. In this mode the law defines the nature and the amount of the evidence which is sufficient to establish a prima facie case and to throw the burden of proof upon the other party, and if no opposing evidence is offered the jury are bound to find in favour of the presumption⁽³⁾. A contrary verdict might be set aside as being against evidence. The rules in this class of presumptions,

(1) Norton Ev 97 see Best Ev 11 299 42 43 296 et seq pp 58 281, and Walls Circ Ev 6th Ed 22 Powell Ev 9th Ed 385—387 See s 114 post

(2) Taylor Ev § 71 Best Ev p 58 § 304 the Evidence Act notices two cases of conclusive presumptions (ss 112 113) It is a question however whether the presumption mentioned in s 112 is not after all a rebuttable presumption for the section permits of evidence being offered of non access (Norton Ev, 97) and s 113 is ultra vires (Whitley Stokes 835) see also Field Ev 6th Ed 362, Steph Introd 174 and notes to ss. 112-3 post and proceedings of the Legislative Council 12th March 1872 pp 234 235 of the supplement to the Gazette of India 70th March 1872

(3) Ch VII of the Act deals with this subject (of presumptions) as follows — First it lays down the general principles as in the former, have been adopted by common consent from motives of public policy, not as in the former class, to forbid with it till some proof is given. Thus, as men do not generally violate the Penal Code, the law presumes every man innocent; but some men do transgress it; and therefore evidence is received to repel this presumption "(1)

Of fact

Presumptions of fact or natural presumptions are inferences which the mind naturally and logically draws from given facts without the help of legal direction (2) They are always rebuttable They can hardly be said with propriety to belong to that branch of the law which treats of presumptive evidence (3) "They are in truth but mere arguments of which the major premiss is not a rule of law, they belong equally to any and every subject-matter, and are to be judged by the common and received tests of the truth of propositions and the validity of arguments (4) They depend upon their own natural efficacy in generating belief, as derived from those connections which are shown by experience, irrespective of any legal relations They differ from presumptions of law in this essential respect, that while those are reduced to fixed rules, and constitute a branch of the system of jurisprudence, these merely natural presumptions are derived wholly and directly from the circumstances of the particular case by means of the common experience of mankind, without the aid or control of any rules of law Such, for example, is the inference of guilt drawn from the discovery of a broken knife in the pocket of the prisoner, the other part of the blade being found sticking in the window of a house which, by means of such an instrument, had been burglariously entered These presumptions remain the same under whatever law the legal effect of the facts, when found, is to be decided "(5) So again it has been held that when from a certain set of facts a Court infers a lost grant the process is one of inference of fact and not of legal conclusion (6) Presumptions of law are based, like which regulate the burden of proof (ss 101—106) It then enumerates the cases in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases not by the relation of the parties to the cause but by presumptions (ss 107—111) Such presumptions affect the ordinary rule as to the burden of proof that he who affirms must prove He who affirms that a man is dead must usually prove it, but if he shows that the man has not been heard of for seven years he shifts the burden of proof upon his adversary, who must displace the presumption which has arisen Steph Introd, 173, 174 see Norton, Ev, 97 and proceedings of the Legislative Council cited ante

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 109, 110 Best, Ev, § 314 See observations as to the treatment of rebuttable presumptions by this Act in Whitley Stokes 835

(2) Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 30 "Such inferences are formed not by virtue of any law but by the spontaneous operation of the reasoning faculty all that the law does for them is to recognise the propriety of their being so drawn if the Judge think fit" Cunningham, Ev, 84, Wills' Circ. Ev 6th Ed 29—30

(3) Taylor Ev, § 214

(4) Sir James Fitzjames Stephen divides presumptions of fact in English law into two classes —(1) Bare presumptions of fact which are nothing but arguments to which the Court attaches whatever value it pleases, (2) certain presumptions which though liable to be rebutted, are regarded as being something more than mere maxims though it is by no means easy to say how much more An instance of such a presumption is to be found in the rule that recent possession of stolen goods unexplained raises a presumption that the possessor is either the thief or a receiver, Steph Introd, 174 In this Act presumptions of fact partake of the character of class (1), vide post, see Taylor Ev, § 111

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 214, see Wills' Circ Ev passim see also other instances of this class of presumptions in s 114, post, and Best, Ev, § 315 English text writers also deal with mixed presumptions or presumptions of mixed law and fact see Norton, Ev, 97, Best Ev, § 324

(6) Kashinath Bhattacharjee v Murari Chandra Pal, 31 C L J, 501 where it is stated that the gist of the principle upon which a lost grant is presumed, is that the state of affairs is otherwise unexplained

The abovementioned section appears to point at these two classes of presumptions, those of fact and those of law. The first clause points at presumptions of fact, the second at rebuttable presumptions of law, and the third, at conclusive presumptions of law (2) As has been already mentioned, presumptions of fact are really in the nature of mere arguments or maxims. The sections which deal with such presumptions have been noted above (3) Of these sections, s. 114 is perhaps the most important "The terms of this section are such as to reduce to their proper position of mere maxims which are to be applied to facts by the Courts in their discretion, a large number of presumptions, to which English law gives, to a greater or less extent an artificial value Nine of the most important of them are given by way of illustration" (4) Of course others besides those specified may be, and are in fact frequently, drawn (5) In respect of such presumptions Courts of Justice are enjoined to use common sense and experience in judging of the effect of particular facts and are subject to no technical rules whatever This section renders it a judicial discretion to decide in each case whether the fact which under section 114 may be presumed has been proved by virtue of that presumption Circumstances may, however, induce the Court to call for confirmatory evidence (6) Sections 79-85, 89 and 105 of the Evidence Act, 1872, deal with presumptions of fact, and sections 106-113 deal with presumptions of law.

English text-writers have, it has been said, in treating of the subject of presumptions, engrafted upon the Law of Evidence many subjects which in no way belong to it, and numerous so-called presumptions are merely portions of the substantive law under another form (10) "All notice of certain general legal principles, which are sometimes called presumptions but which in reality belong rather to the Substantive Law than to the Law of Evidence, was design- edly omitted" (from this Act) "not because the truth of those principles was denied, but because it was not considered that the Evidence Act was the proper place for them. The most important of these is the presumption, as it is sometimes called, that every one knows the law. The principle is far more correctly stated in the maxim, that ignorance of the law does not excuse a breach of it, which is one of the fundamental principles of Criminal Law." Of such a kind also is the presumption that every one must be held to intend the natural consequences of his own acts (1) The like presumptions and others of a similar character belong to the province of Substantive Law, and have been dealt with by Statute (2), or have gradually come to be recognised as binding rules through the course of judicial decision (3) In this sense the subject of presumptions is co-extensive with the entire field of law, and each particular presumption must in each case be sought under the particular head of Law to which it refers (4)

(10) Sir J Fitzjames Stephen, Proceedings of the Legislative Council, ante

Inference.

This Chapter, as originally drafted, contains the following section—“ Courts shall form their opinions on matters of fact by drawing inferences .
 (a) from the evidence produced in the existence of the facts alleged , (b) from facts proved or disproved to facts not proved ; (c) from the absence of witnesses who, or of evidence which, might have been produced (5) , (d) from the admissions, statements, conduct and demeanour of the parties and witnesses, and generally from the circumstances of the cases ” “ The Select Committee decided to omit this section ‘ as being suitable rather for a treatise than an Act ’ The object of its introduction was originally stated to be to point out and put distinctly upon record the fact that to infer and not merely to accept or register evidence is in all cases the duty of the Court ” (6) Further, as has been already observed, a distinction must be drawn between the general act of inferring facts in issue from relevant facts, and those inferences which, for the reasons above given, are specifically known as presumptions (7) (v ante)

(1) Steph Introd 175, Powell, Ev 82

(2) See for example Act V of 1869 Art 114 Act VIII of 1911 (Indian Articles of War, Presumptive Evidence of Desertion) Act XXI of 1866 s 21 (Native Converts Marriages, Presumptive Evidence of Marriage), Act IV of 1872, ss 10, 11 (Punjab Laws, Presumption as to existence of right of pre-emption) and subsequent repealing and amending Acts up to Acts IV and XVII of 1914 Act I of 1877 s 12 repealed and amended in parts by various Acts up to Act VII of 1912 (Specific Relief, Presumption that breach of contract to transfer immovable property cannot be adequately relieved by compensation in money) For an instance of the conversion of presumptions of the substantive law into statutory rules see s 38, Act X of 1865 (Succession Act as amended by Act XVIII of 1919) In England the rules as to substantial or cumulative gifts are treated as rules of presumption, the abovementioned section deals with these rules without any reference to a presumption see G S Henderson The Law of Wills in India p 192

(3) See notes to s 114 post

(4) See Cunningham, Ev, 301—303

(5) See s 114 ill (g), post

(6) Cited in Field Ev 6th Ed, 63

(7) As to the ambiguity attending the use of the term “presumption,” see Best, Ev p 306 ib § 299

CHAPTER II

OF THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS

As with many other questions connected with the Law of Evidence, the theory of relevancy has been the subject of varying opinions. Relevancy has been said by the framer of the Act to mean the connection of events as cause and effect (1) But this theory as was admitted afterwards, "was expressed too widely in certain parts, and not widely enough in others" (2) For the former definition the following was substituted "The word 'relevant' means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that, according to the common course of events, one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or non-existence of the other" (3) But this is "relevancy" in a logical sense. Legal relevancy, which is essential to admissible evidence, requires a higher standard of evidentiary force. It includes logical relevancy, and for reasons of particular convenience, demands a close connection between the fact to be proved and the fact offered to prove it. All evidence must be logically relevant—that is absolutely essential. The fact, however, that it is logically relevant does not insure admissibility, it must also be legally relevant, a fact which 'in connection with other facts renders probable the existence of a fact in issue,' may still be rejected, if in the opinion of the Judge and under the circumstances of the case it be considered essentially misleading or remote" (4) The tendency, however, of modern jurisprudence is to admit most evidence logically relevant. Logical relevancy may not thus be assumed to be the sole test of admissibility, relevancy and admissibility are not co extensive and interchangeable terms. "Public policy, considerations of fairness the particular necessity for reaching speedy decisions,—these and similar reasons cause constantly the necessary rejection of much evidence entirely relevant. All admissible evidence is relevant, but all relevant evidence is not admissible" (5) The question of relevancy strictly so called presents as a rule, little difficulty. Any educated person, whether lay or legal, can say whether a circumstance has probative force, which is the meaning of relevancy. This is an affair of logic and not of law. It is, otherwise, with the question of admissibility which must be determined according to rules of law. A fact may be relevant, but it may be excluded on grounds of policy as already noted. A communication to a legal adviser may be in the highest degree relevant, but other considerations exclude its reception as a privileged communication. Again a fact may be relevant but the proof of it may be such as is not allowed

(1) Steph Introd 68 see generally as to Relevancy Introduction

(2) Steph Dig p 158 see Whitley Stokes 820 851 note

(3) Steph Dig, Art 1 'I have substituted the present definition for it not because I think it (the former definition) wrong but because I think it gives rather the principle on which the rule depends than a convenient practical rule' ib p 158

(4) Best Ev p 251

(5) ib 25, thus a communication to a legal adviser or a criminal confession improperly obtained may undoubtedly be relevant in a high degree. They are none the less inadmissible ib. See also Taylor Ev §§ 29—316 Powell Ev, 52—58 Steph Introd Steph Dig, Arts 1 and 2 and Appendix Note 1. The Theory of Relevancy by G C Whitworth Bombay 1851

as in the case of the "hearsay" rule (1) In this Chapter the word "relevancy" seems to mean the having some probative force In the title to this Part it appears to denote admissibility (2) However, the considerations mentioned go merely to the theory of relevancy and to the construction of, or definitions given in, the Act as based on that theory For practical purposes one fact is relevant to another and admissible (3) when the one is connected with the other in any of the various ways (4) the Act, is fully specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings They are designedly each other Thus a motive consequent conduct influenced under s 11 would, in most cases, be relevant under other sections (5) Not only may the acts and words of a party himself, if relevant, be given in evidence, but when the party is, by the substantive law, rendered liable, Civilly or Criminally, for the acts, contracts, or representations of third persons, and such facts are material, they may generally be given in evidence for or against him as if they were his own (6) The chief instances of such relationships (which must in the first instance be proved aliunde to the satisfaction of the Courts) are agency (7), partnership (8)

(1) As to the meaning of the expression 'hearsay is no evidence' see Steph Dig p 180 Arts 14 and 62 and notes to s 60 post

(2) Whitley Stokes 849

(3) Lala Lohm v Sajed Hoider, 3 C W N 261 (1899). ['Relevant' in this Act means admissible]

(4) S 3 ante, s 5—55 post

(5) Steph Introd 72 see criticism of these sections in Whitley Stokes p 819, "two of these sections are so drawn (ss 7 11) as to permit evidence of matter wholly irrelevant, & see notes to s 11 post but see also Steph Introd 160 and Best Ev. 522 In the sections mentioned in the text the subject of circumstantial evidence is distributed into its elements First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March 1871

(6) See Phipson Ev 5th Ed 74

(7) In Civil cases the acts and representations of the agent will bind the principal if made within the scope of the authority conferred upon him or subsequently ratified by the principal (Act 12 of 1872 ss 182—189 196 226) as to implied authority see In re Cunningham 36 Ch D 532 Walleen v Fenwick (1893), 1 Q B 346, and generally as to agency Contract Act, ss 182—238, as to responsibility in a tort and the doctrine of respondent superior see remarks of Jessel M R in Smith v Keal 9 Q B D 340 351 and judgment of Willes J in Barnack v English Joint Stock Bank, L R, 2 Ex 259 265 266, Thorne v Heard (1894), 1 Ch 599 Malcolm Brunner & Co v Waterhouse & Sons (1903) Times L R, v 24 p 855 a party is not in general criminally responsible for the acts of his agents and servants unless such acts have been directed or assented to by him Cooper v Slade 6 H L C 746 793 794 per Lord Vensleydale Lord Melville's case 29 How St. Tr 764 The Queen's case 2 B & B 306 367 Cheshire v Bailey (1905) 1 K B 237 See, generally Taylor Ev 115 602—605 905—906, Best Ev § 532 Phipson Ev, 5th Ed. 74 Powell Ev 9th Ed 421, Evans Principal and Agent 123—200 and passim 2nd Ed Beven on Negligence 271—312 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed. 46 Roscoe N P Ev 69—71 T A Pearson The Law of Agency in British India 1890 Bowstead Dg of Agency Arts 79—87 103 104 Norton Ev, 144 as to admissions by agents see ss 17, 18 post and as to notice given to agents s 14 post The Madras High Court has held in several cases that an acknowledgment or payment by one partner does not bind others in absence of proof that it was authorized by them. See Valessubramania Pillai v Ramanathan Chettier 32 M 421 (1909), Shank Mohideen v Official Assignee 35 M, 142 (1912) K R V Firm v Seetharamaswami 37 M, 146 (1914) But see Shen muganatha Chettier v Srinivasa Ayyar 40 M 722 (1917) following Karmeli Abdulla v Karimji Jitaji P C 39 B, 261 (1915)

(8) The liability of co partners for the act of their partner is established on the ground of agency each partner being the agent for the others for all purposes within the scope of the joint business, Re Cunningham supra Lindley on Partnership 5th Ed. 80—90 124—263 Pollock on Partnership, Taylor Ev., §§ 743—752, the liability of Companies for the acts and representations of their directors or other agents(1) and conspiracy in tort or crime (2)

The following sections have been considered by the author and others to admit, they are the most original part of the law that facts may be proved whereas the English law merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved. In the opinion of many others the English law proceeds upon sounder and more practical grounds. While importance is claimed for these sections in that they are said to make the whole body of law to which they belong easily intelligible, yet such importance cannot, owing to the provisions of ss 165 and 167, cause an undue weight to be attached to their strict applications when a failure to so strictly apply them has not been the cause of an improper decision of the case. For the improper admission or rejection of evidence in Indian Courts has no effect at all unless the Court thinks that the

5 Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the existence or non existence of every fact in issue and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others

Evidence may be given of facts in issue and relevant facts

Explanation—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death

At A's trial the following facts are in issue—

A's beating B with the club,

A's causing B's death by such beating

A's intention to cause B's death

(b) A suitor does not bring with him and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure

Principles—The reception in evidence of facts other than those mentioned in the section tends to distract the attention of the tribunal and to waste its time. Frustra probatur quod probatum non relevat. The laws of evidence

Roscoe N P Ev 71 Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act) ss 239—266 as to admissions by partners see ss 17 18 post

(1) As to the general principles of the agency as applied to Companies see Lindley on Company Law 5th Ed 143—181 Companies can only be bound by the acts of the real or ostensible agents (b 18) liability for torts (b 208 see also Act VII of 1913 (as amended by Acts V and VI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920) and a Companies Companies on the same by L P Russell (1888) a Company is not liable for acts done ultra vires Russell 12 Brice on ultra vires as to admissions by the officers of a Company see ss 1 18 post

(2) See s 10 post and notes thereto (3) Steph Introd 77 73 alter in England

(4) Id 77 73 167 s 165 post Best, E 86 as to indicative evidence (b § 91 are framed with a view to a trial at Nisi Prius, and a proceeding at Nisi Prius ought to be restrained within practical limits (1)

- s 3 ('Evidence') ss 136, 162 (Judge to decide as to admissibility)
 s 3 ('Fact in issue') ss 145 146, 148, 153, 155, 163 (Relevancy of questions to witness)
 s 3 ('Fact') ss 165 (Judge's power to put questions)
 s 3 ('Relevant') ss 5 55 ('Of the Relevancy of facts') ss 60 (Oral Evidence must be direct) ss 64 165, Prov 2 (Proof of document by primary evidence) s 167 (Improper admission or rejection of evidence)

Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civil Procedure Code, (2nd Ed.) O XIII, pp 805 812, Criminal Procedure Code, s 298, Civil Procedure Code, O XVIII, pp 842 849, Criminal Procedure Code, s 359, Steph Introd, 12, Chs II, III, Steph. Dig, Art 2, Best, Ev, § 201, p 251 Taylor Ev, § 316 Wigmore, Ev §§ 9 21

COMMENTARY.

'And of no others'

This section therefore excludes everything which is not covered by the purview of some other section which follows in the Statute (2) All evidence tendered must therefore be shown to be admissible under this or some one or other of the following sections (3), or the provisions of some other Statute saved by (4), or enacted subsequent to this Act These words in conjunction with the language of other portions of the Act further tend to show that the Court should, of itself, and irrespective of the parties, take objection to evidence tendered before it which is not admissible under the provisions of this Act (5) This section must be read as subject to the restrictions of Part II as to proof, and Part III as to the production of evidence Thus the terms of a contract between the parties might be relevant, but oral evidence of it will be excluded if those terms have been reduced to writing (6) Though a document may not be legal evidence of a fact within the provisions of this Act it may yet be a document which the parties by their contract have made proof of that fact (7)

Admissibility

All questions as to the admissibility of evidence are for the Judge (8) Where a Judge is in doubt as to the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence, he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of

(1) Best, Ev. 201 R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R 90 91 (1874) ante, Taylor Ev § 316 Managers of the Metropolitan Asylum District v Hill 47 L T (H L) 29, 34 per Lord O'Hagan, see also judgment of Lord Watson as to the distinction between evidence having a direct relation to the principal question in dispute and evidence relating to collateral facts which will if established tend to elucidate that question, and ante Introduction 'Facts which are not themselves in issue may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue and these may be called collateral facts' First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March 1871

(2) The Collector of Garakhpur v Palakdhari 12 A (1899), at p 43, Emp v Pancho Das, 47 C, 671 (F B), per Mookerjee J s c 24 C W N 501, but the principle of exclusion should not be so applied as to exclude matter which may be essential for the ascertainment of truth R v Abdullah 7 A 40 (1885), and see observations on the modern rule as to admissibility in Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society L R 4 C P D, 109 But the question in India is whether the Act permits the particular evidence If it is essential in any case for the ascertainment of the truth probably it does But the question again is does the Act allow the evidence sought to be produced

(3) Lekhraj Kuar v Mohpal Singh 7 I A 70 ante, Abinash Chandra v Paresk Nath 9 C W N 402 406 (1904)

(4) S 2 ante

(5) Field Ev 6th Ed, 482, Whitley Stokes 854 See following paragraphs

(6) S 91, post, and cf ss 92 115—117, 121—127

(7) Oriental Government Security Life Assurance Company, Ltd v Sarat Chandra 20 B 103 (1895)

(8) S 136 post

non admissibility (1) "Under the Evidence Act admissibility is the rule, and exclusion the exception, and circumstances which under other systems might operate to exclude are, under the Act, to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted" (2) "The object of a trial in every case is to ascertain the truth in respect of the charge made. For this purpose it is necessary that the Court should be in a position to estimate, at its true worth, the evidence given by each witness, and nothing that is calculated, unless, for reasons of public policy, to be excluded." (3) "The Judges' apprehension cannot create a rule for the future, and does not consider evidence given on another occasion and between other parties appropriate and valuable, for the decision of the case which is before it, is not of itself a reason for the admission or rejection of such evidence. The Court is bound to try the matter between the parties who are before it upon such evidence as those parties in their discretion produce for the purpose, and at the time when the evidence is tendered to decide whether or not it is legally admissible" (5) The value of evidence cannot affect its admissibility (6) Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise and should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given (7) Where the question was as to the admissibility of certain documents, it was remarked — "What, if all such documents are excluded, shall we have left but oral evidence? That this is not a desirable result probably no one will deny, and in all discussions on the law of evidence, it seems to me very desirable to consider how that result can be avoided" (8) No argument in favour of the exclusion of evidence can be founded on the inability of Judicial Officers to perform the task of attributing to it its proper influence in the decision to exclude evidence because in some cases Judges might find upon it a wrong conclusion would be utterly inconsistent with the

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palak dhar supra at p 26 and Moriarty v. London C & D Ry Co L R 5 Q B 314 323 per Lush J. I also think on further consideration the evidence was receivable. I had formed no definite opinion on the subject at the trial. It was a new point and I adopted what I considered to be the usual and the safer course where evidence is pressed by one party and objected to by the other of receiving the evidence at the peril of the party presenting it. But see also R v Parbhudas the tendency to stray from the issues is so strong in this country that any indulgence of it beyond the clear provisions of the law is certain to lead to future embarrassment per West J 11 Bom H C R 90 95 (1874) and in Criminal proceedings it has been observed that the necessity of confining the evidence to the issue is stronger if possible than in Civil cases for when a prisoner is charged with an offence it is of the utmost importance that the facts proved should be such as he can be expected to come prepared to answer 3 Russ Cr 368 5th Ed cited in R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R 93 (1874) Roseoe Cr Ev 85 12th Ed 78—79. It is of high importance that no security for truth especially in Criminal cases should be weakened. On our rules of evidence said Lord Abinger

the property the liberty and the lives of men depend per Jardine J in R v Ramchundra Govind 19 B 755 (1895). For subordinate Courts whose judgment is subject to appeal the safest course in cases of doubtful relevancy of evidence is to contemplate the possibility of the evidence being admissible and to deal with the ease on such a supposition—Madhavrao v Deonak 21 B 698 (1896).

(2) R v Monapuna 16 B 661 668 (1892).

(3) R v Uttanchand 11 Bom H C R 121 (1874).

(4) Per Lord Denman in Wright v Beckett 1 Moo & R 414.

(5) Gorachand Sircar v Ram Narain 9 W R 587 (1868).

(6) R v Roden 12 Cox 630.

(7) Jadu Rai v Bhubataran Anndy 17 C 1 (1837). Ramji ban Serogy v Oghur Nath 2 C W N 183 (1898). Rama Karansingh v Mangal Singh 1 A L J Diary 224 (1904). See Wigmore Ev. § 19.

(8) Gopeknath Singh v Anundmojee 8 W R at p 169 (1867) per Markby J for the procedure with regard to the admission of documentary evidence see Manson v Golan Kebra 15 W R, 490 (1871). Issur Chunder v Russtek Lall, W R 576 (1868).

assumption, on which all rules of law are founded, that the constituted tribunals are fairly competent to carry them out (1) "To admit documents, not strictly evidence at all, to prop up oral evidence too weak to be relied upon is not a course which their Lordships would be inclined to approve, and none of the chittahs which have been laid aside by the High Court are shown to have been admissible in evidence according to the laws of evidence regulating the decisions of those Courts. It would expose purchasers to much danger if their possession could be disturbed by inferences from, or statements in, documents not legally admissible in proof against them" (2) Where a Judge is influenced in his estimate of parol testimony by the result of his consideration of documents which he ought not to have dealt with as evidence there is no proper trial of the case (3) Where certain decisions of the Privy Council were referred to, in which it was said that with regard to the admissibility of evidence in the native Courts in India no strict rule can be prescribed it was remarked as follows — "But these cases it must be borne in mind, occurred many years ago, at the time when the practice in the Mofussil in this respect was very lax and before the Evidence Act was passed and the observations of the Privy Council (4) were made, as I humbly conceive not as approving of this laxity of practice, but rather as excusing it upon the ground that the Mofussil Courts were not at the time so sufficiently acquainted with our English rules of evidence as to be able to observe them with anything like accuracy. I conceive that one great object of the Evidence Act was to prevent this laxity and to introduce a more correct and uniform rule of practice than had previously prevailed" (5) "In deciding the question whether certain evidence be admissible or not, it is necessary to look at the object for which it is produced and the point it is intended to establish for it may be admissible for one purpose and not another" (6) "In Civil and Criminal cases there is no difference in the rules as to the admissibility of evidence, though there may be a difference in their application, and it may be that a piece of evidence admissible in either class of cases may not be sufficient in a Criminal case that is without further evidence" (7) In cases tried by jury it is the duty of the Judge to decide all questions of admissibility, and in his discretion to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties (8) It is the duty of the Appellate Court to see that this judicial discretion is exercised in a proper manner (9) "The moment a witness commences giving evidence which is inadmissible, he should be stopped by the Court. It is not safe to rely on a subsequent exhortation to the jury to reject the hearsay

(1) Ib (and as to standard of value as applied to evidence ib at p 169)

(2) Eckowrie Singh v Heeralal Seal 11 W R (P C), 2 (1868) s c 12 Moo I A 136 (Each relaxation is apt to be come a precedent for another ib at p 4) see notes to s 36 post

(3) Bordenath Paroooye v Russick Lall 9 W R 274 (1868)

(4) Unide Rajaha v Pemmasamy Venkatadry 7 M I A 128 at p 137 (1858) s c 4 W R (P C) 121, Naraguntty Lutchmeedavamah v Vengama Na doo 9 M I A 66 at p 90 (1891) s c 1 W R (P C), 30 Boodharain Singh v Omrao Singh 13 M I A 529 (1870) s c, 15 W R (P C) 1

(5) Gujji Lall v Fattah Lall 6 C at p 193 (1880), per Garth C J, and as to the reception of loose evidence, v ib Harcehur Majoomdar v Churn Majhee,

12 W R 355 356 357 (1874)

(6) Taylor v Wellans 2 B & Ad 845 855 per Lord Tenterden C J

(7) R v Mallory 15 Cox 456 460 per Grove J v ante notes to s 3 and cases there cited and see also R v Francis 12 Cox C C 612 616, Lord Melville's Trial 29 How St Tr 746 764 [a fact must be established by the same evidence whether it is to be followed by a Criminal or Civil consequence but it is a totally different question in the consideration of Criminal as distinguished from Civil justice how the accused may be affected by the fact when so established], per Lord Erskine, L C Best Ev § 94

(8) Cr Pr Code s 298 See Best, Ev § 97, cited post

(9) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 498 (1873)

evidence and to decide on the legal evidence alone"(1) The duty of a Judge in Civil cases is nowhere laid down so distinctly as this, and it has been said that there may be some doubt as to whether, and, if at all, to what extent, a Judge ought to interfere where no objection is raised by the parties. But if the Courts themselves be passive in this respect the utility of the Code of Evidence may be seriously impaired. Further, having regard to the imperative language of 5th, 60th, 64th, 136th, and 165th sections(2) and of other portions of the Act, it would appear that it was the intention of the Legislature that a Civil Court should irrespective of objections made by parties, compel observance of the provisions of the law(3). Procedure as to admission and rejection of documents is dealt with in the undermentioned Order of the Code(4). The Judge is to decide as to the admissibility of evidence, and may ask in what manner any evidence which is tendered is relevant. He is bound to try a collateral issue when the reception of evidence depends on a preliminary question of fact(5). The rules of evidence cannot be departed from because there may be a strong moral conviction of guilt(6). The moral weight of evidence is not the test(7).

The proper time to make an objection is in the Court of first instance. For if it is made at the time when the evidence is tendered it may be in the power of the party tendering the evidence to obviate the objection if a valid Objections by parties

(1) R v Pittambur Sirdar 7 W R Cr 25 (1867) Where hearsay is not admissible as evidence it should not be taken down. Pitamber Doss v Rutun Bullab W R 1864 213, an a priori consent to abide by the testimony of a certain witness cannot bind the consenting party to hearsay testimony, but only to such evidence as is legally admissible. Lickemonee v Shunkuree 2 W R 252. R v Sheik Magon 5 W R Cr R v Ramgopal 10 W R Cr 73 (1868). R v Kally Churn 7 W R Cr 2 [hearsay evidence prohibited]. Re Kedar Nath 18 W R Cr 16 (1872). R v Chunder Koomar 24 W R Cr 77 (1875).

(2) V s 5 and of no others s 60 oral evidence must be direct s 64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except etc s 165. "nor shall he dispense with primary evidence etc," s 136 shall admit evidence if relevant and not otherwise.

(3) Field Ev 6th Ed see pp 482 484-486 where the question is discussed, and see Whitley Stokes 854. On the other hand it has been said that subject to certain well recognised exceptions the general principle Omnis consensus tollit errorem applies to evidence in Civil cases a maxim which is in one sense of doubtful application under this Act as to Criminal cases. Much inadmissible evidence is constantly received in practice because the opposing counsel either deems it not worth while to object or thinks its reception will be beneficial to his client. Best, Ev § 97. In Sheetul Pershad v Junnejoy Mullick 12 W R 244 (1869) the Court said. It is somewhat difficult to ascertain exactly how matters stood before the Judge but it rather appears that the objection now taken as to there being no evidence to bring the case within cl 1 s 17 Act X of 1859 was not taken before the Judge. There is no doubt that even if the evidence on the record were in itself insufficient the Judge might properly have decided the case upon the evidence such as it was if the defendant had waived his objection to its insufficiency and consented to its being taken as sufficient. In this case it seems the party dispensed with proof and the case was not one in which evidence was wrongly admitted. As to objections by parties and admissibility of evidence on appeal see next paragraph.

(4) Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civ Pr Code (2nd Ed) O XVIII pp 842-849.

(5) S 136 post and see s 162 post. Cleaze v Jones 7 Ex 421. Phillips v Cole 10 A & E 105.

(6) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909) 37 C 91.

(7) R v Baijoo Chowdhree 25 W R Cr 43 (1876) when it was objected that the moral weight of certain evidence not legally admissible was almost irresistible Lord Campbell C J said. "The moral weight of evidence is not the test. Many facts are excluded by law which might be important on account of the inconvenience of admitting them." R v Oddy 5 Cox C C 710 713. Convictions must be based on substantial and sufficient evidence not merely on oral convictions. R v Soroh Roy 5 W R Cr 78 (1866), as to judicial belief see dictum in Re Aboodoo (1891) 1 L R 391 (1890).

one (1) It has been held that where a valid objection is taken to the admissibility of evidence, it is discretionary with the Judge whether he will allow the objection to be withdrawn (2) Some latitude should be allowed to a member of the Bar, insisting in the conduct of his case upon his question being taken down or his objections noted where the Court thinks the question inadmissible or the objection untenable. There ought to be a spirit of give and take between the Bench and Bar in such matters, and every little persistence on the part of a pleader should not be turned into the occasion of a Criminal trial unless the pleader's conduct is so clearly vexatious as to lead to the inference that his intention is to insult or to interrupt the Court (3)

An objection may be waived, but waiver cannot operate to confer on evidence the character of relevancy (v post). If the objection is prima facie sustainable, then the opponent must show the Court that the evidence satisfies it to be prima facie his objection. The evidence violates a named principle or rule of evidence. The cardinal principle is that a general objection, if overruled, cannot avail. The only modification of this broad rule being that if on the face of the evidence in its relation to the rest of the case there appears no purpose whatever for which it could have been admissible, then a general objection, though overruled, will be deemed to have been sufficient. The opposing counsel can make no reply to a general objection except to throw the whole responsibility upon the Judge at once or else begin systematically and argue that under any possible objection the testimony should come in. Many trials under such a system would practically never end (5)

When dealing in appeal with the admissibility of evidence admitted by the Lower Court, a distinction has been drawn between the cases (a) in which evidence wholly irrelevant has been erroneously admitted by the Lower Court, and (b) those cases in which a relevant fact has been erroneously allowed to be proved in a manner different from that which the law requires (6), e.g., where secondary evidence of the contents of a document has been admitted without the absence of the original having been accounted for (7). In the first case it is obvious that the decree can be supported upon relevant evidence only (cf s 165, Prov 2, post). An erroneous omission to object to the admission of irrelevant testimony does not make it available as a ground of judgment (8)

(1) Kissen Kamnee v Ram Chunder, 12 W R 13 (1869), Sheetul Pershad v Junmejoy Mullick, 12 W R, 244 (1869), Wigmore Ev § 18

(2) Barbat v Allen, 7 Exch 609

(3) Per Cur in In re Dattatraya 6 Bom L R, 541 (1904)

(4) See Wigmore Ev, § 18

(5) See Wigmore Ev, § 18, and see per Lord Brougham in Bain v Whitehaven F P Co., H L C 1, 16

(6) Field Ev, 6th Ed, 482, Ambar Ali v Luife Ali, 45 C, 159, and note to s 167, post

(7) As to parol evidence of written contract admitted without objection see Article in 14 Mad L J, 189

(8) Muller v Madho Das, 19 A 76 s c L R, 23 I A, 106 (1896), Sri Rajah Prakasaravani v Garu v Venkata Rau 38 M 160 (1915), and see Sreenath Roy v Goluck Chunder Sen, 15 W R 348 (1871), Ramayya v Devappa,

30 B 109 (1906). In Pudmatate v Doolar Singh, 4 M I A at pp 285, 286 (1847) s c 7 W R P C, 41, the Privy Council observed that the evidence was however received below, and therefore we do not apprehend that we can treat it as not being evidence in the cause. These observations appear, however to have referred to the weight and not to the admissibility of the evidence. See also Ningaua v Bharmappa 23 B, 69 (1897). It has been said that a party who has filed an exhibit cannot plead its inadmissibility if the other party seeks to use the document against him Raman v Secretary of State, Mad L J Dig 65. But apart from any question of estoppel as where the objection is to the proof or where the reception of the evidence has affected the position of the other party the question of admissibility must be determined by the provisions of the Act

Nor can evidence be given which the law excludes as that a person who is liable on a note of hand signed it as surety only (1) Where a piece of evidence not proved in the proper manner has been admitted without objection it is not open to the opposite party to challenge it at a later stage of the litigation. But where evidence has been received without objection in direct contravention of an imperative provision of the law the principle on which unobjected evidence is admitted, be it acquiescence, evasion, or estoppel (none of which is available against a positive legislative enactment) does, not apply (2) The Act (s 165) also enacts that the judgment must be based upon facts duly proved, that is, proved in accordance with the provisions relating to proof contained in the Act. Where no proof has been offered, as where a document has been admitted in the Lower Court without being proved, the Court of Appeal may reject the document notwithstanding want of objection by the other party (3) Where proof has been given of a document but the proof is prima facie improper, an apparent exception exists in Civil suits based on principles akin to estoppel, as where no objection is taken to secondary evidence of documents being given (4) In this case want of objection may mislead the party tendering the evidence and prevent him from producing primary evidence, or from showing that the secondary evidence offered is admissible (5) So it has been held that if no objection is taken in the Court of first instance to the reception of a document in evidence (e.g., as being the copy of a copy) it is not within the province of the Appellate Court to raise or recognise it in appeal (6) Where also the Court of first instance admitted in evidence the depositions of certain witnesses in a previous litigation and no objection was taken, but in appeal it was objected examined and as in consequence had cancelled

Appellate Court

...nce, or if it required the party tendering before it for examination, it was bound to and that in no case was it justified in deciding the case on the remaining evidence on the record. The appeal was remanded (7) But of course the

(1) Harak Chand v Bishun Chandra 8 C W N 101 102 (1903) [In admissibility of oral evidence question not raised in either of Lower Courts but taken and allowed in appeal]

(2) Sudhanja Kumar Singha v Gour Chandra Pal 35 C L J 473. See also Luchram Motilal Boid v Radha Charan Poddar 49 C 93 (1922)

(3) Kanto Prashad v Jagat Chandra 23 C 335 338 (1895) in this case the contention that a map was admissible in evidence was held to be open to the appellant on special appeal although he had not appealed against an order or remand made by the lower Appellate Court rejecting the map as not being admissible. but see Girindra Chandra v Rajendra Nath, 1 C W N 530 (1897)

(4) See Robinson v Davies 5 Q B D. 26 (1879) where secondary evidence of the contents of written documents was received under a commission to take evidence abroad without objection

(5) Kissen Kaminee v Ram Chander supra.

(6) Chimnaji Govind v Dhunkar Dhan

dev 11 B 320 (1886) followed in Lakshman v Amrit 24 B 596 (1900) in this the copy from which the copy was taken had been filed in a suit between the predecessors in title of the parties. Akbar Ali v Bhyca Lal 6 C (1880) at pp 669 670. Kissen Kaminee v Ram Chander 12 W R 13 (1869) in which suit the case was remanded with liberty to supply the necessary proof. see Ningata v Bharnappa 23 B 65 (1897) see note to s 165 post. No objection should be allowed to be taken in the Appellate Court as to the admissibility of a copy of a document which was admitted in evidence in the Court below without any objection. Ashori Lal v Rakhai Das 31 C 155 (1903) dissenting from Kameshar Pershad v Amanutulla 26 C 53 (1898). Shahadi Began v Secretary of State for India P C (1907) 34 C 1059. L R 34 I A., 194. Tiet She v Maung Pa 3 L B R., 49. Sri Rajah Pratasa Ram Garu v Tenkata Rau 38 M 160 (1915)

(7) Lakshman v Amrit 24 B 56 (1900)

Appeal Court has a perfect right to attach such weight to the documents as it thinks proper, or to say whether they ought to be treated as evidence as against particular parties to the suit (1). Where a document is admitted without proof but without objection in the trial Court, no objection to its admissibility on the ground of want of formal proof can be taken in appeal (2). Where no objection is taken in the first Court to the admission in evidence of documents not inter partes, objection cannot be taken in second appeal that it has not been proved that the conditions exist which make any particular section applicable (3).

Objections to the admissibility of documents attached to the return of a commission if not previously made cannot be taken at the hearing of the suit (4). If when evidence is taken before Commissioners a document is tendered and objected to on any ground, the opposite party is not precluded from objecting s not necessary to state hen it is first tendered, objection whenever the

In the undermentioned case(6), the Privy Council held that the examination of a material witness of the plaintiff in the absence of the defendant, his vakil having been removed and no other vakil then acting for him was such an irregularity that if objected to at the proper time would have been fatal to the reception of such evidence, but that no objection having been urged during the time or until an appeal was interposed, the objection came too late and could not be sustained as, notwithstanding such irregularity, that fact did not taint the whole proceedings so as to prevent the plaintiff recovering upon the other evidence which was sufficient to establish his case.

The Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to reject a copy of a document Exhibited in the lower Court with the consent of both parties at any rate without giving the parties an opportunity of producing the original (7). It has been held that the ground of waiver cannot be allowed to prevail in a Criminal case, (8) and that a prisoner on his trial can consent to nothing (9) as to objections to the reception of evidence by the Court itself see the preceding paragraph, and as to the procedure when a question is objected to and allowed by the Court, see the Civil Procedure Code (10). A Court is bound to decide upon the evidence without reference to any previous arrangement between the parties as to the mode in which the evidence is to be dealt with (11). Upon the question of placing a favourable construction on doubtful evidence so as

(1) Akbar Ali v Bhyea Lal supra

(2) Cartier Ras v Kalash Belari 4 Pat L. W 213 44 I C. 422 see Narhari Hari v Ambaikon Belkrisina 44 B 192

(3) Reajaddy Sarkar v Ganga Charan Bhattacharya 531 C 863

(4) Struthers v Wheeler 6 C L R 109 (1880)

(5) Ralli v Gau Kum 9 C 939 (1883)

(6) Bommarause Bahadur v Rangasamy Mudaly 6 M I A 232 (1855)

(7) Kamulamma v Athekari Sangari 35 M L J 11, s c. 481 C 615

(8) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 497 498 (1873). On the question how far the rule of evidence may be relaxed by consent Mr Best remarks —

In Criminal cases at least in treason and felony it is the duty of the Judge to see that the accused is condemned according to law and the rules of evidence forming part of that law no admissions from him or his counsel will be received § 97, see also s 58 post

(9) R v Bishonath 12 W. R Cr 3 (1869) Attorney General of New South Wales v Bertrand 36 L J P C 51 s c L R I P C 535 see also R v Navroji Dadabhai 9 Bom H C R 338 383 (1872) R v Bholanath 2 C 23 (1876) R v Allen 6 C 83 (1880), Hossein Buksh v R 6 C 96 99 as to objections see observation of Trevelyan J in Gurish Chunder v R 20 C 861 (1893) Best Ev § 97, as to admissions of fact by legal practitioners see ss 17 18 58 post

(10) Civ Pr Code O XVIII r 11 p 846 cf also s 359 Cr Pr Code of Act XIV of 1882

(11) Gooroo Pershad v Bykunto Chander 6 W R 87 (1866)

to entitle the Court to treat it as substantive evidence in the case and not exclude it as inadmissible(1), and as to the case where both parties have put indifferent portions of inadmissible proceedings and rested arguments thereon,(2) see the cases noted below

6. Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant, whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different(3) times and places

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B, or the by standers at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is a relevant fact (4)

(b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked and jails are broken open. The occurrence of these facts is relevant as forming part of the general transaction though A may not have been present at all of them (5)

(c) A sues B for libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained are relevant facts though they do not contain the libel itself

(d) The question is whether the certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact (6)

Principle.—If facts form part of the transaction which is the subject of enquiry manifestly evidence of them ought not to be excluded (7). Moreover, such facts forming part of the res gestæ in most cases could not be excluded without rendering the evidence unintelligible(8), for every part of a transaction is connected with every other part as cause or effect. The point for decision will always be whether they do form part, or are too remote to be considered really part of the transaction before the Court (9)

s 3 (' Fact ')

s 3 (Fact in issue)

s 3 (Relevant)

(1) Duarka Das v Sant Boksh 18 A 92 (1895)

(2) Bir Chander v Bhans Dhar 3 B L R A C 217 (1869)

(3) Thus where a man committed three burglaries in one night and stole a shirt at one place and left it in another and they were all so connected that the Court heard the history of all three burglaries Lord Ellenborough remarked that if crimes do so intermix the Court must go through the detail. Case cited without name in R v Wiley, 2 Lea 985 which is also reported as R v Wiley 1 B & P (N R.), 92

(4) See In re Surat Dhoob 10 C 302 (1884). R v Fokirapo 15 B 491 496 (1890) as to exclamations of mere by standers see R v Fowler cited Steph D & Art 3 illust (a) Mine v Lester 7 H & N 786 Bennison v Courtwright 5 B & S 1 The Schwalba Swab 521 Wharton Ev., § 260.

(5) v s 10 post. That war was waged is one of the facts in issue. These occurrences are part of that fact.

(6) As being part of the fact in issue, did the goods pass to A.

(7) See Norton Ev 101

(8) Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 78. Acts declarations and circumstances which constitute or accompany and explain the fact or transaction in issue are admissible as forming part of the res gestæ. The term res gestæ though generally applied to a fact or transaction in issue may be used in the above connection of any material fact. Phipson Ev 5th Ed., 44 45

The earlier term was res gesto or pass res gesta see as to the history of this catch all phrase Thayer a Cases on Evidence 629 same in American Law Review XV 5 81 Wigmore Ev § 1795, and Phipson in 19 Law Quart Rev 435

(9) Norton Ev., 101

Steph Dig, Art 3 Roscoe, Cr Ev, 86, 13th Ed, 78, Steph Introd, Ch III, Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 44 45, Norton Ev, III Cunningham Ev, 87 Whitley Stoles 854, Taylor, Ev, §§ 320, 326—328, Wharton Ev, § 258, Thayer's Cases on Evidence 629, Rice on Evidence, 369—392

COMMENTARY.

Facts form ing part of same trans action

A transaction is a group of facts so connected together as to be referred to

Judges have given different decisions (1) The area of events covered by the term res gestæ depends upon the circumstances of each particular case The res gestæ may be defined as those circumstances which are the automatic and undesigned incidents of a particular litigated act and which are admissible when illustrative of such act These incidents may be separated from the act by a lapse of time more or less appreciable A transaction may last for weeks The incidents may consist of sayings and doings of any one absorbed in the event whether participant or by stander, they may comprise things left undone as well as things done They must be necessary incidents of the litigated act in the sense that they are part of the immediate preparations for or emanations of such act and are not produced by the calculated policy of the actors They are the act talking for itself, not what people say when talking about the act In other words, they must stand on an immediate causal relation to the act—a relation not broken by the interposition of voluntary individual wanness, seeking to manufacture evidence for itself Incidents that are thus immediately and unconsciously associated with an act whether such incidents are doings or declarations, become in this way evidence of the character of the act They are admissible though hearsay, because in such cases it is the act that creates the hearsay, not the hearsay the act It is the power of perception unmodified by recollection that is appealed to, not of recollection modifying perception Whenever recollection comes in, whenever there is opportunity for reflection and explanations—then statements cease to be part of the res gestæ Declarations to be admissible must be made during the transaction If made after its completion they are too late (2) but it is no objection that they are self serving (3) Whenever a fact is a link in a chain of facts necessary to establish another fact, it is, of course, admissible In some cases an offence consists of a series of transactions in such cases evidence is admissible of any act which goes to make up the offence (4) A fact besides being relevant under this section, by virtue merely of its being so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, may also be relevant on the grounds mentioned in one or other of the succeeding sections So where several offences are connected together and form part of one entire transaction, then the one is evidence to show the character of the other (5) And where the only evidence against a prisoner charged with having voluntarily caused grievous hurt was a statement

(1) Steph Dig Art. 3 R v M J Vyapoory Moodelkar 6 C 655 662 (1881), cf use of word in ss 235 239 Cr Pr Code and see R v Fakirapa 15 B 496 502 supra R v Vajirani 16 B 414 424 (1892) R v Dwarakanath 7 W R Cr 15 (1867), R v Sams 13 M 426 (1890) The term 'transaction' occurs in s 13 post and as used in that sect on was defined in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C at p 186 (1880)

(2) Chan Mahita v R (1907) 11 C W N 266

(3) Wharton Ev §§ 258 262 See definitions of Supreme Court of Georgia cited in Rice Ev 375 'the circumstances facts and declaration which grew out of the main fact are contemporaneous with and serve to illustrate its character as part of the res gestæ'

(4) Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 77, 78, Norton Ev, 102

(5) R v Ellis 6 B & C 145 cited in R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R 94 (1874) t s 14 post See also Introductions ante made in the presence of the prisoner by the person injured to a third person immediately after the commission of the offence and the prisoner did not, when the statement was made, deny that she had done the act complained of, it was held that the evidence was admissible under this section and s 8, illust (g) of this Act (1) But where it did not appear how long an interval had elapsed between a murder and the statement of an alleged bystander, whose condition of mind did not seem to have been such as to exclude the supposition that his evidence was fabricated, it was held that his statement was inadmissible under this section (2) One P came to a police station with a written report in which there were allegations that certain persons including M had committed the offence of riot. The report was read out to P and as soon as he heard it, he informed the police that M was not present at the riot and stated that the report was written by one J. Subsequently M prosecuted J and P for an offence under s 121, Indian Penal Code. Held, that the statement made by P to the police was not admissible against J, either as a part of a confession or as a part of the transaction under investigation under this section (3) The doctrine of election (in Criminal trials) is closely connected with that about the admissibility of collateral facts which, though not in issue, may be relevant under this section if they form part of the same transaction (4) The cases cited below may be further consulted in connection with this section (5) Certain persons were convicted of robbing and murder, and on its appearing that the two offences constituted parts of the same transaction, held that recent and unexplained possession of the stolen property, which would be presumptive evidence of robbing was similarly evidence. Besides being part of the res gestæ ration (7) as evidence of intention (8) and so forth

7 Facts which are the occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, of relevant facts, or facts in issue, or which constitute the state of things under which they happened, or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant

Facts which are the occasion cause or effect of facts in issue

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether A robbed B

The facts that shortly before the robbery B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it, or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons are relevant (9)

(1) In re Surat Dhobis 10 C 302 (1884) supra

(2) Chaim Mahito v R (1907) 11 C W N 266

(3) Jalpa Prasad v Emp 17 A L J 760 s c 50 I C 487 20 Cr L J 311

(4) R v Fakirapa 15 B 496 502 supra see also ss 235 239 Cr P Code Taylor Ex § 329

(5) R v Birdseye 4 C & P 386 R v Rearden 4 Fost & Fin 76 R v Ellis, supra R v Cobden 3 Fost & Fin 833 R v Young R & R C C R 280 note R v Westwood 4 C & P 547 R v Williams Dears C C 188 R v Rooney, 7 C & P 517, R v Whaley, 2 Lex, 935.

R v Lang 6 C & P 179 R v Firth L R 1 C C R 172 R v Salisbury, 5 C & P 155 157 see cases cited in Steph Dig Art 3 2 East P C 934

(6) R v Sams 13 M 476 (1890)

(7) Naga Sanpa v Emp 19 Cr L J 155 43 I C 443 s c (Statement by complainant as to rape)

(8) Mathu Krishna v Ramchandra, 37 M L J 489 (Statement by testator), and see 47 I C 611

(9) As giving occasion or opportunity or being the cause see Norton, Ex, 103, Cunningham Ex 90, Whitley Stokes, 855

- (b) The question is whether A murdered B

Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed are relevant facts (1)

- (c) The question is, whether A poisoned B

The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison and habits of B, known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison are relevant facts (2)

Principle.—The reason for the admission of facts of this nature is that, if it is desired to decide whether a fact occurred or not, almost the first natural step is to ascertain whether there were facts at hand calculated to produce or afford opportunity for its occurrence, or facts which its occurrence was calculated to produce. Further, in order to the proper appreciation of a fact, it is necessary to know the state of things under which it occurred (3)

s 3 ("Fact.")

s 3 ("Fact in issue.")

s 3 ("Relevant")

Steph Dig, Art 9, and note, Steph Introd., Ch III, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 44, 45 142, Norton, Ev, 103, Cunningham, Ev, 90, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 131-134, Best, Ev, § 453 Wills' Circ Ev, passim.

COMMENTARY.

Causation

Leaving the transaction itself, the present section embraces a larger area and provides for the admission of several classes of facts, which though not possibly forming part of the transaction, are yet connected with it in particular modes (viz, as occasion, cause, effect, as giving opportunity for its occurrence or as constituting the state of things under which it happened), and so are relevant when the transaction itself is under enquiry. These modes—occasion, cause, effect, opportunity—are really different aspects of causation. When an act is done and a particular person is alleged to have done it (not through an agent but personally) it is obvious that his physical presence, within a proper range of time and place, forms one step on the way to the belief that he did it. If it be asked whether the mere possibility involved in opportunity is not too slender and whether something more than mere opportunity, for the answer is that these are negative, one of innumerable limited number who were in a position to do this particular act. In short, opportunity alone, and not exclusive opportunity, is a sufficient showing for admissibility (4). On the other hand no circumstance can be more informative of a charge than that the accused had no opportunity of committing the crime. On the strength of this rests the force of a defence founded on an alibi (5). But care must be taken against a hasty inference from opportunity for, to commission of, a crime. There can be no crime without the opportunity, but there is a wide gulf to be bridged over by evidence between opportunity and commission (6).

Similar unconnected facts

Generally speaking, it is not admissible to prove the fact in issue by showing that facts similar to it, but not part of the same transaction, have occurred

(1) As effects of the fact in issue this is an instance of real evidence, see Norton, Ev, 103, Best, Ev, § 92, as to proof from foot mark, see Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed, 96 214—221 436

(2) As constituting the state of things under which the alleged fact happened and as affording opportunity

(3) Cunningham Ev 90 91 Steph

Introd, Ch III knowledge of circumstances enabling a person to do the act is thus also relevant [illustr (c)].

(4) Wigmore Ev, § 131

(5) See s 11, post

(6) Norton Ev 104 Best, Ev, § 453, see case cited in Starkie Ev 4th Ed, 864 note, Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 82 356.

on other occasions. Facts which are sought to be made relevant merely from their general similarity to the main fact or transaction and not from some specific connection therewith are not admissible to show its existence (1). The meaning of the rule excluding transactions similar to but unconnected with the facts in issue is that inferences are not to be drawn from one transaction to another which is not specifically connected with it merely because the two resemble one another. They must be linked together by the chain of cause and effect in some assignable way before an inference may be drawn (2). They are not facts in issue and are therefore excluded by the fifth section. They are not parts of the same transaction so as to be admissible under the sixth section and there is no principle of causation which would render them relevant under this section. The maxim res inter alios acta is frequently supposed to express the principle of exclusion in such cases but this is incorrect for similar transactions inter partes would be equally inadmissible in this relation. The maxim has its principal utility in the domain of substantive law (3). And so when as in a well known case the question was whether A a brewer sold good beer to B a publican the fact that A sold good beer to C D and E other publicans, was held to be irrelevant (4). Nor when an act has been proved to show that a given party did the act may evidence be tendered of similar acts done either by himself with the object of showing a disposition habit or propensity to commit and a consequent probability of his having committed the act in question or by others though similarly circumstanced to himself to show that he would be likely to act as they (5). And so when the question is whether A committed a crime the fact that he formerly committed another crime of the same sort and had a tendency to commit such crimes is irrelevant (6). The so called exceptions (though they are not strictly speaking such) to this rule consist in the admissibility of evidence of acts showing intention facts in issue (9). On the other hand and on the same principle in cases where causation is well known and regular as in the case of physical and mechanical agencies the conditions of mental disease the propensities of animals and the

(1) Steph Dg Art 10 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 155 156 Best Ev §§ 506—510 Taylor Ev §§ 317—326 Brooms Legal Max ms 908 Roscoe N P Ev 84—86 Powell Ev 9th Ed 60—64 and v post Mah n v Attorney-General N S W 1894 A C. 57 65 per Lord Herschell

(2) Steph Dg p 163 (3) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 157 Steph Dg Art 10 and n vi p 162 Best Ev § 112 506—510 Taylor Ev 317—326 Brooms Legal Max ms 954—968

(4) Holcombe v Heason 2 Camp 391 after it had been shown that the beer sold to all was of the same brewing Steph Dg Art 10 Illust (b) so (unless a general custom be proved) the terms on which A let land to B are no evidence of the terms on which A let lands to other tenants Corier v Fryke Peake 130 see Hollingham v Head 4 C. B N S 388 Spencely Deil Holt 7 East 108 Smith v Wicks 6 C & P 180 Taylor Ev §§ 317—326

(5) Phipson F 5th Ed 121 and text books cited ante and notes to s 14 post as to the converse cases of character and course of business v post ss 52—55 16

(6) Steph Dg Art 10 Illust (a) R v Cole 1 Phlpps E 508 Steph Dg pp 16—164 see s 14 post Illusts (n) (o) (p) Mah n v Attorney-General N S W 1894 A C 57 65

(7) See s 14 post cf Steph Dg Art 11 and pp 163—164 id Phipson, 5th Ed 157 As to evidence of intention see Narsing Dal v Ram Nara N 30 C 883 896 (1903) R v Bond C C R (1906) 21 Cox p 252

(8) See s 15 post cf Steph Dg Art 12 Lawson's Presumptive Evidence 187 Steph Dg 162—164 see also Taylor Ev §§ 327—348 Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 79 et seq Best Ev p 463 Roscoe N P Ev 85 R v Wyatt 1 K. B. 188 (1904) 1 All L J 42 Hales v Kerr (1908) 2 K. B 601 Times L. R. 24 p 779

(9) Steph Introd. 164 see ss. 40—44 post

like evidence of similar but unconnected acts is often admissible (1) Where in an action brought in respect of a nuisance alleged to be caused by the construction and maintenance of a hospital for infectious diseases, the plaintiff proposed to call evidence as to the effect of other similar hospitals on the surrounding neighbourhood, it was held that evidence of facts by which the effect (or absence of effect) of such hospitals could be either positively or approximately ascertained was admissible and material (2) Where the discharge of gaseous matter from the chimney of a chemical work was complained of as a nuisance by the proprietor of land in its vicinity it was held that the effect of matter

discha

doings of animals are in question it is admissible to prove the general character, of the species or of the particular animals as well as the doings of the same, or similar animals, on other occasions (5) Further, similar facts may become admissible in confirmation of testimony as to the main fact which would be inadmissible as direct proof So an admission of liability on one bill accepted by the same agent is no evidence of a general authority to accept, though it is admissible to confirm independent proof of such authority (6) And proof of

And

evious

in by showing that he is consistent with himself (8) Similar facts may be admissible in proof of agency Where the question is whether one person acted as agent for another on a particular occasion the fact that he so acted on other occasions

(1) Phipson Ev 5th Ed, 144—149
Best Ev pp 463 464 Taylor Ev 319
 so in an American case it being in dispute whether a horse was or was not frightened by a certain pile of lumber evidence that other horses were frightened by the same pile under a variety of circumstances was held admissible Best Ev p 464 for a similar case see Brown v E C R Co 22 Q B D 391 "so where the question was whether As dog killed a sheep belonging to B the fact that the same dog had killed other sheep on different occasions belonging to other people was held admissible Leats v Jones 1 T L R 153, Wharton Ev § 1295 so also the question being whether As premises were ignited by sparks escaping from a railway engine proof that (1) the same engine and (2) other engines of similar construction belonging to the same Company had previously caused fires along the same line is admissible Aldridge v G W R Co 3 M & Gr 522 Piggott v E C R Co 3 C B 229 the question being whether A was insane at a certain time evidence that he exhibited symptoms of insanity prior and subsequent to such time and that his ancestors and collaterals had been insane is admissible 'Pope on Lunacy 392 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 149—156 as to the presumption of regularity in the case of scientific instruments see Taylor Ev § 183 As to Manorial and Trade Customs see Taylor Ev, §§ 320—322

Roscoe N P Ev 85 86 Phipson Ev, 5th Ed 147 s 13 post acts showing title see s 11 post

(2) The Monogers of the Metropolitan Asylum District v Hull 47 L T (H L) 29 per Lord Selborne L C 'Evidence relating to collateral facts is only admissible when such facts will if established establish reasonable presumption as to the matter in dispute and when such evidence is reasonably conclusive' per Lord Watson, see also Foulkes v Chadd 3 Doug 157

(3) Hamilton v Tennant & Co 1 Rob 871 7 C & F 122 R v Neville 1 Pea N P C 125 but see as to this last case R v Farie 8 E & B 486

(4) Metropolitan Asylum District v Hull, supra 35 per Lord Watson

(5) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 148 177 Osborne v Clacuell 2 Q B (1896) 109 Williams v Richards (1907) 2 K B, 88

(6) Lieutell v Winchworth 13 M & W 598 Hollingham v Head 4 C B N S 388 Morris v Bethel L R 4 C P, 765 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 83

(7) Bourne v Gailiff 11 C & F 45 see as to similar facts admissible in corroboration of the main fact R v Pearce Peake N Pr R 106 R v Egerton R & R 175 cited in R v Ellis 6 B & C 148 Gole v Manning 2 Q B D 611 and cases in preceding note

(8) S 157 post

familiarity (2)

idence of acts of adultery,
petition are admissible,
vious acts of improper

8 Any fact is relevant which shows or constitutes a motive (3) or preparation (4) for any fact in issue or relevant fact

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding (5) or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto (6), and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding (7), is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous (8) or subsequent (9) thereto

Explanation 1 —The word “conduct” in this section does not include statements, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements (10), but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of this Act (11)

Explanation 2 —When the conduct of any person is relevant any statement made to him or in his presence and (12) hearing which affects such conduct, is relevant (13)

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for murder of B

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant (14)

(b) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose is relevant

- (1) Steph Dig Art 13 Blake v 403 R v Debendra Prosad A C (1909)
Albion Life Assurance Society L R 4 36 C 573
C P D 94 see also Courteen v Toise
1 Camp 42n Neal v Erling 1 Esp 60
Hatkins v Vince 2 Starkie 368
(2) Boddy v Boddy 30 L J P & M 23
Taylor Ev § 340 see remarks on this case in Phipson Ev 80 1st Ed omitted in 2nd Ed It has been held that ante nuptial incontinence is relevant to prove post nuptial misconduct charged between the same parties Cantello v Cantello Times March 2 1896 cited in Phipson Ev 5th Ed 146
(3) Illustrs (a) (b) and post Emf v Panchu Das 47 C 671 (F B) R v M J Vajapoory Moodelur 6 C 655 662 as to the admissibility of similar facts to prove motive for a crime see for its admission R v Heeson 14 Cox 40 R v Stephens 16 Cox 387 R v Clewes 4 C & P 221 contra R v Flanagan 15 Cox, 403 R v Debendra Prosad A C (1909) 36 C 573
(4) Illustrs (c) (d) and post
(5) Illustr (e)
(6) Illustrs (d) (e) (i) R v Abdulla 7 A 40 (1885)
(7) Illustrs (i) (h)
(8) Illustrs (d) (e)
(9) Illustrs (e) (i) Dalip Singh v Asad Anwar P C (1908) 30 A 259
(10) Illustrs (j) (k) and post
(11) See ss 10 14 illustrs (k) (l)
(m) 17—39 155 157
(12) Not or but for English rule see Kele v Jakle 2 C & L 709
(13) Illustrs (f) (g) (h) R v Edmunds 6 C & P 164
(14) See also R v Buckley 13 Cox, 293 R v Skiffes 12 Cox 161 R v Clewes 4 C & P 221 5 Cox C C 214, Best Ev § 92

- (e) A is tried for the murder of B by poison

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B is relevant.(1)

- (d) The question is, whether a certain document is the Will of A

The facts that, not long before the date of the alleged Will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate, that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will, and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant.(2)

- (c) A is accused of a crime

The facts, that either before, or at the time of, or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned person to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant (3)

- (f) The question is, whether A robbed B

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence—'the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B'—and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant (4)

- (g) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing,—'I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10 000 rupees,'—and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts (5)

(1) See R v Palmer Steph Introd, 107—158, Steph Dig, Art 7, Illust. (b)

(2) Where the factum of a Will is in dispute the question whether the testator had made a Will before is relevant to show that he had disposing mind. In the goods of Bhuggobutty (deceased) Cal H C 9th February 1900

(3) "A party who gives or produces false evidence may by so doing give rise to a general presumption against the truth of his case." Girish Chunder v Iswar Chandra 3 B L R A C J, 341 (1869) See also R v Patch in Steph Introd, 99—106 and Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed., 445, R v Palmer, supra, Steph Dig, Art 7, Illust (c) see s 114, Illust. (e), post. Where the question was whether A suffered damage in a railway accident, the fact that A conspired with B, C and D to suborn false witnesses in support of his case was held to be relevant, as conduct subsequent to a fact in issue tending to show that it had not happened Moriarty v L C & D Ry Co, L R, 5 Q B, 314 "The conduct of a party to a cause may be of the highest importance in determining whether the cause of action in which he is plaintiff or the ground of defence, if he is defendant is honest and just, just as it is evidence against a prisoner that he has said one thing at one time and another at another, as showing that the recourse to falsehood leads fairly to an inference of guilt. So if you can show that a plaintiff has been suborning false testimony, and has endeavoured to have recourse to perjury, it is strong evidence that he knew perfectly well that his case was an unrighteous one. I do not say that it is conclusive it does not always follow because a man not sure he shall be able to succeed by righteous means has recourse to means of a different character, that that which he desires namely the gaining of the victory, is not his due or that he has not good ground for believing that justice entitles him to it. It does not necessarily follow that he has not a good cause of action, any more than a prisoner making a false statement to increase his appearance of innocence is necessarily a proof of his guilt, but it is always evidence which ought to be submitted to the consideration of the tribunal which has to judge of the facts and therefore, I think that the evidence was admissible inasmuch as it went to show that the plaintiff thought he had a bad case' Id, per Cockburn C J see Taylor Ev, § 804, as to conduct of a party in a case of malicious prosecution see Taylor v Williams 2 B & Ad 857 as to admission inferred from the conduct of parties see s 58 post see also Taylor Ev § 804 Roscoe N P Ev 62, Melhuish v Collier 15 Q B 878, Best Ev § 524

(4) R v Abdullah 7 A, 600 (1880) v post notes

(5) See in the petition of Surat Dhoobi, 10 C 302 (1884) v post notes, Besela v Stern 2 C P C 265

(h) The question is whether A committed a crime

The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal and the contents of the letter are relevant (1)

(i) A is accused of a crime

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant (2)

(j) The question is whether A was ravished.

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which and the terms in which the complaint was made are relevant (3)

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant— as a dying declaration under section thirty two clause (one) or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty seven

(k) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which and the term in which the complaint was made are relevant (4)

The fact that, he said he had been robbed without making any complaint, is not relevant as conduct under this section though it may be relevant— as a dying declaration under section thirty two clause (one) or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty seven

Principle—This section is an amplification of the preceding one. A motive is strictly what its etymology indicates that which moves or influences the mind. It has been said that an action without a motive would be an effect without a cause, and as, to take for example Criminal cases, the particulars of external situation and conduct will in general correctly denote the motive for Criminal action, the absence of all evidence of an inducing cause is reasonably regarded where the fact is doubtful as affording a strong presumption of innocence (5). Preparation is also relevant it being obviously important in the consideration of the question whether a man did a particular act or not. Measures calculated to bring it about. Preparation be preceded not only by impelling motives. The existence of a design or plan is usually the subsequent doing of the act planned.

(1) As to the inferences to be drawn from absconding see R v Sorob Roy 5 W R Cr 28 30 (1866)

(2) Steph Dig Art 7 illust (d) see s 9 illust (c) post

(3) See R v Lillyman 2 Q B (1896) 167 C C R R v Osborne 1 K B (1905) 551

(4) R v MacDonald 10 B L R App 2 (1872) the absence of the accused at the time when a complaint is made against him in cases coming within this Illustration does not affect the relevancy of such complaint and therefore does not exclude it. In England evidence of complaint is now admissible only in cases of rape and kindred offences against females. Phipson Ev 5th Ed 99 This Illustration shows that the rule is otherwise in this country. See R v Pink 6 C & P,

39 R v Ridsdale Starkie Ev 469 note Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 23 24 Steph Dig Art 8 Phipson Ev, 5th Ed 99 wife's complaint in Ecclesiastical Courts see Lockwood v Lockwood 2 Curt 281 and complaints as evidence of mental and bodily feeling see R v Vincent 9 C & P 91 R v Conde 10 Cox 547 cf a 14 post

(5) See notes to s 3 ante. But it is held that the fact of the evidence of the motive not being clear is no reason for disbelieving a plain straightforward case.—Emp v Balam Das 49 C 348

(6) Wills Circ. Ev 6th Ed, 79 Norton Ev 109 Cunningham Ev, 93 94 Best Ev §§ 454—457, the case of Patch cited in and in Steph. Introd., §§ 99—106 Burrill Circ. Ev., 343 also in, 546 be any motive which can be assigned, the adequacy of that motive is not in all cases necessary. Atrocious crimes have been committed from very slight motives (1) The mere fact, however, of a party being so situated that an advantage would accrue to him from the commission of a crime, amounts to nothing, or next to nothing, as a proof of his having committed it (2) A letter written by the solicitors of a Company to the plaintiff stating that the Company declined to continue the negotiations for a contract because of the defendant's threats, was held admissible (though not necessarily conclusive) evidence that the negotiations were in fact discontinued because of the defendant's threats (3) Further, the existence of motives invisible to all except the person who is influenced by them must not be overlooked (4) 'It is sometimes' (Professor Wigmore points out) 'popularly supposed that in order to establish a charge of crime, the prosecution must show a possible motive. But this notion is without foundation.' Assuming for purposes of argument that it strictly discover ice The ' absence

but the mere absence of any one kind cannot be fatal. There must have been a plan to do the act (we may assume) the accused must have been present (assuming it was done by manual action) but there may be no evidence of preparation, or there may be no evidence of presence, yet the remaining facts may furnish ample proof. The failure to produce evidence of some appropriate motive may be a great weakness in the whole body of proof, but it is not a fatal one as a matter of law. In other words there is no more necessity in the law of evidence to discern and establish the particular existing emotion or some possible one, than to use any other particular kind of evidential fact" (5) An emotion may impel against, as well as towards, an act. Thus a defendant's strong feelings of affection for a deceased person would work against the doing of violence upon him and would thus be relevant to show the not doing (6)

The reasons which exist for the relevancy of evidence of preparation or design have been already given. Design may be proved by an utterance in which it is asserted, by conduct indicating the inward existence of design, by evidence of prior or subsequent existence of the design as indicating its existence at the time in question (7) Previous attempts to commit an offence are closely allied to preparations for the commission of it, and only differ in being carried one step further and nearer to the Criminal act, of which, however, like the former, they fall short (8) Preparation and previous attempts (9) are instances of previous conduct of the party influencing the fact in issue or relevant fact, but other conduct also, whether of a party or of an agent to

(1) Per Lord Campbell C. J. in R v Palmer cited in Wills Circ Ev 6th Ed 63. R v Hedger supra 131

(2) Best Ev § 453

(3) Skinner & Co v Siew & Co L. R. 2 Ch. D. (1894) 581

(4) As to acts apparently motiveless see R v Haynes 1 F. & F. 666 667. R v Michael Stokes 3 C. & K. 185 188 and next note

(5) Wigmore Ev § 118 citing Pointer v U.S. 151 U.S. 396 (Amer.) [the absence of evidence suggesting a motive is a circumstance in favour of the accused but proof of motive is never indispensable to conviction] State v Rathbun 74 Conn. 524 (Amer.) [the other evidence may be such as to justify a conviction without any motive being shown]

(6) Wigmore Ev § 118

(7) Id § 237 et seq. e.g. possession of tools materials preparations journeys experiments enquiries and the like

(8) Best Ev § 455 s. 14 post illustra.

(9) (i) (o) as to the probative force of and infirmative circumstances connected with preparation and previous attempt see Best Ev §§ 456 457

(9) See illustra. (c) (d), & s. 14 illustra. (i) (j) (o) or designed (1) Preparation is an instance of previous conduct of the party influencing the fact in issue or relevant fact, but other conduct also, whether of a party or of an agent to a party, whether previous or subsequent, and whether influencing or influenced by a fact in issue or relevant fact, is also admissible, the conduct of a party being always extremely relevant, for reasons some of which appear in the Commentary to the section. See Introduction, ante, and Notes, post

s 3 ("Fact in issue")

(Statements relevant under other sections)

s 3 ("Relevant")

ss 17-31 (Oral and Documentary admission)

s 3 ("Fact")

s 50 (Opinion on relationship expressed by conduct)

ss 10, 14, 17-39 155, 157

Motive, Preparation and Conduct—Steph Dig, Art 7, Wills' Circumstantial Evidence, passim, Best, Ev, §§ 91, 92, 452-467, Burrill on Circumstantial Evidence, Arthur Wills on Circumstantial Evidence, Philip's Famous Cases on Circumstantial Evidence passim, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 121, Norton, Ev, 107, Cunningham, Ev, 93, Taylor, Ev, §§ 104, 1204, 1205, Roscoe, N P Ev, 28, 67, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 7, 14-22, 83, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 63, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 117, 237, et seq Statements accompanying Acts—Steph Dig, Arts 7, 8, ib, Note V, Best, Ev, § 495, Greenleaf, Ev, § 108, Wharton, Ev, §§ 258, 259 Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 47, Starkie, Ev, 51-53, 87-89, 166-171, Taylor, Ev, §§ 583-589, Roscoe, N P Ev, 51-53, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 68-73, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 23, Statements affecting Conduct—Steph Dig, Art 8, Taylor, Ev, §§ 809-816, Best, Ev, §§ 574, 575, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 241, Norton, Ev, 106, Roscoe, N P Ev, 64-66, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 430-439, Wharton, Ev, §§ 1136, 1153

COMMENTARY.

Motive in the correct sense is the emotion supposed to have led to the act
the motive, is merely the possible entical with the motive itself, and it external fact is admissible as a motive, but whether it is admissible to show the probable existence of the emotion or motive (2) Generally the voluntary acts of sane persons have an impelling emotion or motive (3) It has, therefore, already been observed that the absence of all evidence of an inducing cause is reasonably regarded, where the fact is doubtful, as affording a strong presumption of innocence (4) If there

(1) See Wigmore, Ev, 237 Design or plan should be distinguished from intent The latter in the substantive law is a proposition in issue Design or plan is evidence of intent ib Design should also be distinguished from emotion or motive, though the same facts may be evidence of either

(2) Wigmore, Ev, § 117

(3) See Wigmore, Ev, § 118 Norton, Ev, 107 In Palmer's case (see Steph Introd, 107-158) Rolfe B, in addressing the jury, said—"Had the prisoner the opportunity of administering poison, that was one thing Had he any motive to do so, that is another" Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed 356

(4) Wills' Circumstantial Evidence 6th Ed, 260 Burrill's Circ Ev, 281, et seq Best, Ev, § 453, see illustrs (a), (b) The absence of all motive for a crime when corroborated by independent evidence of the prisoner's previous

insanity is not without weight R v Sheekh Mustafa 1 W R Cr, 19 (1864), R v Sorob Roy 5 W R Cr 28, 31 (1866) R v Bahar Ali 15 W R Cr, 46 (1871) Did Gazi v R (1907), 34 C, 686 (absence of motive), R v Jaichand Mundie, 7 W R Cr 60 (1867), proof of motive not necessary "In estimating probabilities motives cannot in a general sense be safely left out of the account. Where the motive is a pecuniary one, the wealth of the offender is no unimportant consideration" Per Sir Lawrence Peel C J in R v Hedger, 101 (1852) Evidence as to the motives with which a prisoner commits an offence should be direct evidence of the strictest character R v Zuhir, 10 W R Cr, 11 (1868) The motives of parties can only be ascertained by inference drawn from facts Taylor v Williams, 2 B and Ad, 845 857

be any motive which can be assigned, the adequacy of that motive is not in all cases necessary. Atrocious crimes have been committed from very slight motives (1). The mere fact, however, of a party being so situated that an advantage would accrue to him from the commission of a crime amounts to nothing or next to nothing as a proof of his having committed it (2). A letter written by the solicitors of a Company to the plaintiff stating that the Company declined to continue the negotiations for a contract because of the defendant's threats, was held admissible (though not necessarily conclusive) evidence that the negotiations were in fact discontinued because of the defendant's threats (3). Further, the existence of motives visible to all except the person who is influenced by them must not be overlooked (4). It is sometimes (Professor Wigmore points out) popularly supposed that in order to establish a charge of crime, the prosecution must show a possible motive. But this notion is without foundation. Assuming for purposes of argument that every act must have a motive or an impelling emotion (which is not strictly correct) yet it is always possible that this necessary emotion may be undiscoverable and thus the failure to discover it does not signify its non-existence. The kinds of evidence to prove an act vary in probative strength and the absence of one kind may be more significant than the absence of another, but the mere absence of any one kind cannot be fatal. There must have been a plan to do the act (we may assume) the accused must have been present (assuming it was done by manual action) but there may be no evidence of preparation or there may be no evidence of presence, yet the remaining facts may furnish ample proof. The failure to produce evidence of some appropriate motive may be a great weakness in the whole body of proof, but it is not a fatal one as a matter of law. In other words there is no more necessity in the law of evidence to discern and establish the particular existing emotion or some possible one than to use any other particular kind of evidential fact (5). An emotion may impel against, as well as towards, an act. Thus a defendant's strong feelings of affection for a deceased person would work against the doing of violence upon him and would thus be relevant to show the not doing (6).

The reasons which exist for the relevancy of evidence of preparation or design have been already given. Design may be proved by an utterance in which it is asserted, by conduct indicating the inward existence of design, by evidence of prior or subsequent existence of the design as indicating its existence at the time in question (7). Previous attempts to commit an offence are closely allied to preparations for the commission of it, and only differ in being carried one step further and nearer to the Criminal act, of which, however, like the former they fall short (8). Preparation and previous attempts (9) are instances of previous conduct of the party influencing the fact in issue or relevant fact, but other conduct also, whether of a party or of an agent to

(1) Per Lord Campbell C J in R v Palmer cited in Wills Circ Ev 6th Ed 63. R v Hedger supra 131.

(2) Best Ev § 453.

(3) Skinner & Co v Shev & Co L R 2 Ch D (1894) 581.

(4) As to acts apparently motiveless see R v Haynes 1 F & F 666 667. R v Michael Stokes 3 C & K. 185 188 and next note.

(5) Wigmore Ev § 118 citing Pointer v U S 151 U S 396 (Amer) [the absence of evidence suggesting a motive is a circumstance in favour of the accused but proof of motive is never indispensable to conviction] State v Rathbun 74 Conn 524 (Amer) [the other evidence may be such as to justify a conviction without any motive being shown].

(6) Wigmore Ev § 118.

(7) Id § 237 et seq e.g. possession of tools materials preparations journeys experiments enquiries and the like.

(8) Best Ev § 455 s. 14 post illustrates (i) (j) as to the probative force of and unfavourable circumstances connected with preparation and previous attempt see Best Ev §§ 456 457.

(9) See illustrations (c) (d) & s. 14 illustrates (i) (j) (o).

a party, whether previous(1) or subsequent(2), and whether influencing or influenced by a fact in issue or relevant fact, is also made admissible under this section

The second clause applies to the party's agents as well as the party himself "Party" includes not only the plaintiff and defendant in a Civil suit, but parties in a Criminal prosecution, as for instance, a prisoner charged with murder (3) The conduct need not, to be relevant, be contemporaneous Though concurrence of time must always be considered as material to show the connection, it is by no means essential (4) "If such conduct influences or is influenced" means "if such conduct directly and immediately influences or is influenced" (5) The conduct of a party is extremely relevant (6) It should be remembered that a man's conduct is not only what he does but also what he refrains from doing and that the latter is often the more significant (7) The illustrations given are so many instances of natural presumptions which the Court or jury may draw From preparations prior, or flight subsequent to, a crime, may be inferred or presumed the guilt of the party against whom such conduct is proved (8) Other presumptions from conduct arise in the case of flight (9), silence (10), evasive or false response (11) (v. post), possession of documents, or property connected with the offence (12), change of demeanour in or in the circumstances of, the accused (13) as his becoming suddenly rich his squandering unusual sums of money and the like, attempts to stifle or evade justice or mislead enquiry (14) (as flight, keeping concealed concealing things, obliteration of marks, subornation of evidence, bribery, collusion with officers and the like) and fear indicated by passive deportment (15), as by trembling, stammering starting, etc., or by a

(1) See illusts (d) (e) as to previous and subsequent conduct see Best Ev § 452

(2) See illusts (e) (i)

(3) R v Abdullah 7 A 385 399 (1885) (F B) in which the terms of this section are discussed see R v Arnoll 8 Cox C C 439 3 Russ Cr 489

(4) Field Ev 6th Ed 68 Whalley Stokes 856 Taylor Ev § 588 589 Rouch v G W R 1 Q B 60 but see also R v Bedingfield 14 Cox 341 Agos sin v London Tram Co 21 W R (Eng) 199 R v Goddard, 15 Cox 7 Lees v Marton 1 M & R, 210 Thompson v Treton on Skin 402 v post

(5) R v Abdullah supra 395 396 contra per Mamood J ib 400

(6) Ib 394, Balmakand v Ghansam 22 C 391 404 406 (1894) R v Ishri (1907) 29 A, 46 Dalip Singh v Nossal Kumar P C (1908) 30 A 258 [intention inferred from subsequent conduct of accused] R v Heranuu 5 W R Cr 5 (1866) R v Malik 37 A 395 (1915) [presumption of guilty intent] Karah Prasad Ginn v King Emperor 44 C 359 (1917) See as to conduct R v Jara Hasji 11 Bom H C R 245 (1874) and Wigmore Ev sub tac

(7) Ram Narain Singh v Chata Nag per Banking Association 43 C 332 (1915) per Woodroffe J See Watson v Moleish Nara n Roy 24 W R 176 (1875)

(8) Norton Ev 107

(9) Illust (i) ante absconding is usually but slight evidence of guilt R v Sorab

Roy 5 W R Cr 28 (1866), R v Gobordhan 9 A 528 568 (1887) as to the obsolete maxim fatetur facinus qui judicium fugit (he who flies judgment confesses his guilt) see Best Ev § 460—465 Norton Ev 110 see a 9 illust (c) post

(10) v post

(11) Norton Ev 106 107 and post, Best Ev 574 see Majority v L G & D R, ante for an example of inferences from conduct of the character above mentioned see R v Somi 13 M 426 432 (1890)

(12) Illust (i) ante see R v Coir toiser Norton Ev 111 Taylor Ev § 595 R v Cooper 1 Q B D, 15 Letters etc found in a man's house after his arrest are admissible in evidence if their previous existence has been proved, R v Amir Khan 9 B L R 36 70 71 (1871)

(13) Best Ev § 459

(14) Arthur P Wills' Circ Ev 138. Best Ev § 460, Norton Ev, 110 111, Illusts (e) (i) ante R v Dunellan in Steph Introd 75—81 and Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed 376 380, destruction of marks see R v Cook and R v Greenacre cited in Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed 134—136 and Norton Ev 111

(15) Best Ev § 466 Trial of Eugene Aram cited in Wills' Circ Ev 6th Ed 121 122 and Norton Ev 111 112 R v Peter Ram 3 W R Cr 11 (1865) [conduct of accused before and after crime] R v Belaree 5 W R Cr.

de ire for secrecy(1), e.g., as by disguising the person or choosing a spot supposed to be out of the view of others. Where a woman charged with a murder led the Police to a place where she produced ornaments which the victim had worn at the time of the murder, this was held to be conduct admissible in evidence against her (2). The conduct or demeanour of a prisoner on being charged with the crime, or upon allusions being made to it, is frequently given in evidence against him (3). But evidence of this description ought to be regarded with caution (4). Again in order to ascertain the real intention of parties to an instrument evidence of what they have done under it since its execution is relevant. The principle upon which such evidence is admitted, is contained in the maxim optimus interpret rerum usus (5). And so in the case of the Attorney General v. Drummond, (6) Lord Chancellor Sugden said — "Tell me what you have done under such a deed, and I will tell you what that deed means." As to the admissibility of judgments under this section see case noted below (7) and as to the admissibility of opinion on relationship, expressed by conduct see section 50, post. Instances of admission by the conduct or acts of a party to Civil suits are of frequent occurrence. A party's admission by conduct as to the existence or non existence of any material fact may always be proved against him (8) and evidence on his part

23 24 (1865) [conduct of the prisoner since arrest, feigning insanity general demeanour]

(1) Best Ev. § 467 Norton Ev. 113

(2) R. v. Muri (1909) 31 A. 592

(3) R. v. Smithers 5 C. & P. 332, R. v. Bartlett 7 C. & P. 832 R. v. Mallory 13 Q. B. D. 33 R. v. Tattershall 2 Leach 984 R. v. Phillips 1 Lew. C. C. 103 R. v. Tate C. C. A. (1908) 2 K. B. 680 at p. 915 R. v. Cramp 14 Cox 390

(4) 1 Phillips and Arnold 10th Ed. 403 Roscoe Cr. Ev. § 3 12th Ed. 48

(5) Robert Watson & Co. v. Mohesh Nara 24 W. R. 17 (1875) in which the question was whether a pottah conveyed an estate for life only or an estate of inheritance their Lordships of the Privy Council said — "In order to determine this question their Lordships must arrive as well as they can at the real intention of the parties to be collected chiefly no doubt from the terms of the instrument itself but to a certain extent also from the circumstances existing at the time of its execution and further by the conduct of the parties since its execution. In this case the pottah was less than 20 years old at the time of the institution of the suit from which it appears that in India the maxim is not restricted to ancient documents i.e. documents at least 30 years old (see Field Ev. 6th Ed. 68 Taylor Ev. §§ 1204 1205 Roscoe N. P. Ev. 28). See also Girdhar Naggyshet v. Ganpat Moroba 11 Bom. H. C. R. 129 (1874) Nidhikrishna v. Nistorini 13 Bom. L. R. 416 420 (1874) s. c. 21 W. R. 386 Cheetun Lall v. Chutterdharee Lall 19 W. R. 437 (1873) Ram Radha Lall v. Gureedharee Sahoo 20 W. R. 243 (1873) [boundary dispute] Narsingh Djal v. Ram Nara 30 C. 883 896

(1903) as to usage affecting contracts see s. 92 Prov. 5 post and note with respect to the course of dealing between the parties when the meaning of a document is doubtful Bourne v. Gallif 11 C. & F. 45 [evidence of former transactions], Harrison v. Barton 30 L. J. Ch. 213, Forbes v. Watt L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. & D. 214 Royal Exchange Ass. Corp. v. Tod 8 T. L. R. 669 Taylor Ev. § 1198 but not when it is clear (Morshall v. Berridge 19 Ch. D. 233 241 Iggulden v. May 9 Ves. 233), the sense in which both but not one only of the parties have acted on it is admissible in explanation Hippen Ev. 5th Ed. 591 Evidence of previous dealings is admissible only for the purpose of explaining the terms used in a contract and not to impose on a party an obligation as to which the contract is silent Haji Mohamed v. E. Spurrier & Co. 2 B. L. R. 691 (1900) Kulada Prasad Deghoria v. Kahi Das Nauk 42 C. 536 (1915) For conduct showing intention not to be bound by contract see Mallura Molan Saha v. Ram Kumar Saha 43 C. 790 (1916) See generally as to the admissibility of extrinsic evidence to affect documents the introduction to Chapter VI post.

(6) Dru & War 368

(7) The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhara Singh 12 A. 1 17 45 (1889) and notes to s. 13 post.

(8) Taylor Ev. §§ 804 806 and cases there cited. The original draft of the Evidence Act contained the following section. A conflict of any party to any proceeding upon the occasion of anything being done or said in his presence in relation to matters in question, and the things so said or done are relevant facts when they render probable or improbable any relevant fact alleged or denied in to explain or rebut such admissions is also receivable (1) The plaintiff's title to sue, or the character in which the plaintiff sues or in which the defendant is sued, is frequently admitted by the acts and conduct of the opposite party, and in some cases the admission though not strictly an estoppel, is practically conclusive Thus, if B has dealt with A as farmer of the post-horse duties, it is evidence in an action by A against B to prove that he is such farmer and payment of money is an admission against the payer, that the receiver is the proper person to receive it (2) So also suppression of documents is an admission that their contents are unfavourable to the party suppressing them (v ante) When A brings an action against B to recover possession of land he thereby admits B's possession of the land (3) Mere subscription of a paper, as witness is not in itself proof of his knowledge of its contents (4) When a landlord quietly suffers a tenant to expend money in making alterations and improvements in the premises it is evidence of his consent to the alterations (5) And when a party is himself a defendant (whether in a Civil or Criminal proceeding) and is charged as hearing some particular character, the fact of his having acted in that character will in all cases be sufficient evidence, as an admission that he bears that character without reference to his appointment being in writing Thus upon an indictment against a letter carrier for embezzlement, proof that he acted as such was held to be sufficient without showing his appointment (6) Delay in suing to enforce alleged rights may be construed as an admission of their non existence (7) Conversations that explain a man's conduct are admissible in evidence (8) As to written and oral admissions see s 17 post and for further instances of admissions by conduct, see the next paragraph but one

Statements
accompanying and explaining acts

In English law such statements are said sometimes to be admissible as forming part of the vague and unsatisfactory term res gestæ The first Explanation declares that mere statements are distinguished from acts do not constitute conduct It points to a case in which a person whose conduct is in dispute mixes up together actions and statements, and in such case those actions and statements may be proved as a whole For instance a person is seen running down a street in a wounded condition and calling out the name of his assailant, and the circumstances under which the injuries were inflicted Here what the person says and what he does may be taken together and proved as a whole (9) A statement may be admissible not as standing alone, but as respect of the person so conducting him self The provisions of this proposed section are however incorporated in other parts of the present Act see present sections s 11 post s 114 illustris (g) (h) Field Ev 6th Ed 120 as to conduct of family showing recognition of family arrangement see Bhubaneswari Devi v Hariharan Surma 6 C 724 (1881) (1) Melhuish v Collier 15 Q B 878 and s 9 post Powell Ev 9th Ed 430—439

(2) Roscoe N F Ev 67 Radford v McIntosh 3 T R 632 Peacock v Harris 10 East 104 James v Bion 2 S N & St 606 Taylor Ev p 567 note Norton Ev p 114 as to estoppel arising from the acts of a party see s 115 post (3) Stanford v Hurlstone L R, 9 Ch 116

(4) Harding v Crethorn 1 Esp 58
(5) Doe v Allen 3 Taunt 78 80
Doe v Pice 1 Esp 366 Neale v Parkin

1 Esp 229 Stalley v White 14 East 332

(6) Roscoe Cr Ev 7 R v Borrett 6 C & P 124 see s 91 exception (1) post and notes thereto See Taylor Ev § 173

(7) Juggurnath v Syid Shah Mal 14 B L R 386 (1874) Rajendra Nath v Jogendra Nath 14 M I A 67 (1871) s c 15 W R (F C.) 41

(8) R v Gandfield 2 Co C C 43
(9) F v Abdullah supra 395 396 per

Petheram C J But the case would be very different if some passer by stopped him and suggested some name or asked some question regarding the transaction If a person were found making such statements without any question first being asked then his statements might be regarded as a part of his conduct But when the statement is made merely in response to some question or objection it shows a state of things introduced not by the fact explaining conduct in reference to relevant facts. So it was held that the answers to his superior officer given by an accused person in explanation of an official irregularity could be proved against him if subsequently ascertained to be false (1). Conduct may be equivocal without statements explanatory and elucidatory of it. Statements accompanying acts are in fact part of the res gestæ just as much as the acts themselves. They are often absolutely necessary to show the animus of the actor. They have been styled verbal acts (2). Thus a payment by a debtor may be explained by his request to apply it to a certain debt. If a debtor leaves home his intent to avoid his creditors may be shown by what he said when leaving (3). The declarations are not admissible simply because they accompany an act; the latter itself must be in issue or relevant; the admissibility of such a statement depends upon the light it throws upon an act which is itself relevant (4). The Evidence Act makes 'those statements admissible and those only which are the essential complements of acts done or refused to be done so that the act itself or the omission to act requires a special significance as a ground for inference with respect to the issues in the case under trial' (5). It is not every declaration that accompanies and purports to explain a fact that will be received, e.g., a declaration that is equivocal (6), or is a mere expression of opinion (7), or is obviously concocted to serve a purpose (8). In other words the statements must really explain the acts (9) and the declaration must relate to and can only be used to explain the fact it accompanies and not previous or subsequent facts (10) unless the transaction be of a continuous nature (11). It is sometimes said that the declaration and act must be by the same person (12). But though such declarations are often the only ones material, the rule is by no means so strictly confined. It is an every day practice in Criminal cases to receive the declarations of the victim as well as those of the assailant. So in cases (concerned in the common It has, indeed, been held he declarations of participants if neither parties nor agents are inadmissible (14), but this limitation cannot be taken as invariable for the exclamations of mere bystanders may sometimes be both material and admissible evidence (15). The declarations are no proof of the fact they accompany, the existence of the latter must be in issue but by the interposition of something else. Id. but see ib. 400 per Mahmood J. and ante.

(1) S v Ganesh 4 Bom L R 784 (1902).

(2) Norton Ev 106. Bates v Bailey 5 T R 512. Hyde v Palmer 3 B & S 657. 32 L J Q B 176. Bennison v Cartwright 5 B P & S 1.

(3) Bateman v Bailey supra. Roscoe N P Ev 52.

(4) Wright v Tatham 1 (1838) 5 Cl & Fin 670. R v Bliss ib. 550. Hyde v Palmer supra. Roscoe N P Ev 53.

When any facts are proper evidence upon an issue all oral or written declarations which can explain such facts may be received in evidence. Wright v Tatham supra per Baron Parke. See Steph Dig p 161.

(5) R v Rana Biraja 3 B 12 17 (1878) per West J.

(6) R v Bliss supra. R v Hann Wright 13 Cox 171. Roscoe N P Ev 53.

(7) Wright v Tatham supra.

(8) Tlopson v Trevason supra. R v Abrahams 2 C & K 550. Brodie v Brodie 44 L T N S 307. Starkie Ev 89 and see American cases and authorities in Phipson Ev 5th Ed 47.

(9) See remarks in R v Rana Biraja supra.

(10) Hyde v Palmer supra.

(11) Bennison v Cartwright supra. Rajan v Hag 2 Bing 99.

(12) Howe v Malkin 27 W R (Eng) 340. 40 L T 196.

(13) R v Gordon 2 How St Tr 570. R v Hunt 3 B & Ald 54. R v O'Connell Arm & Tr R 775. The present section deals only with statements by parties; the declarations mentioned in the text would be admissible under s 10 post.

(14) R v Petcher 7 Cox 9. Bruce v Ascalafolo 11 Ex 129.

(15) See note (12) supra. ante such evidence may be admissible under s 6 ante see s 6 illustr (a) and note ante.

established independently" (1) As to the admissibility of declarations as evidence of mental and physical conditions, see the fourteenth section, post Illustrations (j) and (k) are illustrations of statements accompanying and explaining the conduct of a person an offence against whom is being enquired into Under these illustrations, the terms in which the complaint was made are relevant (2) "A distinction is to be marked here between a bare statement of the fact of rape or robbery, and a complaint The latter evidences conduct, the former has no such tendency There may be sometimes a difficulty in discriminating between a statement and a complaint It is conceived that the essential difference between the two is that the latter is made with a view to redress or punishment and must be made to some one in authority—the Police, for instance, or a parent, or some other person to whom the complainant was justly entitled to look for assistance and protection For instance, a petition impugning the conduct of a Police officer and begging that he may be put on trial is a complaint within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Code (3) The distinction is of importance, because while a complaint is always relevant under particular circumstances, a statement as used as corroborative evidence is not included in the word "conduct" must be read in connection with the 25th and 26th sections, post, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections (5)

In England it is now held that in prosecutions for rape and offences of a similar character, a statement in the nature of a complaint made by the prosecutrix to a third person, not in the presence of the accused, may be given in evidence provided such statement is shown to have been made at the first opportunity which reasonably offered itself after the commission of the offence (6) It was formerly doubted whether the particulars of the complaint could be disclosed by the witnesses for the Crown, either as original or as confirmatory evidence, but it is now settled that they may be so given in evidence in this class of cases, but only in this class, not as being evidence of the truth of the charge against the accused, but as evidence of the consistency of conduct of the prosecutrix with the story told by her in the witness box and as negativing consent on her part (7) It was at one time thought that this evidence was only admissible in cases where non consent was a material element (8) This however is not now the law (9)

In the second Explanation "statement" includes documents addressed to a person and shown to have come to his actual knowledge (10) The statements whether oral or written must affect the conduct if they cannot be shown to have done so they are inadmissible under this section "Statements made in the presence of a party are admissible as the groundwork of his conduct whether true or false or evasive in nature or not" (11) The nature of an admission is not a false or evasive nature of an admission or a false response

(1) Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 47 et seq
 (2) As to the English rule on this point see Steph Dig, p 162, Taylor Ev, §581, Roscoe Cr Ev, 25, see R v MacDonald supra Norton Ev, 114, Whitley Stokes 827, R v Lillyman, 31 L J 383 (June 20th, 1896), 2 Q B (1896) 167, R v Osborne (1905), 1 K B, 551
 (3) Gangadhar Pradhan v Emperor, 43 C 173 (1915), but see Emperor v Philel 35 A 102 (1913) (accusation not made as a complaint)
 (4) Norton Ev, 114 See Wills' Ev,

11, for meaning of 'complaint' with Cr Pr Code s 196 see Apurba Krishna Bose v R (1907) 35 C, 141, R v Sham Lal (1889), 14 C, 707
 (5) R v Anna 14 B, 260 (1889)
 (6) R v Osborne (1905), 1 K B, 551
 (7) R v Osborne (1905), 1 K B, 551, R v Lillyman (1896), 2 Q B, 167, R v Ronald (1898), 62 J P 459
 (8) R v Kingham (1902), 66 J P, 393
 (9) Taylor, 581
 (10) Illust. (h), ante, Wright v Tatham (1833), 5 Cl and Fin, 670

would be equivocal per se, and might be unintelligible without our knowledge of what led to it. His act upon the statement and the statement are so blended together, that both form part of the res gestæ, and on this ground again, the statement is as receivable as the act. In point of fact, it is the conduct of the party upon the statement being made, that is the material point, the statements themselves are only material as leading up to and explaining that (1) The mere fact that statements have been made in a party's presence or documents found in his possession, though it may render them admissible against him as original evidence—e.g., as showing knowledge or complicity—will afford no proof per se of the truth of their contents, the ground of reception for the latter purpose is that the party has by his conduct or silence admitted the accuracy of the assertions made (2) And in a recent case it has been held that to render documents found in the possession of a prisoner admissible against him in proof of the contents it must be shown that by some act, speech or writing he has manifested a knowledge of all or any of them and it has been also held that this would apply more strongly when of the documents in question some had been received by him and others written by him (3) In the case of statements made to or in a party's presence he may either reply to them or keep silent (4), or his conduct may be otherwise affected by them (5) When the statement in reply accompanies and explains an act other than the statement, it may be relevant under this section or the section relating to oral or documentary admissions, when it is unaccompanied by any act, it may be relevant under the latter sections. Such statements made in a party's presence and replied to will be evidence against him of the facts stated to the extent that his answer directly or indirectly admits their truth (6) But pre-ence evidence against ill on to reply to such of the maxim qui tacet cases but little reliance on silence or acquiescence

(1) Norton Ev 106 107 It is a general rule that a statement made in the presence of the prisoner and which he might have contradicted if untrue is evidence against him per Field J in R v Mallory 15 Cox 456 458

(2) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 241 and authorities cited at head of commentary A party may on similar grounds be affected by the acquiescence of his agents or others for whose admissions he is responsible ib Haller v Worman 3 L T N S 741 Price v Woodhouse, 3 Ex 616 and see section supra

(3) Laht Chandra Choudhury v R (1911) 39 C 119 Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909) 37 C 91 Wright v Tatham (1838) 5 Cl and Fin 670

(4) Illust (g) ante Neile v Jakle 2 C & K 709 supra

(5) Illusts (f) (h) ante

(6) vide post s 17 et seq Phipson Ev 5th Ed 241 Taylor Ev § 815 Jones v Morrell 1 C & K, 266 R v John 7 C & P 324 Child v Grace 2 C & P 193 R v Welsh 3 F & F 275 and note to this case in 3 Russ Cr 489

(7) Neile v Jakle supra Haystep v Gymer 1 A & E 163 Price v Burt 6 W R (Eng) 40, R v Cox, 1 F & F,

90 R v Mallory 15 Cox 458

(8) See Child v Grace 2 C & P 193 per Taddy Serjt The not making an answer may under some circumstances be quite as strong as the making one per Best C J Really it is most dangerous evidence A man may say this is impertinent in you and I will not answer your question See also Moore v Smith 14 Serg & R 393 Lucy v Mouslet 5 H & N 229 Biedemann v Walpole (1891) 2 Q B 534 Norton Ev 113 So statements made in a party's presence during a trial are not generally receivable against him merely on the ground that he did not deny them for the regularity of judicial proceedings prevents the free interposition allowed in ordinary conversation Melen v Andreas 1 M & M 336 R v Appleby 2 Starkie N P C 33 R v Turner 1 Moo C C 347 Child v Grace supra Even here however cases may occur in which the refusal of a party to repel a charge made in a Court of Justice Simpson v Robinson 12 Q B 512, or to cross examine or contradict a witness, R v Coyle 7 Cox 74 or to reply to an affidavit Morgan v Evans 3 C & F, 159, 203 Freeman v Cox 8 Ch D 148, Ha pden v Halls, 27 Ch. D., 251, "may frequently occur with reference to unanswered letters or failure to object to an account. Here the question will also be whether there was any duty or necessity to answer or object. The rule has been stated by Bowen, L. J., to be that, "silence is not evidence of an admission, unless there are circumstances which render it more reasonably probable that a man would answer the charge made against him than that he would not" (1). A man is not bound to answer every officious letter written to him. Though unanswered, a letter may be evidence of a demand (2). The mere failure to answer or object will not generally imply an admission (3). But it is otherwise if the writer is entitled to an answer, so, in the case of a letter written by A to B, to which the position of the parties then the subject of it is a contract or —the silence of B may be important in as much as it has been held in certain old cases that an account rendered will be regarded as allowed if it is not objected to within a second or third post or at least if it is kept for any length of time by the addressee without his making an objection, it becomes a stated account. It is said however in Taylor on Evidence to be doubtful how far these cases would be followed at the present day, and whether (apart from any special circumstances under which the account is sent in) any valid distinction can be drawn between accounts rendered between merchants and those between other afford a strong presumption that the imputations made against him are correct. In Sookram Misser v W Crundy 19 W R 283—285 (1873) Phear J said. It is true that silence on the part of defendant during the trial of a case in regard to any matter brought against him in the course of the case might possibly be of some value afterwards irrespective of the decree as amounting to an admission on his part that that which was alleged and with regard to which he had kept silence was true. See Phipson Ev 5th Ed 241 and see American cases there cited and Cunningham's Ev 95 and 96. So when a Judge at a trial made a proposal as to the course of proceedings in the presence of counsel who raised no objection it was held not open to counsel subsequently to question the propriety of the course to which he had impliedly given his assent. Morrish v Murray, 13 M & W, 52 and if a client be present in Court and stand by and see his solicitor enter into terms of an agreement he is not at liberty afterwards to repudiate it. Swinfen v Swinfen 24 Beav 549 559. Assatic Steam Navigation Co v Bengal Coal Co (1908) 35 C 751.

(1) Wiedemann v Walpole supra at p 539 and see per Willes J in Richards v Gellatly L R 7 C P at p 131 the relation between the parties must be such that a reply might be reasonably expected. Norton Ev 113, Edwards v Toulis 5 M & G 674. The only fair way of stating the rule of law is that in every case you must look at all the circumstances under which the letter was written and you must determine for yourself whether the circumstances are such that the refusal to reply alone amounts to an admission. per Kay L J in Wiedemann v Walpole 2 Q B (1891) 541 and see per Jenkins C J in R v Bal Gangadhar 28 B at p 491 (1904).

(2) Norton Ev 113. See also Roscoe N P Ev 53.

(3) See Farlie v Denton 3 C & P 103. What is said to a man's face he is in some degree collected on to contradict if he does not acquiesce in it but it is too much to say that a man by omitting to answer a letter admits the truth of the statements it contains. per Lord Tenderden or that every paper a man holds purporting to charge him with a debt or liability is evidence against him. Doe v Frankis 11 A & E 792 per Lord Denman and see Richards v Gellatly L R 7 C P, 127. Wiedemann v Walpole supra.

(4) Lucy v Mouflet 5 H & N 229. Edwards v Toulis supra. Richardson v Dunn 2 Q B 218. Gaskill v Skene 14 Q B 664, Farlie v Denton supra. Freeman v Cox supra, Hampden v Wallis supra.

(5) Taylor Ev § 910 and cases there cited.

them, and they are frequently received in Criminal prosecutions (1). So, also, the opportunity of constant access to documents may sometimes, by raising a presumption that their contents are known, and of non objection, afford ground of correctness of such society recorded account book kept openly in a club room (4) are evidence against the members. On similar grounds books of account which have been kept between master and servant, tradesman and shopman, banker and customer or co partners (5), will occasionally be admitted as evidence even in favour of the party by whom they have been written, provided that the opposite party has had ample opportunities for testing from time to time the accuracy of the entries (6). In the case cited below the accused was convicted of theft on the evidence of an accomplice which was treated as corroborated in material particulars by the depositions of a Police officer and the complainant to the effect that the accused pointed out the house which he had entered on the night of the offence and the various places in the house connected with the offence.

Held (1) that the evidence of the Police officer and the complainant as to the pointing out of the various places by the accused was really evidence of the confession of his guilt made while he was in the custody of the Police officer and was therefore inadmissible under ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act of 1872, (2) that the evidence could not be treated as evidence of conduct apart from the accompanying statements under this section, and (3) that the statement made by the Police officer to the complainant in the presence of the accused that he (the accused) was going to show the various places connected with the theft was not admissible under explanation 2 to this section because the conduct apart from the accompanying statements was not shown to be relevant, and, secondly, because under the circumstances such a statement could not be said to affect the conduct of the accused (7).

9 Facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which support or rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which establish the identity (8) of any thing or person whose identity is relevant, or fix the time or place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact

Facts necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts

(1) Lalit Chandra Choudhury v R (1911) 39 C 119

(2) Taylor Ev § 812 See notes to s 14 post

(3) Raggett v Musgrave 2 C & P 556 Alderson v Clay 1 Starkie 405 Aspelt v Sercombe 5 Ex 147

(4) Wile v Adamson 1 Phillips Ev 339

(5) See Lindley Partnership 536 5th Ed and cases there cited and note to s 18 post

(6) Taylor Ev § 812 and cases there cited as to books of a Company see Lindley, Company Law 312 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 243 244 344 and books of Corporations Taylor Ev §§ 1781—1783 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 243 244 352 Roscoe & P Ev 123 214—215 Grant on Corporations 317—319 and note to s 35 post

(7) El v Hira Gobar 21 Bom. L R 724 s c 52 I A 601 20 Cr L J. 681

(8) See as to identity Introduction to ss 45—51 post (opinion evidence) Wigmore Ev § 410 et seq Witnesses may state their belief as to the identity of persons present in Court or not and may also identify absent persons by photographs produced and proved to be theirs [Phipson Ev 5th Ed 376 Frith v Frith L R P D (1896) p 74 note to s 35 post Introduction to ss 45—50 post Rogers Expert Testimony § 140]. The same rule applies to identification of things (ib). It is well settled that for certain purposes photographs may be received in evidence. Thus whenever it is important that the locus in quo should be described to the jury it is competent to introduce in evidence a photographic view of it. So also in an action to recover damages for assault committed with a raw hide a plaintiff was allowed to introduce a ferrotype of his back taken three days after the injury the person taking the same having testified that it was a happened, or which show the relation of parties by whom any such fact was transacted, are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose

Illustrations

- (a) The question is, whether a given document is the Will of A

The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts (f)

- (b) A sues B for libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A. B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true

The position and relation of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B (2)

- (c) A is accused of a crime

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house is relevant, under section 8, as conduct subsequent to, and affected by, facts in issue

The fact that at the time when he left home, he had sudden and urgent business, at the place to which he went, is relevant, as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent (3)

- (d) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A 'I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer.' This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct which is relevant as a fact in issue (4) correct representation Rogers op cit Harris' Law of Identification, §§ 12, 157—178, 352, 590 642 As to photographic copies of writings for purpose of comparison, see a 73, post

(1) As explanatory or introductory Also when the question is Will or no Will such facts may contradict or support the terms of the alleged Will whence forgery might be presumed or negatived Such facts would then 'rebut or support an inference suggested by a fact in issue' (Norton, Ev., 116) It is to be observed that the factum and not the construction of the Will is here the matter in issue As to evidence of surrounding circumstances to aid of construction, see Introduction to Chap VI post

(2) The object with which what would otherwise be collateral matter is receivable here is to show the malice or animus of the libeller, though to go into the full details of a quarrel would be too remote and would waste too much time It is

be perfectly innocent Anything, therefore that the party says at the time of the act is receivable as explanatory of a relevant fact It would also be receivable as part of the res gesta and as a declaration accompanying an act The question frequently arises in bankruptcy, when it is necessary to decide whether leaving the house is an act of bankruptcy or not In order to prove the intent with which the bankrupt departed from his dwelling house evidence of what he said is admissible as forming part of the res gesta Norton Ev 118, Roscoe N P Ev 52, Baileman v Bailey, 5 T R 512, Ambrose v Clendon Ca t, Hardw, 267, Rouch v G W Ry Co, 1 Q B, 51, Smith v Cramer 1 N C 585 The details just as in illust (b) are not admissible generally except as corroborating the allegation of the suddenness and urgency of the emergency which caused the departure Declarations made or letters written during absence from home are admissible as original evidence since the departure and absence are regarded as one continuing act Taylor Ev, §§ 583 589

(4) post Hadley v Carter, 8 New Hamp. P, 40, Bruckowsky v Thacker, Spink and others 6 B L R, 107 arising from the act of absconding is thus 'rebutted' The fact of absconding is in itself equivocal It may be the result of guilty knowledge or conscience, or it may

(e) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says as he delivers it, 'A says you are to hide this'. B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction (1)

(f) A is tried for a riot, and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob

The cries of the mob are relevant, as explanatory of the nature of the transaction. (2)

Principle.—As the 7th and 8th sections provide generally for the admission of facts, the present section may be said to strictly constitute a fact in issue, may yet be regarded as forming a part of it, in the sense that they accompany and tend to explain the main fact, such as identity (4) names, dates, places, the description, circumstances and relations of the parties and other explanatory and introductory facts of a like nature (5). The particulars receivable will necessarily vary with each individual case, it is not all the incidents of a transaction that may be proved, for the narrative might be run down into purely irrelevant and unnecessary detail (6). By the answers to some of such questions, if sufficiently particular for the purpose the fact is individualised (7). See also Commentary, post

s. 3 (Fact)

s. 11 (Rebuttal of inference, etc.)

s. 3 (Fact in issue)

s. 3 (Relevant)

Steph Dig. Art 9 Steph Introd. Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 47 Cunningham Ev. 98 Norton, Ev. 115 Wills Ev. 2nd Ed. 63 Wigmore Ev. §§ 410—416

COMMENTARY.

The seventh section, ante provides for evidence of the state of things under which relevant facts or facts in issue happened, and the 11th and 15th sections post for evidence of similar facts, closely connected with the main fact, and explanatory of it. Evidence in support and particularly in rebuttal of inferences is of a similar explanatory character (8). The eleventh section is very like the present one as to rebutting an inference and forms an instance of sections overtopping one another (9). All the abovementioned facts qualify, explain or complete the main fact in some material particular. A statement which can be shown to be explanatory under this section may be admissible irrespective of whether the person against whom it is given heard it, or was present when it was made (10). But it is necessary to distinguish the purpose for which it is admissible. It is presumed that the statements made by C in the one case and B in the other [illustrates (d) (e) ante] are only to be receivable

(1) v. post

(2) This illustration is founded on the case of R. v. Lord George Gordon 21 How St Tr 514 529. In the case put the cries would be made in the presence of the leader though they were the cries of third parties not of himself. His silence would be equivalent to an admission that he accepted and acquiesced in those cries as explanatory of the common objects of himself as well as of those he led. Under the effect of the next section such cries would be evidence against the accused even if he was not present upon proof of a conspiracy between himself and the rioters joint and common for the perpetration of a wrongful act. Norton Ev. 119. In R. v. Hunt 3 B & Ald 566 evidence given of binners and inscriptions was held to be properly admissible to show the general character and intention of an assembly

(3) Cunningham Ev. 98

(4) See Norton Ev. 119 R. v. Rickman 2 East P. C. 1035 R. v. Rooney 7 C & P 517 R. v. Fursey 6 C & P 81 Wills Ev. 47

(5) See R. v. Amir Khan 9 B. L. R. 36 50 51 (1871)

(6) Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 47 the facts are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose s. 9 supra

(7) Bentham cited in Norton Ev. 44

(8) Illust. (c)

(9) Norton Ev. 115 and Introduction, ante

(10) See illusts. (d) (e)

as evidence that such statements were made, as declarations accompanying and explaining an act, not of the truth of them as affecting B or A respectively. Without some proof of authority given by the parties to be affected, to those making the statements, it is clear that a very dangerous innovation is introduced, whereby persons may suffer in life, person, or property by statements put into their mouths behind their backs, a principle which the law of evidence has hitherto entirely eschewed" (1). Identity may be thought of as a quality of a person or thing. The essential assumption is that two persons or things are thought of as existing and that the one is alleged because of common features to be the same as the other. The process of inference operates by comparing common marks found to exist in the two supposed separate objects of thought with reference to the possibility of their being the same. It follows, that its force depends on the necessariness of the association between the mark and a single object. Where a circumstance, feature or mark may commonly be found possessing it may well be different. But where the objects possessing the mark are only one or a few, and the mark is found in two supposed instances, the chances of the two being different are nil or are comparatively small. For simplicity's sake the evidential circumstances may thus be spoken of as a mark one MS belonging to a totally different identity from that of BS an attested sions of this section. Where one of the main questions for determination in a case was whether a document impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by one AS, a comparison of the thumb impression of the person who presented the document with that of NS was held to be admissible under this section if the similarity of those impressions could establish the identity of that person with AS (4). A and B were charged with theft committed in w that some vidence

A and e or a

so that

ing the various witnesses to mention the utterance as an identifying mark. This utterance, not being used as an assertion to prove any fact asserted therein,

(1) Norton Ev 118 119, per contra Cunningham Ev 98 99, it will be seen from the illustrations themselves that the statement in illust (d), is relevant as explanatory of C's conduct and in (e) of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(2) Wigmore's Evidence § 411. Circumstances identifying persons are corporeal marks, voice, mental peculiarities, clothing, weapons, name, residence, and other circumstances of personal history, ib § 413.

(3) Radhan Singh v Kanay Dicit, 18 A 98 (1895).

(4) R v Fakir Mahomed 1 C W N, 33 34 (1896) see as to identity and post, s 11 and Introductions to ss 45—51.

(5) Emp v Panchu Das 47 C. 671, (F B) s c, 24 C W N 501, 31, C L J., 402.

is not obnoxious to the hearsay rule and may therefore be proved like any other identifying mark. The utterance cannot, however, be used as having any assertive value. From this use of identifying utterances the following superficially similar uses should be distinguished (a) mentioning a third person's utterance as a reason for observing a particular fact, (b) mentioning it as a reason for recollecting a particular fact, (c) using one's own prior utterances of a fact to corroborate one's present testimony and repel the suggestion of recent contrivance (1).

10 Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design

Illustration

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Cabul, the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H, giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A's complicity in it, although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it.

Principle.—The rule which says that a man shall be chargeable with the acts and declarations of his agent or fellow conspirator is not a rule of evidence (2). A conspiracy makes each conspirator liable under the Criminal law for the acts of every other conspirator done in pursuance (3) of the conspiracy. Consequently the admissions of a co conspirator may be used to affect the fact of the conspiracy on the same conditions as his acts when used to create the conspiracy. The rule of evidence which enacts the same rule in its application to torts (4). The tests therefore are the same. The act or the admission of the co conspirator or joint tortfeasor, in other words the question is one of substantive law and its solution is not to be sought in any principle of evidence (5). The principle is substantially the same as that which regulates the relation of agent and principal. When various persons conspire to commit an offence or actionable wrong (e.g., co trespassers or other tortfeasors) each makes the rest his agents to carry the plan into execution. The acts done by any one in reference to the common intention (vis post) is considered to be the act of all. These acts are themselves evidence of the corpus delicti, the conspiracy to be established,

(1) Wigmore Ev. § 416

(3) See however as to this notes post

(2) Prof Thayer in American Law Review LV 80. As to procedure see 4th ed. Salter v. King Emp. 35 C. L. J. 279

(4) See R v. Hardwicke 11 East. 578

(5) Wigmore Ev. § 1079

as evidence that such statements were made, as declarations accompanying and explaining an act, not of the truth of them as affecting B or A respectively. Without some proof of authority given by the parties to be affected, to those making the statements, it is clear that a very dangerous innovation is introduced, whereby persons may suffer in life person or property by statements put into their mouths behind their backs, a principle which the law of evidence has hitherto entirely eschewed" (1) Identity may be thought of as a quality of a person or thing. The essential assumption is that two persons or things are thought of as existing and that the one is alleged because of common features to be the same as the other. The process of inference operates by comparing common marks for objects of thought with reference to It follows, that its force depends on the mark and a single object. Where a circumstance feature or mark may commonly be found the objects that possess that mark are numerous, and therefore two of them possessing it may well be different. But where the objects possessing the mark are only one or a few, and the mark is found in two supposed instances, the chances of the two being different are nil or are comparatively small. For simplicity's sake the evidential circumstances may thus be spoken of as a mark. But in practice it rarely occurs that the evidential mark is a single circumstance. It is by adding circumstance to circumstance that we obtain a composite feature or mark which, as a whole, cannot be supposed to be associated with more than a single object (2) In the undermentioned case (3) one of the questions in issue as to the pedigree of a certain family being whether one GS was son of BS, or of one MS belonging to a totally different family from that of BS, an attested copy of a rublar (or Magistrate's judgment) in some proceedings long anterior to the suit, was tendered in evidence, in which rublar GS was described as the son of BS. It was held that the rublar was admissible in evidence under the provisions of this section. Where one of the main questions for determination in a case was whether a document impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by one NS, a comparison of the thumb impression of the person who presented the document with that of AS was held to be admissible under this section if the similarity of those impressions could establish the identity of that person with AS (4) A and B were charged with theft committed in 1914 in the house of a prostitute, evidence was brought forward to shew that C and D committed a theft in the house of another prostitute in 1918 in some what similar circumstances. Held (Chaudhuri J, dissenting) that the evidence was not admissible either under this section or under s 11 to prove that A and B were the same persons as C and D (5) It often happens that a place or a time is marked significantly by an utterance there or then occurring so that the identification of it may alone be made, or not be made by permitting the various witnesses to mention the utterance as an identifying mark. This utterance, not being used as an assertion to prove any fact asserted therein,

(1) Norton Ev 118 119, per contra Cunningham Ev 98 99 it will be seen from the illustrations themselves that the statement in illustr (d), is relevant as explanatory of C's conduct and in (e) of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(2) Wigmore's Evidence § 411. Circumstances identifying persons are corporeal marks voice mental peculiarities clothing weapons name, residence and other circumstances of personal history, ib § 413.

(3) Radhan Singh v Kanays Ditchi, 18 A 98 (1895).

(4) R v Fakir Mahomed 1 C W N, 33 34 (1896) see as to identity and post, s 11 and Introductions to ss 45—51.

(5) Emp v Panchu Das 47 C 671, (F B) s c 24 C W N, 501, 31, C L J., 402.

is not obnoxious to the hearsay rule and may therefore be proved like any other identifying mark. The utterance cannot, however, be used as having any assertive value. From this use of identifying utterances the following superficially similar utterance as a reason for recollection of a fact to corroborate one's present testimony and repel the suggestion of recent contrivance, (1)

10 Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design

Illustration

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra and F transmitted from Delhi to G, at Cabul the money which C had collected at Calcutta and the contents of a letter written by H, giving an account of the conspiracy are each relevant both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A's complicity in it although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it

Principle—The rule with the acts and declarations of the conspirator is evidence of the existence of the conspiracy (2). A conspiracy is a crime against the public interest, and the law for the acts of every other conspirator done in pursuance of the conspiracy. Consequently the admissions of a co-conspirator may be used to affect the proof against the others on the same conditions as his acts when used to create their legal liability. The inclusion of tortfeasors enacts the same rule in its application to Civil liability for torts (4). The tests therefore are the same whether that which is offered is the act or the admission of the co-conspirator or joint tortfeasor, in other words the question is one of substantive law and its solution is not to be sought in any principle of evidence (5). The principle is substantially the same as that which regulates the relation of agent and principal. When various persons conspire to commit an offence or actionable wrong (e.g., co trespassers or other tortfeasors) each makes the rest his agents to carry the plan into execution. The acts done by any one in reference to the common intention (vide post) is considered to be the act of all. These acts are themselves evidence of the corpus delicti, the conspiracy to be established,

(1) Wigmore Ev. § 416

(2) Prof. Thayer in American Law Review, LV 80. As to procedure see Abdul Aziz v. King Emp., 35 C. L. J. 279

(3) See however as to this notes post

(4) See R. v. Hardwicke 11 East, 578

(5) Wigmore Ev. § 1079

they are relevant "for the purpose of proving the conspiracy," as well as the part which each conspirator took in it (1)

§ 3 ('Pelerant')

§ 186 (Fact proposed to be proved only admissible on proof of some other fact)

§ 3 ('Fact')

Steph Dig, Art 4, and Note III, Taylor, Ev, §§ 590—597, Best, Ev, § 508 3 Russell's Crimes, 109—176, Norton, Ev, 120, Poscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 348—359; Mayne's Penal Code ss. 107, 121A, Wills Ev 2nd Ed, 167, 168, Wigmore, Ev, § 1079

COMMENTARY.

Conspiracy

The provisions of the section are wider than those of the English Law according to which the act or declaration must have been done or said in the execution or furtherance of the common purpose (2) Thus mere narratives and admissions of past events have been held to be inadmissible as such as against any conspirators except those by whom, or in whose presence such statements were made (3) Under the present section anything said or done in reference to the common intention is admissible, and thus the contents of a letter written by a co conspirator giving an account of the conspiracy is relevant against the others, even though not written in support of it or in furtherance of it (4) It is not necessary that the co conspirator, whose act or declaration it is sought to prove, should be tried or indicted (5) The act or declaration of the co conspirator may have been done or made by a stranger to, and in the absence of the party against whom it is offered, or without his knowledge or before he joined the combination (6), or even after he left it (7) This last-mentioned provision is contrary to the English rule, according to which acts and declarations of others are not admissible against a conspirator if done or made after his connection with the conspiracy has ceased (8)

"the conspiracy and "reasonable conspiracy must be shown, who, but for such conspiracy, use or fact of conspiracy must acts of any person not in the peaking be done by evidence of the party's own acts (10) But owing to the difficulties in the way of such proof a deviation has, in many cases, been made from the general rule, and evidence of the acts and conduct of others has been admitted to prove the existence of a conspiracy previous to the proof of the defendants' privity (11) But

(1) Steph Dig Note III p 160, Norton Ev 121 Taylor Ev, § 590, 3 Russ, Cr 143 144, Best, Ev § 508, R v Amir Khan 9 B L R 36 (1871) s c, 17 W R Cr 15, R v Amiruddin 9 B L R 36 (1871), s c 15 W R, Cr, 25 and cases there and in the text books (supra) cited

(2) Steph Dig Art 4 and text books cited ante

(3) R v Hardy 24 How St. Tr, 718 where an account given by one of the conspirators in a letter to a friend of his own proceedings in the matter not intended to further the common object and not brought to A's notice was held not to be relevant as against A see also R v Blake 6 Q B, 876 Steph Dig, Art 4, Illustrs (a), (b), Taylor Ev §§ 593 594

(4) See Illustration to section, and

Fields Ev 6th Ed 72, Cunningham Ev 100 Whitley Stokes 527

(5) Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 354 355

(6) See Illustr ante R v Brandreth, 32 How St. Tr., 857, 858 R v Murphy 8 C & P 311, Taylor Ev, § 592

(7) See Illustr ante

(8) R v Hardy 24 How St Tr 718, 731 Taylor Ev § 595

(9) Adambini Das v Kumudini Das 30 C 983 (1903) s c, 7 C W N 808, Shahabur Ma v Emperor 18 C L J 590 (1913)

(10) 1 East P C, 96 cited in argument in R v Amir Khan supra 55, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed 352

(11) Roscoe Cr Ev, 13th Ed 352, 2 Starkie 2nd Ed 234

in respect of such conduct a distinction has been made between declarations accompanying acts(1) (which are admissible), and mere detached declarations and confessions of persons not defendants, not made in the prosecution of the object of the conspiracy, and which being mere "hearsay" are not evidence even to prove the existence of a conspiracy(2) The persons must have conspired together to commit an offence or actionable wrong There must have been some pre-concert A conspiracy within the terms of this section contemplates something more than the joint action of two or more persons to commit an offence If that were not so, the section would be applicable to any offence committed by two or more persons jointly with deliberation, and this would import into a trial a mass of hearsay evidence, which the accused persons would find it impossible to meet(3) The agreement to conspire may be inferred from circumstances which raise a presumption of a concerted plan to carry out an unlawful design(4) (b) After the existence of a conspiracy has been established, the particular defendants must be proved to have been parties to it(5) (c) After these two facts have been proved the acts and declarations of other conspirators in reference to their common intention may in all cases be given in evidence against the defendants, and under the present section, letters written and declarations made by any of the conspirators which are not part of the prosecution of the conspiracy and are in the nature of mere admissions existence of when you and having isoner acts

done by any of the parties, whom you have connected with the conspiracy, preliminary

whole case established

by proof which actually brings the parties together, but may be shown, like any other fact, by circumstantial evidence(8) This section is strictly conditional on there being ground to believe that two or more have conspired(9) The statement of an accused made after arrest and not amounting to a confession

(1) v s 8, ante

(2) 2 Starkie, Ev, 235 cited in Roscoe Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 354, "the mere assertion of a stranger that a conspiracy existed amongst others to which he was not a party would clearly be inadmissible, and although the person making the assertion confessed that he was party to it this on principle fully established would not make the assertion evidence of the fact against strangers ib, see also 3 Russ, Cr, 144

(3) Nogendrabala Dabee v R, 4 C W N, 528, 530 (1900) As to evidence of conspiracy, see Subrahmanya Ayyar v R, 28 C, 797 (1901), R v Tirumal Reddi 24 M, 547 (1901), Templeton v Lawrence 25 B, 230 (1900), [conspiracy to obtain conviction of accused person, and as to what amounts to evidence of abetment of conspiracy], Abdul Sahni v King Emp 35, C. L. J. 279 (1921), see Kohil Munda v. R, 28 C 797 (1901)

(4) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909), 37 C, 91

(5) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 354.

Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor 42 C 957 (1915)

(6) v supra and Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 350 351 and as to proof generally ib 13th Ed 352—356 The Queen's Case 2 B & B 310, Norton, Ev, 120, 3 Russ Cr 144 and cases there cited but see also s 136 post

(7) Per Pennfather C J in R v Mc Kenno Ir Circ Rep 461 cited in Taylor Ev p 525

(8) Taylor Ev s 591 3 Russ Cr 148, the evidence may be entirely circumstantial and the existence of the conspiracy collected from collateral circumstances R v Parsons 1 W R 392, Roscoe, Cr Ev 13th Ed, 354—355 "It is perfectly true that the dark coveriness of crime cannot often be laid open, that conspiracies like other crimes must be generally supported by circumstantial proof per Sir Lawrence Peel C J, in R v Hedger p 129 (1852)

(9) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909), 37 C 91

is not admissible in evidence against a co accused either under this section or s 30 of the Evidence Act, but only against himself. The admission does not however affect the conviction when no stress was laid on such statement by the Trial and Appellate Courts (1)

Evidence that some of the accused ran cocaine and gambling dens long before existence of the conspiracy which was the subject of the charge, was held admissible, the accused were first thrown together by that they continued to meet at such place piracy charged. The evidence of an excise inspector of raids on the dens was admissible as leading up to the admissions made to him (2)

When facts not otherwise relevant become relevant

11. Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—

(1) If they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact.

(2) If by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable

Illustrations

(a) The question is whether A committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day. The fact that, on that day A was at Lahore, is relevant (3)

The fact that near the time when the crime was committed A was at a distance from place where it was committed, which would render it highly improbable, though not impossible, that he committed it is relevant (4)

(b) The question is, whether A committed a crime

The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed either by A, B, C or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else, and that it was not committed by either B, C or D, is relevant (5)

Principle.—The object of a trial being the establishment or disproof by evidence of a particular claim or charge, it is obvious that any fact which either disproves or tends to disprove or tends to prove that claim or charge is relevant

s 3 ("Fact")

s 3 ("Relevant")

s. 13 (Transaction inconsistent with existence of right or custom.)

s 3 ("Fact in issue.")

Cun.
N 1

(1) Sital Singh v Emp, 46 Cal 700
s c 30 C. L. J., 255 54 I C 53

(2) Ib

(3) An alibi the relevancy of which is its entire inconsistency with the hypothesis that the accused committed the crime. Norton Ev, 124, see R v Sakharom Afukundy 11 Bom. H C R., 166 (1874) and s 103, illust (c), post, see observations on an alibi as a defence in R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R., 97 (1897). Wills Circ. Ev. 6th Ed., 279

(4) This example is of a fact rendering the hypothetical fact on the other side not positively impossible, but highly improbable as often happens when the question is whether there was time for the accused to have gone from the place where he says he was to the scene of the crime and returned again

(5) This is a disjunctive hypothetical syllogism—X is either A or B or C but it is not B or C therefore it is A see Whitley Stokes 861 note (3) Cunningham Ev, 103, Norton Ev 124

COMMENTARY.

While the seventh section defines the meaning of the term 'relevancy' in quasi scientific language, the present section contains a statement in popular language of what in the former section is attempted to be stated in scientific language. The practical effect of these two sections is to make every relevant fact admissible as evidence (1). It has been said that the terms of this section, which are very extensive (2), must be read subject to the restrictive operation of other sections in the Act (3) that it may possibly be argued that the effect of the second paragraph of this section would be to admit proof of facts of the irrelevant character mentioned in the Introduction (ante) but that this was not the intention of the section, is shown by the special provisions in the following part of this Chapter as to the particular exceptions which exist to the general rules which exclude as irrelevant the four classes of evidence already mentioned in the Introduction, and is also shown by indications in other portions of the Act (4). The sort of facts which the section was intended to include, are facts which either exclude or imply, more or less distinctly, the existence of the facts sought to be proved (5). In the word of West, J., this section "is, no doubt, expressed in terms so extensive that any fact which can, by a claim of ratiocination, be brought into connexion with another, so as to have a bearing upon a point in issue, may possibly be held to be relevant within its meaning. But the connections of human affairs are so infinitely various, and so far reaching, that thus to take the section in its widest admissible sense would be to complicate every trial with a mass of collateral inquiries limited only by the patience and the means of the parties. One of the objects of a law of evidence, is to define the bounds prescribed by Courts within the limits of which evidence would be completely admissible in any given circumstance on either side, having some remote and conjectural probative force, the precise amount of which might itself be ascertainable only by a long trial and a determination of fresh collateral issues, growing up in endless succession, as the enquiry proceeded. That such an extensive meaning was not in the mind of the Legislature, seems to be shown by several indications in the Act itself. The illustrations to the eleventh section do not go beyond familiar cases in the English

(1) Markby Ev, 17, 18

(2) Some degree of latitude was designedly left in the wording of the section (in compliance with a suggestion from the Madras Government, on account of the variety of matters to which it might apply Steph Introd 160 161

(3) The meaning of the section would have been more fully expressed if words to the following effect had been added to it — No statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be a relevant fact under some other section of this Act. Ib 161 See observations on this section in Whitley Stokes 819. It is to be observed however, that the section says "Facts not otherwise relevant (i.e., under ss 6-10, 12 and subsequent sections) are relevant etc

(4) Steph Introd, 160. It may for instance, be said A (not called as a witness) was heard to declare that he had seen B commit a crime. This makes it highly probable that B did commit that crime. Therefore A's declaration is a relevant fact under s 11 cl (2). This was not the intention of the section as is shown by the elaborate provisions contained in the following part of the Chapter II (ss 12-39) as to particular classes of statements, which are regarded as relevant facts either because the circumstances under which they are made invest them with importance or because no better evidence can be got. Ib

(5) Ib the words 'highly probable' point out that the connection between the facts in issue and the collateral facts sought to be proved must be so mediate as to render the co-existence of the two highly probable. per Mitter J A v M J Poojary, Moodlar 6 C 645 662 (1881)

If an improperly wide scope be given to the section the latter might seem to contain in itself and to supersede all the other provisions of the Act as to relevancy. Cunningham, Ev, 103

law of evidence' (1) All evidence which would be held to be admissible by English Law would be properly admitted under this section (2) There must always be room for the exercise of discretion when the relevancy of testimony rests upon its effect towards making the affirmative or negative of a proposition 'highly probable' and with any reasonable use of the discretion, the Court ought not to interfere (3) In order that a collateral fact may be admissible as relevant under the eleventh section the requirements of the law are (a) that the collateral fact must itself be established by normally conclusive evidence and (b) that it must when established, afford a reasonable presumption or inference as to the matter in dispute (4)

Any fact material to the issue which has been proved by the one side may be disproved by the other, whether the contradiction is complete i.e. inconsistent with a relevant fact under the first clause of this section or such as only to render the existence of the alleged fact highly improbable under the second clause (5) There are five common cases of the argument of inconsistency, absence of a any alleged self infliction

of the harm alleged. Thus the theory of an alibi is that the fact of presence elsewhere is essentially inconsistent with presence at the place and time alleged and therefore with personal participation in the act (6) So to disprove a rape, evidence is admissible that the prisoner had for many years been afflicted with a rupture which rendered sexual intercourse impossible (7) When the question —

issable to prove that the not in fa

lent mon

Sovereign were being whether A o of the alleged loan is admissible as tending to disprove it (9) Again under this latter clause of the section, facts may be put in evidence in corroboration of other relevant facts, if they render them highly probable (10) So where two or more persons have perished by a common calamity such as shipwreck, and the question is whether A survived B, the law of England raises no presumption either of survivorship or contemporaneous death but if any circumstances connected with the death of either party can be proved the whole question of survivorship may

of th
of th

resemblance, or want of resemblance, of A to B is admissible (12) So also circumstances may be proved which render the fact of payment of a debt probable, as for instance, the settlement of account subsequent to the accruing of the debt, in which no mention is made of it (13) Where defendants Nos 2 and 4

(1) R v Parbhudas 11 B H C R 90 91 (1874) R v Vajiram 16 R 414 475 (1892) see note to s 14 post

(2) R v Vajiram supra 430 per Telang J

(3) R v Parbhudas supra 94 per West J

(4) Bibi Khatun v Bibi Rukia 6 B L R 983 (1904)

(5) S 9 is very similar to the present section as to rebutting an inference, Norton Ev 115 v ante

(6) Wigmore Ev § 135 et seq

(7) 1 Hale P C 835, Best Ev § 450

(8) Lady Ivy's case, 10 St Tr 615,

Steph Dig Art 9 illust (d), see also Field Ev 6th Ed p 39 note

(9) Douling v Douling 13 Ir C L 241 cited in Phipson Ev 5th Ed 103

(10) Norton Ev 124

(11) Taylor Ev § 203 Best Ev § 410, Underwood v Wing 4 D M & G 633 Wing v Angrove 8 H L C 183

(12) Burnaby v Bailhe 42 Ch D 282 290

(13) Coleell v Budd 1 Camp 27 as also that the party claiming to have paid the debt was afterwards in possession of the document creating it Brembridge v Osborne 1 Starke 374 see for similar cases Taylor L 178 138, sold a jote to defendant No 1, which they obtained under a partition and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied the said partition as well as the sale, the statements previously made by them which went to show that there had been a partition and they had changed their attitude were held to be admissible as against them under the third clause of twenty first section and the second clause of the eleventh section of the Evidence Act (1) In a case in which indicative of an intention that any one of these leases was perpetual should indicated by the acts and conduct of the parties was to make these leases perpetual would make it highly probable that the same was the intention with there it then so far as they were proved had been explained as being either insuflcient or as being the result of peculiarities in the circumstances of the leases to which they belonged (2) When the question was whether a deceased person had married a lady, and a draft of a Will, not written by the testator himself and containing it was held made by the ant plaintiff leased it to lease (4) It has been held that when the question is whether the accused is an habitual cheat the fact that he was a member of an organization formed for the purpose of habitual cheating is relevant under this section, and that the facts of such membership and such cheating may be proved against each of the members of the organization (5) And it has been held that an intercepted letter written by the accused referring to a telegram signed with a different name but sent from his address was relevant against him under this section

A and B were charged evidence was brought the house of another prostitute in 1918 in somewhat similar circumstances Held (Chaudhuri, J, dissenting) that the evidence was not admissible either under s 9 or under this section to prove that A and B were the same persons as C and D (7) As to the question of admissibility of judgments under this section see notes to the thirteenth section post (8) As to the admissibility of depositions made by a

Best E. § 406 and other cases dealt with by these authors under the head of presumptive evidence

(1) B b Gyanessa v Mussammat Mobarakunnessa 7 C W N 91 (1897)

(2) Narsingh Dyal v Ravi Varan 30 C. 883 896 897 (1903)

(3) Haji Saboo v Ayeslaba 7 C W N 665 (1905) s c 27 B 485

(4) Ka g Hla Pru v San Pau 3 L. B R 90

(5) Kailu Ura v R (1909) 37 C. 91

(6) Booth v Emperor 41 C. 545 (1914)

(7) Emperor v Panchu Das 47 C. 671, F B s c 74 C W N 501

(8) And Tejra Khan v Rojoni Mohun 2 C W N 501 (1898) Lakshman v Anrit 74 B 598 599 (1900)

person since deceased, it has been held that unless they are admissible under sections 32 and 33, the present section will not avail to make them evidence (1) An entry made in a register of indoor patients in a hospital is admissible in evidence to prove that the person mentioned in the entry was in the hospital on a certain date (2) The accused was charged with having caused grievous hurt to one of his wives and killed another The wounded woman, on the day of occurrence on her arrival in hospital made a statement to a Magistrate to the effect that it was accused who had attacked herself and co wife This statement was admitted and placed before the jury Held that the mere fact that the woman made a statement had no bearing on the main fact in issue and this section does not justify the admission of the contents of the statements (3)

On questions of title, repeated acts of ownership with respect to the same property are, under the thirteenth section, post, receivable, and even acts done with respect to other places connected with the locus in quo by "such a common character of locality as to give rise to the inference that the owner of one is likely to be the owner of the other" (4) are sometimes under the present section receivable In Jones v Williams, (5) Parke B, said that "evidence of acts in another part of one continuous hedge adjoining the plaintiff's land was admissible in evidence on the ground that they are such acts as might reasonably lead to the inference that the entire hedge belonged to the plaintiff." "In other words, they are facts which, by the eleventh section of the Evidence Act, are relevant, because they make the existence of a fact in issue highly probable" (6) When a question as to the ownership of land depends on the application to it of a particular presumption capable of being rebutted, the fact that it does not apply to other neighbouring pieces of land similarly situated is deemed to be relevant (7) So when the question is, whether A the owner of one side of a river, owns the entire bed of it or only half the bed at a particular spot, the fact that he owns the entire bed a little lower down than the spot in question is deemed to be relevant (8) In like manner it has been held that when the question is, whether a piece of land by the roadside belongs to the lord of the manor, or to the owner of the adjacent land the fact that the lord of the manor owned other parts of the slip of land by the side of the same road is relevant (9) And in a suit brought by the plaintiff against several defendants to prevent encroachments by the defendants it was held that the admission of one of the defendants in a previous suit to which the other defendants were not parties, as to the common character of the portion of the land between his house and the plaintiff's and also a similar statement in a deed put in by another of the defendants to prove his title to his own house were admissible in evidence to establish the common character of the entire lane as alleged by the plaintiff The fact of common ownership of other parts of

(1) Bela Ram v Melabir Singh (1912) A C, 34 A 341

(2) Amolak Rao v Emperor, 19 Cr L J 141

(3) Emperor v Abdul Sheikh 23 C W N., 933

(4) Jones v Williams 2 M & W 326, Bristow v Cormican 3 App Cas 641 670, Neill v Devonshire 8 App Cas 135, Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre 4 App Cas 791, Sabram Sheikh v Oday Mahto 1 Pat 375 (1922) Taylor Fv §§ 322-325, Roscoe N P Fv 85 86 931 934, Steph Dig Art. 3, see note to s 13 post The rule in Jones v Williams 2 M & W, 326 and Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre 4 App Cas, 791 was observed upon in Mohini Mohan v Promoda Nath 24 C 259 (1896) See Sabram Sheikh v Oday Mahto 1 Pat 375 (1922)

(5) Jones v Williams at p 331

(6) Naro Vinayak v Narhari 16 B 125 128 (1891) per Sargent C J referred to in Bibi Gyanessa v Yussamat Mabarakunnessa 2 C W N, 91 94 (1897)

(7) Steph Dig Art 3

(8) Ib Jones v Williams 2 M & W 326 (see note to s 13 post), followed in Naro Vinayak v Narhari ante

(9) Ib Doe v Kemp 7 Bing, 332, 2 Bing N C 102, Taylor, Fv §§ 320-325

the lane should be treated as relevant to the issue as to the common character of the entire line on the principle laid down in this section (1) It has been recently held that documents not inter partes containing recitals of boundaries of other lands are not admissible in evidence under this section (2) Where one of the main questions for determination in a case was whether a document then impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by one NS, a comparison of the thumb impression of the person who presented the document with that of NS was held to be admissible under the second clause of this section if dissimilarity of the impressions made the identity of that person with NS improbable (3) Where the parties to a suit are at issue on a vital question and the evidence is conflicting, the safest principle for the Court is to consider which story fits best with the admitted circumstances and the resulting probabilities (4)

12 In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded is relevant

In suits for damages, facts tending to enable Court to determine amount are relevant Principle—In suits in which damages are claimed, the amount of the damages is a fact in issue See Note, post

s 3 ('Fact')

s 3 ('Relevant')

s 55 ('Character as affecting damages')

Roscoe, N P Ev, passim, sub loc "damages" Norton, Ev, 124, Mayne on Damages 4th Ed. (1884), Alexander's 'Indian Case Law on Torts,' 3rd Ed., 1891, Pollock on Torts, 2nd Ed., 1890, Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act) ss. 73—75, 117, 118, 125 150—152, 154, 156, 181, 203, 206, 211, 212, 223, 235, 259 Cunningham and Shephard's Indian Contract Act 11th Ed., 1915

COMMENTARY.

Damages, which are the pecuniary satisfaction which a plaintiff may obtain by success in an action are unless expressly admitted, deemed to be a fact in issue (5), damages may be claimed either in actions or contracts (6) or tort (7) The question as to when damages may be recovered, and the amount of damages recoverable in particular suits, as well the defences pleadable in such suits, is a portion of the particular branch of the substantive law under the provisions of which these suits are brought (8), and therefore the present section does not specify how the facts made relevant by it are to be related with the injured property person or reputation, but lays down generally, that evidence tending to determine i.e., to increase or diminish the damages is admissible (9) Thus in an action for libel, other libellous expressions by the defendant whether used before or after the commencement of the suit, are sometimes admissible for the plaintiff to show the malevolence of the defendant and so to enhance damages On the other hand evidence of circumstances, which, according to the law of libel, have the effect of mitigating

(1) Naro I najak v. Narhari supra.

(2) Soroy Kumar Achary v. Umed Ali Howlador 25 C W N 1022 (1921) nor (it was there held) under s 13 post

(3) R v. Fakir Mahomed 1 C W N 33 34 (1896) ante s 119 n 1

(4) Datt v. Maung Shue Go (1911) 38 I A 155

(5) See Roscoe N P Ev 86 878

(6) See Contract Act (IX of 1872) ss. 73—75 117 118 125 150—152 154 180 181 205 206 211 212 225 235 259

(7) See Alexander's Indian Case Law on Torts Pollock on Torts Draft Indian Civil Wrongs Bill s 517

(8) See Mayne on Damages Roscoe N P Ev sub loc "Damages"

(9) Norton Ev 124 Roscoe N P Ev 86 damages are admissible in evidence for the defendant (1) In an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff may give evidence of the defendant's fortune, for it obviously tends to prove the loss sustained by the plaintiff, but not in an action for adultery (2), nor for seduction (3), nor for malicious prosecution, for it is nothing to the purpose in an action on tort "whether the damages come out of a deep pocket or not" (4) Injury to the feelings is irrelevant in an action on contract as an element of damage, but in actions on tort heavy damages may be given on this score In Hamlin v Great Northern Railway Company (5) it was said The case of a contract to marry has always been considered as a sort of exception, in which not merely the loss of an establishment in life, but, to a certain extent, the injury to a person's feelings in respect to that particular species of contract, may be taken into account, but, generally speaking, the rule is this in the case of a wrong, the damages are entirely with the jury, and they are at liberty to take into consideration the injury to the party's feelings and the pain he has experienced, as, for instance, the extent of violence in an action of assault, and many topics, and many elements of damage, find place in an action for tort, or wrong of any kind, which certainly have no place whatever in an ordinary action of contract (6) The leading case on the subject of damages in the case of breach of contract—Hadley v Barendale (7)—is the foundation of the rule contained in section 73 of the Indian Contract Act, according to which rule the damages which the plaintiff ought to receive should be such as naturally arose in the usual course of things from the breach, or such as the parties knew, when they made the contract, to be likely to result from the breach of it All facts showing the amount of such damage are relevant under this section, but no damages can be ordinarily recovered by an action of contract that are not capable of being specifically stated and appreciated (8) Neither in actions on contract nor on tort must the damage be too remote (9), and evidence of damage of such a character will not be admissible, nor, in general, will

(1) Roscoe N P Ev 864 878 evidence in mitigation and aggravation of damages may be further illustrated by the decided cases on action for seduction asault false imprisonment trespass trover etc Thus where the defendant had given the plaintiff in charge of a constable for felony he was allowed to show reasonable ground of suspicion in mitigation of damages Chinn v Morris, Ry & M 424 v Roscoe N P Ev passim sub loc 'damages', Norton Ev, 126 So also in actions for assault, the provocation offered by the plaintiff would be relevant under this section in the case of action against Railway Companies for injuries received the position and circumstances and earnings of the plaintiff the precautions taken by the Company, and the contributory negligence if any of the plaintiff See Cunningham Ev 105

(2) James v Biddington 6 C & P 589 Roscoe N P Ev 86 Hodgson v Taylor post 81

(3) Hodgson v Taylor, L R 9 Q B, 79 Roscoe N P Ev 86 and p 911 as to evidence in aggravation.

(4) Per Blackburn J in Hodgson v Taylor supra quoting Lord Mansfield

(5) 36 L J, Ex, 20, 1 H & N 403, per Pollock C B (this was an action for damages for breach of contract) See Williams v Curtis, 1 C B, 841

(6) See Williams v Curtis 1 C B, 841, Sears v Lyons, 2 Starkie 317, this principle is well illustrated in actions for libel where the injury to the feelings is always an element of consideration Norton Ev 126 the circumstances of time and place when and where the insult was given require different damages, thus it is a greater insult to be beaten upon the Royal Exchange than in a private room per Bathurst J, Tullidge v Wade 3 Wills 19 Roscoe N P Ev 913, and in trespass the jury may consider not only the pecuniary damage sustained but also the intention with which the act has been done whether for insult or injury, per Abbott J, Sears v Lyons, 2 Starkie 318, Roscoe N P Ev, 937

(7) 23 L J Ex, 179, 182, 9 Ex, 341, see Act IX of 1872 (Contract), a 73, Cunningham and Shephard's Indian Contract Act 11th Ed (1915).

(8) Per Pollock C B, in Hamlin v G & Ry Co supra at p 23

(9) Act IX of 1872 s 73, Alexander, op cit, 9

evidence of facts tending to show damage, or of facts in aggravation or mitigation of damages, be relevant under this section, unless the damage or aggravating or mitigating facts are of the kind and character which the substantive law recognises. The question when, and under what circumstances, evidence of character may be given in Civil actions with a view to damages, is dealt with by section 55, post, and in the notes thereto.

13 Where the question is as to the existence of any right or custom, the following facts are relevant —

(a) any transaction by which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence

(b) particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognised or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from

Facts relevant when right or custom is in question

Illustration

The question is whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father irreconcilable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours are relevant facts.

Principle.—In such cases every act of enjoyment or possession is a relevant fact since the right claimed is constituted by an indefinite number of acts of user exercised animo domini (1). Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown by particular acts of enjoyment (2), these acts being fractions of that sum total of enjoyment which characterises dominium (3). This also is the best evidence, with the exception of that afforded by judicial recognition, which is only admissible in proof of matters of a public nature that are most cogent evidence of the expression of opinion as to their existence but by the examination of actual instances and transactions in which the alleged custom or right has been acted upon or not acted upon or of acts done or not done involving a recognition or denial of their existence (6). 'In the absence of direct title deeds, acts of ownership are the best proofs of title' (7). Acts of ownership, when submitted to are analogous to admissions or declarations by the party submitting to them that the party exercising them has a right to do so and that he is therefore the owner of the property upon which they are exercised. But such acts are also

(1) Wills Ev 2nd Ed 60

(2) Jones v Williams 2 M & W 326
foli Sabran Sheikh v Odov Mahto 1 Pat 375 (1922)

(3) Wills Ev 2nd Ed 61

(4) v s 42 post see remarks of Edge C J and Tyrrell J in Gurdial Mal v Jhandi Mal 10 A 586 (1888)

(5) v s 32 cl (4) 48

(6) See remarks of Turner J in Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan 1 A 440 (1877) and Gopalujan v Ragupathisjan 7 Mad 11 C Pep 250 354 post and remarks of

Westrop C J in Bhagandas Tejmal v Rajmal 10 Bom. II C R 261 (1873)

Steph Dig Arts 5 and 6 and case there cited Taylor Ev § 1683 v Ranchhodas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar 10 B. 439, post v Commentari post and note to ss 32 cls (4) (7) and 42 48 as to long usage being the best exponent of right see Nalakandhen Vambudrapad v Padmanabha Rami Iarma 18 M. 1 (1895)

(7) Per Jackson J in Collector of Rayshahy v Doorga Soondurer 2 W. R. 212 (1865) admissible of themselves proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is the owner of the soil (1)

s. 3 ("Relevant")

s. 32, CL (4), (Public right or custom; opinion of person not called as witness)

s. 32, ILLUSTR (1) (Illustration of "public right")

s. 32, CL (7) (Statements in Document relating to "transaction")

s. 42 and ILLUSTR (Judgments relating to matters of a public nature.)

s. 48 and ILLUSTR (General Custom or rights; opinion of witnesses on.)

s. 48, EXPLANATION (Meaning of "general custom or right")

s. 48, ILLUSTR (Illustration of "general custom or right")

s. 49 (Opinions as to usage, etc.)

s. 51 (Grounds of opinion)

s. 92 PROV 5 (Usage and Custom imported into contract)

The following Acts refer to custom — Acts XXI of 1850, s. 1 (Non forfeiture of right by loss of caste), XV of 1856 (Re marriage of Hindu widows), IV of 1872, ss 5 (a), 7 (Punjab

16 (b) (Cust Courts, Madras), III of 1876 (Central Provinces Laws), XVIII of 1876 (Madras Laws) as amended by Acts XXVI of 1930 and X of 1922), II of 1901 (V B P Rent), XVIII of 1881, s. 67 (Land Revenue, Central Provinces), II of 1882, s. 1 (Indian Trusts as amended by Acts XXI of 1917 and XXXI of 1920) See also Act XIV of 1920 (Religious Trusts) V of 1882, ss 18 20 (Easements), VIII of 1884, s. 40 (Punjab Courts as amended by Acts VI of 1918 and IX of 1919), VIII of 1883, s. 183 (Bengal Tenancy) See B and O Acts II of 1913, III of 1916, XVII of 1887, s. 125 (Punjab Land Revenue as amended by Acts XVIII of 1919 and XVIII of 1920), Steph Dig., Art 5, Taylor, Ev §§ 1683 609, 320, Starkie, Ev, §§ 123 139, Roscoe, N P Ev, 24, 25, 53, 54, 834, Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 96 Best, Ev, §§ 366 399, 499, Wills' Ev, 2nd Ed, 60

COMMENTARY.

Right

The right mentioned in this section is not a public right only the Illustration shows this is not so, the right there mentioned being a private one (2) Three kinds of rights are thus included in the Act — (a) private e.g., a private right of way, (b) general, which is defined to include rights common to any considerable class of persons e.g., the right of villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well (3), and (c) public (1) The latter class of right is nowhere defined in the Act Every public right in the sense of the though (if the distinction made in English and "public" be accepted) every general

There was at one time a conflict of decisions as to whether the term is to be understood as comprehending all legal rights (including a right of ownership) or only incorporeal rights In the leading case Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall, Jackson, J., and Garth, C J., were of opinion that the rights referred to, in the section, were incorporeal rights "What is referred to in the section cited is evidently a right which attaches either to some property or to status, in short, incorporeal rights, which though transmissible, are not tangible or objects of the bodily senses." (5) "It may be difficult perhaps to define precisely the scope of the word 'right,' but I think it was here intended to include those properties only of an incorporeal nature, which in legal phraseology are generally called 'rights,' more especially as it is used in conjunction with the

(1) Starkie, Ev., 470, note F Jones v Williams 2 M & W., 326 v post

(2) Surya Narain v Bissambhar, 23 W R. 311 (1875) see Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall (F B) 6 C 187 (1880), per Garth, C J

(3) S. 48 and illust.

(4) S. 32 cl (4), illust (1) and illust. to s. 42 which last section also deals with the subject of public rights

(5) Per Jackson J., in Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall 6 C supra 184, Mitter, J., dissenting

word 'custom' It is certainly used in that sense in subsequent parts of the Act (v. the forty eighth section, and the fourth sub section of the thirty-third section) which deal with matters of public or general 'right or custom' (1) On the contrary it has been held by Mitter, J., that the contention that the section in question refers only to incorporeal rights whether of a public or private nature, is not warranted by any general principle, it being difficult to suggest a reason which would justify the existence of a distinction between the rules applicable to the proof of corporeal and incorporeal rights respectively, whether of a public or private nature (2) Quite recently also Banerjee, J., observed as follows (3) — "It has been said that the right spoken of in this section is an incorporeal right I do not think that there is any sufficient reason for putting this limitation on the meaning of the term as used by the section" So also in Bombay, it has been held that the words "rights and customs" should be understood as comprehending all rights and customs recognised by law, and therefore as including a right of ownership (4) and in Allahabad that the word 'right' in both clauses (a) and (b) includes a right of ownership, and is not confined, as held by the majority (sed qu majority) in Gujju Lall v Fatch Lall, to incorporeal rights (5) It would seem now to be generally held that the term 'right' includes all rights and is not limited to incorporeal rights As to antiquity in the case of a right no less than of a custom usage for a number of years certainly raises a presumption that such right or custom has existed beyond the time of legal memory (6)

Custom" as used in the sense of a rule which in a particular district, Custom or class or family has from long usage, obtained the force of law (7) must be (a) usage ancient (8) (b) continued, unaltered uninterrupted uniform constant (9),

(1) Per Garth C J 186 id Mitter J dissenting and see Koldhun v Shiba Aith 8 C 50a (1882) The undermentioned cases decided prior to Gujju Lall v Fatch Lall (1880) may be consulted on this point Koondo Nath v Dheer Clander 20 W R 345 (1873) (right of succession to office) Neomut Ali v Goo roo Dass 22 W R 365 (1874) (sumamee right to lands) Guttee Koiburto v Bhu kut Koiburto 22 W R 457 Dastaras Mohants v Jugo Bundhoo 23 W R 293 (187a) followed in Sabron Sheikh v Odooy Mahto 1 Pat 375 (1922) Hansa Koor v Sheo Gobind 24 W R 431 (suit for lands) Mohesh Chunder v Dina Bandhu 24 W R 265 Lachmeedhur v Rughobur 24 W R 284 Omer Dutt v Burn 24 W R 470 (suits for rent) Nerrangi Bhika bhai v Difa Umed 3 B 3 (1878) (suit for chirda allowance)

(2) Gujju Lall v Fatch Lall 6 C 180 v infra Pontifex J expressed no opinion upon this particular point and Morris J merely agreed with Garth C J in holding that the former judgment was inadmissible

(3) In Tepu Khan v Rajout Mofan 2 C W N 501 504 (1898)

(4) Ranchhodass Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar 10 B 439 (1886) per Sargent C J

(5) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh 13 A 13 24 (F B) and see Ramasami v Appann 12 M 9 (1887) (suit for money claimed under alleged right) Penkatassa v Venkatreddi 15 M 12

(1891) suit for declaration of title to land, Yethilunga v Venkatach 16 M 194 (1892) suit for possession of land Followed in Sabron Sheikh v Odooy Mahto, 1 Pat 375 (1922)

(6) Ramasami v Appann 12 M 14 (1887)

(7) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal 3 I A 259 (1876) s c 26 W R 55 Sivanonanja Perumal v Meenakshi 22 Ammal 3 Mad H C R 77 (1866)

(8) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal 3 I A 259 (1876) Lala v Hira Singh 2 A 51 (1878) Doe d Jagomohan v Nimu Das Montrious Cases of Hindu Law 596 (length of time necessary) Jay Kishan v Dearga Naram 11 W R 348 (1860) (id) Jaggomohun Ghose v Manickchand 7 M I A 282 (1859) s c 4 W R (P C) 8 Amrit Nath v Gouri Nath 6 B L R 238 (1870) Rajah Nagendur v Ruhaonath Nara W R (1864) 20 Ramalakshmi Ammal v Stananjanja Perumal 17 W R 553 (1872) Perumal Sethurayar v M Ramalinga Selthurayar 3 Mad H C R 7 (1866) Gopa luzzan v Raghupattayyan Mad H C R 254 (1873) (usage must also be public) See Ramasami v Appann 12 M 14 ante and Bhaw Nannu v Sundraba 11 Bom 11 C R 271 post Durga Charan Mahto v Raghunath Mahto, 13 C L I 559 (1913)

(9) Lala v Hira Singh 2 A., 49, supra Jameela Khaton v Pagul Ram, 1 W R 250 (1864) Beni Madhub v Jos

and definite(3); or not(4). The have been performed with the consciousness that they spring from a legal necessity(5), and (g) must not be immoral(6). In a recent case it was said that a custom must be proved to be immemorial, recoverable, uninterrupted and also certain as regards its nature in the locality and persons affected by it(7). In this case it was said that a custom is void at law if there is proof that it originated within the time of memory but proof of its existence for a longer period will put the onus on those who assail it. And in another recent case it was said that a custom must be reasonable, must apply to matters which the law has left undetermined, must be considered binding by at least a majority of a given class and must be established by a series of well known and continuous instances(8). The Privy Council has held that it is permissible to adduce evidence of a family custom which varies the strict Mahommedan Law(9).

The right mentioned in the section being a public or private right (a), the 'custom' must also on proper principles of construction, include a private custom(10). The word 'custom' as used in this section is not, however, limited to ancient custom, but includes all customs and usages. So it has been held under section 48, which deals with general customs and rights, that evidence of usage was admissible(11). The word 'usage' would include what the people are, now or recently, in the habit of doing in a particular place. It may be that this particular habit is only of a very recent origin, or it may be one which has existed for a very long time. If it be one which is regularly and ordinarily

Krishna, 7 B L R, 154, 155 (1869), Juggamohun Ghose v Manickchand, 7 M I A, 282, s c, 4 W R (P C), 8, supra. Amrit Nath v Gauri Nath, 6 B L R 238, supra. Rajah Nugendur v Rugheonath Narain W R (1864), 20 supra. Rama lakhmi Ammal v Sivanananja Perumal, 17 W R, 553, supra. Patel Vandraton v Patel Maninai, 16 B 470 (1891), Perumal Sethurayar v M Ramalinga Sethurayar, 3 Mad H C R, 77, supra. Sooren dranath Roy v Mussamut Heeramonee, 12 M I A 81 (1868) s c 10 W R (P C), 35, Tara Chand v Reeb Ram, 3 Mad H C R, 57 (1866), (acts must also be plural). Rajkisen Singh v Ramjay Surma 1 C, 195 (1872) (discontinuance), Juggmohandas Mangaldas v Sir Mangaldas 10 B, 543 (1886), (the consensus utrum, which is the basis of all legal custom must be uniform and constant).

(1) Lala v Hira Singh 2 A, 49 supra.

(2) Hurlpurshad v Shea Dyal 3 I A, 285, supra, Lala v Hira Singh, 2 A, 49, supra, Luchmeepuri Singh v Sadaulla Nushya, 9 C, 699 (1882), Ransordas Bhogdall v Kesrising Mohun, 1 Bom H C R, 229 (1863), Arlafa Nayah v Narsi Keshavji, 8 Bom H C R (A C), 19 (1871), C R DeSaux v Festany Dhanji bhai 8 B, 408 (1884), Rajah Furma v Ravi Furmah 1 M, 235 (1877), Nizam Mulla Otagur v Gabind Churn, 6 W R Act X, 40 (1866), Awar Sen v Mamman (1895) 17 A, 87, Shadi Lall v Muhammad Ishaq Khan (1910), 33 A, 257

(3) Hurlpurshad v Shea Dyal 3 I A, 285 supra. Rajkisen Singh v Ramjay Surma 1 C 195 196 supra, Lala v Hira Singh 2 A 48, supra. Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan 1 A 440 (1877), Bhagan Das v Balgobind Singh 1 B L R, S N, x (1868). Tekaat Doorga v Tekaat Doorga 20 W R 157 (1873), Rama lakhmi Ammal v Sitananjan Perumal, 17 W R, 553 ante.

(4) Eshan Chandra Samanta v Nilmoni Singh (1908) 35 C 851 (riparian owner's right to irrigate). Mussamut Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar, 8 O C, 94 and v P C (1909) 36 I A, 125.

(5) Tara Chand v Reeb Ram, 3 Mad H C R 57 supra. Gopalayyan v Raghupatnayyan 7 Mad H C R 254 (1873).

(6) Chinna Ummayy v Tegarai Chetti 1 M, 168 (1876). See also Sankaralingam Chetti v Subban Chetti 17 M, 479 (1894), Ghasity v Umrao Jau, 20 I A, 193 (1893), 21 C 149.

(7) Mahamaya Debi v Haridas Haidar, 42 C 455 (1915).

(8) Kunhambi v Kalandhar, 38 M, 1052 (1915), see Mauli v Halliday, 1 Q B 125 (1898).

(9) Muhammad Ismail Khan v Lala Sheamukh Rai, P C, 17 C W N, 97 (1902).

(10) Collector of Garakhpur v Palakdhari, 12 A 16 (1889).

(11) Dalghish v Yusuffer Hossain 23 C, 427 (1896), Saraitulla Sarkar v Pran Nath, 26 C, 184 (1898).

and include") (1) customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons in fact such matters as would according to the English rule fall within the expression "matter of general interest" (2) The expression therefore would appear to have a more extended meaning and to be applicable also to those which are cases spoken of in English law as "matters of public interest"

Custom or usage occupies a prominent place in Hindu Law (of which it forms a branch), and wherever it obtains, supersedes its general maxims "Immemorial custom," says Mann, "is transcendent law" (3) Clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law (4) The Digest subordinates in more than one place the language of text to custom and approved usage (5) Where a custom is proved to exist it supersedes the general law, which however still regulates all beyond the custom (6) A custom is some established practice at variance with the general law There cannot therefore be a custom to do that which the general law permits any one to do or abstain from at his own will (7)

"Facts"

The third section contains the general definition of the term "fact" as used in this Act The particular facts which are relevant under this section are 'transactions' and "instances" as to the meaning of which (vide post) See also note on the admissibility of judgments (post) (8)

'Transactions' 'Instances'

The facts made relevant are (a) transaction (b) instances Neither of these terms is defined by the Act (a) A transaction is the doing or performing of a thing, or the performance, that which is done, thing alone

A transaction is something which is now going on or, if ended is still contemplated with reference to its progress or successive stages (9) "We use the word proceeding in application to an affair in the street and the word transaction" to some commercial negotiations that have been carried on in the market place (10) The 'proceeding', 'marriage' the manner of proceedings in a Court of law 'The proceedings as the transactions on the exchange denotes is something which has been concluded between persons by a cross or reciprocal action as it were' (11) 'A transaction in the ordinary sense of the word is some business or dealing which is carried on or transacted between two or more persons' (12) The qualifying characters of the transaction spoken of in the

(1) It does not therefore (accepting the distinction between public and general) exclude public custom. When a definition is intended to be exclusive it would seem the form of words is 'means and includes' per Jackson J R v Ashutosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 493 (1878)

(2) Field Ex 6th Ed 195

(3) See the authorities set out in judgment of West J in Bhanu Narayan v Son draba 11 Bom H C R 262 (1874) and Tara Chand v Rb Ram 3 Mad H C R 50 (1866)

(4) Collector of Madura v Muttu Rama inga 1 B L R 12 (1868) cited and applied in Diagran Singh v Bhagran Singh 17 A 339 (1895) but held to have been inapplicable by the Privy Council s c 21 v 412 (1899)

(5) Bhyah Ram v Bhyah Ugur 11 M 1 A 390 (18 0) s c 14 W R (P C) 1

(6) Veethi Dev v Beer Clunder 12

M 1 A 542 (1869) s c 12 W R (P C) 21

(7) Sri Braja Kisura v Kundana Devi 3 C W R 378 380 (1899) P C

(8) s also ss 3 11 ante

(9) Webster's Dictionary sub non Transaction

(10) Craib's Synonyms

(11) Gujju Lal v Fatch Lal 6 C 185 (1880) per Jackson J transaction in its largest sense means that which is done s b 175 per Mitter J

(12) Id at p 186 per Garth C. J who added If the parties to a suit were to adjust the differences inter se the adjustment would be a transaction and by a somewhat strained use of the word the proceedings in a suit might also be called transactions but to say that the decision of a Court of Justice is a transaction appears to me a misapplication of the term See also Ranchi oddas v Bapu Narhar 10 B 432 (1886) but see as to judgments post section are (a) creation, (b) claim, (c) modification, (d) recognition, (e) assertion, (f) denial, (g) inconsistency. Of these (b) and (d) are also qualifying characters of "instances" (b) An "instance" is that which offers itself, or is offered, as an illustrative case, something cited in proof or exemplification a case occurring, an example (1) The qualifying characters of the "instances" spoken of by the section are (a) claim, (b) recognition (common both to "instances" and "transactions"), and (c) exercise (which is peculiar to "instances" only), and instances in which the exercise of the right or custom was disputed, asserted or departed from. It will have been observed that the section distinguishes between a claim and an assertion. Under the second clause, however, instances are admissible in which the exercise of a right or custom was asserted. The word "assertion" includes both a statement and enforcement by act. Ordinarily the evidence tendered under this section will be evidence of acts done, but a verbal statement not amounting to and not accompanied by, any act would also be admissible if it amounted to a "claim."

Road cess papers and deeds of sale were held to be evidence quantum valent as transactions and instances in which rights were asserted and recognised (2) Documents showing recognition of alleged right by Government hile in charge mehal merely ado under the a map of Government within the meaning of section 80, the accuracy of which is to be presumed, but such a map may be evidence of possession or of assertion of right under the thirteenth section (4) In a suit for possession of land, the plaintiffs claimed title under a lease from the shrotrindars of the village where the land was situated. The defendants, who had obstructed the plaintiffs from taking possession of part of the land, claimed to have permanent title not to the land plaintiffs tendered no village showing —Held, that these documents were admissible, course concluded by them, but that the documents were relevant evidence under the thirteenth section as showing the tenure on which the village was held (5) Decisions are conflicting as to whether previous judgments and decrees not inter partes are (6), or are not (7), included

(1) Webster's Dictionary sub nom in stance

(2) Dattari Mohanti v Jugo Bundho 23 W. R. 293 (1875), followed in Sabran Sikk v Oday Mahto 1 Pat. 375 (1922)

(3) Surjo Narain v Bissa ibhur Singh 23 W. R. 311 (1875). And see Sremutty Nijja Kali v Sarat Chandra Bose 51 I. C. 666

(4) Jummaraj Mullick v D. arkanath Mjee 5 C. 287 (1879). And see Slashi Bhussai Dhur v Natab of Murshidabad 49 I. C. 957

(5) Sithlinga v Ukatachala 16 M. 194 (1892)

(6) Nanant Ali v Goora Dass 22 W. R. 365 (1874) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C. 175 (1880) per Mitter J cur dissent Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdars Singh 12 A. 43 (1889) per Mahmood J cur dissent

(7) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall (F. B.) 6 C. 183 185 187 per curiam Mitter J dissent Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdars Singh 12 A. 14 27 28 per curiam see remarks of Sargent C. J. in Ranchhod das Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar 10 B. 442 (1886) former judgments are not themselves transactions but the suit in which they were made is a transaction per Straight J 12 A. 25 supra. It was said by Ranade J that the interpretation placed upon the words right and transaction in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall seems not to have been accepted by the Privy Council and its correctness is questioned in the Full Bench judgment of the Allahabad High Court in the Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdars in so far as the exclusion of such judgments from being received as evidence under any section is concerned. Lakshman v Amrit 24 B. 599 (1900) in the term "transaction" or are(1), or are not(2), included in the words "particular instances" (v post). In some cases it has been held that judgments and decrees are not themselves "transactions" or "instances," but the suit in which they were passed and made is a "transaction" or "instance." So in the undermentioned case Banerji J, observed as follows "If the existence of the judgment is not a transaction within the meaning of clause (a) of the thirteenth section it proves that a litigation terminating in the judgment took place, and the litigation comes well within the meaning of the clause as being a transaction by which the right now claimed by the defendants was asserted. So again litigation which is evidenced by the existence of the judgment was a particular instance within the meaning of clause (b) of the thirteenth section in which the right of possession now claimed by the defendants was claimed" (3). In a case where a dispute existed between the proprietors of two estates, A and B as to the right to water flowing through an artificial watercourse on estate B belonging to the defendants proceedings were taken in the Criminal Courts by the owners of estate A against some ryots of estate B in consequence of their having closed the watercourse. These proceedings led to a ra namah, or deed of compromise which was relied on as evidence before the Privy Council. Their Lordships said "This agreement is a clear acknowledgment of right to this overflow. It was objected that this ra namah does not bind the proprietors of B but although it was apparently made between tenants it seems to have been subsequently acted upon, and may be properly used to explain the character of the enjoyment of the water" (4). Their Lordships also referred to certain proceedings under section 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1861 (corresponding to the section 147 of the Codes of 1882 and 1898) in which a claim was made as to the right to use the water collected in the tal observing that the proprietors of B do not seem to have challenged the decision of the Magistrate, nothing contrary to it. The deed was executed before action brought by the present plaintiffs and also by a plaintiff who had died since the institution of the suit and, as the plaint alleged, by a "considerable majority" of the family, but the defendant was not a party to it. The deed was held to be admissible as evidence on behalf of the plaintiffs (6). In an English case the Crown claimed against A, who in proof of occasionally fishing there, of hindering his tenants,

(1) Koonda Nath v Dheer Chunder 20 W. R. 345 (1873). Janatulla Sirdar v Ranani Kant 15 C. 233 (1887), Ramasami v Apparu 12 M. 9 (1887), and see Bajalhanu v Atulla 15 M. 19 (1891).

(2) Record and not the judgment alone admissible as an instance. Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh 12 A. 14 28 supra per Edge C. J. and Tyrrell J. former judgment not itself an instance but the suit in which it was made is an instance. ib. 25 per Strachey J. and see Cusju Lall v Fattah Lall 6 C. 171 supra.

(3) Tepu Khan v Rajoni Mohun 2 C. W. N. 501 504 (1898). Srimats Aljan v Hara Chandra S. A. 106 of 1907 Cal. H. C. 1st July 1904 and see Wahomed Amin v Hasan (1907) 31 B. 143.

(4) Ramesur Pershad v Koonj Behari

4 C. 649 (1878).

(5) As to this case Edge C. J. observed "apparently this ra namah was admissible under s. 9 the record of the proceedings in the Criminal Court which the Judicial Committee admitted in evidence might be admissible under s. 9 or under s. 13 (b). 12 A. 16. In Raja Run v Mussamat Lucio (11 C. 310) the Judicial Committee would possibly have held that the record in the rent suit of which the judgment referred to former part was admissible under s. 13 (b) and see Hira Lal v A. Hills 11 C. L. R. 530 (1882). See also Venkatarami v Venkatreddi 15 M. 12 (1891) post and note on Admissibility of judgments post.

(6) Hurronath Mullck v Nittanund, 10 B. L. R. 263 (183), see s. 37 cl. (7).

held to be an red that land from which by which the
as a trans
itled to infer

Admissibility of judgments and decrees as transactions or instances

(1-) Under s 41 post

(4) Doe v. Pulman 3 Q B 622 623 of public nature (1) In (a) they are between the same parties in (b) they are declared by law to be conclusive proof against all persons of certain (2) matters only in (c) though not conclusive, they are relevant as adjudications against persons not parties to them, the reason being that in matters of public right the new party to the second proceeding as one of the public has been virtually a party to the former proceeding (3) But judgments, orders and decrees, other than those admissible by sections 40, 41, 42 may be relevant under section 43, if their existence is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provision of the Act (4) In the sections relating to judgments the judgment is admissible as the opinion of the Court on the questions which came before it for adjudication Ordinarily judgments are not admissible as between persons who were not parties and do not claim under the parties to the previous litigation But there are exceptions to this general rule (5) The cases section 13 are such as the section itself illustrates, viz, when the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case (6) Section 43 is one of the group of sections relating to judgments and contains the provision applicable to cases relating to the relevancy of judgments as evidence against strangers (7) Under that section a judgment may be admissible as relevant under some other provision of the Act So a previous judgment has been admitted not in order to prove an adjudication, but in order to prove an admission made by a predecessor in title of the party against whom the document was sought to be used (8) This being so, the question under clause (b), as 'particular instances' This question has been the subject

Calcutta
decisions

h judgments were up to 1880 frequently being, it was said (11), large enough to be admitted, not as conclusive, but of they ought to have Upon this principle previous judgments and proceedings in suits were admitted as relevant in the undermentioned cases (12) In 1880, the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court

(1) Under s 42, post
(2) See Kanhoya Lall v Rodha Churn 7 W R 344 (1867)

(3) Per Pontifex J in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C, 183 (1880)

(4) S 43 post

(5) Hira Lall v A Halls (11 C L R, 530), per Field J (1882)

(6) Per Garth, C. J., in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C, 192

(7) Tepu Khan v Rejoni Mohun 2 C W N, 501, 505 (1898)

(8) Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala, 18 M, 73, 78 (1895)

(9) Other than public or general rights and customs in regard to which (being matter of a public nature) adjudications inter alia have always been admissible and are now so under s 42 of the Act
(10) Taylor v Tomer Beral 7 W R, 210 (1867),

Nattathambi Bottar v Nellakumara Pillai, 7 Mad H C R 306 (1873), Ramasami v Apparu 12 M, 9 and s 42, post

(11) See Lala Ronglal v Deonarayan Tewary, 6 B L R 69 (1870), Deorga Das v Nurendro Coomar 6 W R, 232 (1866), Koondoo Nath v Dheer Chander, 20 W R, 345 (1873), and remarks of Couch C. J. in Neomut Ali v Gooroo Dass 2 W R, 365 (1874), and of Mitter, J. in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C, 179 (1880), (and see R v Keshub Mohajan 8 C, 953 (1882), remarks of Garth C. J.)

(12) Per Couch C. J. in Neomut Ali v Gooroo Dass, 22 W R 366

(13) Guttee Koiburto v Bhukat Koiburto 22 W R, 457 (1874), [the judgments appear to be inter parties] Roopchand v Hur Kishen 23 W R 162 (1875), Dattara Mohanti v Jugo Bhandoo, 23 W R, 293 (1875) followed Sabron Sheikh v

in the case of Gujju Lall v. Fattch Lall (1) considered the question. This was a suit to recover possession of certain property. The Lower Court allowed the plaintiff to put in evidence against the defendant a judgment in a former suit between the defendant and others and to which the plaintiff was no party. It was contended by the defendant that the judgment in this former suit could not be used as evidence in this suit, because the plaintiff was no party to the former proceedings, while the plaintiff, on the other hand, contended that the former judgment was admissible in evidence under this section as being a transaction by which a right claimed in this suit by the plaintiff was asserted and denied. Both the Lower Courts considered the judgment admissible in evidence, and, apparently upon the strength of it, decided in the plaintiff's favour. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether under the thirteenth section or any other section of the Evidence Act, the judgment in the former suit, which was admitted and acted upon as evidence in this suit, was admissible. It was held (Mitter, J., dissenting)—that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the subsequent suit, either as a "transaction" under the thirteenth section or as a fact under the eleventh section or under any other section of the Evidence Act. The case was accordingly sent back to the Lower Court to be decided upon the other evidence. It was further held by the Full Bench (Mitter, J., dissenting) that a former judgment which is not a judgment "in rem" under section 41 nor one relating to matters of a public nature under section 42, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit either as a res judicata, or as proof of the particular point which it decides, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them (2). It has been said that this judgment practically decided that except in the case of judgments in rem, and judgments relating to matters of a public nature, a judgment, in order to be evidence, must be such as would operate by way of estoppel or res judicata (3). This interpretation, however, of the judgment is, it is submitted, incorrect. What the Full Bench held was that a judgment or decree was not admissible under this section, but it might be evidence under others by virtue of the operation of section 43, and that in any case a judgment not inter partes was not admissible in proof of the particular point it decided, that is, it was not admissible in its character of a judicial opinion and as having the effect more or less of res judicata.

In a subsequent suit, however, which was one for rent, the amount of the land held by the defendant was questioned, and it was contended that the land must be measured with a hath of 21½ inches and not one of 18 inches, as claimed

Odoy Mahto 1 Pat 375 (1922) Mohesh Chunder v. Dno Bindhoo 24 W R, 265 (1875) Luchmeedhur Pattack v. Rughobur Singh ib 284 Hunsa Koor v. Sheo Gobind ib 431 Omer Dutt v. Burn ib 470 (1875) [ex parte decree]

(1) 6 C 171

(2) See the following cases in which the principle laid down in Gujju Lall v. Fattch Lall was concurred in and followed: Hira Lal v. A Hills 11 C L R, 530 (1882) Ram Narain v. Ramcoomar Chunder 11 C 562 (1885) Mohendra Lal v. Rosomoy Das 12 C, 207 (1885), and affirmed in Surendra Nath v. Brojo

Nath 13 C. (F B) 352 (1886). [see Gobind Chunder v. Sri Gobind, 24 C, 330 (1896)] "In the conclusion of that judgment we fully concur" per Tyrrell, J. Duthoit J., Shadal Khan v. Amin ul lah Khan 4 A 96 (1881) post A v. Keshab Mahajan, R v. Udit Pershad, 8 C, 993 (1882) see remarks of Edge C. J., Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A 13 (post), 1886, and see as to the effect of this decision the remarks of Parker J. and Handley J. in Byshtamma v. Azulla 15 M 23 (1891) post

(3) Surendra Nath v. Brojo Nath 13 C, 352 353 (1886)

Fatfeh Lall but it was held that they afforded some evidence in corroboration of the plaintiff's case and that they furnished evidence of particular instances in which a custom was claimed (1) It may, however he said that the judgment was not evidence of the nature, whether admitted to or not, and which was alleged to be lalkhraj a claim for rent was successfully made on a former occasion (2) It was said We do not use them as evidence in the way in which judgments and decrees are often used between the same parties that is to show that there has been a previous adjudication on a question of title We take it that these decrees are not evidence of any decision of a Court of Justice that the land is mal or lalkhraj We do not consider that in so deciding we are in any way violating the principle laid down in the Full Bench decision in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall On the contrary and in order to prevent there being any misapprehension we desire to say that we entirely concur in the principle of that decision so far as it was concerned with the facts which were then before the Court (3) Though this case recognised the principle laid down in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall it would seem to be excluded by it in that the previous litigations were used not merely to show that claims for rent had been made but that such claims were successful The claims could only take on this character by reference to the judgments as adjudications so asserting it In a suit for possession of land the defendant offered in evidence a judgment obtained by him in a suit to which the plaintiff or his predecessors in title were not parties Objection was raised to this judgment that it was not inter partes and was therefore inadmissible It was held on the authority of Davies v Lowndes(4) and Ramesur Persad Narain Sing v Kooj Behari Pattuk(5) that this judgment was admissible in evidence to show the character of the defendant's possession and the nature of the enjoyment had in the lands (6) The case of Davies v Lowndes referred to in this judgment was an action to recover lands of the defendant's father and other persons unconnected with the defendant It was held that the father should be let into possession of the property was held admissible on behalf of the defendant not as proof of any of the facts therein stated but for the purpose of ant claimed of this kind Bench deci

Chowdhry (8)
Gujju Lall v rivv Council

Council held that a previous judgment in the case) and by the decision of the Full Bench in Mulraj v Drobo Moyn Daba(11) already mentioned The Court further observed that it did not understand why, if the judgments which were dealt with in the two last mentioned cases could be properly used as evidence for one purpose or another the judgments

(1) Janistulla v Roman Kant 15 C 233 (1887)

(2) Hra Lall v Hills 11 C L R 528 (1882)

(3) Per Field J ib 530 Ramesur Persad v Kooj Behari 4 C 633 (1878) referred to

(4) 1 Bng N C 607

(5) 4 C 633 v ante

(6) Peari Molun v Drobo Moyn 11 C

45 (1885) in this case the judgment was properly admissible under s 43

(7) 1 Bng N C 607 s c 6 M & Gr 471 520 Taylor Ev § 1668 see note to s 43 post

(8) 13 C 352 (1886)

(9) 6 C 171 (1880)

(10) 11 C 301 (1884)

(11) 11 C 745 (1885)

(12) 11 C L R 528 (1882)

adduced in this case could not be used as evidence. The Full Bench, however, upon the authority of Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall(1), considered the judgment to be inadmissible. In a subsequent case(2), these two Full Bench decisions were distinguished, it being held that a decree for possession made by a Court under the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act in a suit beyond the pecuniary limits of that Court's jurisdiction, although not res judicata, was some evidence of dispossession by the defendants in a subsequent suit against the same defendants to recover mesne profits. In this case the fact of the judgment having been given was admissible. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court(3) subsequently expressed the opinion that the decisions in the case of Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall(4), and Surendra Nath Pal Chowdhry v Brojo Nath Pal Chowdhry(5), must be regarded as materially qualified owing to the decisions of the Privy Council they referred to(6), because these decisions establish that under certain circumstances and in certain cases the judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in the subsequent suit was not a party may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes and with certain objects in the subsequent suit. This expression of opinion, which was obiter, has been dissented from by Geidt, J, in a subsequent case(7) to which reference will be made(8). In the last mentioned case the question was whether one A was a partner with J. An award made by an arbitrator in a previous suit brought by A against J was tendered to show the alleged partnership. Geidt, J, held that the award was not admissible. Ghose, J, that it was agreeing in the view that the Privy Council decisions referred to had qualified the rule laid down by the Full Bench and stating that he was disposed to think that the Privy Council had in these cases adopted the dissentient opinion of Mitter, J, in the Full Bench. A decree obtained by a co sharer landlord for rent has been held to be evidence as to the rate of rent in a suit by another co sharer for rent(9).

The Bombay High Court has concurred(10) in the judgment given in Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall. In the case cited the plaintiff sued to recover arrears of rent for a certain shop alleging the annual rent to be Rs 250. The defendant contended it was only Rs 60. In support of his allegation, the plaintiff relied upon the evidence of his brother and two entries in his hand writing in the book of the firm of which the plaintiff's brother and the defendant were partners. To prove the bona fides of these entries the plaintiff offered in evidence a judgment given in favour of the plaintiff's brother in a suit brought by the defendant, charging him (the plaintiff's brother) with improperly debiting their firm with Rs 250 as the rent of the shop. It was held that the judgment was not admissible. Sargent, C J, remarking "As to the term 'transaction' it is doubtless one of large import and might, although by a strained use of it, be held to be applicable to proceedings in a suit but as the result of holding it to be so applicable in the thirteenth section would be to effect a most important departure from the English rule of evidence which would make judgments, decrees and verdicts of juries only admissible in matters of public interest, it may well be doubted if such was the intention of the framer of the Code (11). Later it was said. It is not easy to reconcile this conflict of views in particular instances but apparently the cases, which decide that judgments not inter-

(1) 6 C 171 (1880)

(2) Jamallah Sleikh v Inu Khan 23 C 69 (1896)(3) Tepu Khan v Rojoni Molun 25 C 522 s c 2 C W N, 501 (1898)

(4) 6 C 171 (1880)

(5) 13 C 352 (1886)

(6) Rani Ranjan v Rani Aaran 22 C 53 (1895), Bhito Kuntar v Aesha Pershad 24 L A, 10 (1897)(7) Abnash Chunder v Poresh Nath 9 C W N 402 (1904)

(8) v post p 183

(9) Bjankesh Chakravarty v Jaga dishar Rai 22 C W N 304(10) In Ranchhodas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B 439 (1886)(11) Ib 422 Varanji Bhikhabhai v Dapa Umed 3 B 3 referred to and distinguished partes, are not admissible in evidence, proceed chiefly on the ground that those or less, of res judicata admitted in evidence, be used to show the conduct of the parties, or show particular instances of the exercise of a right or admissions made by ancestors, or how the property was dealt with previously, they may be used under the eleventh or thirteenth section as exceptions recognised under section 43 as relevant evidence." (1) This decision was followed in the undermentioned case. The judgments rejected by the lower Appellate Court were not enter partes but were in suits brought by other creditors against the same defendants in which the existence of the partnership denied in the suit was asserted with success. It was held that the judgments were admissible in evidence and must be treated as relevant but not as conclusive as to the existence of the partnership (2) Sed quare. And in the case now cited a house had been passed to the plaintiff by a registered sale deed by his deceased father, and subsequent to the sale certain mortgagees of the father had brought a suit on the mortgage against the plaintiff and his father and mother, on which suit the sale had been held to be a sham transaction. On the plaintiff bringing ceased brother, the defendants sell (actg C J) in the two last mentioned cases, and that the proceedings in the suit on the mortgage were admissible as relevant evidence because the plaintiff and the defendants, either by themselves or their predecessors, were parties to that suit, and that the said proceedings came within the words "particular instances in which the right was claimed," and it was held by Beaman, J., that the judgment in the suit on the mortgage was admissible to prove that the genuineness of the sale-deed was then questioned but could not be used for any ulterior purpose (3).

The Madras High Court has also concurred (4) in the judgment given in Guyy Lall v Fatteh Lall. In a suit brought by the trustees of a temple to recover from the owners of certain lands in certain villages money claimed under an alleged right as due to the temple, judgments in other suits against other persons in which claims under the same right had been decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple were admitted (5). It was said. We concur with the majority of the learned Judges who decided, in Guyy Lall v Fatteh Lall, that a judgment of the character there under consideration, viz, as to whether a certain person was or was not the heir to another, is neither a transaction nor a fact in the sense in which the words are used in the thirteenth section not be racter vious in the ere so to us ts are right ed or departed from,' and was further adjudicated upon, and that the right was a right

(1) Per Ranade J in Lakshman v Amrit 24 B., 598 599 (1900)

(2) Govindji Jhaver v Chhotalal Vels 2 Bom L R 651 (1900)

(3) Mahomad Amin v Hasan (1906). 31 B 143 and see Dharnidhar v Dhundhar

raj (1903) 5 B L R 230

(4) In Subramanya v Paramaswaran, 11 M 123 (1887), Ramasami v Appavu 12 M 13 (1887)

(5) Ramasami v Appavu 12 M, 9 (1887)

of the character dealt with under the thirteenth section of the Evidence Act. The case for the appellants is—and there is evidence in support of it in the case before us as to at least six of such villages—that, from those who hold lands in large number of villages in the vicinity of the temple, the payment claimed nature' within the meaning of section 42 of the same Act. The question for determination before us is not dissimilar in principle from that reported in Naranji Bhikhabhai v Dipa Umed (1). The right now claimed appears to us to be as much a right of the character indicated in the thirteenth section of the Evidence Act as the right to a fishery, and the judgments go far to support the finding of the District Judge as to the payments claimed having been customarily made (2). In this case the remarks as to this section were obiter as it was held that the case came within s. 42. But apart from this the judgment may have been admissible to explain the nature of the payments made, viz., that they had been made after suits brought and that the payments were thus claimable as of right and were not voluntary. In a suit to establish the plaintiff's title to certain lands he put in evidence (a) a conveyance in favour of his father, (b) a sale certificate issued to his father's vendor, (c) an order made in certain execution proceedings in which was recited a petition by his father asserting his title, (d) a judgment obtained by his father in which his title was recognized. Neither the defendants nor their predecessors were parties to any of these instruments or proceedings. It was held that none of these documents were conclusive, since the defendants were not parties to them, but that they were relevant evidence as tending to show that the plaintiff's ancestors had dealt with the site as their own for a long term of years (3). In this case documents A and B were clearly admissible as documents of title. D was an assertion of right, C the judgment set out to pleas of the parties and from these it appeared that the defendant's predecessors had parted with the property to the plaintiff's father, though the admission was attempted to be avoided by an allegation of an agreement to return the property. But as to this it may doubtless be held that the purpose as the plaintiff had in view was the same as that in Gujju Lal former judgment. In that case the plaintiff had lost his title, and it was held that the opinion expressed in the former judgment was not a relevant fact within the meaning of the Evidence Act. In the case before us it is not the case that the plaintiff had lost his title, but that he had a particular instance of a marumakatajom tarwad, wholly irrespective of the particular decision arrived at in the suit. This, we think, is a relevant fact (4). In this case the document referred to as a judgment was an entry in the Court diary of the District Munsif and was held to be admissible under section 35, post.

The question was considered by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhar Singh (5). In Allahabad decisions

(1) 3 B 3 supra

(2) Ramasami v Apparu 12 M 13 (1887) referred to in Bathamma v Arulla 15 M 24 (1891) (v post), and Puthalinga v Venkatachala 16 M 196 (1892)

(3) Venkatasani v Venkatreddy 15 M 12 (1890).

(4) 15 M at pp 25-24 (1891). Arivasa v Rajagopal 13 Jangar 18 M, 73, 77 (1895)

(5) 12 A 1 (F B) (1889) [as to the effect of this decision see Lakshman v Anwar 24 B 599 (1900), a case prior to this will be found in 4 A Shadul Khan v Amn ul lah Khan where at p 96, Tyrrell, establish widow's d falsev ie widow was her s by the Court of first instance and by the High Court on appeal. After the widow's death the plaintiff brought a suit against one Dalip Naram Singh, whom the Collector as Manager of the Court of Wards, had accepted as the minor son, the defendant in the first suit, and against the Collector, as such Manager, for possession of the same villages upon the same grounds as those put forward in the former suit — Held by the Full Bench that the judgments of the Court of first instance and the High Court in the former suit did not operate as res judicata in the present suit, but (Brodhurst, J., dissenting on this point) (1) that they were admissible in evidence in the present suit Held per Edge, C J, and Tyrrell, J, that the judgments were not admissible under the eighth section or the ninth section, nor was either of them a 'transaction' or a 'fact,' within the meaning of the thirteenth section. But the record and not the judgments alone in the former suit was admissible under the clause (b) of the thirteenth section independently of section 43 as evidence of a particular instance in which the alleged right of the plaintiff to the property now in suit was at the time claimed and disputed, the word 'right,' in both clauses (a) and (b) being up and not down, to incorporate the former suit for the purpose of the thirteenth section, traight, J.

that under section 43 of the Evidence Act the question was whether the existence of the former judgments was a fact in issue or relevant under some other provisions of the Act. Here the question was not as to the existence of the judgments, but as to their relevance as a fact in issue or relevant fact, but though other than those mentioned in the orders and decrees it did not make them absolutely inadmissible when they were the best evidence of something that might be proved aliunde. The former judgments and decrees judgments

l, J. That Gujju Lall

v. Fattah Lall, the former judgment of the High Court was admissible in evidence

J and Duthost J say. In the conclusions of that judgment (Gujju Lall v. Fattah Lall) we fully concur.]

(1) Per Brodhurst J. My opinions on the points that have been referred are in accordance with the judgment of the Court in Gujju Lall v. Fattah Lall at p. 27.

(2) Sed quare whether the judgment could be used as a recognition of right. The defendant's right was only recognised in the sense that in the opinion of the Court it was found to exist that is adjudicated upon. By "recognition in the section was meant it is submitted admitted not adjudicated upon post but see also Abinash Chandra v. Poresh Nath 9 C W N 402 at p. 415 per Ghose J. or it is a transaction recognising the right of Abinash in that property within the meaning of s. 13 of the Evidence Act and Gujju Lall v. Fattah Lall at p. 181 per Mitter J. where he held that the judgment was relevant because it recognised the right of the plaintiff and made therefore the existence of the fact in issue in the subsequent suit highly probable.

A recent decision of the Lahore High Court holds that a previous judgment could only be used for the purpose of showing that the right had been called in question but that the finding of the Court was not relevant (1) Lahore decision

The Privy Council have in the following reported instances admitted in evidence judgments and orders not between the same parties (2) Privy Council decisions

Where to actions of ejectment by a zemindar, the defendants pleaded a ghatah tenure of the mouzahs in dispute under permanent mokurrur and dur mokurrur rights at fixed rents from before the decennial settlement, it was held that certain decrees in 1817 and 1845 relating thereto, to which the zemindar's predecessors in title were not parties, but which sustained the defendants' claim to hold at fixed rents, were admissible in evidence as showing ancient possession and assertion of title many years ago, and that taken with other evidence, they established the defendants' possession at a uniform rent for so relate, and that in former suits the parties asserted the same rights which they were then asserting, and that to this extent the judgments were admissible even though the plaintiff was no party to them. The Privy Council made no reference to this section. It is true that it cited the findings of the Lower judgments of them. The answertain of the against him.

The Privy Council by reference to the findings show that they did not. But the ground on which the Privy Council itself admitted the evidence was that the rate, judg-

so that n, but luction

of the judgment, and the existence of the judgment was admissible as a fact in issue under section 43, post (4). The result of this decision appears to be that the judgments were admitted under section 43 as facts in issue and also (if the Privy Council be taken to have affirmed the decision of the High Court on this section) But neither Court the effect of a kind of qualified

(1) Inder Singh v. Fatch Singh 1 Lahore 540.

(2) See Tefu Khan v. Rojani Molun 25 C. 522, s. c. 2 C. W. N. 501 503 (1898).

(3) Ram Ranjan v. Ravi Narain 22 Ind App. 60 (1894), s. c. 22 C. 533.

(4) Per Geidt J. in Dinash Chandra v. Peresh Nath, 9 C. W. N. 402 403.

(1904) The judgment however was not treated as proof that the amount decreed was the correct amount payable but that that particular amount was by the decree made payable at p. 410.

(5) Which appear to have been the view entertained by Ghose J., in the last mentioned suit.

In Bhatto Kunuar v Kesho Pershad Misser(1) their Lordships of the Privy Council, speaking of a judgment in a former suit against one of the defendants, Bacha Tewari, observed 'this decision is not conclusive against Bacha Tewari, as the suit was not between the same parties as the present suit, but their Lordships agree with the Subordinate Judge that it was admissible as evidence against him' In this case a decree obtained against the defendant that a Will was revoked was held not to be res judicata in a suit against him brought by other plaintiffs, but admissible as evidence against him There is no mention of this section in the judgment, and the grounds upon which the previous decisions were admitted are not stated in the report An opinion, however, has been expressed that as the matters in controversy in the suit in which the decree was passed related to public charitable purposes the prior decision was brought within the terms of section 42 which treats of judgments relating to matters of a public nature(2) Whether the judgment might or might not have been admissible on this ground, the Authors have ascertained from the records of the Allahabad High Court(3) that this was not the ground on which the Subordinate Judge (whose decision was approved by the Privy Council) admitted it in evidence The plaintiff claimed the property in suit as the heir of Ramkishan If the property were subject to a trust and Ramkishan had been in possession as trustee, then plaintiff had no title to it, otherwise if there were no trust and both Ramkishan and Bacha Tewari had beneficial possession The fifth issue therefore was whether there was a trust, and this involved the question whether Bhawani had revoked the Will creating the trust. The second and fourth issues were as to the time since when possession had been held and what was the nature of the possession of Ramkishan, the plaintiff's alleged predecessor, and of the defendant Bacha Tewari These were all facts well as his mortgagee a party to that suit), as a trustee under the Will It was, however, held in that suit that the Will was revoked and therefore the property was not subject to a trust At the date of that suit Bacha Tewari was in possession of his moiety He continued to hold after the suit and held under a title which negated the trust namely, the title declared by the judgment in question

Privy Council held, and, as the evidence against Bacha Tewari was admissible as a party to it—as showing the character of the title held by Bacha Tewari over the estate in respect of which the agreement of 1850 was made" He could not after this decree have held as trustee when the trust was negated by it The judgment was therefore relevant and admitted not under this section, but its existence was either a fact in issue under the forty third and fifth sections or relevant as explaining a fact in issue under the forty third and ninth sections

Neither of these decisions appear to affect the Full Bench decision in Gujju Lal v Fateh Lal.

(1) 24 I A 10 (1897) 1 C W N. 265

(2) Ab nash Chandra v Paresh Nath 9 C W N 402 (1904) at p 409, per

Ced J this was doubted by Ghose J, in the same case see p 352

(3) See Appendix

In the later case of Dinomoni Choudhrani v Brojomohini Choudhrani(1) in which however, this section was expressly referred to the facts were as follows—The suit was instituted by D M C as the widow and executrix of H N C, against J C to partly a reformat of her villages

I of H N C whereupon proceedings took place in the Criminal Court under section 318 of the Criminal Procedure Code, XXV of 1861, in the course of which H N C was found to be in possession of the land, and an order was passed by the Magistrate confirming his possession. Some time after, a third party, a neighbouring proprietor, commenced a dispute which also terminated by an order of the Criminal Court under section 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), dated 19th June, 1876 in favour of H N C. In 1888, further possessory proceedings took place in the Criminal Court under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882, as the result of which the defendant J C was found to be in possession and by an order of 31st December 1888, she was confirmed in possession of the land in dispute. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit and rejected the Criminal proceedings of 1876 as being inad a party to them relevant for tho with that which t that time. On orders (made in 1867, 1876 and 1888), are merely police orders made to prevent breaches of the peace. They decide no question of title, but under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882 (relating to disputes as to immovable property) the Magistrate is, if possible, to decide which of the parties is in possession of the land in dispute, and if he decides that one of the disputants is in possession, the Magistrate is to make an order declaring such party to be entitled to retain possession until evicted in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction. The Criminal Procedure Acts in force in 1866 and 1876 were to the same effect. These police orders are in their Lordships' opinion admissible in evidence on general principles as well as under the thirteenth section of the Indian Evidence Act to show the facts that such orders were made. This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts all of which appear from the orders themselves, viz who the parties to the dispute were, what the land in dispute was, and who was declared entitled to retain possession. For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against every one when the fact of possession at the date of the order has to be ascertained. If the lands referred to in such an order are described by metes and bounds, or by reference to objects or marks physically existing these must necessarily be ascertained by extrinsic evidence, i.e., the testimony of persons who know the locality. If the orders refer to a map that map is admissible in evidence to render the order intelligible and the actual situation of the objects drawn or otherwise indicated on the map must as in all cases of his sort be ascertained by extrinsic evidence. So far there appears to be no difficulty. Reports accompanying the orders or maps and not referred to in the orders may be admissible as hearsay evidence of reputed possession (Taylor on Evidence § 517). But they are not otherwise admissible, unless they are made so by the thirteenth section of the Indian Evidence Act. To bring a report within that section the report must be a transaction in which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied or which was inconsistent with its existence. The words are very wide and are wide enough to let in the reports forming part of the proceedings in 1867, 1876 and 1888. Their Lordships are of opinion that the

(1) Dinomoni Choudhrani v Brojomohini Choudhrani 23 C. 187 (1st) sc, 29 L.A., 94.

High Court did not err in receiving the report made in the proceedings of 1876, to the reception of which Mr Cohen objected'

Summary

It is true that the Privy Council refer to this section but their judgment shows that the 'police-orders' as they are called but which were apparently the judgments or orders of Magistrates in proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code were also admissible on general principles. What these are is not stated. But as the Judicial Committee has also held that before a document can be admitted it must be shown to be admissible under the Evidence Act it must have here referred to some other section than the present one. This being so, the expression of opinion as regards this section was obiter. In fact the judgments or orders were admissible as facts in issue under the fifth section. The suit was to recover possession and it was obviously admissible to show on the question whether a party had possession at a particular time that an order had been passed retaining him in possession. It might of course have been shown that notwithstanding such order he had not or did not get possession but in the absence of such evidence the presumption would be that what was ordered to be done was carried out. It is however clear that neither as facts in issue nor as transactions nor instances under this section were these orders treated as a kind of inconclusive res adjudicata that is it was not the correctness but the fact of the decision which was relevant. Were it not that the judgment of the Privy Council refers to this section it would create no difficulty at all. With all respect however it may be questioned how the order of the Magistrate could be a transaction or instance of the character mentioned in this section except on the ground that it recognised the right to possession of a particular party or was inconsistent with the possession of the opposite party as to which see post. What the reports were which were admitted is not stated in the decision but this matter does not immediately touch that under discussion. It does not appear that the section was originally intended to refer to judgments but to the acts and statements of persons which may be submitted for the consideration and determination of the Court itself. The order ended to refer to the difficulties which the section to some of the judgments in the cases referred to were in fact admissible under other sections of the Act. There is no question that for some purposes and apart from this section judgments may be relevant. The point is whether this section can be quoted as a ground for their admission.

In the first place the evidence tendered must be that of a transaction or instance. Then assuming it is a transaction it must be one of the kind mentioned in the section. If it is an instance it must be an instance of which the Court does not claim or assert or deny or exercise a right or custom. Nor does it appear. It is obvious that a right or custom is not as a matter of course one of the litigants before it or of those persons whose acts and statements the law treats as their own. Then even assuming a judgment is a transaction it cannot be said to create or modify a right or custom. The right or custom either exists or it does not before the cause comes to trial. The Court merely finds that before and at the date the suit was instituted the right or custom did or did not exist. If the parties litigating had no right the Court cannot give it to them. And if a right or custom exists the Court has no jurisdiction to modify either. The only words in the section which may with any show of reason be made applicable to judgments is the word "recognized" in clauses (a) and (b), and the phrase "which was inconsistent with its existence" in clause (a). But it seems that neither were in fact intended to apply. The recognition referred to in the section appears to be, like the other acts mentioned, an act of a person and not of a tribunal. It is an act of admission. A Court, however, does not admit a right, but adjudicates upon it. Lastly, apart from the question whether a judgment is a "transaction," the "inconsistency" mentioned would appear to refer to the same class of facts as the others stated in the section.

pronounces
existence of
to be that referred to in the first part of illustration (a) to the eleventh section and not the "inconsistency" (if indeed it can be correctly so described), which exists between facts

sistency of fact, however, is shown when two opposed facts are proved and no explanation is offered of their apparent inconsistency

If this view of the section be correct, then as held by the Full Bench in of the first two Privy Council decisions cited (2) (and they do not in the Authors' missible under this section were not stated. Possibly it was admitted as a recognition of right, or as being inconsistent with the right claimed by the defendant, or as evidence of an assertion of right on the part of the plaintiff. It is on the last mentioned ground that the argument for the admissibility of judgments has commonly been founded. Acts of ownership in respect of the subject matter of a litigation may be shown by proof of particular transactions or instances of the character mentioned in the section. These may be transfers of property such as gifts, sales, leases, mortgages or acts of enjoyment such as the actual exercise of a right and the like. A claim, however, may be asserted or denied in a litigation as well as in or by any other of the modes

(1) Gujju Lall v. Fateh Lall 6 C 171 (1890)

(2) Ram Kanjan v. Ram Narain 22 C 533 (1894) Bhutto Annadar v. Kesho Pershad 19 A 277 (1897)

(3) Dinomoni Chaudhrani v. Brajomo ni Chaudhrani 29 C 187 (1901)

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palak dhari 12 A 14 25 28 (1889) Yeshu Khan v. Rajoni Mohun 2 C W 501 504 (1898) s. c. 25 C 522

(5) Ib v. ib. It seems however a somewhat forced use of language to call a litigation a transaction.

(6) Ib v. ante Jannullah v. Ramari Kant 1 C 233 (1887) Ramazari v. Iffra 12 M. 9 (1887)

(7) Tarun Khan v. Rajoni Mohun 2 C W 501 504 (1898) s. c. 25 C 522, 5 M 11 Jan v. Hara Chandra S. A. 105 107 Cal H C 1 July 1904

case the relevant fact is the litigation, and the judgment is only the proof of it. There may be cases in which a judgment is the only proof of the assertions of the parties. But it may be objected that a claim is asserted or denied in the pleadings, in the issues, or in the evidence given in support or denial of those issues. If these are available, are not they the proper evidence of the claim made? The judgment is the judicial opinion rendered on the claims of the parties. It is not their claim, though it may in common with other parts of the proceedings record it. Whether judgments can be said to recognise or be inconsistent with rights has already been dealt with. In short, great difficulties ensue in the application of this section to judgments. But whether admissible under this section or not, it is clear that the reasons⁽¹⁾ given for a former judgment or decree cannot be relied on to show that in subsequent litigation either of the parties were right or wrong in their assertion or denial of the claim litigated and adjudicated upon. If in a suit by A against B, the former asserts a claim which is declared to be well founded by the judgment in that suit, such assertion may be evidence in a subsequent litigation between A and C, tending to show that in the last mentioned litigation A is also entitled to a decree. But the opinion given in favour of A in the first suit is not relevant to prove that the judgment should also be in his favour in the subsequent suit. So to use a judgment is to use it in respect of the judicial opinion which it contains. Such an opinion may have been given on a different state of facts and was moreover rendered in the absence of the parties sought to be affected by it. Judgments considered as judicial opinions are only relevant under ss 40-42. In this respect and to this extent the law appears to be the same now as it was before the Privy Council decisions which have been said to materially qualify it. The decision of the Full Bench holds that a judgment not in rem or of a public nature and not inter partes is not relevant under this section "as proof of the particular point it decides" in the sense indicated. The sole object for which it was sought in this case to prove the former judgment was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right claimed. The plaintiff in short said "another Court has decided the same point in my favour, so the decision should be in my favour again." The dissentient Judge thought that because the plaintiff produced this prior favourable decision it therefore rendered the case of the plaintiff in the subsequent suit more probable. No decision of the Privy Council has ever sanctioned such a use of a judgment. But the existence of a judgment thus, if A has obtained a son, murders A in consequence showing motive for a son on the judgment in the fact of acquittal, the fact, namely, that the Criminal proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff in the Civil action⁽⁵⁾. Again a reference to the finding of a judgment may explain the character of party's possession and the nature of the enjoyment had in the

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari 12 A 1 (1889), Ahyan v Hara Chandra supra.

(2) Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain 22 C, 533 (1894) Dinomoni Chowdhram v Brojomohun Chowdhram 29 C 187 (1901).

(3) Apparently (amongst others) under this section Dinomoni v Brojomohun Chowdhram supra though it should be noted as already stated that in one sense the opinion was obiter as the judgment in question was held also to be admissible on general principles v ante Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain supra if that decision admitted the decrees also on the ground stated by High Court. In so far as it may be held that these decisions admit judgments under this section they appear to have altered the law laid down in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall according to which the section did not apply to judgments at all.

(4) S 43 illust (d)

(5) v s 43 post

property in suit (1) And so the finding of a judgment may be referred to in all other cases where the record is matter of inducement or merely introductory to other evidence (2) And judgments are admissible where sought to be used to show the conduct of the parties, or to show particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admission made by ancestors or how the property was dealt with previously (3) Other instances are afforded by the Privy Council decisions cited to tl

adm

The existence of any custom or right may be proved under this section by evidence of "transactions" or "instances" (5) A statement contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such "transaction" as is mentioned in clause (a) is relevant, if the person by whom such statement is made is dead or cannot be found, or if he is incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense (6) The statement, written or verbal, giving the opinion of a person not called as a witness for similar reasons, as to the existence of any public right or custom, or matter of public or general interest as to the existence of which he would have been likely to have been aware, is relevant, provided it were made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter had arisen (7) But such evidence of the controversy is inadmissible (8) When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right (this includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons), the opinion as to the existence of such custom or right of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, are relevant (9), and the grounds upon which such opinions are based are also relevant (10) they relate to matters that is, y are not conclusive proof of that y evidence," it has been said, "of an enforcement of a custom is a final decree based on the custom" (12) Custom being in derogation of the general rules of law, must be construed and proved strictly (13) In Ramalakhmi Ammal v Shuanantha Perumal Sethurayer the Privy Council said—"Their Lordships are fully sensible of the importance and justice of giving effect to long established usage existing in particular districts and families in India, but it is of the essence of special usages, modifying the ordinary law of succession, that they should be ancient and invariable, and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence" (14) Thus evidence which may suffice to raise a

(1) Peary Mohun v Drobomoy Dabia
11 C 49 (1885) v ante

(2) See Commentary to s 43 post

(3) Lukhsian v Arisi 24 B 598
599 (1900)

(4) v s 42 post and note

(5) See in Jugmohandas Mangaldas v Mangaldas Nathubhoy 10 B 543 observations on proof by instances and Anant Singh v Durga Singh (1910) 37 I A 191

(6) S 32 cl (7) post and Hurronath Mulla v Nattanand 10 B L R 263 ante

(7) S 32 cl (4) post

(8) Ekratshari Singh v Janashree
Prasim P C 4 C 582 (1915)

(9) S 48 f st

(10) S 51 post

(11) S 42 post and notes

(12) Gurdajal Mal v Jhandu Mal 10 A 563 s 47 post

(13) Hurpurad v Shoo Dyal 3 I A 285 Bem Madhub v Jai Krishna 7 B L R 154 Janki Prasad Singh v Dwarika Prasad Singh 35 A 391 (1913) (case of insufficient proof)

(14) Ramalakhmi Ammal v Shuanantha Perumal 17 W R 553 ante Musamat Farbat Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar S O C 94 and v P C (1909) 36 I A 125 see Janki Misr v Ranno Singh, 35 A 472 (1913) (strict proof of each sale to a stranger where custom of pre-emption disputed) presumption may be insufficient to prove a customary right (1) The course of practice upon which the custom rests must not be left in doubt but he proved with certainty (2) "The most cogent evidence of custom is not that which is afforded by the expression of opinion as to its existence, but the examination of instances in which the alleged custom has been acted upon, and by the proof afforded by judicial or revenue records or private records or receipts, that the custom has been enforced." (3) "The acts required for the establishment of customary law ought to be plural, uniform and constant. They may be inferred from the evidence Evidence of acts of the kind, acquiescence in those acts, their publicity, decisions of Courts, or even of panchayats, upholding such acts, the statements of experienced and competent persons of their belief that such acts were legal and valid, will all be admissible, but it is obvious that, although admissible, evidence of this latter kind will be of little weight if unsupported by actual examples of the usage asserted (5) A customary right to tom is the test extending back were made on (6) A custom shown to have been well established in a family cannot be defeated by proof that in one case it was not enforced (7) The existence of a custom may be inferred from long enjoyment not exercised by permission stealth or force (8) What the law requires before an alleged custom can receive the recognition of usage so long common consent, particular family, prevalent over a from its universality or usage To prove a local custom the evidence must be precise and conclusive (10) See in the undermentioned case observations on the usage of hooks of history to prove a local custom (11)

A caste-custom prohibiting widows from adopting, is one which before the Court can give judicial effect to it, ought to be established by very clear proof

(1) Ramakanta Das Malapatra v Shamanand Das Malapatra P C (1908) 36 C 590

(2) Sivananjan Permal v Muti Ramalinga 3 Mad H C R 77 ante

(3) Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan I A 440 per Turner J as to proof of instances see Rahimathbai v Hirbai 3 B 34 (1877)

(4) Tara Chand v Reeb Ram 3 M H C R 57 ante As to the plurality of acts and the onus probandi in the case of an allegation of custom see Desai Ranchad das v Rasool Nathubai 21 B 116 117 (1895) and see further as to onus the case of Rahimathbai v Hirbai 3 B 34 (1877)

(5) Gopalayyan v Raghupatayyan 7 Mad H C R 254 (1873) but see Eranyoli Illath v Eranyoli Illath 7 M 3

(1883)

(6) Kumtarn Reddi v Nagayasan Thambicki Naicker (1907), 31 M 17, and see Pearry Mohan Mukerjee v Jote Kumar Mukerjee (1906) 11 C W N 83

(7) Ekradeshwar Singh v Jalmestwari Balmesun P C 42 C 582 (1915)

(8) Shadi Lal v Muhammad Ishaq Khan (1910) 33 A 277 Malamaya Debi v Haridas Haldar 42 C 455 (1915)

(9) Sivananjan Permal v Muti Ramalinga 3 Mad H C R 77, ante and v Muhammad Usar Khan v Muhammad Ma'ndan Khan P C (1911) 39 C 418

(10) Tekaet Doorga v Tekatnee Daarga 20 W R 157 ante

(11) Vallabha v Mudusudanam 12 M, 495 (1889)

that the conscience of the members of the caste had come to regard it as for bidden. It must be shown that a uniform and persistent usage has moulded the life of the caste (1)

In order to establish a family custom at variance with the ordinary law of inheritance it is necessary that it should be established by clear and positive proof (2) (v ante). And the more unusual the custom the stricter must be the proof (3). To establish a kulachar or family custom of descent, one at least of two things must be shown—either a clear, distinct and positive tradition in the family that the kulachar exists, or a long series of instances of anomalous inheritance from which the kulachar may be inferred (4). It is said in the case of Sumrun Singh v Khedun Singh (5) that “to legalise any deviation from the strict letter of the law, it is necessary that the usage should have been prevalent during a long succession of ancestors, when it becomes known by the name of kulachar.” But a distinct tradition in the family supplies the place of ancient examples of the application of the usage (6). It has been doubted whether to the general

nothing to pre-modern uniform in the absence resumption can

8) Where the plaintiff sued the defendants for possession of an estate on the assertion that she was the daughter of the last undisputed owner, and the defendants resisted the claim on the ground that she was excluded by a custom prevailing in the family and tribe to which the parties belonged, it was held that there was no objection to a party pleading that a custom exists both in a family and in the tribe to which the family belongs, but he must prove that it is binding on the family, and on appeal it was held by the Privy Council that evidence of a

“Usage of Trade,” v post

(1) Patel Vandrayan v Patel Manlal 16 B 470 (1891) see Jugmohandas Mangaldas v Mangaldas Nathubhai 10 B 578 ante

(2) Rajah Nugender v Rughoonath Narain W R (1864) 20 ante. For recent Privy Council decision on family custom see Nitra Pal v Jai Pal 19 A 1 (1896) Mohesh Chunder v Satrugan Dhal 29 C 343 (1902) in which decrees not inter partes were admitted as evidence of custom. Chandika Baksh v Numa Khan 24 A 273 (1901) see also Mafathi Amin v Subbaraya Mudaliar 24 M 650 (1901) [Migration of Hindu subject of French India—custom]

(3) Ganga Singh v Chedi Lal 33 A 605

(4) Malharani Hiranath v Ram Narayan 9 B L R 274 294 (1872)

(5) 2 Sel Rep 116 New Ed 14

(6) Maharani Hiranath v Baboo Ram supra 295 as to kulachar determining succession to an impartible estate see Subramanya Pandya v Siva Subramanya

17 M 316 (1894) Mahesh Chunder v Satrugan Dhal 29 C 343 (1902)

(7) Ta a Chand v Reeb Ram 3 Mad H C R 57 58 (1886) Madharav Raghuendra v Balkrishna 4 B H C R (A C) 113 (1886) distinguished in Bhan Nanaji v Sundrabai 11 Bom H C R 271 (1874) Musanat Parbati Kuar v Rani Chandrapal Kuar 8 O C 94 See also Maynes Hindu Law § 51 5th Ed (1892)

(8) Bhan Nanaji v Sundrabai 11 Bom H C R 271 ante following Shepherd v Payne 31 L J C P 297 and Lord Waterpark v Fennel 7 H L 650 see also Rai asam v Apparu 12 M 14 ante and Jay Kishen v Doorga Narain 11 W R 38 ante

(9) Musst Parbati Annwar v Rani Chunderpal Annwar 8 O C 94 and P C (1909) 36 I A 125 and v Shivagunga's case (1863) 3 M I A 539

(10) Soorendranath v Musamat Heeramanee 18 W R (P C), 35 (1868), 1 C 198 ante

It must be proved that the right or custom shown to have been exercised on some particular occasion is the same with the right or custom which has to be proved. In England the custom of one manor is not admissible to prove the instance of another unless some connection can be shown between them, as, for instance, that the custom in question is a particular incident of the general tenure which is proved to be common to the two manors (1). So also where evidence of a right exercised in a particular locality was given, it was said - "Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown by acts of en to confine may have provided

the spot

pute belonged to the plaintiff if the other parts did. It has been said in the course of argument that the defendant had no interest to dispute the acts of ownership not opposite his own land but the ground on which such acts are admissible is not the acquiescence of any party, they are admissible of themselves proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is owner of the soil, though if they are done in the absence of all persons interested to dispute them, they are of less weight,—that observation applies only to the effect of the evidence" (2). See notes to s 42 post. The fact that a custom was not pleaded in litigations between members of the community where it might have been pleaded is relevant evidence, and the question of its relevancy is not affected by the circumstance that some of those suits were still pending in Courts at the time of the trial (3).

Usage of
trade

It has been said "that these words are to be understood as referring to a particular usage to be established by evidence and perfectly distinct from that general custom of merchants, which is the universal established law of the land, which is to be collected from evidence in pais" (4). Thus tradict the law merchant sistent with law (5). The judicial decisions, ratifying the usage of merchants in the different departments of trade, where a general usage has been judicially ascertained and established, it becomes part of the law merchant which Courts of Justice are bound to know and ex officio apply, but it is not easy to define the period at which a usage

so becomes be proved

been acted be proved to be the necessary to support an alleged usage, the Privy Council said that "there needs not either the antiquity, the uniformity or the notoriety of custom, which in respect of all these, becomes a local law. The usage may be still in course of growth, it may require evidence for its support in each case, but in the result it is enough, if it appears to be so well known and acquiesced in, that it may reasonably be presumed to have been an ingredient tacitly imported by

(1) Marquis of Anglesey v Lord Hather 10 M & W, 235, and Taylor, Ev. § 320. Roscoe N P Ev. 85, as to manorial rights see note to s 42 post.

(2) Jones v Williams 2 M & W, 326 per Parker B., Taylor, Ev. 309, 310, see s 11 ante.

(3) Mariam Dibi v Shaik Mahomed Ibrahim 28 C. L. J., 306, S C 48 I A, 561.

(4) 1 Smith L. Cas 9th Ed 581 582.

(5) Mejer v Desser 16 C B N S, 660. Indian Contract Act s 1.

(6) Roscoe N P Ev. 24, 25 and cases there cited.

(7) Wackenzie v Dunlop 3 Macq H L Cas 22. Cunningham v Faublanque 6 L & P 44, but see s 49 post.

(8) Volkart Bros v Vetterliu Nadan 11 M 465 (1887).

the parties into their contract.”(1) The usage must be shown to be certain(2), and reasonable(3), and so universally sequestered in(4) that everybody in the particular trade knows it, or might know it, if he took the pains to enquire(5) If effect is to be given it, it must not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act(6) or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract made between the parties (7)

14. Facts showing the existence of any state of mind—such as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling—are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind, or body, or bodily feeling, is in issue or relevant.

Facts showing existence of state of mind or of body, or bodily feeling

Explanation 1.—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

Explanation 2.—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact (8)

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article

The fact that, at the same time(9), he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles, of which he was in possession, to be stolen (10)

(1) Juggomohun Ghose v Maunickchand, 7 Moo Ind App, 282 (1859), s c, 4 W R (P C) 8, per Sir J Coleridge cited and applied in Palakdhari Rai v Mannars 23 C 179, 183 (1895) [usage in landholders estate]

(2) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M 462 466 ante

(3) Arafa Nayak v Narsi Kesha,ji & Co, 8 Bom H C R (A C) 19 (1871), Ransordas Bhogilal v Keerasing Mohanlal 1 Bom 11 C R 231 (1863), Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan 11 M 462 466, ante

(4) See Mackenzie Lyall v Chaimroo Singh 16 C 702 (1889), Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan 11 M 462 466, ante

(5) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan 11 M 461 462 Plaice v Allcock, 4 F & F (1074) per Willes J Foxal v International Land Credit Co, 16 L 1 S, 637

(6) Act IX of 1872, s 1 see Madhab Chander v Rajcoomar Das, 14 B L R 76 (1874)

(7) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan

11 M 461 J G Smith v Ludha Ghella 17 B 129 (1892) see note to s 29 proviso 5 post

(8) These Explanations were substituted for the original explanation to s 14 by Act III of 1891 s 1 (1) see also Cr Pr Code s 310 (Act V of 1898), and R v Aaba Kumar 1 C W N 146 (1897), in which the alterations effected in this section and in s 54 are discussed

(9) See 34 & 35 Vic c 112 s 19 R v Drage 14 Cox 85 R v Carter 12 Q B D 522

(10) According to English law such evidence of intention in the case of indictments for receiving stolen goods is admissible only subject to certain limitations see Steph Dig Art 11 34 & 35 Vic c 112 s 19 Roscoe Cr L 12th Ed 84 78 78 and cases there cited This illustration makes no reservation as to ownership or time so that though the stolen property belonged to other person than the prosecutor and without reference to the lapse of time since it was stolen evidence of its possession may under the Act be given against the accused, its weight

It must be proved that the right or custom shown to have been exercised on some particular occasion is the same with the right or custom which has to be proved. In England the custom of one manor is not admissible to prove the instance of another unless some connection can be shown between them, as, for instance, that the custom in question is a particular incident of the general tenure which is proved to be common to the two manors (1). So also where evidence of a right exercised in a particular locality was given, it was said "Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown by acts of enjoyment of the land itself, but it is impossible in the nature of things to confine the evidence to the very precise spot on which the alleged trespass may have been committed: evidence may be given of acts done on other parts, provided there is such a common character of locality between those parts and the spot in question as would raise a reasonable inference that the place in dispute belonged to the plaintiff if the other parts did. It has been said in the course of argument that the defendant had no interest to dispute the acts of ownership not opposite his own land: but the ground on which such acts are admissible is not the acquiescence of any party, they are admissible of themselves proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is owner of the soil, though if they are done in the absence of all persons interested to dispute them, they are of less weight,—that observation applies only to the effect of the evidence" (2). See notes to s 42, post. The fact that a custom was not pleaded in litigations between members of the community where it might have been pleaded is relevant evidence, and the question of its relevancy is not affected by the circumstance that some of those suits were still pending in Courts at the time of the trial (3).

Usage of
trade

It has been said "that these words are to be understood as referring to a particular usage to be established by evidence and perfectly distinct from that general custom of merchants, which is the universal established law of the land, which is to be collected from decisions, legal principles and analogies not from evidence in pais" (4). Thus evidence of general custom is not admitted to contradict the law merchant. A custom or usage of trade must in all cases be consistent with law (5). That law has however been gradually developed by judicial decisions, ratifying the usage of merchants in the different departments of trade, where a general usage has been judicially ascertained and es-been acted upon, and not by evidence of opinion only (7). Usage of trade may be proved by multiplying instances of usage of different merchants if it appears to be the same as that of other merchants (8). With reference to the evidence necessary to support an alleged usage the Privy Council said that "there needs not either of custom which in respect of all be still in course of growth, it is result it is enough, if it appears to be so well known and acquiesced in, that it may reasonably be presumed to have been an ingredient tacitly imported by

(1) Marquis of Anglesey v Lord Hather 10 M & W 235, and Taylor Ev § 320. Roscoe, N P Ev 85 as to manorial rights see note to s 42, post.

(2) Jones v Williams 2 M & W 326. per Parker B Taylor Ev 309 310. See s 11 ante.

(3) Maran B v Shaik Mahomed Ibrahim 28 C L J 306 S C 48 I A, 561.

(4) 1 Smith L Cas 9th Ed 581 582. (5) Meyer v Desser 16 C B N S, 660. Indian Contract Act s 1.

(6) Roscoe N P Ev 24 25 and cases there cited.

(7) Macken v Dunlop 3 Macq H L Cas 22. Cunningham v Faublanque 6 L & P 44 but see s 49 post.

(8) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan 11 M 465 (1887).

the parties into their contract”(1) The usage must be shown to be certain(2), and reasonable(3), and so universally acquiesced in(4) that everybody in the particular trade knows it, or might know it, if he took the pains to enquire(5) If effect is to be given it, it must not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act(6) or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract made between the parties (7)

14 Facts showing the existence of any state of mind—such as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling—are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind, or body, or bodily feeling, is in issue or relevant

Facts showing existence of state of mind or of body, or bodily feeling

Explanation 1.—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

Explanation 2—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact (8)

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article

The fact that, at the same time(9), he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles, of which he was in possession, to be stolen.(10)

(1) Juggomohun Ghose v Manickchand 7 Moo Ind App 282 (1889) s c 4 W R (P C) 8 per Sir J Coleridge cited and applied in Palakdhari Rai v Manners 23 C 179 183 (1895) [usage in landholder's estate]

(2) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan 11 M 462 466 ante

(3) Arapa Nayak v Narsi Keshavji & Co 8 Bom H C R (A C) 19 (1871). Ransordas Bhoglal v Keerisingh Mahanlal 1 Bom H C R 231 (1863) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan 11 M 462 466, ante

(4) See Mackenzie Lyall v Chaimroo Singh 16 C 702 (1889) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan 11 M 462 466 ante

(5) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan 11 M 461 462 Placey v Allcock 4 F & F (1074) per Willes J Foral v International Land Credit Co 16 L J N S 637

(6) Act IV of 1872 s 1 see Madhab Chander v Rajcoomar Das 14 B L R 76 (1874)

(7) Volkart Bros v Vetterlein Nadan

11 M 461 J G Smith v Ludha Gtella 17 B 129 (1892) see note to s 29 proviso 5 post

(8) These Explanations were substituted for the original explanation to s 14 by Act III of 1891 s 1 (1) see also Cr Pr Code s 310 (Act V of 1893) and R v Aaba Kurar 1 C W N 146 (1897) in which the alterations effected in this section and in s 54 are discussed

(9) See 34 & 35 Vic c 112 s 19 R v Drage 14 Cox 35 R v Carter 12 Q B D 522

(10) According to English law such evidence of intention in the case of indictments for receiving stolen goods is admissible only subject to certain limitations see Steph Dig Art 11 34 & 35 Vic, c 112 s 19 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 84 778 788 and cases there cited This illustration makes no reservation as to ownership or time so that though the stolen property belonged to other person than the prosecutor and without reference to the lapse of time since it was stolen, evidence of its possession may under the Act be given against the accused, its weight

(b) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a counterfeit coin which at the time when he delivered it he knew to be counterfeit.

The fact that at the time of its delivery A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin is relevant (1)

The fact that A had been previously convicted of delivering to another person as genuine a counterfeit coin knowing it to be counterfeit is relevant (2)

(c) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's which B knew to be ferocious.

The facts that the dog had previously bitten X, Y and Z and that they had made complaints to B are relevant (3)

(d) The question is whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payee was fictitious

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee, if the payee had been a real person is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person. (4)

(e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B

The fact of previous publications by A respecting B showing ill will on the part of A towards B is relevant as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question in each case being left to the discretion of the Court. Norton Ev, 132. see Penal Code s 411 and s 21. illustr (d) and s 114. illustr (e) post R v Cossy Mul 3 W R Cr 10 (1865) R v Noroin Bagdee 5 W R Cr 3 (1866) R v Motee Joloha 5 W R Cr 66 (1866), the test of a correct presumption of guilt in a prisoner not being able to account for the property on his premises is dependent on the fact whether the surrounding circumstances of the case really and properly raise such a presumption. Re Meer Yar Ali 13 W R Cr 70 71 (1870) R v Somriddn 19 W R Cr 25 (1872) see Wigmore Ev § 324

(1) See R v Nur Mahomed 8 B 223 (1883) R v Vajram 16 B 414 (1897) This illustration speaks only of possession but it is only a single illustration of the knowledge spoken of in the section. Evidence of other utterings would be equally receivable under the section to establish guilty knowledge. Norton Ev 134 R v Whitley 2 Leach 986 cited in R v Vajram Blake v Alb on Life Assurance Society 4 C P D 102 R v Green 3 C. & K 204 In England it is now well settled that evidence of uttering counterfeit coin on other occasions than that charged is evidence to show guilty knowledge. Roscoe Cr Ev, 13th Ed 83 84 and that utterings after that for which the indictment is laid may be given in evidence for this purpose as well as those which take place before. R v Foster 24 L J M C 134, see s 15. illustr (c) proof of the prisoner's conduct (as for example that he passed by different names) is clearly admissible. R v Tattersall 2

Leach 984 R v Phillips 1 Jew C C 105 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 87 83 v s 8. note In the case of forged instruments similar evidence of possession and uttering has been constantly admitted in England (v post) But whether evidence is admissible of uttering other forged instruments where these are uttered subsequently to that with which the prisoner is charged seems to some extent doubtful. Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 82 84 (v post) See Penal Code ss 239 241 471 463 477 passim and see s 21. illustr (e) post R v Kisto Soonder 2 W R Cr 5 (1865) [counterfeit seals and forged documents] Wigmore Ev § 309

(2) This illustration was substituted for the original illustration (b) to s 14 by Act III of 1891 s 1 (2)

(3) See Thomas v Morgan 2 C M & R 496 Judge v Cox 1 Starkie 285, Hudson v Robert 6 Ex 697 Cox v Burbridge 13 C B N S 430 Roscoe N P Ev 748 In the case of wild and naturally ferocious animals such as lions tigers monkeys etc it is not necessary to prove scienter i.e. that the defendant knew and was well aware that the animals were ferocious dangerous or mischievous as the case may be knowledge will be presumed (May v Burdett 9 Q B 112) But in the case of dogs horses and other domestic animals 'scienter' must be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to damages The law Relating to Dogs by F Lupton 1888 pp 4 7 cf also Peal Code s 289 Norton Ev 134

(4) This is the case of Gibson v Hunter, 2 H Bl 288 Roscoe N P Ev 85, Taylor Ev § 338

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B (1)

(f) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him is relevant as showing that A made the representation in good faith. (2)

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B, upon a house of which A is owner by the order of C, a contractor. A's defence is that B's contract was with C

The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant, as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's own account and not as agent for A (3)

(1) Not only is the publication of other libels evidence but the mode of their publication to show quo animo they were published (see Bond v Douglas 7 C & P 626, where libellous handbills were carried backwards and forwards before the plaintiff's door) As the existence of previous ill feeling throws light upon the animus with which the libel was published so does the absence of previous quarrel or the fact that the accused merely repeated what he had heard, afford evidence of the absence of malicious intention But in civil suits this will only be receivable in mitigation of damages (v ante) Norton Ev 135, see Pearson v Le Maître 5 M & Gr 700 and cases collected in Roseoe N P Ev 864, and Cr Ev 13th Ed 579 Taylor Ev, § 340, See Kaishuru Noroji v Jehangir Byramji 14 B, 532 (1890)

(2) Here the gist of the action is fraud (see Pasley v Freeman 2 Smith L C 74) Bona fides may necessarily always be given in evidence for where there is bona fides there can be no fraudulent intent Shreusbury v Blount 2 M & G 475 Roseoe N P Ev 853 the illustration is an example Norton Ev 136 In a case for a false representation of the solvency of A B whereby the plaintiffs trusted him with goods their declarations at the time that they trusted him in consequence of the representation are admissible in evidence for them Fellones v Williamson 1 M & M 306 and see Vaclar v Cocks ib, 353 The case on which the illustration is based is Sheen v Bumpstead 2 H & C 193 in which Cockburn C J, said 'With regard to the question put to the other witnesses respecting the general reputation of W for trustworthiness as a tradesman, I think it also admissible It was important to ascertain the state of mind of the defendant at the time he made the representation complained of and that could only be shown by inference A plaintiff may not be able to bring home to the defendants by direct and positive evidence a knowledge of the falsehood of his representation, the plaintiff may, however prove certain facts which necessarily lead to that inference Now suppose the plaintiff had called every tradesman in the town to say not only that W was insolvent, but that his insolvency was notorious would it not have been a fair and obvious remark to the jury that the defendant must have known what was the common knowledge of every other tradesman? On the other hand if after the plaintiff has established a prima facie case against the defendant the latter calls a number of tradesmen who have had dealings with W and they say that at the time the defendant made the representation they believed that W was perfectly solvent is not that strong evidence—morally at least—from which the jury may infer that what was the common opinion of tradesmen in the neighbourhood was shared by the defendant and that in making the representation he acted in good faith?' And see Borrow v Hem Chunder Lohari (1903) 35 C 495

(3) This is the case of Gerish v Charter 1 C B 13 'The evidence was material and was properly admitted It intended to show that the defendant was not seeking to evade payment for goods ordered for his benefit but that he had actually paid the person with whom alone he had contracted It showed that the defendant conducted himself like a party who was dealing with 'C' as a principal and not as an agent' per Maule J 15 'A considerable body of evidence had been given by the plaintiff to show that 'C' interfered in the matter as the defendant's agent which this evidence went directly to negative' per Cresswell J 15 'In an action for goods sold and delivered a general form of defence is 'I am liable to pay another person and in such cases the jury usually comes to the conclusion that the defendant must keep the goods without paying for them Here therefore it was material for the

(h) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was (1) is relevant, as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found

The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe that the notice was given fraudulently by C who heard of the loss of the property, and wished to set up a false claim to it, is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith (2)

(i) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him In order to show A's intent, the fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved (3)

(j) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letters (4)

(k) The question is whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B his wife

Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty, are relevant facts (5)

(l) The question is, whether A's death was caused by poison

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms are relevant facts (6)

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time when an assurance on his life was effected

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts (7)

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use, whereby A was injured.

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage, is relevant.

defendant to show the bona fides of his defence by proving payment to such third person and that was the effect of the evidence in question per Erle J ib

(1) 'And in such a manner that A knew or probably might have known of it Steph Dig Art 11 illust (j) See also Norton Ev 137, some evidence should be given that the notice was within his knowledge

(2) In the instances given in the illustration the first is to negative good faith the second to rebut the presumption of malafides raised by the first see Penal Code s 403, Expt (2) Norton Ev 136 137 Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 549 R v Thurbern 1 Den C C R 387 18 I J M C. 140 in which and in the judgment of Parke B the whole law with reference to larceny of goods found is considered

(3) This illustration which is taken from the case of R v Foke R & R 531 is in principle like illust (o) post the difference between the two illustrations is that this illustration is a case of shooting with intent to kill while illust (o) is murder outright In R v Foke the prisoner was indicted for maliciously shooting at the prosecutor Evidence was given that the prisoner fired at the prosecutor twice during the day In the course of the trial it was objected that the prosecutor ought not to give evidence of two distinct felonies, but Burrough J held that it was admissible on the ground that the counsel for the prisoner by his cross examination of the prosecutor had endeavoured to show that the gun might have gone off by accident that the second firing was evidence to show that the first was wilful and to remove the doubt if any existed in the minds of the jury see Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 83 Norton Ev, 137

(4) See R v Robinson East P C 1110 in which previous letters sent by the prisoner were read in evidence as they served to explain the letter on which he was indicted

(5) See Taylor Ev s 582 This and the two following illustrations relate to feelings the first to mental feelings of ill will or good will the two last to bodily feelings (v text post)

(6) See R v Gloster 16 Cox 471, R v Johnson 2 C & K 354

(7) See Aveson v Kinward 6 East 188 R v Nicholas 2 C & K 246, 2 Cox C C, 136 R v Guttridge 9 C & P 471

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let to hire, is irrelevant (1)

(o) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead.

The fact that A on other occasions, shot at B is relevant, as showing his intention to shoot B.

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant

(p) A is tried for a crime

The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime, is relevant

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class, is irrelevant

Principle.—If the existence of a mental or bodily state or bodily feeling is, as is assumed by the section, in issue or relevant, it is clear that facts from which the existence of such mental or bodily state or bodily feeling may be inferred are also relevant. The second Explanation is merely a particular application of the body of the section. The rejection rests on the ground that the collateral is any connection with the factum probandum

s 3 ("Fact")

s 21, cl (2) ("Admission consisting of statements of existence of state of mind or body")

s 3 ("Relevant")

ss 102, 106, 111 (Burden of proof)

Steph Dig, Art II and Note VI, Taylor, Ev, §§ 580—586, 150, 160, 512, 1665, 1666 340—347, 188, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 50, 69, 130—142; Lindley, Partnership, 536, Chitty's Equity Index, 4th Ed, "Notice", Brett's Leading Cases in Equity, 2nd Ed, 200, Roscoe N P Ev, 633—635, 847—855, 736 et seq, Norton, Ev, 131—140, Swift, Ev, 111, Cunningham, Ev, 117, 119 Pollock's Law of Fraud in India (1894) 44, 45, 61, 65, 66, 76, 77, First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March 1871, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 70—85, Lindley & Company Law, 6th Ed, 432, 433, Bervin's Principles of the Law of Negligence (1889), Cr Pr Code, s 310, Contract Act, s 17, Best, Ev, p 86, §§ 255, 433, Walls, Ev, 2nd Ed, 73—75, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 309—370, 581, 658—661, 1962, 1963

COMMENTARY.

Facts, it has been seen, are either physical or psychological, the former being the subject of perception by the senses, and the latter the subject of consciousness (2). A person may testify to his own intent. But if his acts and conduct are shown to be at variance and inconsistent with the intent he swears to, his own testimony in his own favour would ordinarily obtain very little credit (3). Of facts which cannot be perceived by the senses, intention, fraud, good faith and knowledge are examples (4). But a man's intention is a matter of fact capable of proof. The state of a man's mind is as much a fact as the state of his digestion. It is true that it is very difficult to prove what the state of a man's mind at a particular time is but if it can be ascertained it is as much a fact as anything else (5). The latter class of facts however are incapable of direct proof by the testimony of witnesses, their existence can only be ascertained either by the confession of the party whose mind is their seat states of mind or of body or bodily feeling

(1) This and the two following illustrations refer to the 1st Explanation. Illustr (a) illustrates 'negligence' as well as illust (o) should be read in conjunction with illust (i) ante & text post

(2) ante s 3 illust (d)

(3) Wigmore, Ev, § 581

(4) S. A. First Report of the Select Committee 31st March 1871. Ev & Proc w, 4th C 671 (1 B s c 24 C. W. N. 501) 1st Frington v Frington 29 Ch D, 419 (1881) 1881 Ev & Proc L J see Pollock's Law of Fraud in India, p 61

or by presumptive inference from physical facts (1) It has been debated whether the "opinion rule" excludes testimony to another person's state of mind (2) But it may be safely and in general said that a witness must speak to facts and let the inference from those facts be drawn by the Court or jury (3) This section is in accordance with the principle laid down in numerous cases (4) that, to explain states of mind, evidence is admissible, though it does not otherwise bear upon the issue to be tried As regards this principle there is no difference between Civil and Criminal cases (5) The present section makes general provision for the subject, and the next section is a special application of the rule contained in the present one The subject of the existence of states of mind is one of the most important topics with which judicial enquiries are concerned, in Criminal cases they are the main consideration, and in Civil instance, where there is a question

The present section is framed to es or the time within which the fact dition, must have occurred The only point for the Court to consider, in deciding upon the admissibility of evidence under this section, is whether the fact can be said to show the existence of the state of mind or body under investigation (6) The same considerations will, it is apprehended, determine the question of the admissibility of facts subsequent to the fact in issue to prove intent and other like questions (7) So also, though the collateral facts sought to be proved should not be so remote in

(1) See Balmakand Ram v Ghansam Ram 22 C 391, 406 (1894) [proof of intention need not be direct it will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and surrounding circumstances] The Deputy Remembrancer v Karuna Bastob, 22 C 164 174 (1894), R v Rhuttien Ram 2 W R Cr 63 (1865), R v Beharee 3 W R Cr 23 24 27 (1865) [exclamations as evidence of guilty intention conduct of prisoner] Re Meer Yar Ali 13 W R Cr 71 (1870) [ib] R v Rookhs Kant 3 W R Cr 58 (1865) [province of jury to judge of intention] R v Gookhaal Bawree 5 W R Cr 33 38 (1866) [to some degree of course the intentions of parties to a wrongful act must be judged of by the event] R v Gora Chand 5 W R Cr, 45 46 (1866) [presumption of intention must depend upon the facts of each particular case], R v Shnuffooddeen 13 W R Cr 26 (1870) [a guilty knowledge is no necessarily a thing on which direct evidence can be afforded It is a matter of conscience and connected with the

7 Cox C C 79 As to burden of proof
see ss 102 105 106 post

(2) Wigmore Ev §§ 1962 1963 The answer to the objection in § 661 seems to be that in such case the witness is submitting his inference to the jury Because the jury have themselves to draw the inference that is no reason why the witness should be allowed to do so As to the different meanings of 'belief' or 'impression' as signifying the degree of positiveness of original observation or recollection (in which case there is no legal objection) or lack of actual personal observation (in which case the evidence is excluded) see ib 658

(3) Swift Ev 111 A witness must swear to facts within his knowledge and recollection and cannot swear to mere matters of belief

(4) See judgment of Williams J., in R v Richardson 2 F & F 346

(5) Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society 4 C P D 102

(6) Cunningham Ev 117

(7) Thus according to English law on charges for uttering counterfeit coin utterings after that for which the indictment is laid may be given in evidence, but the point is doubtful in the case of forged instruments and in the case of false pretences it is still doubtful whether pretences made subsequently to the one charged are admissible but it seems both on authority and on principle that they are not as it is possible the guilty intention may not have arisen until after the acts upon which the charge is founded Roscoe Cr Ev 94

7 C & P 318 (lustful intent), R v Bholi 23 A. 124 (1900), cited in notes to s 106 [Assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity evidence of intention] R v Papa Sanu 23 M., 159 (1899), Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Bastob supra [obtaining girls for prostitution, evidence of intent] and as to declarations as proof of intention see R v Peitcherun

yet such remoteness only (1) But necessary, as in an action for an injunction to restrain the use of a trade mark where the defendant's goods were (on the face of them and having regard to the surrounding circumstances) plainly calculated to deceive. Here the defendant was taken to have intended the reasonable and natural consequences of his own acts (2) In the next case cited the appellant was convicted under s 209, Indian Penal Code of having made false claims in three suits brought against certain persons. Two of them were executed and convicted. Held, that evidence for him relating to the suits which were properly admitted under this and the next section for the purpose of showing the ill will or enmity of the appellant towards defendants, in those suits as a body, but the evidence relating to suits brought by other persons, when no case of a conspiracy between them and the appellant was alleged or established, was inadmissible (3)

The mental and physical conditions of a person may be proved either by that person speaking directly to his own feelings, motives intentions, and the like, or by the evidence of another person detailing facts from which the given condition may be inferred but such other person may not in general testify

Proof of mental and conditions defendant himself was called and was asked in chief, "Had you any other object in view, in taking proceedings, than to further the ends of justice?" The question was admitted (5) And in cases of obtaining goods on false pretences, the prosecutor is constantly asked, not only in cross examination but in chief with what motive, or for what reasons, or on what impression he parted with the goods (6) So on a question of domicile, A may state what his intention was in residing in a particular place (7) In a suit by a house agent against the former owner of a house in which the question was whether the former was entitled to receive from the latter the sale of the house through his intention to ascertain whether any acts of the sale, put the following question to the purchaser—"Would you, if you had not gone to the plaintiff's office and got the card (a card to view the premises with terms of sale written by the plaintiff's clerk on the back), have purchased the house?" and overruling an objection, received his answer which was, "I should think not" (8) But it is obvious that in many cases such evidence may

(1) R v Whaley 2 Leach, C C 983, cited in R v Pajram 16 B 431 (1892).

True it is that the more detached the previous utterings are in point of time the less relation they will bear to the particular uttering stated in the indictment, and when they are so distant the only question that can be made is whether they are sufficient to warrant the jury in making any inference from them as to the guilty knowledge of the prisoners but it would not render the evidence inadmissible per Lord Ellenborough. See also per Lord Blackburn in R v Francis 12 Cox C C, 612 614

(2) Anna Lal Serojee v Jaxals Prasat (1908) 35 C 311 Saxikmer v Appollinaris Co (1897) 1 Ch, 893

(3) Raghunath Lal v Emp 22 C W N 494 s c 19 Cr L J 776

(4) See Phipson Ev 5th Ed 50 51, Cunningham Ev 117, but as to the opinion of experts see s 45 post v ante, Wagmore Ev §§ 581 1962—1963

(5) Hardasck v Coleman 1 F & F 531

(6) Hardasck v Coleman 1 F & F 531 note and see R v Hoagill 1 Dear C 315 R v Dale 7 C & P 352

(7) Hudson v Wilson L R 2 P & D 435 444

(8) Mansell v Clements L R 9 C P, 119 In a suit by A against B for goods sold and delivered in which B pleaded that the debt became due from him jointly with one C who was still alive, and the

not be reliable, and in other cases may not be had. The mental and physical conditions of a person must then be proved by the evidence of other persons who speak to the outward manifestations known to them of states of mind and body. Such manifestations may be either by conduct, conversation or correspondence (1). To prove mental and physical conditions "all contemporaneous manifestations of the given condition, whether by conduct, conversation, or correspondence, may be given in evidence as part of the res gestæ, it being for the Court or jury to consider whether they are real or feigned. Thus, the answers of patients to enquiries by medical men and others are evidence of their state of health, provided they are confined to contemporaneous symptoms, and are not in the nature of a narrative as to how, by whom, such symptoms were caused (2). And if the condition of the patient before or after the time in issue be material, his declarations at such times as to his then present condition are equally receivable (3). Not only may a party's own statements, but those made to him by third persons (4) be proved for the purpose of showing his state of mind at a given time (5). Thus where the question was whether a person knew that he was insolvent at a certain time, his own statements implying consciousness of the fact as well as letters from third persons refusing to advance him money, were held to be admissible after the fact of his insolvency had been proved independently (6). In addition to evidence of contemporaneous manifestations of the given condition, collateral facts are admitted to show the existence of a particular state of mind. Acts unconnected with the act in question are frequently receivable to prove psychological facts such as intent (7). In order to show this, similar acts done by the party are relevant, but similar acts are not relevant to prove the existence of the particular fact in issue, being inadmissible for this purpose under the rule by which similar but unconnected acts are excluded (8). Thus when a man is on his trial for a specific crime, such as uttering a forged note or coin, or receiving an article of stolen property, the issue is whether he is guilty of that specific act. To admit therefore as evidence against him other instances of a similar nature clearly is to introduce collateral matter. This cannot be with the object of inducing the Court to infer that because the accused has committed a crime of a similar description on other occasions, he is guilty on the present, but to establish the criminal intent and to anticipate the defence that he acted innocently and without any guilty knowledge, or that he had no intention or motive to commit the act, and generally to interpret acts which, without the admission of such collateral evidence, are ambiguous (9). In other words, the existence replication traversed the joint liability — Held, that with a view to prove B's sole liability the witness who proved the giving of the order could not be asked the question 'with whom did you deal?' but that the proper enquiry was as to the acts done. Bonfield v Smith, 12 M & W, 405.

(1) See Hright v Tatham 7 A. & E. 324.

(2) Aeson v Annand 6 Esst. 188. R v Nicholas 2 C. & K. 246, R v Glosser 16 Cox 471, illustrs. (D), (m).

(3) R v Johnson 2 C. & K. 354.

(4) Iacher v Cocks 1 M. & W. 353, Lewis v Rogers, 1 C. M. & R. 48, Whart, § 254.

(5) Phipson Ev. § 5th Ed., 50 see Taylor Ev. § 580—586.

(6) Id. 39. Thomas v Connell 4 M. & W. 267. Vacher v Cocks 1 M. & M., 353. Cotton v James, ib., 273.

(7) Best Ev. 255.

(8) See notes to s. 3 ante. 'When there is a question whether a person said or did something the fact that he said or did something of the same sort on a different occasion may be proved if it shows the existence on the occasion in question of any intention knowledge good or bad faith malice or other state of mind, or any state of body or bodily feeling the existence of which is in issue or is deemed to be relevant to the issue, but such acts or words may not be proved merely in order to show that the person so acting or speaking was likely on the occasion in question to act in a similar manner.' Steph Dig. Art. 11 and see note 11 ib.

(9) Roscoe Cr. Ev. 13th Ed. 79. Norton Ev., 131. R v Cole, 1 Phillips Ev. 503, R v Richardson 2 F. & F., 343, Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society.

of the fact in issue must be always independently established, and for this purpose evidence of similar and unconnected acts is inadmissible but when once the fact in issue is so established, such similar acts may be given in evidence to prove the state of mind of the party by whom it was done (1) Thus in a trial for forgery, proof of similar transactions which are not the subject of the forgery (2), that a certain person was in the state of mind connected that proof of one can be arrived at through evidence going to prove the others, the evidence is not on that account excluded (3)

In R v M J Jayapoori Moodelhar (5), Garth, C J, said "Section 14 seems to me to apply to that class of cases which is discussed in Taylor on Evidence 6th Edition, sections 318—323—that is to say cases where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it, as, for instance in actions of slander or false imprisonment, or malicious prosecution where malice is one of the main ingredients in the wrong which is charged evidence is admissible to show that the defendant was actuated by spite or enmity against the plaintiff, or, again on a charge of uttering coin evidence is admissible to show that the prisoner knew the coin to be counterfeit, because he had other similar coins in his possession, or had passed such coin before or after the particular occasion which formed the subject of the charge The Illustrations to section 14 as well as the authorities cited in Taylor, show with sufficient clearness the sort of cases in which this evidence is receivable But I think we must be very careful not to extend the operation of the section to other cases where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts, and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling We have no right to prove that a man committed theft or any other crime on one occasion, by showing that he committed similar crimes on other occasions Thus the possession, by an accused person, of a number of documents suspected to be forged was held to be no evidence to prove that he had forged the particular documents with the forgery of which he was charged" (6) In R v Parbhudas (7) West, J, said "The possession by an accused of several other articles deposed to have been stolen, would, no doubt, have some probative force on the issue of whether he had received the particular articles which he was charged with having dishonestly received and the receipt or possession of which he denied altogether, yet in the first illustration to section 14, it is set forth as) a preliminary to the admission of testimony as to the other articles that it is proved that he was in possession of (the) particular stolen article

Scope of the Section

4 C P D 106 (fraud), R v Balls, L R 1 C C 328 and cases cited post "There is no principle of law which prevents that being put in evidence which might otherwise be so merely because it discloses other indictable offences per Williams J in R v Richardson supra 346, Roscoe Cr Ev 85, Makin v Attorney General for New South Wales L R 1894 App Cas 65

(1) R v Parbhudas post R v Jayram post R v M J Jayapoori Moodelhar post

(2) Krishna Cotinda Pal v Emperor 43 C 788 (1915)

(3) Emperor v Yakub Ali 39 A 178 (1917) and see Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor 42 C 957 (1915) Baharuddin v Emperor 18 C L J, 578 (1913) Girdhori Lal v Emperor, 11 Cr L J 428 (1909)

(4) R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R 90 93 (1894) and R v Ellis 6 B & C 145 cited in R v Parbhudas supra and R v Jayram 16 B 304 (1892)

(5) 6 C 645 659 (1881)

(6) R v Parbhudas supra R v Nur Mahamed 8 B 223 225 (1883) in which the former case was distinguished and in which it was held that evidence of the possession and attempted disposal of coins of an unusual kind is relevant on a charge of uttering such coins soon afterwards when the factum of uttering is denied

(7) 11 Bom H C R 90 91 (1894)

A fully argued case where Mr Justice West gives a full and lucid exposition of s 14 of the Indian Evidence Act per Jardine J in R v Fakirappa 15 B, 502 (1890)

The receipt and possession are not allowed to be proved by other apparently similar instances, only the guilty person's conduct.

(o) to the same section makes a person murdered, evidence of caused the death; B or not, the fact of a motive force, so, evidence that 'A' was with them, yet this evidence is excluded, even as proof of A's intention, either as too remotely connected with the particular intention in issue, or as raising collateral questions, which could not properly be resolved in the case' (1) In the same case Melville, J., said (2) 'It appears to me that the Indian Evidence Act does not go beyond the English Law' As to the latter Lord Herschell said (3) 'The mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it be relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be so relevant if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused' In R v Bond it was held that where the defence to a criminal charge is that the acts alleged to constitute the crime were done by the accused for an innocent purpose, evidence that the accused did the same acts for an improper purpose on another occasion is admissible as evidence negating the defence, although it is evidence which proves the commission of another offence by the accused. In this case a person who was qualified to be and had acted as a surgeon was indicted for procuring a miscarriage. The evidence was that he had used certain instruments and the defence was that he was performing a lawful operation. It was proved that he had ceased to practise as a surgeon, and evidence was tendered by the prosecution that he had on a previous occasion used the same instruments in the same manner on another person with the avowed intention of procuring a miscarriage. This evidence was held admissible by the Court of Crown Cases Reserved, — Lord Alverstone C J., and Ridley, J., dissenting on the grounds that prima facie there was no necessary connection between the act charged on the indictment and the other act alleged in the evidence, and that evidence of prior acts of a similar kind is not admissible when the only question is the purpose for which an act was done (4) In a recent case in the Allahabad High Court, where the accused was charged with cheating, it was held that evidence of his having cheated others not named in the charge was inadmissible because this section only applies to cases where a particular act is more or less culpable according to the state of mind of the accused (5) And in the Calcutta High Court it has been recently held that where evidence was tendered of false representations of the same character as the one charged and made to persons similarly situated, such evidence was admissible to prove dishonest intent in reference to the particular transaction charged, on the ground that section 15 is an application of the general rule laid down in this section, and that the words of this section and of Illustrations (o) of this section and (a) of section 15 show that it is not necessary that all the acts should form part of one transaction but only that they should form part of a series of similar occurrences (6) The Illustrations (e), (i) and (j) are on the point of

(1) R v Parbhudas supra.

(1881) 6 C 655

(2) Id at p 97(6) R v Detendra Prosad A C 111(3) Makot v Attorney General of New South Wales (1894) A C 57, cited in*R v Watt* (1904) A C 57(4) R v Bond, C C R (1906), 21 Cox p 252389, R v Rhodes (1899), 1 Q B 77,(5) R v Abdul Wahid Khan 34 A 94 following R v Vajpoooy MoodeharR v Ollis (1900), 2 Q B, 758 intention (1). (a), (b), (c) and (d), of knowledge (f), (g) and (h) of good faith (n) of negligence and knowledge (k), (l) and (m) of mental and bodily feeling (u), (o) and (p) illustrate the explanation (2)

The question of intention is sufficiently illustrated by the Illustrations (e), Intention (i) and (j) to the present section, by the cases illustrating guilty knowledge, and by the next section, and is further considered in the notes to the last mentioned section and in the preceding and succeeding paragraphs (3) "A man is not excused from crimes by reason of his drunkenness, but although you cannot take drunkenness as any excuse for crime, yet when the crime is such that the intention of the party committing it is one of its constituent elements, you may look at the fact that a man was in drink in considering whether he formed the intention necessary to constitute the crime" (4) In the recent case of R v Meade the rule on this point was stated by the English Court of Criminal Appeal as follows "A man is taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts. This presumption may be rebutted in the case of a sober man in many ways. It may be rebutted in the case of a man who is drunk by showing his mind to have been so affected by the drink he had taken that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was dangerous, &c, likely to inflict serious injury. If this be proved, the presumption that he intended to do grievous bodily harm is rebutted" (5) When a person does an act with some intention other than that which the character and circumstances of the act suggest, the burden of proving that intention is upon him (6) The question of intention is to be inferred from legal evidence of facts, and not from antecedent declarations by the accused himself, upon occasions distinct from and antecedent to the transaction (7) In a recent case in the Madras High Court it was said that a man must be held to intend the natural and ordinary consequences of his acts, irrespective of his object in such acts, if at the time he knew what the natural and ordinary consequences would be, and that if he does an act which is prima facie illegal the fact that he did it with some other object, will not make it legal unless that object would, in the circumstances, make it legal (8) In this case, it was held that where a man with the object of establishing a fraudulent title to a house broke into it in its owner's absence and took forcible possession, he was rightly convicted irrespective of that object. And in a recent case in the Allahabad High Court where accused had been found in complainant's house at 2 A.M. and had proffered no explanation at the time, but had afterwards stated (without being able to prove) that he had gone there to have illicit intercourse with a widow, it was held that his presence there at such an hour raised a presumption of guilty intent (9) But on a subsequent and similar case in the same High Court where accused was able to prove his intercourse with a widow, it was held that he was guilty of no offence (10)

Facts which go to prove guilty knowledge may be proved. In R v knowledge proved the guilty knowledge and notice given of his having pre be forged, observed that

(1) As to whether an act was accidental or intentional see 15 post

(2) See Norton F. 131

(3) See cases cited in first paragraph of Commentary ante

(4) R v Doherty, 16 Cox 306 per Stephen J., R v Ram Sahay W. R. Gap No. Cr. 24 (1864)

(5) R v Meade C. C. A. (1909) 1 K. B. 895

(6) S. 106 post Illustr. (a) R v Khan 35 A. 379 (1913) R v Subbappa Chinnappa 15 B. 808 (1912), R v Ham

man 35 A. 560 (1913)

(7) R v Petherick 7 Cox C. C. 183 per Greene B. as to declarations accompanying an act &c, and notes thereto

(8) Sellamuthu S. v. Sargan v. P. S. S. S. Karuppan 35 M. 1186 (1913) per Benson C. J. (Sarkaran Nair J. J. S.)

(9) R v Malik 37 A. 395 (1915)

(10) R v Ghaya Khan 38 A. 517 (1916)

(11) 2 Leach C. C. 483 cited as R v Hylle 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 92

"without the reception of other evidence than that which the mere circumstances of the transaction itself could furnish, it would be impossible to ascertain whether they uttered it with a guilty knowledge of its having been forged or whether it was uttered under circumstances which showed their minds to be free from guilt" In the case of R v Tattersall mentioned by Lord Ellenborough in R v Hiley, the question reserved by Chambre, J., was "whether the prisoner had not furnished pregnant evidence, and whether the jury, from his knowledge in another?" The were at liberty to make such an inference acted on are mostly common cases of uttering forged documents or base coins, but they are not confined to those cases" (1) Passing from the case of guilty knowledge knowledge may be inferred from the fact that a party had reasonable means of knowledge, i.e., possession of documents containing the information especially if he has answered, or otherwise acted upon, them, or from the fact that such documents properly addressed, have been delivered at, or posted to, his residence (2) So execution of a document, e.g., of a deed or a will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, implies knowledge of its contents (3), though mere attestation necessarily does not (4) Access to documents may also sometimes raise a presumption of knowledge (5) But there is no presumption of law that a director knows the contents of the books of a company (6) And shareholders are not as between themselves and their directors, supposed to know all that is in the company's books (7) The publication of a fact in a Gazette or newspaper is receivable to fix a party with notice, though (unless the case is governed by Statute)

(1) R v Francis 12 Cox 612 616 per Lord Coleridge C. J., s.c. L. R. 2 C. C. R. 128 In this case the prisoner was indicted for endeavouring to obtain an advance from a pawn broker upon a ring by the false pretence that it was a diamond ring evidence was held to have been properly admitted to show that two days before the transaction in question the prisoner had obtained an advance from a pawn broker upon a chain which he represented to be a gold chain but which was not so see R v Panram supra 443 R v Cooper 1 Q. B. D. 19 R v Foster Dear 456 R v Weeks L. & C. 18 Taylor Ex. § 345 as to guilty knowledge see Lalit Mohan v R 22 C. 313 327 (1894) The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karna Basistoti 22 C. 168 169 (1894) Re Meer Sar Ali 13 W. R. Cr. 70 71 (1870) [It is an error in law to consider the fact of the prisoner leaving his defence to his counsel as in any way whatever indicating any guilty knowledge] R v Nobokristo Ghose 8 W. R. Cr. 87, 89 (1867) R v Shurnfoodden 13 W. R. 26 (1870). R v Abaji Ramchandra 15 B. 89 (1890). Re Rajoy Kurivakar, 25 W. R. Cr. 10 13 (1876)

(2) Phipson Ex. 5th Ed. 130 Vacher v Cocks 1 M. & M. 353 Cotton v James ib. 25 as to documents found after the arrest of a prisoner s. 8 ante or intercepted in the post R v Cooper 1 Q. B. D. 15 [when a letter is put in course of transmiss on the Postmaster General holds it as the agent of the receiver ib. 22]

(3) In re Cooper, 20 Ch. D., 611.

Taylor Ex. §§ 150 160

(4) Harding v Crethorne 1 Esp. 58 s. 8 ante it does not necessarily follow that a witness is aware of the contents of the deed of which he attests the execution Salamat Ali v Budh Singh 1 A. 306 307 (1876) See Rajlakhi v Gokul Chandra 3 B. L. R. P. C. 57 63 (1869). Ranchunder v Hari Das 9 C. 463 (1882), and notes to s. 115 post Banga Chandra Dhur Bhusar v Jagat Kishore P. C. 44 C. 186 (1917) Lakshpati v Rambodh Singh, 37 A. 350 (1915) but see Kandasami Pillai v Nagalinga Pillai 36 M. 565 (1913) practice in Madras

(5) E.g. in the case of books kept between partners master and servant etc. see s. R. ante p. 137 Lindley Partner ship 536 Taylor Ex. § 812 see Wachin tosh v Marshall 11 M. & W., 116 [The shipping list at Lloyd's stating the time of a vessel's sailing is prima facie evidence against an underwriter as to what it contains as the underwriter must be presumed to have a knowledge of its contents from having access to it in the course of his business]

(6) Hall v. R. s. case L. R. 9 Ch. D. 329 per Bramwell J. ib. 333 'I will only add that it seems to me in general extremely objectionable to imply that a man had knowledge of facts contrary to the real truth This ought only to be done where there is some duty on the part of the man to inform himself of the facts

(7) Lindley Company Law 6th Ed. 432 433 and cases there cited

It is always advisable, and sometimes necessary, to furnish evidence that the party to be affected has probably read the paper (1) The notoriety of a fact in a party's calling or vicinity may also in some cases support an inference of knowledge (2) When the existence of a state of mind is in question, all facts from which it may be properly inferred are relevant. And so when the question was whether A, at the time of making a contract with B, knew that the latter was insane it was held that the conduct of B, both before and after the transaction, was admissible in evidence to show that his malady was of such a character as would make itself apparent to A at the time he was dealing with him (3) See also Illustrations (a), (o), (c) and (d) to the section 'Notice' has also been made the subject of substantive law and of statutory definition in the Transfer of Property and Indian Trusts Acts (4) This definition codifies the law as to notice which existed before these Acts were passed (5) Notice to an agent is notice to the principal (6) And notice to one of several trustees is notice to all (7) Constructive notice is of two kinds there is the notice through an agent, which Lord Chelmsford has called 'imputed notice' the other is that which he thought should more properly be called 'constructive notice' and means that kind of notice which the Courts have raised against a person from his wilfully abstaining from making enquiries, or inspecting documents (8) In such cases the Courts are said to raise a presumption of knowledge which is not allowed to be rebutted, and whatever is sufficient to put a person of ordinary prudence on enquiry is constructive notice of all to which that enquiry would lead (9) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was said that whatever puts a person on enquiry amounts to notice when such enquiry becomes a duty and would in the exercise of ordinary intelligence, lead to a knowledge of the facts and that constructive notice will be imputed to one who designedly refrains from enquiry for the purpose of avoiding notice (10) So notice of a deed or a trust is notice

(1) See notes to s 67 post Taylor Ex §§ 1665 1666 Phipson Ex 5th Ed 131 Steph Dig Art 11 illust (n) where the question was whether A the captain of a ship knew that a port was blockaded it was held that the fact that the blockade was notified in the Gazette was relevant Harrott v Huse 9 B & C 712

(2) See illust (f) ante and note though mere rumour or reputation is inadmissible R v Gunnel 16 Cox 154 Greenslade v Dare 20 Beav 284 [Evidence of the general reputation of the inmates of a person in the neighbourhood in which he resided is admissible to prove that a person was cognisant of that fact]

(3) Buchan v McDowell 10 Lx 184 Loat v Tribe 3 F & F 9 but see also Greenslade v Dare ante

(4) s 3 Act IV of 1887 amended by Act III of 1889 (Transfer of Property) s 3 Act II of 1882 (Indian Trusts) See cases collected in Shephard and Brown's Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act

(5) Churaman v Ball 9 A 599

(6) Act IV of 1882 (Contract) s 229 of the English Conveyance Act 1882 ss 45 & 46 Vic c 39 as to notice of discharge of negotiable instruments see Act VI of 1901 (Negotiable Instruments amended by subsequent Acts See Pearson's Law of Agency in British India 430

(7) Godefroid on Trusts 677

(8) Kettlewell v Watson L R 21 Ch D 683 724 per Fry J a person refusing a registered letter sent by post cannot afterwards plead ignorance of its contents Loot Ah v Peary Mohan 16 W R 223 (1871)

(9) See Phipson Ex 5th Ed 131 132 Jones v Smith 1 Hare 43 Shepherd and Brown supra 14 as to whether registration operates as constructive notice ib 21 and Shan Mool v Madras Building Co 15 W 268 277 (1891) Balmakundas v Mot Narayan 8 B 444 (1891) Joshua v Alliance Bank 22 C 185 (1894) Brett v L C in Eq 2nd Ed 260 Chitty Lj Index 4th Ed 'Notice' and as to notice to agent trustee counsel partner solicitor ib and ante For a purchaser to be affected with constructive notice through his solicitor the latter himself must have actual notice Greender v Chumfer v Mackintosh 4 C 89 (1890) and notice acquired only before the employment as solicitor began is not sufficient Chabidas Tallu Bhai v Dayal Mohan 1 C (1907) 31 B 566

(10) Radhika Mathab Patara v Kalpatarn Kay 1 C L J 297 (1913)

of its terms (1) And the acceptance of a contract in a common form without objection is constructive notice of its contents (2) So when title deeds were deposited by way of equitable mortgage with a Bank which omitted to investigate the title, the Bank was held to have constructive notice of a charge which they might have discovered (3) And when a share of a trust fund was assigned and the trustees did not enquire into the title of the alleged assignee they were held to have constructive notice of it (4) But a Company to whom a vessel is transferred cannot be fixed with constructive notice of the possible liability of the vendors for the unpaid costs of their solicitors even though the actual vendor and the promoter of the company were one and the same person (5) Where the sellers at an auction sale so conducted themselves with reference to the sale that bidders were induced to leave and the purchaser was present and had notice of these circumstances, it was held that he was affected with notice of the impropriety of the sale (6)

Good and bad faith fraud malice

"It is a truth confirmed by all experience that in the great majority of cases fraud is not capable of being established by positive and express proofs. It is by its very nature secret in its movements, and if those whose duty it is to investigate questions of fraud are to insist upon direct proof in every case the ends of justice would be constantly, if not invariably, defeated. We do not mean to say that fraud can be established by any less proof or by any different kind of proof, from what is required to establish any other disputed question of fact, or that circumstances of mere suspicion which lead to no certain result should be taken as sufficient proof of fraud, or that fraud should be presumed against anybody in any case, but what we mean to say is that, in the generality of cases, the resource in dealing with questions of fraud is to overcome the natural presumption of the reasonable mind of the existence of fraud by raising a counter presumption there is no reason whatever why we should not act upon it" (7) A party's good faith in doing an act may generally be inferred from any facts which would justify its doing (8) In such cases the information (whether true or false) on which he acted will often be material. Where in answer to a charge of theft the accused alleges a claim to the property, the Court should not convict him of theft if the claim was made in good faith considering parties are imputation of a opinions and So to show to show the state of his knowledge and that he had reasonable grounds for such belief (10)

(1) Patman v Harland 17 Ch D 353
Brett's L C in Eq 260 and cases there cited Rajaram v Krishnasami 16 M 301
(1892)

(2) Waikana v Ryall 10 Q B D
178

(3) Bank of Bombay v Suleman Somji
P C (1908) 33 B., 1 following In re
Queale's Estate (1886) 11 L R 17 Ch
D 361

(4) Davis v Hutchings (1907) 1 Ch
356 following Jones v Smith (1841) 1
Hare 43 (1843) 1 Ph 244

(5) The Biria v Wood C A (1907),
R 1

(6) Chabildas Lalubhai v Doyal Moysi
P C (1907) 31 B 566

(7) Per Dwarkanath Mitter J in

Matloora Pandey v Ram Ruchya 11 W
R 482 483 (1869) s c 3 B L R
(A C) 108 but fraud and dishonesty are not to be assumed upon conjecture however probable Sleikh Imdad Ali v
Muzzu at Kaotby 6 W R. (P C) 24 (1842) s c 3 Moo I A 1 as to secrecy as evidence of fraud see Joshua v
Alliance Bank of Simla 22 C 185 (1894) see cases cited in notes to ss 10¹ 111
Past

(8) Whart § 35 cited in Pherson Ev
5th Ed 134

(9) Arfan Ali v Emperor, 44 C 66
(1917)

(10) Derry v Peek 14 App Cas 337
A man's own assertion of what he believed or recollection of what he thinks

For though it is now settled that in order, apart from Statute, to maintain an action for deceit, there must be proof of fraud; a false statement made in the honest belief that it is true being not sufficient and there being no such thing as legal fraud in the absence of moral fraud, yet a false statement made through carelessness, and without reasonable belief that it is true, though not amounting to fraud, may be evidence of it, and fraud is proved where it is shown that a false representation has been made (a) knowingly, or (b) without belief in its truth, or (c) recklessly, careless whether it be true or false, and if fraud be proved, the defendant's motive is immaterial—it matters not that there was no intention to injure the person to whom the statement was made (1). To show the bona fides of a party's belief he may show that it was shared by the community, or even by individuals similarly situated to himself (2). "The relative positions and circumstances of the parties are in a transaction, a higher or lower, or fear or occupies the (3) As to the burden of proof in such cases see section 111 post, and the notes thereto. Where the accused was charged under section 206 of the Indian Penal Code with fraudulently transferring three properties to three different persons on a certain day in order to prevent their being seized in execution of a decree, and the prosecution tendered evidence of five other fraudulent transfers of property effected by the accused on the same day and apparently with the same object, held that this evidence was admissible under this and the next section, to prove either that all those transfers were parts of one entire transaction, or that the particular transfers which were specified in the charge were made with a fraudulent intent (4). Evidence of similar frauds, committed on other persons by the same agent of the defendant company, in the same manner, with the knowledge and for the benefit of the company, is admissible to prove fraud (5). In like manner, in actions for false representation, where the question turns on fraudulent intent, other misstatements besides those laid in the statement of claim will be admissible in evidence, for the purpose of showing that the defendant

he believed at a certain time is worth very little without some kind of confirmation from the external conditions. Obviously the best and most natural corroborator would be found in circumstances showing that the alleged belief was such as with the means of knowledge then at hand a reasonable man might have entertained at the time. Pollock's Law of Fraud in India 44 45

(1) Derry v. Peek supra 346 356 369 3 4 in which the distinction is made between facts which constitute fraud and those that are only evidence of it. Roscoe N. P. L. 848 and cases there cited. Indian Contract Act s. 17. Pollock's Law of Fraud in India 432—56 as to concealment of material facts see Smith v. Hughes L. R. 6 Q. B. 597. Hard v. Hobbs 4 App. Cas. 13. inadequacy of price as evidence of fraud see Indian Contract Act s. 25. Specific Relief Act s. 28 see generally as to fraud Roscoe N. P. L. 633—63 84—85. It must be properly pleaded a case of fraud cannot be started in middle of cross-examination for the first time. Lester v. Gooden W. N. (C. A. 1877, p. 10

(2) Illust. (f) ante Sheen v. Bumpstead 2 H. & C. 193. Roscoe N. P. L. 853 see note ante to Illust. (f). In Penny v. Hanson 18 Q. B. D. 478 the question was whether A intended to deceive B by pretending to tell his fortune by the stars. It was held that evidence that A or others bona fide believed in his ability to tell such fortunes was inadmissible. Denman J. remarking "We do not live in times when any sane man believes in such a power and see Lewis v. Fernor 10 532 536 per Willes J.

(3) Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 134. Pollock's Law of Fraud in India 60 66 76 77 see notes to s. 111 post.

(4) R. v. Jayram 16 B. 414 (1892).

(5) Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society 4 C. P. O. 94. See also R. v. Hogg (1904) 1 K. B. 183 in which the question was whether upon an indictment for obtaining credit by means of fraud evidence could be given of similar acts committed by the accused at a period immediately preceding the offence for which the accused was being tried and the answer given by the Judges was in the affirmative.

was actuated by dishonest motives (1). And the defendant may show representations made by him to others (2) Where A and B were charged that A owned certain property, and the representation, being himself the dupe of A, it was held that letters between A and B (not communicated to C) prior to the completion of the transaction, regarding it, were admissible in B's favour (3) See further as to the question of good faith Illusts (f), (g), and (h), ante "Malice in doing an act has generally to be proved by the previous or subsequent conduct (4) and relations of the parties, e.g., previous enmity, threats, quarrels and violence, while in rebuttal, previous expressions of good-will and acts of kindness may be shown" (5) Malice may even be implied from the manner in which an action is conducted in which it is in issue, and in cases of libel the mode of publication, or the repetition of the libel, is material to show the defendant's animus (6) "On questions involving negligence and other qualities of conduct, when the criterion to be adopted is not clear, the acts or precautions proper to be taken under the circumstances, or even the general practice of the community on the subject, are admissible as affording a standard by which the conduct in question may be gauged" (7) In a suit in which the question was whether the pupils at a certain school were properly treated, evidence was held to be admissible of the general treatment of boys at schools of the same class, as affording a criterion of what the treatment should have been at the school in question (8) As to state of body and bodily feeling, see Illusts (l) and (m), and ante, s 14

Explanations

The explanations to the section are illustrated by the Illustrations (a), (o), (p) and (q) appended to it. The rejection of the general facts rest on the ground that the collateral matter is too remote, if, indeed, there is any connection with the factum probandum (9) The meaning of the first Explanation is "that the state of mind to be proved must be not merely a general tendency or disposition, towards conduct of a similar description to that in question,

(1) Huntingford v Massey 1 F & F, 690, Taylor Ev, § 340

(2) Shrewsbury v Blount, 2 M & Gr, 475

(3) R v Whitehead 1 Dowl & Ry, 61

(4) Thus in Taylor v Williams 2 B & Ad 845 the question being whether A acted maliciously in prosecuting B,—an affidavit filed by the clerk to A's solicitor and used for the purpose of preventing persons becoming bail for B when he was arrested was held admissible as showing A's malice

(5) For meaning of malice and fair comment and for tests of good faith, see R v Aldool Waddoo Ahmed (1907), 31 B 293

(6) Phipson Ev, 5th Ed 135 136, Taylor, Ev, §§ 340 347 See Illust (e), ante, as to bona fides, see R v Labouchere, 14 Cox 419, Scott v Sampson, 8 Q B D, 491

(7) Ib, citing Ball Leading Cases on Tort 224—227, East, P C, 263, 264, Whart Negligence s 46, and cases, post See also Bevan's Principles of the Law of Negligence (1889), Roscoe, N P Ev, 736, et seq and cases there cited and Best, 1 v p 86 when the facts are settled the existence of negligence is a question of law though reference is thereby implied to a standard of reasonable care and common experience with which the judge must often be necessarily unacquainted" In the case of a railway accident Willes J, said "I go further and say that the plaintiff should also show with reasonable certainty what particular precaution should have been taken Daniel v Metropolitan Ry Co L R 3 C P 216 222 In some cases however negligence will be presumed from the mere happening of an accident, see Taylor Ev § 188

(8) Boldron v Widous 1 C & P, 65, but evidence is not admissible of the comparative treatment of boys at any other particular school ib

(9) Norton Ev 139, see remarks of Willes J in Hollingham v Head, 27 L J C P 241 To admit such speculative evidence would I think be fraught with great danger If such evidence were held admissible it would be difficult to say in an action of an assault that the plaintiff might not give evidence of former assaults committed by the defendant upon other persons of a particular class for the purpose of showing that he was a quarrelsome individual, and therefore that it was highly probable that the particular charge of assault was well founded The extent to which this sort of thing might be carried is inconceivable" but a condition of

to the matter which honest, generally r

immediate reference man is generally dishonest in his proceedings particular occasion or matter is accused of receiving stolen was to be generally dishonest this particular transaction is perhaps increased, but only in a vague and indefinite way, but if, at the time, he is found in possession of a number of other stolen articles, this fact throws a distinct light on his knowledge and intentions as to the articles of which he is found in possession. It would be dangerous to infer that because a man was generally dishonest, he was dishonest in any single case, but it is not dangerous to infer that a man, who is found in possession of 50 articles, which are shown to have been stolen from different people, came by each and all in a dishonest manner' (1) The Criminal Procedure Code (2) contains provisions as to the procedure to be adopted in the case of previous conviction. These provisions have been made with the view of preventing the jury or assessor, from

But r may convict convictions become relevant when the existence of any state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant (1) Under the present section the previous for which the portion of the scope of such portion, but is merely an application of the rule contained in it, to those particular circumstances in which the acts sought to be given in evidence in proof of intention have been themselves adjudicated upon in a criminal proceeding previously taken (5) The proof must always be strict. Thus extracts from a insufficient without e offence under sec dacoity are relevant under this section. Convictions previous to the time specified in the charge or to the framing of the charge are relevant under the second Explanation to this section, but convictions subsequent to the time specified in the charge and to the framing of the charge are not so admissible (7) Where an accused person is charged with belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity under s. 400 of the I. P. Code, evidence showing that ive

his

such offences in addition to evidence of previous convictions when, under s. 401 of the Penal Code, association for the purpose of habitually committing the has been proved and that for this purpose evidence of bad livelihood is of no use

(1) Cunningham I. v. 118 119

(2) S. 310 as amended by Act III of 1891 s. 9

(3) Act III of 1891 s. 9 s. 9 under the present section or s. 43 & 44 post

(4) R. v. Illoomiya Hassan s. 1411 L. K. 505 (1903) s. 6 s. P. 179

(5) See illust. (b) ante

(6) Emperor v. Shikha Bai 43 C. 118 (1916)

(7) R. v. Naba Kumar 1 C. W. N. 146 150 referred to in Mankura Pass

v. K. s. 19 143 (1879) s. c. 4 C. W. N. 10

(8) King Emperor v. Ha. Sher Wadga- 43 101 959 weight than evidence of isolated thefts (1) In a trial for an offence of keeping a common gaming house under the fourth section of the Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887, Bom), evidence that the accused had been previously convicted of the same offence is admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention (2) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that evidence of association with men accused in a different trial was irrelevant under this section because it was not "in reference to the particular matter and also under the next section because it did not form part of a series of similar occurrences" (3)

In Commonwealth v. ...

charge of sedition

series of speeches

it was held that any of such speeches or lectures were admissible under this section as evidence of the intention of the speaker in respect of the speeches which formed the subject of the charge (4) In another case it was held that seditious articles published in the same newspaper, but not forming part of the subject of the charge on which the prisoner was then being tried, were admissible to show the intention of the persons who printed or published the articles which were the subject of the charge, since under Act XXV of 1865, section 7 (which throws the onus on the accused), the printer or publisher is responsible for everything that appears in the newspaper unless he can prove absence in good faith, without knowledge that during his absence seditious matter would be published (5) In another case it was held that articles not forming part of the subject of the charge and appearing in other issues of the newspaper were not admissible to show the intention of the writer, in absence of proof of his identity, and it was declared that while the printer or publisher would be amenable on proof that the article was calculated to excite feeling of hatred, disaffection or contempt towards the Government, the writer would only be amenable on proof that such feelings were actually excited by it or that he intended them to be so (6) and it has also been held that under the Newspapers (Incitement and Abatement) Act VII of 1908, s. 3, no question of intention arises (7)

Facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional

15. When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional [or done with a particular knowledge or intention] (8), the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured

The facts that A lived in several houses successively each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment

(1) Bhona v R (1911) 38 C 408

(2) R v Alloomya Hassan 5 Bom. L. R., 805 (1903), Jacob J diss s c, 28 B 129 (1903)

(3) Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42, C 957 (1915)

(4) Chidambaram Pillai v R (1908) 32 M 3 and see R v Jogendra Chandra Bose (1892) 19 C 35, Apurba Krishna Bose

Tilak
Prosa

(1906) 2 K B 359

(5) P v Phandira Nath Miller (1908), 33 C 945 dissenting from R v Bal Ganga

dhar Tilak (1897) 22 B 112

(6) Manomohan Ghose v R (1910), 38 C 253, R v Amba Prosad (1897), 20 A 55

(7) Girija Sundar Chuckerbutty v R, 36 C 405

(8) The words in brackets were added by s 2 Act III of 1891 and appear to have been overlooked in R v Alloomya Hassan 5 Bom L. R., 805 (1903), s c 28 B 129 where Jacob J states that this section invites consideration of the question of intention only as opposed to accident See also per Chaudhuri J, in Emperor v Panchu Das 47 C, 671, F B from a different Insurance Office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.(1)

(b) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is A's duty to make entries in a book showing the amounts received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive. The question is, whether this false entry was accidental or intentional.

The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false, and that the false entry in each case was in favour of A, are relevant (2).

(c) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee. The question is, whether delivery of the rupee was accidental.

The facts that, soon before or soon after the delivery, to B A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E, are relevant, as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental (3).

Principle.—The facts are admitted as tending to show system and therefore intention, this section is therefore an application of the rule laid down in the preceding one (4). It will always be a matter of discretion, whether there is a sufficient and reasonable connection between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact. If there is no common link they cannot form a series, and this is the gist of the section (5).

s. 14 (Facts relevant to show knowledge or intention) s. 3 ('Relevant')

Steph Dig, Art 12, Norton, Ev, 140, Cunningham, Ev, 120, Taylor, Ev, § 328, Phipson, Lv, 5th Ed., 157, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed., 67

COMMENTARY.

So where the question was whether Z murdered A (her husband) by poison in September 1818, the facts that B, C and D (Z's three sons) had the same poison administered to them in December 1818, March 1819, and April 1819, and that the meals of all four were prepared by Z, were held to be relevant to show that such administration was intentional and not accidental, though Z was indicted separately for murdering A, B and C, and attempting to murder D (6). This case and the case of R v Garner (infra) were discussed in R v Neil Cream (7) when Hawkins, J., admitted evidence of subsequent administrations of strychnine by the prisoner to persons other than and unconnected with the woman of whose murder the prisoner was then convicted. Where A promised to lend money to B on the security of a policy of insurance, which B agreed to effect in an Insurance Company of his (A's) choosing, and B paid the first premium to the company, but A refused to lend the money except upon terms which he intended B to reject, and which B rejected accordingly, it was held that the fact that A and the Insurance Company had been engaged in similar

(1) This illustration is founded on the case of R v Cray 4 F & F 1102 the authority of which is doubted in Steph Dig Art 12 note and see Norton Ev 140, 141, but see contra R v Vajram 16 B 433 v also R v Debendra Prosad A C (1909) 36 C 573.

(2) Founded on R v Richardson 2 F & F 343, Steph Dig Art 12 illust (b).

(3) This illustration is very like illust. (b) to s 14. The one speaks of possessing the others of passing other false coins. The presumption is the same. Norton Ev 140.

(4) See Steph Dig Art 12 and Cunningham Ev 170 and R v Debendra Prosad (supra).

(5) Norton Ev 140.

(6) R v Geering 18 L J M C, 215, cited in R v Richardson 2 F & F 346. R v Frances 12 Cox C C 615. Blate v Albion Life Assurance Society 4 C P D., 101 102 see R v Garner 3 F & F., 651, R v Cotton 12 Cox 400. R v Hesson, 14 Cox 40. R v Roden 12 Cox 630 see Taylor Ev § 328 and note and Steph Dig Art 12 illust. (c) and note.

(7) Cited in Steph Dig., p. 20, note, 116 C C C Sess Pa., 1451.

transactions was relevant to the question whether the receipt of the money by the company was fraudulent (1) Where a prisoner was charged with the murder of her child by poison, and the defence was that its death resulted from an accidental taking of such poison, evidence to prove that two other children of hers and a lodger in her house had died previous to the present charge from the same poison was held to be admissible (2) Upon the trial of a prisoner for the murder of her infant by suffocation it was held that evidence tendered to prove the previous death of her other children at early ages was admissible, although such evidence did not show the causes from which these children died (3) Upon the trial of an indictment for using a certain instrument with intent to procure a miscarriage, it is relevant, in order to prove the intent, to show that at other times, both before and after the offence charged, the prisoner had caused miscarriages by similar means (4) In a trial for forgery evidence of similar transactions not included in the charge is relevant as proof of intention though not as proof of the forgery (5) Under an indictment for arson, where the prisoner was charged with wilfully setting fire to her master's house — Held that two previous and abortive attempts to set fire to different portions of the same premises were admissible, though there was no evidence to connect the prisoner with either of them (6) Where the plaintiff in an action of negligence alleged that he had contracted an infectious disease through the negligence of the defendant, a barber in using razors and other appliances in a dirty and insanitary condition and in support of his case he tendered the evidence of two witnesses who deposed that they had contracted a similar disease in the defendant's shop — Held that as the negligence alleged was not an isolated act or omission, but was a dangerous practice carried on by the defendant, the evidence of those witnesses was admissible (7) Facts to establish that A and B have "hunted in couples" and in several instances, taken part in thefts from rich prostitutes, that is, a series of incidents from 1914 to 1918, to establish that they have lived together and had transactions together, that a system had been followed by them, that they used to go about together under different names, and had associated together with an evil motive, namely, the commission of thefts from rich prostitutes were sought to be given in evidence. Held (Chaudhuri, J., dissenting) that such evidence was not admissible either under s 14 or under a 15 of the Evidence Act. The gist of this section is that unless there is sufficient and reasonable connection between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact, that is unless there is in substance some common link, they cannot form a series. Evidence of general disposition, habit and tendencies is not relevant. Evidence of collateral offence cannot be received as substantive evidence of the offence on trial though under s 14, evidence may be on like evidence. The factum of such intention not merely the weight of the conduct as would authorise a reasonable inference of a systematic pursuit of the same criminal object. Per

(1) Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society L. R., 4 C P D 94, Steph Dig Art. 12 illust (d). See R v Wyatt 1904 1 K. B. 188 cited in notes to last section.

(2) R v Cotton, 12 Cox. 400, R v Weaving supra followed.

(3) R v Roden 12 Cox 630, following R v Cotton supra, it was objected by the counsel for the prisoner that the evidence admitted in R v Cotton pointed directly to prior acts of poisoning, but in this case it was not proposed to prove that the four children died from other than natural causes per Lush, J. The value of the evidence cannot affect its admissibility. 'The principle of R v Cotton applies'.

(4) R v Dale 16 Co. 703, R v Bond C. C. R. 1906 21 Cox 256 in which Lord Alverstone C. J. said 'If R v Dale is to be construed to authorize the admissibility of evidence of prior acts of a similar kind where the act is admitted and the only question is the purpose for which it was done it goes too far'.

(5) Krishna Govinda Pal v Emperor 43 C. 783 (1915).

(6) R v Bailey 2 Cox C. C. 311.

(7) Hales v Kerr (1908), 2 K. B. 601 'Times' L. R., V 24, p 779.

Chaudhuri, J.—It is wrong to say that this section only deals with intention as opposed to accident. Evidence tending to show that the accused have been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment is not admissible, unless upon the issue whether the acts charged against the accused

In general, whenever it is necessary to rebut, even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake or other innocent condition of mind, evidence may be given to prove that the accused has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind and proximate in time to the conduct in question (2)

16. When there is a question whether a done, the existence of any course of business, it naturally would have been done, is a relevant issue.

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether a particular letter was despatched.

The fact that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put in that place, are relevant. (3)

(b) The question is, whether a particular letter reached A

The facts that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead letter Office, are relevant. (4)

Principle.—Evidence of the existence of the course of business is relevant as laying a foundation for the presumption which the Court may raise from the course of business when proved. The Court may then presume that the common course of business has been followed in the particular case (5), and this presumption is but an application of the general maxim omnia præsuntur rite esse acta, and proceeds on the well-recognised fact that the conduct of men in official and commercial transactions be shown when their existence will increase or diminish the probabilities

(1) Emperor v Panchu, 47 C., 671 (F B), s c, 24 C W N, 501, 31 C. L. J., 402

(2) Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915) in which it was said that R v Holt 8 Cox 44 (1860) is no longer of authority

(3) Hetherington v Kemp, 4 Camp, 193, Ningala v Bharmappa, 23 B., 65, 66 (1897) and see Salbeck v Garbett, 7 Q D, 846, Trotter v Maclean, L R, 13 Ch D, 574, Ward v Lord Lonsborough, 12 C B., 252, Steph Dig, Art 13, illust. (b), but the course of business may be contradicted Stocken v Collin 7 M & W 515, see also ss 50 and 51 of the Repealed Act II of 1855

(4) Warren v Warren, 1 C M & R., 250, 3 Esp, 54 J C & P, 250, and see Saundersen v Judge, 2 H L., 500; Wood- cock v Houldsworth, 16 M & W, 124, Abbey v Hill, 5 Bing 299, Plume's case, R & R, 264, Kent v Loden 1 Camp, 178, Steph Dig, Art 13, illust. (c), see Jogendra Chundro Chunder v Duarka Nath 15 C., 681, 683 (1888)

(5) S 114, illust. (f), post, the matter dealt with by this section is treated by English text-writers under the subject of presumption.—The ordinary course of business is proved and the Court is asked to presume that on the particular occasion in question, there was no departure from the ordinary and general rule see authorities cited supra, and Field Ev 122, Duarka Doss v Baboo Jonkee 6 M I A., 90 [“It is reasonable to presume that that which was the ordinary course was pursued in this case”]

contest (1) a thing, or the habit of doing or not doing it (2) But the course of business must be clearly made out in order to establish that connection between the facts proved and sought to be proved which is the foundation of the presumption (3) s 114, illust (f) (Presumption as to course of business) s 3 ("Relevant.") s 3 ("Fact")

Steph. Dig., Art. 13, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 316—323, Norton, Ev., 141, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 43, 374, 213, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 91, Taylor, Ev., §§ 176—182, Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 82, Best, Ev., § 403, Cunningham, Ev., 121, Wigmore, Ev., § 92

COMMENTARY.

Course of business

As to the meaning of the words "course of business," see notes to the second clause of thirty second section, post. The section relates to private as well as public offices. Illustration (a) relates to the former, Illustration (b) to the latter, namely, the post office itself (4). Where it was sought to prove that a certain indorsement had been made on a (lost) license entered at the Custom House, it was held to be relevant to show that the course of office was not to permit the entry without such indorsements (5). And where the question was whether the defendant was to be taken to have indorsed a license, it was held that his practice was to pay all was seen with the rest to complain (6). So also where the demand was for the proceeds of milk sold daily to customers by the defendant as agent to the plaintiff, and it appeared that the course of dealing was for the defendant to pay the plaintiff every day the money which she had received, without any written voucher passing, it was ruled that it was to be presumed that the defendant had in fact accounted, and that the onus of proving the contrary lay on the plaintiff (7). Where evidence was admitted of a book to the teller as indicating that 'It is really immaterial whether tries and prove his invariable custom. These things being proven, the presumption arises therefrom that the usual course of business was pursued in this particular instance. Every one is presumed to govern himself by the rules of right reason and consequently that he acquits himself of his engagements and duty. Whenever it is established that one act is the usual concomitant of another, the latter being proved, the former will be presumed, for this is in accord with the experience of common life. It is simply the process of ascertaining one act from the existence of another' (8).

The fixed methods and systematic operation of the postal and telegraph service is evidence of due delivery of matter placed for that purpose in the custody of the proper authority. "If a letter properly directed (9) is proved to

(1) Walker v Barron 6 Minn., 508 512 (Amer.)

(2) State v Railroad, 52 N. H., 528, 532 (Amer.), per Sargent, C. J. See Wigmore Ev., § 92

(3) See Cunningham Ev., 121

(4) Norton Ev., 141

(5) Butler v Allnut, 1 Starkie 222, Phipson Ev., 5th Ed. 106, Taylor, Ev., § 180A. see also Van Omceron v Downck, 2 Camp 44, Waddington v Roberts L. R., 3 Q. B. 579, Mason v Wood 1 C. P. D., 63

(6) Lucas v Navosiesleski, 1 Esp., 296,

Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 107, Roscoe, N. P. Ev. 37, and see Sellen v Norman, 4 C. & P. 80

(7) Evans v Birch 3 Camp, 10, Roscoe N. P. Ev. 37

(8) Mothas v O'Neil, 94 Mo., 527, 6 S. W. 253 (Amer.)

(9) See Walter v Haynes Ray & M. 149, Burmester v Barron 17 Q. B., 823, Taylor Ev. s. 179, no inference should be drawn from the posting of a letter that it was properly addressed, Ram Das v The Official Liquidator, Cotton Ginning Co., Ltd., Cawnpore 9 A., 366, 384 (1837) have been either put into the post office or delivered to the postman(1) it is presumed, from the known course of business in that department of the public service, that it reached its destination at the regular time and was received by the person to whom it was addressed"(2) "Again, if letters or notices properly directed to a gentleman be left with his servant, it is only reasonable to presume, prima facie, that they reached his hands(3) The fact, too, of sending a letter to the post office will in general be regarded by a jury as presumptively proved, if the letter be shown to have been handed to, or left with, the clerk, whose duty it was in the ordinary course of business to carry it to the post, and if he can declare that, although he has no recollection of the particular letter, he invariably took to the post office all letters that either were delivered to him or were deposited in a certain place for that purpose(4) Where a registered letter is posted to a firm's correct address but is returned with the word 'refused' endorsed upon it, the presumption under this section in favour of the existence of common course of business is that the letter reached the firm's place of business and it may also be presumed that it was refused by an agent or partner of the firm(5) Upon the settlement of the list of contributories to the assets of a company in course of liquidation one of the persons named in the list denied that he had agreed to become a member of the company or was liable as a contributory The District Court admitted as evidence on the record, but at the hearing of the appeal, it was alleged by the official liquidator and denied by the objector, that such notice had been in fact given to the objector, was duly complied with, and the letter appeared in the letter book.

on the record, but at the hearing of the appeal, it was alleged by the official liquidator and denied by the objector, that such notice had been in fact given to the objector, was duly complied with, and the letter appeared in the letter book.

copied in the letter book The objector denied having received the letter or any notice of allotment, held that the Court should not draw the inference that the original letter was properly addressed or posted, that the press copy letter was inadmissible in evidence, and that there was no proof of the communication of any notice of allotment(6) Where a notice to quit was sent by registered letter the posting of which was proved, and which was produced in Court in the cover in which it was despatched, that cover containing the notice with an indorsement upon it purporting to be by an officer of the post office stating the refusal of the addressee to receive the letter, held that this was sufficient service of notice(7) Postmarks on letters—when capable of being

(1) Silbeck v Garbett 7 Q B 846

(2) Best Ev § 403 Taylor Ev § 179 and cases there cited Saunders v Judge supra Woodcock v Houldsworth supra Warren v Warren supra. If a letter is sent by the post it is prima facie proof until the contrary be proved that the party to whom it is addressed received it in due course per Parke B in Warren v Warren supra. Loeffel Al v Pearce Mohun 16 W R 223 (1871) [if a letter is forwarded to a person by post duly registered it must be presumed that it was tendered to him] See also s 14 ante see presumption as to post letters summarised in Powell Ev 94

(3) Macgregor v Keady 3 W H & G 794 Taylor Ev § 182 Powell Ev 97

(4) Taylor Ev § 182 and cases cited there and ante Silbeck v Garbett

Heatherington v Kenf Trother v Maclean Ward v Lord Landsborough To prove the sending of a notice by post the plaintiff's clerk was called who stated that a letter containing the notice was sent by post on a Tuesday morning but he had no recollection whether it was put in by himself or another clerk it was held that this was not sufficient evidence of putting into post Harker v Salter 4 Bing, see Roscoe N P Ev 574 and Loosey v Williams 1 M & W 179

(5) Louis Dreyfus v Hindas Lushin 50 I C 194 12 S L R 142 s c

(6) Ramdas v The Official Liquidator Cotton Ginning Co Ltd Campbell 9 A 366 (1887)

(7) Jogendra Chunder v Dwarka Nath, 15 C 681 (1888)

deciphered—are prima facie evidence that the letters were in the post at the time and place therein specified(1), the postmark on a letter has been admitted postmark may be contradicted The presumption, in the case and posted will be delivered in due course(4), will be extended to postal telegrams now that the inland telegraphs form part of the Government postal system (5)

In certain cases special provision has been made by Statute with respect to matters with which this section is concerned Thus in the case of documents served by post on companies, in proving service of such a document it is sufficient to prove that it was properly directed and that it was put as a registered letter into the post office (6)

(1) Fletcher v Braddell 3 Stark. R 64 Stocken v Collin 7 M & W 515 R v Johnson 65 Taylor Ev s 179 and cases there cited Powell Ev 94 Wigmore Ev § 95

(2) Abbey v Hul' 5 Bing 299, R v Plumer R & Ry 264 Keir v Lowen 1 Camp 177 Roscoe N P Ev 213 & 214 & Steph Dig Art 13 illust (a) a letter is presumed to have arrived at its destination at the time at which it would be delivered in the ordinary course of postal business Stocken v Collin ante Powell Ev 95

(3) Stocken v Collin supra Burr Jones Ev § 46

(4) British and American Telegraph Co v Colson L R 6 Ex 122 per Bramwell B

(5) Roscoe N P Ev 43 see also as to the telegraphic messages s 88 post

(6) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies) If a notice given under the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881 s 94) is duly directed and sent by post and miscarries such miscarriage does not render the notice invalid

ADMISSIONS.

17), deal with the subject of admissions said to form exceptions to the rule rely correct Admissions are sometimes used as merely discrediting a party's statement by showing that he has on other occasions made statements inconsistent with the case afterwards set up Their effect in such a case is merely destructive It is their inconsistency with the party's present claim that gives them logical force and not their testimonial credit For in such cases the truth of the admission is not relied on, and therefore they are not obnoxious to the hearsay rule (1) In effect and broadly it may be stated that anything said by a party may be used against him as an admission, provided it exhibits the quality of inconsistency with the facts now asserted by him in pleadings or testimony It follows that the subject of his interest at the time, for statements is increased where time, that circumstance has on in the legal is not always t which at the time it was

But an admission or a fact relied evidence of the truth of its contents and as possessing an evidentiary force per se It is then equivalent to affirmative testimony for the party offering it Admissions in such cases have a testimonial value independent of the contradiction, and being the statements of persons not witnesses, form exceptions to the hearsay rule In this sense it has been said that —“The general rule is, that every material fact must be proved by testimony on oath There is an exception to that rule, namely, that the declarations of a party to the record, or of one identified in interest with him, are, as against such party, admissible in evidence”(4) The statements which are the subject of these sections are admitted firstly as infirmative of the case made and secondly, when amounting to proof for the adversary, because in respect of the personal nature there is some security for their accuracy

An admission is ative in interest shall not be al

perience testifies that, as men consult their own interest, and seek their own advantage whatever they say or admit against their interest or advantage may, with tolerable the contrary appear as to the nature of

to whether the person who made the admission was or was not acquainted with

(1) Wigmore Ev § 1048 et seq

(2) Ib

(3) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 213

(4) Spargo v Brown 9 B & C. 935, 938 per Bayley J

(5) S 21 and note thereto post the exceptions to this rule are contained in a 21 cts (1) (2) The admissibility of books of account under s. 34 is also an instance of statements made by a person being offered on his own behalf An admission may further be proved on behalf of a party if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission s 21 cl (3)

(6) Best Ev. § 519

(7) Best, Ev § 519, Taylor, Ev., § 723

the incidents of the property when he made the statement (Chatterjee and Panton J J)(1)

Admissions

An admission has been defined to be a statement which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact and which is made by any of the persons and under the circumstances in the following sections mentioned (2) In English law, the term admission is usually applied to civil transactions and to those statements of fact in criminal cases which do not amount to acknowledgments of guilt or which do not suggest the inference of guilt the term 'confession' being generally restricted to acknowledgments of guilt or statements which suggest the inference of guilt (3)

Besides admissions written and oral a party may make admissions by his conduct These are not mentioned in the seventeenth section as they have already been dealt with in the eighth section ante Admissions by assumed rule

1 they
as as admissions by a party statements made in his presence and not denied by him provided the circumstances were such as to make a denial necessary or appropriate (5)

Confessions

A confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime stating or suggesting the inference that he committed that crime (6) There is a distinction between admissions and confessions in the Act(7) which however as it does not contain a definition of the word confession does not itself declare in what that distinction exists The nature of this distinction has however been the subject of judicial consideration in the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts In the first place as sections 17—31 deal with admissions generally and include sections 24—30 which treat of confessions as distinguished from admissions it would appear that confessions are a species of which an admission is the genus All admissions are not confessions but all confessions are admissions Thus a statement amounting under sections 17—31 is an admission under the Act but is not a confession subject matter of evidence against the accused are admissible as evidence with regard to the ownership of the property in an enquiry under section 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code (8) The present portion of the Act adopts the term Admission as the generic term for both civil and criminal proceedings and uses the particular term confession for admissions (a) in criminal proceedings (b) made by a particular person viz an accused

(1) Dnabandhu Nandi v Mannu Lal Par k 52 I C 443

(2) S 17 post see Wills Ev 2nd Ed 149

(3) Taylor Ev 724

(4) Best, Ev American Notes p 488 Norton Ev 142 As to admissions by conduct see Powell Ev 277 Taylor Ev § 804 s 8 ante Confessions like admissions in civil cases may be inferred from the conduct of the prisoner and from his silent acquiescence in the statement of others made in his presence respecting himself Taylor Ev § 907

(5) Best Ev ib see notes to s 8 ante

(6) Section 17 Art. 21 the Act contains no definition of a confession

(7) R v Macdonald 10 B L R App 2 (1872) per Phear J R v Dabee Per shad 6 C 530 (1881) R v Meher Ali 15 C 389 593 (1888) R v Nalinadhab 15 C 595 (1888) per Petheram C J —

If the contents of the document did not amount to a confession the document itself would be relevant as an admission under s 21 ib 607 None however of the above cases indicate the difference between admissions and confessions See as to this R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 539 (1884) R v Jagrup 7 A 646 (1885) R v Pandharinath 6 B 34 (1881) R v Nana 14 B 260 263 (1884)

(8) R v Trilovan Manekchand 9 B 131 134 (1884)

person(1), (c) of the particular character denoted in the following definition "A confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime (a) stating, or (b) suggesting the inference that he committed the crime" (2) Therefore not only statements which amount to a direct acknowledgment of guilt are confessions, but also inculpatory statements, which, although they fall short of actual admissions of guilt yet suggest an inference of guilt. All inculpatory statements, however, are not "confessions" but only such as fall short of being an admission of guilt, and from which an inference of guilt follows (3) A statement which is intended by the maker to be self exculpatory may be nevertheless an admission of an incriminating circumstance whether a statement amounts to a confession or not. The fact that it leads to a confession is a statement which it is proposed to prove against a person accused of an offence to establish that offence(5), while under the term 'admission' are comprised all other statements amounting to admissions within the meaning of the seventeenth and eighteenth sections ante. Statements by way of confession which are excluded by sections 24—30 are inadmissible under the eighth section ante. This latter section therefore, in so far as it admits a statement as included in the word 'conduct' must be read in connection with the twenty fifth and twenty sixth sections and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by these sections (6) As in the case of admissions in civil suits the principle upon which the reception of confessions depends is the presumption that a rational being will not make admissions prejudicial to his interest and safety unless when urged by the promptings of truth and conscience (7) In such cases the maxim is 'Habemus optimum testem, confitentem reum' (8) If prisoners really voluntarily confess, their confessions are the best possible evidence against them and a verdict based on voluntary confessions is just as good as a verdict based on the testimony of credible witnesses (9)

But self haruing evidence is not always receivable in criminal cases as it is in civil. There is this condition precedent to its admissibility that the

(1) R v Tribhovan Maneckchand 9 B 131 134 R v Jagrup 7 A 646 648 (1885)

(2) Steph Dig Art 21 adopted and followed in R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 539 (1884) R v Nana 14 B 260 263 F B (1889) R v Kargal Mah 41 C 1905 see Rampal v Emperor 20 All L J, 128 R v Jagrup 7 A 646 (1885) [In this last case Straight J was of opinion that the word 'confession' cannot be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt but he also added that he did not find anything in Mr Stephens definition at variance with the view he took. It may however be pointed out that the rule contended for is not that every inculpatory statement is a confession but only such as fall short of being an admission of guilt and from which an inference of guilt follows. As to plenary and not plenary statements see Best Ev § 5241 see also R v Pandharinath 6 B 34 (1881)

(3) Hakiman v R 51 P L R 1905 2 Cr L J 230 and see notes to s 75 post

(4) R v Pandharinath 6 B 34 37

(1881)

(5) R v Tribhovan Maneckchand, 9 B, 131 134 (1884) it is an admission of a criminating circumstance on which the prosecution mainly relies. R v Pandharinath 6 B 34 37 (1881) R v Nana 14 B 260 263 (1889)

(6) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889) see also R v Jora Harji 11 Bom H C R 74 (18 4) R v Rama Bappa 3 B 12 (1878) and s 82 post

(7) Taylor Ev § 865 Best Ev § 524 Phillips & Arnold Ev 401 R v Jellaraddi 6 Bom L R 773 in which also the question of the importance to be attached to variation in confessional statements is discussed

(8) In criminal cases a deliberate confession carries with it a greater probability of truth than an admission in civil cases the consequences being more serious and penal. Phillips & Arnold Ev 402 In R v Balder 2 Den at p 446 Erie J. said 'I am of opinion that when a confession is well proved it is the best evidence that can be procured'

(9) R v Burr Mundel 25 W R, Cr., 25 26 (1876)

party against whom it is adduced must have supplied it voluntarily or at least freely (1)

A prisoner may be convicted on his own uncorroborated confession (2) But in order to support a conviction the admission by the prisoner must be an admission of guilt So where some prisoners during a preliminary investigation stated that the crime was committed by other persons and that any share they had in it was under compulsion it was pointed out that though such a statement contained an important admission it was not an admission of guilt and that upon such a statement alone no person ought to be convicted (3) Confessions have been divided by English text writers into two classes namely judicial and extra judicial Judicial confessions are those which are made

Either in the presence of a magistrate or other competent officer or before the Court

this term embracing not only express confessions of crime but all those admissions and acts of the accused from which guilt may be implied All voluntary confessions of this kind are receivable in evidence on being proved like other facts (5) Whether however extra judicial confessions if uncorroborated are under English law of themselves sufficient for conviction has been doubted In each of the English cases usually cited in favour of the sufficiency of this that view which regards such confessions when uncorroborated as insufficient an opinion which certainly best accords with the humanity of the criminal law and with the great degree of caution applied in receiving and weighing evidence of this kind (6) And taken together with the fact that the accused is usually in a position to retract his confession and to explain away the answers which he has given to questions put by them (10) As to retracted confessions see note to s 24 post

Admissions may be made by (a) a party to the proceeding (11) And a party to the proceeding may be affected by the admissions of the following persons

Persons by whom admissions may be made

(1) Best Ev § 551

(2) R v Ranjeet Son 16 W R Cr 73 (1866) R v Hyder Jallaha ib 83 (1866) or on his own admission coupled with the evidence R v Kallyschurn 7 W R Cr 59 (1867) as to the effect of extra judicial confession see post

(3) R v Kristo Mundul 7 W R Cr 8 (1867)

(4) Taylor Ev., § 866 ante R v Bhutta n Rujuan 12 W R Cr 49 (1869) as to the effect of judicial confessions and as to retracted confessions see s 24 post

(5) Taylor E § 867 R v Gopee Nath 13 W R Cr 69 (1870) [a confession on made to a private individual may be evidence against the prisoner if proved by the person before whom the confession was made] R v Moan Lal 4 A 46 94 (1881) R Bysogo Nostjo 8 W R Cr 28 (1877)

(6) Taylor Ev § 868

(7) Field Ev 6th Ed 109 The report of the case there cited in this connection [R v Jhurree W R Cr 41 (1867) (a voluntary and genuine confession is legal and sufficient proof of guilt)] does not state the nature of the confession

(8) Taylor Ev s 868

(9) Pka Bua v R (1912) 39 C. 825

(10) R v Soobjan 10 B L R 332 335 (1873) R v Mohan Lal 4 A 46 49 (1881)

(11) S 18, post

(b) an agent to such party duly authorized(1), (c) a person who has a proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject matter of the suit(2), (d) a predecessor in title or a person from whom the party to the suit has derived his interest(3), (e) a person whose position it is necessary to prove in a suit when the statement would be relevant in a suit brought by or against himself(4), (f) a referee, or a person to whom a party to the suit has expressly referred for information(5). Where several persons are jointly interested in the subject matter of a suit, the general rule is that the admissions of any one of those persons are receivable against himself and his fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided that the admissions relate to the subject matter in dispute and were made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered(6). The requirement of the identity in the legal interest between the joint owners is of fundamental importance. The admission of one co-plaintiff or co-defendant is not receivable against another merely by virtue of his position as a co party in the litigation. If the rule were otherwise, it would in practice, permit a litigant to discredit an opponent's claims merely by joining any person as the opponent's co-party, and then employing that person's statements as admissions. Consequently, it is not by virtue of the person's relation to the litigation that the admission of one can be used against the other, it must be because of some priority of title or of obligation(7). Plaintiffs who were two out of five brothers sued to establish their right to a two fifth share in properties, which were sold in execution of a money decree against another brother 'U' and purchased by the defendant on the allegation that the properties, when sold, were the joint family properties of the five brothers. The defendant, whose case was that the brothers were not joint at the date of the sale, and that the properties were exclusively owned by U, put in a deposition given by another brother K in the suit in which the money decree against U was passed, in the course of which K stated that the family was not joint and the properties belonged exclusively to U. Held, that the deposition of K in the previous suit was not admissible as admission against the plaintiff(8). Guardians of person of an infant are not competent to bind the ward by an admission as to his proprietary rights. An admission by a Court of Wards cannot bind or prejudice the infant proprietor(9). An admission made by a landlord is not binding on his tenant, and this being so, a compromise entered into between the proprietors of certain land and others, whereby the parties to the compromise become joint proprietors of the land has no binding effect upon the tenants of the land(10). In a criminal trial, if it is intended to bind a master by the statement of his servant the relationship of master and servant must be strictly proved(11). Generally with respect to the person whose admissions may be received, the doctrine is, that the declarations of a party to the record or of one identified in interest with him are as against such party receivable in evidence(12). But if they proceed from a stranger they are in general inadmissible(13). The act has rendered

(1) S 18 post(2) Id(3) Id(4) S 19 post(5) S 20 post see notes to ss. 18—20 post(6) Dileshwar Ram v Nohar Singh 48 I C 193(7) Ambar Ali v Lutfe Ali 45 C. 159 s c 25 C. L. J. 619 21 C. W. N. 996(8) Nagendra Nath Ghosh v Lawrence Jute Co. 25 C. W. N., 89(9) Bansari Lal Singh v Daska Nath Misr 29 C. L. J. 57 s c 57 I C., 825(10) Puran Pande v Dhanpat Tewari 57 I C. 739(11) Esseperor v Pitharan Singh 19 Cr. L. J. 789 s c 4 Pat. L. W. 120(12) Taylor F. & 740 Spargo v Bro. 9 D. & C. 918(13) Id Baugh v Harte 4 B. & C., 329

admission within the meaning of the eighteenth section (1) Entries in books of account, though proved not to have been regularly kept, may yet be relevant as admissions (2) Admissions may be also contained in recitals and descriptions in deeds (3), horoscopes (4), receipts, or mere acknowledgments given for goods or money, whether on separate papers, or indorsed on deeds, or on negotiable securities, banker's pass books; accounts rendered, such as a solicitor's bill; sworn inventories and declarations by executors which operate as an admission of assets (5), and survey maps (6) The omission of a claim by an insolvent in a schedule of the debts due to him given on oath is an admission that it is not due (7) A statement in a bill of sale is evidence against those who are parties to it, the seller and the purchaser and the person who purchased from such last mentioned purchaser (8) Statements recorded in a rent-suit under Act X of 1859 which do not conform to the requirement of the sixteenth section, cannot be relied on as admissions (9) Even an invalid instrument may operate as an admission as to collateral matters (10), but not one which is not duly stamped (11), except in criminal cases (12) A return made to a collector by an occupant of land stating the amount of the rent, is an admission as to the amount of the rent binding upon the occupant and all who claim under him (13) As to admissions in debt suits, or in notices to enhance rent, see cases noted below (14) Though a judgment is generally irrelevant as between strangers, it may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission (15) Thus where A sued B, a carrier for goods delivered by A to B, a judgment recovered by B against a person to whom he had delivered the goods, was held to be relevant as an admission by B that he had them (16) "It is true that a record is sometimes admitted in the party himself that the fact to the principles governing belongs (17) And where in V, the second son of K, was the plaintiff, was consequently entitled to a moiety of the joint property as representative of A, the other moiety going to branch, a judgment K, in which suit the adoption of V, evidence against the

(1) Hurish Chunder v Prasunno Coommar, 22 W R, 303 (1874), as to pleadings in the same proceedings, post As to the admissibility in England of pleadings in other actions, see Phipson Ev, 5th Ed., 237

(2) R v Hanmanta 1 B 610, 617 (1877), post

(3) Taylor Ev, 91—100, 858, Roscoe, N P Ev, 76, Powell Ev, 9th Ed, 465, 466, post, Konuar Doorganath v Ram Chunder, 4 I A., 52 (1876)

(4) Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan, 17 M 134 (1893)

(5) Taylor, Ev, §§ 859, 860

(6) See notes to s 36 post, and cases there cited

(7) Taylor, Ev § 804, Nicholls v Davies, M & Rob, 13, Hart v Newman, 3 Camp, 13

(8) Soojan Dibee v Achmut Ali, supra

(9) Pogha Mahtoon v. Goorea Baboo,

24 W R 114 (1875)

(10) Whart § 1124 cited in Phipson, Ev 3rd Ed 193 194

(11) Act II of 1899 (Stamp), s 34, amended in 1922

(12) Id cl (2) other than proceedings under Ch VII (Disputes as to immovable property) Ch XXVI (Maintenance of wives and children) of Act V of 1898 (Criminal Procedure)

(13) Atudh Beharee v Ram Rai, 18 W. R., 105 (1872)

(14) Gunga Pershad v Gogun Singh, 3 C, 2 (1877), see also Narain Coomary v Ram Krishna, 5 C 864 (1880), Judoonath v Rajah Baroda, 22 W. R., 220 (1874)

(15) Steph. Dig., Art. 44

(16) Tiley v Cowling 1 Ld Ry., 744, s c B N P, 243, Steph Dig., Art. 44, illust (c), Taylor Ev, § 1694

(17) Taylor, Ev, § 1694

defendants, not in order to prove an adjudication between third parties, but in order to prove a statement made by the predecessor in title of the parties defendants against whom the document was sought to be used (1) Though a judgment of a Criminal Court or verdict of conviction cannot be considered in evidence in a civil case (2), a plea of guilty in the Criminal Court may be so considered as evidence of an admission (3) As to admissions made in pleadings, see notes to the fifty eighth section, post

Personal knowledge is not required "An admission is receivable although its weight may be slight, which is founded on hearsay (4), or consists merely of the declarant's opinion or belief (5), but where the admission is an inference from facts generally known to the declarant the Court may disregard the fact that a party is informed that a party's information will not amount to an admission (6) The ground appears to be that even if a party has no personal knowledge, the admissions would ordinarily not be made except on evidence which satisfies the party who is making them that they are true (8)

An admission, merely as an admission is not conclusive against the person who makes it (9) The latter may show that he was mistaken, or was not telling the truth, he may diminish the importance to be attached to it in any way he can, he is not precluded from contradicting it so far as the admission is merely an admission, he may induce the Court to disbelieve or disregard it if he can (10) The circumstances under which an admission was made may always, therefore, be proved to impeach, or (since the weight of an admission depends on these circumstances) to enhance its credibility (11) An admission, however, may operate as an estoppel, in which case the person who made it is not permitted to deny it (12) As to the effect of admissions as dispensing with proof, see the fifty eighth section, post There may be a withdrawal of any admission unless there should be some obligation not to withdraw admission are action, Under this Act the fact of compulsion would affect the weight of the evidence only As to admissions made "without prejudice," see the twenty third section, post With regard to the effect of confessions both judicial and extra judicial, v ante, Introductory note to ss 17—19 Confessions are irrelevant in criminal proceedings if made under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty fourth

Hearsay and opinion

Effect and circumstances of admission

(1) Krishnasami v Rajagopala 18 M, 73 77 78 (1895)

(2) Id to establish the truth of the facts upon which it was rendered see notes to s 43 post

(3) Sumbo Chunder v Modhoo Kyburt 10 W R 56 (1868) Field Ex 6th Ed, 184

(4) Wignore Ex § 1053 Re Perton, 53 L T 707 (1885) [statement of a person as to his illegitimacy see also R v Walker, Cox 99 in Taylor Ex § 737 (1885) the point is treated as doubtful as to statements by an agent containing hearsay or opinions see The Actaeon 1 Spinks E & A, 176, The Solway, 10 P D, 137

(5) Dea v Steel 3 Camp, 115

(6) Bulley v Bulley L R, 9 Ch, 739 747

(7) Phipson Ex 5th Ed 219 Wills Ex 108 1 Daniel's Ch Fr 6th Ed 575 Taylor Ex § 737 Trimblestown v Kemmis 9 C & F 780, 784—786, Roe v

Ferrars 2 B & P 542 in which case it was held that if the defendant gives in evidence an answer in Chancery of the plaintiff it will not entitle the plaintiff to avail himself of any matters contained in such answer which are only stated as hearsay but see Taylor Ex § 737 as to admissions which operate by way of estoppel see s 115 post

(8) Kitchen v Robbins 29 Ga. 713 716 (Amer) cited in Wignore Ex § 1053

(9) S 31 post

(10) See Cunningham Ex 23 24

(11) See notes to s. 31 post Admissions depend much upon the circumstances under which they are made R v Summiston 1 C & K 164 166 per Wightman J

(12) Ss 31 115—117 post

(13) Mahomed Iman v Husain Khan, 6 C 81 (1898)

(14) Taylor Ex §§ 798—799, Roscoe v P Ex, 63

section, post, unless they come within the provisions of the twenty eighth section. But if no inducement (within the meaning of the twenty fourth section) has been held out relating to the charge, it matters not as far as admissibility is concerned in what way a confession has been obtained though of course the manner in which it has been procured may affect its weight (1). Before using a statement (oral or written) as an admission the facts which make it an admission must be proved (2).

Matters
provable by
admission

"Admissions are receivable to prove matters of law, or mixed law and fact though (unless amounting to estoppels) these are generally of little weight being necessarily founded on mere opinion. Thus a defendant's admission that his trade was a nuisance has been received (3). So a prisoner's admission of a former valid marriage is some though not sufficient, evidence to support a conviction for bigamy (4). Matters of fact simply may always be proved in this manner. Thus, a wife's admission of adultery, though uncorroborated has on more than one occasion been held sufficient evidence where considered trustworthy, upon which to grant a divorce (5) though if corroboration is available (6) it must be produced (7). But, contrary to the English rule oral admissions are not receivable to prove the contents of documents except where secondary evidence is admissible or the genuineness of a document produced is in question (8). The execution of documents (whether attested or not) which are not required by law to be attested may be proved by admission or otherwise (9). And even in the case of documents required by law to be attested the admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself is sufficient proof of its execution as against him (10). Admissions may even sometimes be received as to matters protected by privilege provided they are proved by a third person (ante).

The whole
admission
must be considered

The whole statement containing the admission must be taken together (11), for though some part of it may be favourable to the party and the object is only

(1) See Taylor Ev § 881 s 29 post and notes thereto

(2) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909) 37 C. 91

(3) R v Neville 1 Peak N P 125 see also as to this case R v Fairie 8 E & B 486 but see also note (7) post

(4) R v Savage 13 Cox 178 [sic] sed q whether reference intended is not R v Flaherty 2 C & L 782] R v Savage overrules the previous decision of R v Newton 2 M & Rob 503 1 C. & R 164 s c nom R v Simmons in R v Philp 1 Moo C C 263 however a declaration of the prisoner showing who were (according to his own belief) his co partners was rejected when by reason of the invalidity of the document evidencing the transfer of their shares their legal title to them could not be established

(5) Robinson v Robinson 1 S & T 362 Willams v Willams L R 1 P & D 29 Gelly v Gelly (1907) P 334

(6) White v White 62 L T 663

(7) Phipson Ev 5th Ed. 219 in regard to admissions involving matters of law it is said in Phillips Ev p 344 10th Ed. — Where admissions involve matters of law as well as matters of fact they are obviously in many instances entitled to very little weight and in some cases they have been altogether

rejected. Thus it has been held that the discharge of a defendant by a Court of Quarter Sessions under an Insolvent Act could not be established by proof of an acknowledgment of the discharge by the plaintiff himself for the discharge might have been irregular and void or might have been mistaken by the plaintiff. Scott v Clave 3 Camp 236 Simnersett v Adamson 1 Bing 73 Mors v Miller Barr 2057. As to admissions and estoppels on points of law see Tagore v Tagore 1 A Sup Vol 71 (1872) Surendra Keshav v Doorgarundari 19 I A 115, 116 (1892) Gopee Lal v Musti Sree Chandrasekhar 11 B L R. 395 (1872) and Dungarya v Hand Lal 3 A L J 53 an admission on a point of law is not a thing within the meaning of s 115

(8) S 22 post as to written admissions see s 65 cl (b) post

(9) S 72 post see Taylor Ev §§ 414 1843 Common Law Procedure Act 1854 s 26

(10) S 70 post Taylor Ev §§ 1848 1853

(11) Taylor Ev., § 725 Wills Ev. 2nd Ed 159 Sooltan Ali v Chand Bibi 9 W R. 130 (1868) explained in Shahkh Shurfuras v Shahkh Dhunoor 16 W R. 257 (1871) [a party cannot select particular passages and read them without the context], Jodunath Roy v Raja Baroda

to ascertain what he has conceded against himself, and what may therefore be presumed to be true, yet, unless the whole is received, the true meaning of the part which is evidence against him, cannot be ascertained.

the circumstances, how much of the entire statement they deem worthy of belief, including as well the facts asserted by the party in his own favour, as those made against him (2) The rule applies equally to written, as to verbal admission (3) Thus where in a suit for rent at an enhanced rate after notice the plaintiff set forth that the defendant and his predecessors had been holding the tenure without any change in the rent, but alleged also that the tenure had its origin at a period long after the permanent settlement, it was held that the defendant was not at liberty to avail himself of such portion of the admission as afforded a ground for the presumption of uniform payment from the permanent settlement without accepting the latter part of the admission which rebutted such presumption (4) The principle upon which the rule is grounded is, that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from that qualification, an unfair use is not to be made of a party's statement, by trying to convert into a particular admission by him that which he never intended to be such an admission (5) But though it is the rule that an admission which is qualified in its terms, must be ordinarily accepted as a whole, or not taken at all as evidence against a party, yet when a party makes separate and distinct allegations without any qualification, this rule does not apply It is by no means the case that no portion of a party's statement can by any possibility be given in evidence against him, without every portion of the statement from the beginning to the end being also read (6) A distinction must also be drawn between the case where an admission by one party has merely the effect of relieving the other party from giving proof of a particular fact, and the case where one party, failing to adduce independent evidence in his favour, attempts to rely on the statement of the other party as an admission In the latter case, as

22 W R 220 (1874) Niamut Ullah v Hummut Ali 22 W R 519 (1874) Pulin Beharee v Watson & Co 9 W R 190 (1868) explained in Baikanth Nath Kumar v Chandra Mohan 1 B L R (A C) 133 10 W R 190 Radha Charan v Chander Monee 9 W R 200 (1868) Rajah Nismoney v Ramanoograh Roy 7 W R 29 (1867) Tarunee Pershad v D. Arka Nath 13 W R 451 (1871) [A plaintiff abandoning his own case and falling back on the admissions of the defendant is bound to take those admissions as they stand in their entirety by so taking them he would on his own part concede the truth of the statements contained in the admissions if the defendant other than the particular statements on which he specifically relied] Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar 11 W R 535 (1869) Iallah Probhoo v Sheonath W R 1864 Act X 27 Koniar Doorganath v Kam Chunder 4 I A 52 (1876)

(1) Taylor Ex § 725 Thomson v Austen 2 D & R 361 Fletcher v Froggatt 2 C & P 566 Cobbett v Grey 4 I A 129

(2) Taylor Ex § 725 and cases there cited Rajah Nismoney v Ramanoograh Roy 7 W R 29 (1867) [the Court is not bound to believe the whole of the statement] Sooltan Ali v Chand Bibee 9 W R 130 (1863) Shaikh Shurfnaz v Shaikh Dhunoo 16 W R 257 (1871) id Stanton v Percival 5 H L C 293 Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar 11 W R 535 (1869) [For instance if the Judge upon the evidence really believes that the payments credited in a plaintiff's book were made although he disbelieves the entry as to the amount of debits there is nothing inequitable in his giving the defendant the benefit of the payments] But though the Judge may believe one part and disbelieve the other he ought not to do so without some good reason Iallah Probhoo v Sheonath W R 1864 Act X 27

W, L.R.

(3) Taylor Ex § 726

(4) Judoonath Roy v Rajah Frodo 22 W R 220 1874

(5) Baikanth Nath Kumar v Chandra Mohan 1 B L R (A C) 133 (1868), 10 W R 190 explained in Poolia Pekaree v Watson & Co 9 W R 190 (1863)

(6) Id see also post and notes there section, post, unless they come within the provisions of the twenty eighth section. But if no inducement (within the meaning of the twenty fourth section) has been held out relating to the charge it matters not, as far as admissibility is concerned in what way a confession has been obtained, though of course the manner in which it has been procured may affect its weight (1) Before using a statement (oral or written) as an admission, the facts which make it an admission must be proved (2)

Matters
provable by
admission

Admissions are receivable to prove matters of law, or mixed law and fact though (unless amounting to estoppels) these are generally of little weight being necessarily founded on mere opinion. Thus a defendant's admission that his trade was a nuisance has been received (3) So a prisoner's admission of a former

t, evidence to support a conviction always be proved in this manner uncorroborated has on more than one occasion been held sufficient evidence where considered trustworthy upon which to grant a divorce (5) though if corroboration is available (6) it must be produced (7) But, contrary to the English rule oral admissions are not receivable to prove the contents of documents except where secondary evidence is admissible or the genuineness of a document produced is in question (8) The execution of documents (whether attested or not) which are not required by law to be attested may be proved by admission or otherwise (9) And even in the case of documents required by law to be attested the admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself is sufficient proof of its execution as against him (10) Admissions may even sometimes be received as to matters protected by privilege, provided they are proved by a third person (v. ante)

The whole
admission
must be considered

The whole statement containing the admission must be taken together (11) for though some part of it may be favourable to the party and the object is only

(1) See Taylor Ev § 881 s 29 post and notes thereto

(2) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909) 37 C, 91

(3) R v Neville 1 Peak N P 125 see also as to this case R v Faurie 8 E & B 486 but see also note (7) post

(4) R v Savage 13 Cox 178 [sic sed q whether reference intended is not R v Flaherty 2 C & K 782] R v Savage overrules the previous decision of R v Newton 2 M & Rob 503 1 C & R 164 s c nom R v Simmonsto in R v Philip 1 Moo C C 263 however a declaration of the prisoner showing who were (according to his own belief), his co-partners was rejected when by reason of the invalidity of the document evidencing the transfer of their shares their legal title to them could not be established

(5) Robinson v Robinson 1 S & T 367 Williams v Williams L R 1 P & D 29 Getty v Getty (1907) P 334

(6) White v White 62 L T 663

(7) Phipson Ev 5th Ed. 219 in regard to admissions involving matters of law it is said in Phillips Ev p 344 10th Ed. — "Where admissions involve matters of law as well as matters of fact they are obviously in many instances entitled to very little weight and in some cases they have been altogether

rejected. Thus it has been held that the discharge of a defendant by a Court of Quarter Sessions under an Insolvent Act could not be established by proof of an acknowledgment of the discharge by the plaintiff himself for the discharge might have been irregular and void or might have been mistaken by the plaintiff Scott v Clare 3 Camp 236 Summersett v Adamson 1 Bing 73 Mors v Miller, Burr 2057 As to admissions and estoppels on points of law see Tagore v Tagore 1 A Sup Vol 71 (1872) Surendra Keshav v Doorgasundari 19 I A 115, 116 (1892) Gope Lal v Musli Sree Chandrasekhar 11 B L R. 395 (1872) and Dungariya v Chand Lal 3 A L J 53 an admission on a point of law is not a thing within the meaning of s 115

(8) S 22 post as to written admissions see s 65 cl (b) post

(9) S 72 post see Taylor Ev §§ 414 1843 Common Law Procedure Act 1854 s 26

(10) S 70 post Taylor Ev §§ 1848 1853

(11) Taylor Ev, § 725, Wills Ev, 2nd Ed., 159 Sooltan Ali v Chand Bibee 9 W R 130 (1868) explained in Shahk Shurfaraz v Shahk Dhunoor 16 W R 257 (1871) [a party cannot select particular passages and read them without the context], Jodunath Roy v Raja Baroda

to ascertain what he has conceded against himself, and what may therefore be the true meaning of the admission. But the admission is not to be taken as a confession of the truth of the facts asserted by the party in his own favour, as those made against him (2) The rule applies equally to written, as to verbal admission (3) Thus where in a suit for rent at an enhanced rate after notice the plaintiff set forth that the defendant and his predecessors had been holding the tenure without any change in the rent, but alleged also that the tenure had its origin at a period long after the permanent settlement, it was held that the defendant was not at liberty to avail himself of such portion of the admission as afforded a ground for the presumption of uniform payment from the permanent settlement without accepting the latter part of the admission which rebutted such presumption (4) The principle upon which the rule is grounded is, that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from that qualification, an unfair use is not to be made of a party's statement, by trying to convert into a particular admission by him that which he never intended to be such an admission (5) But though it is the rule that an admission which is qualified in its terms, must be ordinarily accepted as a whole, or not taken at all as evidence against a party, yet when a party makes separate and distinct allegations without any qualification, this rule does not apply. It is by no means the case that no portion of a party's statement can by any possibility be given in evidence against him, without every portion of the statement from the beginning to the end being also read (6) A distinction must also be drawn between the case where an admission by one party has merely the effect of relieving the other party from giving proof of a particular fact, and the case where one party, failing to adduce independent evidence in his favour, attempts to rely on the statement of the other party as an admission. In the latter case, as deem worthy of belief, including as well the facts asserted by the party in his own favour, as those made against him (2) The rule applies equally to written, as to verbal admission (3) Thus where in a suit for rent at an enhanced rate after notice the plaintiff set forth that the defendant and his predecessors had been holding the tenure without any change in the rent, but alleged also that the tenure had its origin at a period long after the permanent settlement, it was held that the defendant was not at liberty to avail himself of such portion of the admission as afforded a ground for the presumption of uniform payment from the permanent settlement without accepting the latter part of the admission which rebutted such presumption (4) The principle upon which the rule is grounded is, that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from that qualification, an unfair use is not to be made of a party's statement, by trying to convert into a particular admission by him that which he never intended to be such an admission (5) But though it is the rule that an admission which is qualified in its terms, must be ordinarily accepted as a whole, or not taken at all as evidence against a party, yet when a party makes separate and distinct allegations without any qualification, this rule does not apply. It is by no means the case that no portion of a party's statement can by any possibility be given in evidence against him, without every portion of the statement from the beginning to the end being also read (6) A distinction must also be drawn between the case where an admission by one party has merely the effect of relieving the other party from giving proof of a particular fact, and the case where one party, failing to adduce independent evidence in his favour, attempts to rely on the statement of the other party as an admission. In the latter case, as

22 W R 220 (1874) Niamut Ullah v Hummut Ali 22 W R 519 (1874) Pulin Beharee v Watson & Co 9 W R 190 (1868) explained in Baikanthanath Kumar v Chandra Mohan 1 B L R (A C) 133 10 W R 190 Radha Charan v Chander Monce 9 W R 200 (1868) Rajah Nilmoney v Ranaoograh Roy 7 W R 29 (1867) Tar nee Persad v Daarka 13 W R 451 (1871) [A plaintiff abandoning his own case and falling back on the admissions of the defendant is bound to take those admissions as they stand in their entirety, by so taking them he would on his own part concede the truth of the statements contained in the admissions of the defendant other than the particular statements on which he specifically relied] Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar 11 W R 535 (1869) Lallah Probloo v Jonath W 1864 Act X 27 Kontiar Doorganath v Ram Chunder 4 I A 52 (1876)

(1) Taylor Fx § 725 Thomson v Austen 2 D & R 361 Fletcher v Froggatt 2 C & P 566 Cobbett v Grey 4 Ex R 729

(2) Taylor Fx § 725 and cases there cited Rajah Nilmoney v Ranaoograh Roy 7 W R 29 (1867) [the Court is not bound to believe the whole of the statement] Sooltan Ali v Chard Bibee 9 W R 130 (1863) Shoikh Shurfuraz v Shakh Diunoo 16 W R 257 (1871) id Stanton v Percival 5 H L C 293 Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar 11 W R 535 (1869) [For instance if the Judge upon the evidence really believes that the payments credited in a plaintiff's book were made although he disbelieves the entry as to the amount of debits there is nothing inequitable in his giving the defendant the benefit of the payments] But though the Judge may believe the plaintiff and disbelieve the other he ought not to do so without some good reason [23] Probloo v Sheorath W 1864 Act X 27

(3) Taylor Fx § 725

(4) Judeonath Roy v Ranaoograh 22 W R 220 (1874)

(5) Baikanthanath Kumar v Chandra Mohan 1 B L R (A C) 133 (1868), 10 W R 190 explaining Poolis Beharee v Watson & Co 9 W R 190 (1868)

(6) Id see 30 post and notes thereon

"Evidence of oral admissions ought always to be received with great caution. Such evidence is necessarily subject to much imperfection and mistake; for either the party himself may have been misinformed, or he may not have understood him, or sed. It also sometimes happens that few words, will give an effect to the that the party actually said." (1) So where a plaintiff sued for a sum said to be due upon a settlement of account means of proving the case, if a true one" (2) But where an admission is deliberately made, and precisely identified, the evidence it affords is often of the most satisfactory nature (3) Admissions depend very much upon the circumstances under which they are made (4)

As in the case of admissions in civil proceedings, the evidence of oral confessions of guilt ought to be received with great caution (5) But a deliberate statement effectual estimated part of the confession is on record, it may be relied on in preference to that part (9) In order to determine whether statements are confessions the whole of the statements must be taken into consideration, and where the statements are self-exculpatory they are inadmissible (10) Although a confession must be taken as a whole and considered along with the admitted facts of the case, the accused being judged by his whole conduct, the Court is at liberty to disregard any statement contained in the confession which it disbelieves (11) In trials by jury, it is the duty of the Judge to lay the confessions properly before the jury, pointing out the circumstances bearing for, and against, their value, but it is for the jury to form an opinion as to their weight (12) "A judge, in fact, is hardly justified in treating a confession made by a prisoner before a magistrate, as a mere piece of evidence which a jury may deal with in the same way as they would with the evidence of a witness of doubtful veracity. If a prisoner has confessed before a magistrate, the attention of the jury should be

(1) Taylor Ev, § 161

(2) Lalla Sheopershad v Juggernath 10 Ind Ap 74 79 13 C L R 271

(3) Taylor Ev § 861

(4) R v Simonato 1 C & K 164 166 see notes to s 31 post

(5) Taylor, Ev § 862

(6) Id, § 865, v ante Introduction See as to the degree of credit to be given to confessions Roseoe Cr 1 v 13th Ed 35, 36, 1 Phillips & Arn Ev 402 10th Ed, R v Dada Ana, 15 B at p 480 (1889)

(7) Emperor v Pramañanath Pagchi 30 C L J 503 as to whether statement suggesting inference of guilt was confession

see Pan Gang v Emperor 19 Cr L J 42 A statement which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making it may directly repudiate his participation in the crime Jasoda v Emperor 53 I C 691

(8) Smith v Emperor 19 Cr L J 189

(9) Hasnu v Emperor, 20 Cr L J 737 s c 53 I C, 145

(10) Th Foong v Emperor 22 C W N 234 s c 24 Cr L J 105

(11) Kammar v Emperor 19 Cr L J 785 s c 40 I C 705

(12) R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461, 478 1880 R v Mura Davul 10 B, 49 502 1886 drawn to the question whether there was any reason to suppose that that confession was made under any undue influence, and if there is no reason to suppose anything of the kind, the jury should be told so and advised that they may act upon it. (1) The infirmative hypotheses affecting self-criminative evidence have been in particular dealt with in the works of Bentham and Best. (2) False confessions are either the result of mistake (which may be of fact or of law) or are intentional. In the case of intentionally false confession the field of motive must be searched for such causes as mental and bodily torture, desire to stifle further inquiry, weariness of life, vanity, desire to benefit or injure others, and motives originating in the relation of the sexes. False confessions are not confined to cases in which there has really been a crime committed. From entire abnegation of guilt, or from a desire to protect another, a confession may be made.

language used and incompleteness of the statement (3)

Admission defined

17 An admission is a statement, oral or documentary, which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons, and under the circumstances, hereinafter mentioned

Admission by party to proceeding or his agent

18 Statements made by a party to the proceeding, or by an agent to any such party, whom the Court regards, under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them, are admissions

By suitor in representative character

Statements made by parties to suits, suing or sued in a representative character, are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character,

Statements made by—

By party interested in subject matter

(1) Persons who have any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject matter of the proceeding, and who make the statement in their character of persons so interested, or

By person from whom interest derived

(2) Persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject matter of the suit, are admissions, if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements

Admission by person whose position must be proved as against party to suit

19 Statements made by persons whose position or liability it is necessary to prove as against any party to the suit, are admissions, if such statements would be relevant as against such persons in relation to such position or liability in a suit brought by or against them, and if they are made whilst the person making them occupies such position or is subject to such liability.

(1) R v Shahabul Sheikh 13 W R, 155 161
Cr 47 43 (1870) per Norman C J
(2) Best Ev §§ 554—573, Norton.

Illustration.

A undertakes to collect rents for B

B sues A for not collecting rent due from C to B

A denies that rent was due from C to B

A statement by C that he owed B rent is an admission, and is a relevant fact as against A, if A denies that C did owe rent to B

20 Statements made by persons to whom a party to the suit has expressly referred for information in reference to a matter in dispute are admissions

Admissions by person expressly referred to by party to suit

Illustration

The question is, whether a horse sold by A to B is sound.

A says to B— Go and ask C, C knows all about it. C's statement is an admission

Principle.—The reception of admissions considered as exceptions to the rule against hearsay is grounded upon the fact that what a person says may be presumed to be true as against himself and when not obnoxious to that rule upon the fact of inconsistency. But the very ground of this presumption excludes such an inference when the declarations of a person are tendered as

When broadly stated in such a manner as to include these exceptions, the rule is that the declarations of a party to the record, or of one identified in interest with him, are as against such party receivable in evidence (3). This identity of interest which determines the relevancy of the admission includes (a) agency (4), (b) proprietary or pecuniary interest (5), which includes (a) joint interest (6), (b) real as opposed to personal interest (7), (c) derivative interest (8). Statements by strangers are not generally relevant (9). But to this general rule also there are certain exceptions (10). In respect of the admissions of one to the general principle applies qui facit per the agent with the principal, tative in a certain transaction, of that transaction is the act of the principal (11). Agency is the ground of reception of declarations by partners and joint contractors and referees (12). In respect of declarations by persons having a proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject matter the rule in respect of joint interest is that the admission of one party may be given in evidence against another, when the party against whom the admission is sought to be read has a joint interest with the party thing to which the admission Court where the plea for had asked him before the institution of the suit to arrange a settlement this was held admissible against

(1) Best Ev. § 519. Walls Ev. 103 but see also Taylor Ev. § 723 & ante Introduction and s. 21 post

(2) In re Hutchins v. L. R. 1 Ch. (1891) 558 563 564. Stanton v. Percival 5 H. L. Cas. 273

(3) Taylor Ev. § 740

(4) Ss. 18, 20 see post

(5) S. 18 cl. (1) see post

(6) See p. 196 post

(7) See post

(8) S. 18, cl. (2) see post

(9) Steph. Dig. Art. 18. Taylor Ev. § 40 see post

(10) Taylor Ev. §§ 749—763 see post and s. 19

(11) Taylor Ev. s. 602. Best Ev. § 531 see post. As to admissions by agents see the judgment of Sir W. Grant in Fairlie v. Hastings 10 Vessey J. 123

(12) See post and Introduction ante

(13) In re Hutchins v. L. R. 1 Ch. (1891), s. c. 563. Chakro Singh v. Jharko Singh 39 C. 595 (1912)

all the defendants (1). This rule depends upon the legal principle that persons joined jointly are seized of the whole, each being seized of the whole the admission of either is the admission of the other and may be produced in evidence against that other. That is applied from real property law to other matters (2). In the case of parties who have a real and opposed to a nominal interest the law in regard to this source of evidence looks chiefly to the real parties in interest, and gives to their admissions the same weight as though they were parties to the record (3). Lastly, in the case of derivative interest the party against whom the admission is sought to be used takes what he claims in the subject matter from the person who made the admission as where it is sought to read against the heir an admission made by the ancestor. The ground upon which admissions bind those in privity with the party making them is (as in the case of the other above mentioned exceptions) that they are identified in interest (4). "He (the person against whom the admission is read) stands in the shoes of the party making the admission. He can only claim what he claims because he derives title in that way, and therefore it is only fair according to legal principles, that he should be bound by the admissions of him through whom he claims" (5).

s. 3 ("Document")

s. 3 ("Fact in issue")

s. 3 ("Relevant fact") ss. 22, 65, cl. (b) (Admissions as to documents) s. 21 (Proof of admissions)

s. 31 (Effect of admissions)

s. 23 (Admissions "without prejudice")

ss. 24-30 (Rules with regard to admissions which do not to confessions)

Admissions generally—*Steyl Dig. Arts 15—20 Taylor 1 v. § 723—801, Whart. n. 1 v. 1075—120; Rose v. N. 1 v. 62—70 Shipman 1 v. 213—210; Wills, 1 v. 2nd Ed. 140—170; Best, 1 v. §§ 618 et seq. 1 well 1 v. 420—415; Norton, 1 v. 142—161; Gressley, 1 v. 469; 11 Wills & Art. 1 v. 709—401 Greenleaf 1 v. Ch. VI Wigmore, § 1018, et seq. By agents—*Steyl Dig. Art 17 Taylor 1 v. § 602 605, Rose, N. 1 v. 60—71; Best 1 v. § 631 § 487 Evans Principal and Agent 187—193 2nd Ed. Norton 1 v. 144; 1 case on a Law of Agency in British India 40—428; 1 well 1 v. 200; Story on Agency, §§ 174, 135; Rose Cr. 1 v. 13th Ed. 47 Wigmore 1 v. § 1078. By persons having proprietary or pecuniary interest—*Steyl Dig. Arts 16 17; Taylor, 1 v. §§ 743—751 787, 766—768; Rose N. 1 v. 67; Art. 1 v. (1804) (Initials) s. 21. By persons from whom interest is derived—*Steyl Dig. Art 10 Taylor 1 v. §§ 787—791 755 90. By stranger—*Steyl Dig. Art. 18; Taylor 1 v. §§ 710, 720—763. By referees—*Steyl Dig. Art 19; Taylor 1 v. §§ 760—763.***

COMMENTARY.

Parties As to admissions by parties (when sued or suing personally) made when a minor, or when holding a representative character vide p. 220 and as to nominal parties, guardians and next friends, vide post, admissions may be made by parties at any time (6), and either in a present or past (7) litigation. It is not

(1) Mojan Mathar v. Almeida 44 C. 130 (1917) per Santhana C. J. & Mookerjee J.

(2) In re Hillley per Kekewich J. The declarations of partners and joint contractors are admissible both on the ground of joint interest and of agency Taylor 1 v. §§ 598 743 Steyl. Dig. Art 17 see post.

(3) Taylor 1 v. § 756 see post.

(4) Id. § 787.

(5) In re Hillley L. R. 1 Ch. (1871) 558 see per Kekewich J.

(6) Unless the admission is one made by a person suing or sued in a representative character in which case it is not made by the person making it sustains that character ante and see Steyl. Dig. Art 16 ante Introduction.

(7) Hurish Chunder v. Irosmo 22 W. R. 303 (1874) Odho C. and v. Deeloy 9 W. R. 162 (1879) Sheo Nuen v. Kam Ahlanon 14 W. R. 165 (1870) Crish Chunder v. Shana Churn 15 W. R. 417 (1871) Bhugnan Chunder v. Mechoa 17 W.

necessary that the prior litigation should have been between the same parties and in this respect a distinction must be drawn between statements admissible under the present sections, and those admissible under the thirty third section, post. And so it was held that the deposition of a person in a suit to which he was not a party, was, in a subsequent suit in which he was defendant, evidence against him and those who claimed under or purchased from him although he was alive and had not been called as a witness. The thirty third section (post) did not apply to such a deposition which was admissible under the present section although it might have been shown that the facts were different from what they were stated to be in the former case (1). And an admission by a jagirdar, in a suit brought by Government to assess the lands, that the lands were comprised in a zemindari, is evidence of that fact in a suit by the zemindar to resume those lands (2). Admissions by the parties in a former arbitration may be used in evidence in a subsequent suit (3). The section settles a point which appears to be (4). Therefore, where parties sue or are sued in a assignees of an insolvent (5), executors, administrators, statements made by them before they were clothed with that character will not be admissible against them so as to affect the interest of the persons they represent (6). Thus the declarations of a party suing as assignee of a bankrupt The admissions of the donor (8) admission by parties of the deceased (9)

The representative capacity of a person who represents a minor comes to an end by the death of that minor (10). In respect of co-representatives it seems that the admission of one executor will not bind another, at any rate, if the admission was not made in the character of executor (11). The admissions of an executor are not receivable against an administrator appointed during the absence of the executor (12). Where one of several trustees had admitted that he had money of the trust estate in his hands, and it was submitted that this admission of one of them bound the rest, it was held that it would, if they were all personally liable, but not where they were only trustees (13). Under the

R 372 (1872) Kashee Kishore v Bama Seondaree 23 W R 27 (1875) Forbes v Mir Mahomed Taki 5 B L R 529 (1870) 14 W R (P C) 28 13 M I A 438 see also cases cited ante p 221. In a suit by A and B parties not entitled to the property of a deceased Hindu as his heirs against C and D an admission by the person legally entitled to the property made in a petition filed in the suit that by her gift or relinquishment plaintiffs had a title to the property was held to be evidence that such title existed anterior or to the commencement of the suit (our Lall v Molesh Naran 14 W R 484 (1871))

(1) Soojan Bibee v Achmut Ali, 14 B I R App 3 (1874) 21 W R 414
(2) Forbes v Mir Mahomed Taki supra.
(3) Huronath v Freonath 7 W R 249 (1867) and admissions made before an arbitrator are receivable in a subsequent trial of the cause the reference having proved ineffectual (Gregory v Howard 3 Esp. 113 Slack v Buchanan Pea P. 5)
(4) Taylor Ev, § 755 Steph Dig.

(5) Merely to speak of the "plaintiff assignee" is not an admission of the claimant's title as assignee Clarke v Mullick 2 M I A 263 269 (1839)

(6) S 18 ante Legge v Edmunds 25 L J Ch 125 140 141

(7) Fenwick v Thornton 1 M & M. 51 see Taylor Ev § 755

(8) Dwarkanath Bose v Chundee Churn 1 W R 339 (1865)

(9) Chunder Kant v Ramnaram Dey 8 W R 63 (1867)

(10) Hulodhur Roy v Jupoo Nath 14 W R 162 (1870)

(11) Chunder Kant v J Dry 8 W R 63 (1867), and see Lock v Dunn Ry & M., 416, Sc on 12 M & W 513 54, Fair 12 A & E., 43 Taylor Ev 12 of 1908 s 21 (Indian))
Williams on Executors, 1

(12) Rush v Pea
(13) Davis v R

Skaffe v Jac
it is also is not eighteenth and twenty-first sections the admissions of a person accused in criminal proceedings will be receivable. But in England it appears to be doubtful whether in any case a prosecutor in an indictment is a party to the inquiry in such a sense as that an admission by him could be received in evidence to prove facts for the defence. Of course this does not refer to the admission of facts which would go to his reputation for credibility as a witness in the case, these may always and under all circumstances be proved by the admission of the witness himself (1).

Co-defendants

than his own share in property (4).

made by one defendant cannot be read in evidence, either for or against his co-defendant: neither can the answers to interrogatories of one defendant be read in evidence, except against himself, the reason being that, as there is no issue between the defendants, no opportunity can have been afforded for cross examination, and moreover, if such a course were allowed, the plaintiff might make one of his friends a defendant and thus gain a most unfair advantage. But this rule does not apply to cases where the other defendant claims through the party whose defence is offered in evidence not to cases where they have a joint interest, either as partners or otherwise in the transaction. Wherever the admission of one party would be good evidence against another party, the defence of the former may a fortiori be read against the latter (5). Similarly, the admissions or confessions of a respondent are not admissible evidence against a co-respondent (6) nor a fortiori against the petitioner (7). Nor are those of parties engaged in a joint tort, or joint crime, receivable against each other, except to the limited extent, and under the circumstances, in the tenth section (ante), mentioned.

Agents

He who sets another person to do an act in his stead as agent is chargeable by such acts as are done under that authority and so too properly is affected acknowledgment that the money has been paid. But a receipt may operate as a waiver. Kolas Chandra Nath v. Sheikh Chitenu 42 C 546 (1915).

(1) Roscoe Cr. Ev. 12th Ed. 47; see R v. Ariall 8 Cox 439 and note in 3 Russ. Cr. 489. As to whether the admissions of an accused may be used for purely probative purposes that is to relieve the prosecutor of the proof of facts essential to his case see R v. Flaherty 2 C & K 782 which was a bigamy case: it was held that an admission of the first marriage by the prisoner made to a constable was some though not sufficient evidence of the marriage and in R v. Savage 13 Cox 178 a similar case (overruling R v. Newton 2 W & Rob. 503) an admission by the prisoner was tendered to prove the first marriage but was rejected. ante Introduction. As to admissions on the purpose of the trial see s. 58 post.

(2) In re Whiteley L. R. 1 Ch. (1891) 558.

(3) Amritolal Bose v. Rajoneekant Mitter 15 B. L. R. 10 26 (1874), 23 W.

in can only be given in evidence against other party (2). An admission or even oral defendants in a suit, is no evidence fundamental proposition that a plaintiff and that no defendant can, by an ad delegate the authority to one, for more

In general, the statement of defence made by one defendant cannot be read in evidence, either for or against his co-defendant: neither can the answers to interrogatories of one defendant be read in evidence, except against himself, the reason being that, as there is no issue between the defendants, no opportunity can have been afforded for cross examination, and moreover, if such a course were allowed, the plaintiff might make one of his friends a defendant and thus gain a most unfair advantage. But this rule does not apply to cases where the other defendant claims through the party whose defence is offered in evidence not to cases where they have a joint interest, either as partners or otherwise in the transaction. Wherever the admission of one party would be good evidence against another party, the defence of the former may a fortiori be read against the latter (5). Similarly, the admissions or confessions of a respondent are not admissible evidence against a co-respondent (6) nor a fortiori against the petitioner (7). Nor are those of parties engaged in a joint tort, or joint crime, receivable against each other, except to the limited extent, and under the circumstances, in the tenth section (ante), mentioned.

(4) Asiullah Khan v. Ahmad Ali supra (5) Taylor Ev. § 754 and cases there cited but as to cross examination by defendant of co-defendant see s. 137 post, as to admissions by co-defendants who are joint tenants or joint contractors see Chundereshwar Narain v. Chuni Ahir 9 C. L. R. 359 (1881) Kousullah Sundari v. Mukta Sundari 11 C. 588 (1855) and post.

(6) Robinson v. Robinson 1 S. & T. 363 see also Hay v. Gordon 10 B. L. R. 30 and see post as to the effect of

(7) Robinson v. Robinson 1 S. & T. 363 see also Hay v. Gordon 10 B. L. R. 30 and see post as to the effect of by admissions made by the agent in the course of exercising that authority. The question, therefore, turns upon the scope of the authority. This question frequently enough a difficult one, depends upon the doctrine of agency applied to the circumstances of the case and not upon any rule of evidence (1). The principle upon which admissions of an agent, within the scope of his authority, are permitted to be proved is that such admissions, as well as his acts, are considered as the acts or admissions of the principal. What is said or done by an agent is said or done by the principal through him, as his mere instrument (2). A statement, therefore by an agent, whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case as expressly or impliedly authorized to make it, is admissible though not on oath (3).

Before the admissions of an agent can be received the fact of his agency must be proved. This can be done by proving that the agent has acquired credit by acting in that capacity and that he has been recognised by the principal in other instances of a similar character to that in question (4). A person either may expressly constitute another his agent to make an admission thus if a person agree to admit a claim provided J S will make an affidavit in support of it, such affidavit is proof against him (5) or he may authorize another to represent him in a particular business when admissions made by that other within the scope of his authority in the ordinary course of and with reference to, such business will be evidence against him. When the principal constitutes the agent as his representative in the transaction of certain business what ever the agent does in the lawful prosecution of that business is the act of the principal (6). Where the acts of the agent will bind the principal then his representations, declarations and admissions, respecting the subject matter will also bind him, if made at the same time and constituting part of the res gesta (7). The admission must be one having reference to the subject-matter of the agency (8). So whatever is said by an agent, either in the making of a contract for his principal, or at the time and accompanying the performance of any act, within the scope of his authority having relation to and connected with and in the course of the particular contract or transaction in which he is then engaged is, in legal effect, said by his principal and admissible in evidence (9). "The representation, declaration, or

(1) Wigmore Ev § 1078

(2) Franklin Bank v Pennsylvania D & M S N Co 11 G & J 28 33 (Amer)

(3) Govindji Jhavar v Chotalal Velji 2 Bom L R 651 (1900)

(4) Roscoe N P Ev 71, Evans's Principal and Agent 192 Hatkins v Vince 2 Stark 368 Courteen v Touse 1 Camp 43n Neal v Erving 1 Esp 61. See as to proof of agency Ram Buks v Kishori Mohun 3 B L R A C J 273 (1869)

(5) Lloyd v Hallan 1 Esp 178, Stevens v Thacker, Peake 187 Roscoe N P Ev 69, see s 20 ante and note on "Referees"

(6) Taylor Fv § 602 and see generally ib §§ 602—605 Wills Ev 2nd Ed, 161, Steph Dig Art 17 Roscoe v P Ev 69—71 Powell Fv 290 Pearson v Law of Agency in British India 476—428, Evans's Principal and Agent 18—193 Best, Fv p 487 Norton Fv 144 as to the acts contracts and representations of the agent which are original evidence and receivable for as well as against his principal v ante Introduction

(7) Story on Agency § 134 "res gesta" here means the business regarding which the law identifies the principal and agent and must not be taken to import that the declarations must form a part of the res gesta in the evidentiary sense of that term it has been said that the declarations of an agent are not receivable as to bygone transactions see Evans supra 189 citing Great Western Railway Company v Hallis 18 C & B N 748 Fairlie v Hastings 10 Ves 128, Kahl v Jansen 4 Taunt 565, see also Pearson supra 427 but this is misleading for so long as the representations are made concerning the principal's business and in the ordinary course of it it is immaterial if they relate to past or present events Phipson Ev, 5th Ed 232 citing Prof Thayer in the Irish Law Times, Feb 19 1881

(8) See P supra and cases there cited

(9) Per n C J in Franklin Bank v D & M S N Co, 11 33 (Amer), Ev § 1

admission of the agent does not bind the principal, if it is not made at the very time of the contract, but upon another occasion, or if it does not concern the subject matter of the contract but some other matter, in no degree belonging to the res gestæ" (1) It does not follow that a statement made by an agent is an admission merely because, if made by the principal himself, it would have been one, for the admission of an agent cannot always be assimilated to the admission of the principal (2) "The party's own admission, whenever made, may be given in evidence against him, but the admission or declaration of his agent"

continuance of the agency in regard to the opus When the agent's right the principal can no longer be affected by his declarations any more than by his acts, but they will be rejected in such case as mere hearsay" (3) Therefore admissions by an agent of his own authority and not accompanying the making of a contract or the doing of an act on behalf of his principal, nor made at the time he is engaged in the transaction to which they refer, are not binding upon his principal, not being part of the res gestæ, and are not admissible in evidence, but come within the rule excluding hearsay, being but an account or statement by an agent of what has passed or been done or omitted to be done—not a part of the transaction, but only statements or admissions respecting it (4) The words of the eighteenth section (ante) "whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them," leave it open to the Courts to deal with each case that arises upon its own merits (5), having regard to the law of agency applicable and the particular facts of each case But it is apprehended that the Courts will, in down by the ons are receiv-hem (7) As an or admissions

they fall within the nature of his employment as such agent (8) Account books, though proved not to have been regularly kept in the course of business, but proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, are relevant as admissions against the firm The fact, however, that the books had not been regularly kept might be a good reason for

(1) Story on Agency § 135

(2) Steph Dig Art 17 Taylor Ev, § 602

(3) Taylor, Ev ib, and cases there cited the authority to make admissions is at once put an end to by the determination of the agency whether or no such determination has been properly brought about Kalee Churn v Bengal Coal Co 21 W R 405

(4) Franklin Bank v Pennsylvania supra narratives of explaining or admitting a past act are not admissible even though the agency continue unless the agent be empowered to speak for his principal at the time Wharton Cr Ev p 594n For instance an agent might be specially sent to make a statement on behalf of his principal as to what had occurred

(5) Field, Ev 6th Ed 87, 88 "The point to be regarded in this clause is not only the establishment of an agency as to which the Court must be satisfied but that there was authority given sufficient to cover the particular statement relied on as admissions Norton Ev 144

(6) v post remarks of Tindal, C. J., in Garth v Howard 8 Bing 451

(7) Taylor Ev § 602 Evans supra 168 169 if the statements of the agent are admissible the statements of the agent's interpreter acting as such in the agent's presence are admissible without calling the interpreter and it must be assumed as against the principal that the interpreter interpreted faithfully Reid v Hoskins 26 L J Q B 5 5 E & B 729, admissions which consist of hearsay evidence are not receivable against the principal Kahl v Jansen 4 Taunt 565

(8) Garth v Howard 8 Bing, 451, see Venkataramanna v Chavela Atchayamma 6 Mad H C R 127 (1871) as illustrations of the admission and rejection of statements upon this principle see The Kirkstall Brewery Company v The Furness Railway Company L R, 9 Q B, 463, 43 L J Q B, 142, Garth v Howard, supra

rejecting the account, if offered in evidence against any person other than the contractor or his partners (1) It is of course open to the contractor or any of his partners to show that the entries have been made after such a fashion that no reliance can be placed upon them, but if made by a clerk of the firm, they are relevant (2) An agent's reports to his principal are not, in general, receivable against the latter in favour of third persons, as admissions (3) Thus letters account of the the principal (4) ers of the latter were held admissible as explanatory of the statements of the former (5) As the declarations of an agent are admissible on the ground of the legal identity of the agent with the principal the declarations and acts of an agent cannot bind an infant, because the latter cannot appoint an agent (6) Evidence may be given against companies, of admissions made by their directors or agents relating to matters within the scope of their authority (7) Thus a letter written by the secretary of a company by order of the acting directors (8), stating the number of shares held by M, was admitted on behalf of his executors in proceedings against them (9) But the confidential reports of directors to a meeting of the shareholders (10), admissions at a board meeting of less than the requisite number of members (11) have been held not to be receivable The manager of a banking company may make admissions against the bank as to its practice, in making loans to customers (12) As to admissions by servant of companies see cases noted below (13) The admissions of a surveyor of a corporation, respecting a house belonging to the corporation, are evidence against the latter in an action for an injury to the plaintiff's house by work done on the defendant's premises (14), but the report of a surveyor to the corporation as to the value of lands about to be purchased by it, is not evidence, either of the truth of the facts or to explain the resolutions or letters of the corporation as to the receipt of shop goods) of a shopman are evidence against his master but not his admissions as to a transaction outside the usual business (17) An admission by a person who has generally managed A's landed property and received

(1) R v Hanman 1 B 610 617 (1877) See s 34 post and notes thereon

(2) Ib

(3) Steph Dig Art 17 Langhorn v Allnutt 4 Taunt 511 Re De ala Co L R 22 Ch D 593 Cooper v Metro Police Board of Works 25 Ch D 472 Kahl v Jansen 4 Taunt 565 Rayner v Pearson ib 662 Beitham v Benson Gow 45 Fairlie v Hastings 18 Ves 123 though see contra Solway 10 P D 137 see Phipson Ex 5th Ed 233 Roscoe N P Ex 70 Evans supra 190

(4) Langhorn v Allnutt supra

(5) Coates v Bainbridge 5 Bing 58

(6) Taylor, F v § 605 and v ante Introduction

(7) Roscoe N P Ex 70 Lindley Company 181

(8) But unless acting under the express order of the directors the secretary of a company cannot make admissions against the company even as to the receipt of a letter Bruff v Great N Ry Co, 1 F & F 345, see also Burnside v Dayrell, 3 Exch 225, Roscoe N P Ex, 70, 71

(9) Meux Executor's case 2 D M & G 522

(10) Re De ala Co 22 Ch D 593 v ante

(11) Ridley v Plymouth Baking Co 2 Exch 711

(12) Swimons v London Joint Stock Bank (1892) A C 701

(13) Kirkstall Brewery Co v Furness Ry Co L R 9 Q B 468 Gr II Ry Co v Willis 18 C B N S 748 Mayhew v Nelson 6 C & P 58 Stiles v Cardiff S Navigation Co 33 L J Q B 310 Agassiz v London Tram Co 27 L T 492

(14) Paxton v St Thomas Hospital 3 M & R 675n

(15) Cooper v Met Board of Works 25 Ch D 5472 supra v ante

(16) Loughboro Highway Board v Curzon 55 L T, 50

(17) Garth v Howard 2 Bing, 451, Schwaback v Lock 10 B, Mon, 39, and see Clifford v Burton 1 Bing, 197, Meredith v Footner, supra Roscoe N P Ex, 70 72

admission of the agent does not bind the principal, if it is not made at the very time of the contract, but upon another occasion, or if it does not concern the subject matter of the contract but some other matter, in no degree belonging to the res gesta"(1) It does not follow that a statement made by an agent is an admission merely because if made by the principal himself, it would have been one, for the admission of an agent cannot always be assimilated to the admission of the principal (2) "The party's own admission, whenever made, may be given in evidence against him, but the admission or declaration of his agent binds him only when it is made during the continuance of"

then depending, et dum ferretur opus While particular matter has ceased, the principal declarations any more than by his acts, but they will be rejected in such case as mere hearsay"(3) There fore admissions by an agent of his own authority and not accompanying the his principal, nor made refer, are not binding are not admissible in being but an account

or statement by an agent of what has passed or been done or omitted to be done—not a part of the transaction but only statements or admissions respecting it (4) The words of the eighteenth section (ante) "whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them," leave it open to the Courts to deal with each case that arises upon its own merits(5), having regard to the law of agency applicable and the particular facts of each case But it is apprehended that the Courts will, in the application of this section, be guided by the principles laid down by the English and American cases and text writers (6) The admissions are receivable in evidence without calling the agent himself to prove them (7) As an agent can only act within the scope of his authority, declarations or admissions made by him as to a particular fact are not admissible unless they fall within the nature of his employment as such agent (8) Account books though proved not to have been regularly kept in the course of business but proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, are relevant as admissions against the firm The fact, however, that the books had not been regularly kept might be a good reason for

(1) Story on Agency § 135

(2) Steph Dig Art 17 Taylor Ev § 602

(3) Taylor Ev 16 and cases there cited the authority to make admissions is at once put an end to by the determination of the agency whether or no such determination has been properly brought about Kalee Churn v Bengal Coal Co 21 W R 405

(4) Franklin Bank v Pennsylvania supra narratives of explaining or admitting a past act are not admissible even

.. .
 .. .

principal as to what had occurred

(5) Field Ev 6th Ed 87 88 "The point to be regarded in this clause is not only the establishment of an agency as to which the Court must be satisfied but that there was authority given sufficient to cover the particular statement relied

on as admissions Norton Ev 144

(6) v post remarks of Tindal, C J. in Garth v Howard 8 Bing 451

(7) Taylor Ev § 602 Evans supra 188 189 if the statements of the agent are admissible the statements of the agent's interpreter acting as such in the agent's presence are admissible without calling the interpreter and it must be assumed as against the principal that the interpreter interpreted faithfully Reid v Hoskins 26 L J Q B 5 5 E & B 729, admissions which consist of hearsay evidence are not receivable against the principal Kall v Janson 4 Taunt 565

(8) Garth v Howard 8 Bing 451, see Venkatarajanna v Chavala Aichiyamma 6 Mad H C R 127 (1871) as illustrations of the admission and rejection of statements upon this principle see The Kirkstall Brewery Company v The Furness Railway Company L R 9 Q B 468 43 L J Q B 142, Garth v Howard supra

rejecting the account, if offered in evidence against any person other than the contractor or his partners (1) It is of course open to the contractor or any of his partners to show that the entries have been made after such a fashion that no reliance can be placed upon them, but if made by a clerk of the firm, they are relevant (2) An agent's reports to his principal are not, in general, receivable against the latter in favour of third persons, as admissions (3) Thus letters account of the the principal (4) ers of the latter

were held admissions as explanatory of the statements of the former (5) As the declarations of an agent are admissible on the ground of the legal identity of the agent with the principal the declarations and acts of an agent cannot bind an infant because the latter cannot appoint an agent (6) Evidence may be given against companies, of admissions made by their directors or agents relating to matters within the scope of their authority (7) Thus a letter written by the secretary of a company by order of the acting directors (8), stating the number of shares held by M, was admitted on behalf of his executors in proceedings against them (9) But the confidential reports of directors to a meeting of the shareholders (10), admissions at a board meeting of less than the requisite number of members (11) have been held not to be receivable The manager of a banking company may make admissions against the bank as to its practice, in making loans to customers (12) As to admissions by servant of companies see cases noted below (13) The admissions of a surveyor of a corporation respecting a house belonging to the corporation, are evidence against the latter in an action for an injury to the plaintiff's house by work done on the defendant's premises (14), but the report of a surveyor to the corporation as to the value of lands about to be purchased by it, is not evidence, either of the truth of the facts or to explain the resolutions or letters of the corporation as to the receipt of shop goods) of a shopman are evidence against his master, but not his admissions as to a transaction outside the usual business (17) An admission by a person who has generally managed A's landed property, and received

(1) R v Hanman 1 B 610 617 (1877) See s 34 post and not s thereto

(2) Id

(3) Steph Dig Art 17 Langhorn v Allnutt 4 Taunt 511 Re Detala Co L R 22 Ch D 593 Cooper v Metropolitan Board of Works 25 Ch D 472 Kahl v Jansen 4 Taunt 565 Rayner v Pearson 1b 662 Betham v Benson Gow 45 Fairlie v Hastings 10 Ves 123 though see contra Soltau 10 P D 137 see Phipson Ev 5th Ed 233 Roscoe N P Ev 70 Evans supra 190

(4) Langhorn v Allnutt supra

(5) Coates v Bainbridge 5 Bing 58

(6) Taylor Ev § 605 and v ante Introduction

(7) Roscoe N P Ev 70 Lindley Company Law 183

(8) But unless acting under the express order of the directors the secretary of a company cannot make admissions against the company even as to the receipt of a letter Bruff v Great N Ry Co 1 F & F 345 see also Burnside v Dayrell, 3 Exch 225, Roscoe N P Ev, 70, 71

(9) Meux Executor's case 2 D M & G 522

(10) Re Detala Co 22 Ch D 593 v ante

(11) Ridley v Plymouth Baking Co 2 Exch 711

(12) Simmons v London Joint Stock Bank (1892) A C 201

(13) Kirkstall Brewery Co v Furness & Co L R 9 Q B 468 Gi B Ry Co v Hillis 18 C B N S 748 Mayhew v Nelson 6 C & P 58 Silis v Cardiff S Navigation Co 33 L J Q B 310 Agassiz v London Tram Co 27 L T 492

(14) Paxton v St Thomas Hospital 3 M & Ry 625n

(15) Cooper v Met Board of Works 25 Ch D 5 472 supra v ante

(16) Loughboro' Highway Board v Curzon 35 L T 50

(17) Garth v Howard 8 Bing 451, Schumack v Lock 10 B, Moo., 39, and see Chifford v Burton 1 Bing 199, Meredith v Footner, supra, Roscoe N P Ev, 70, 72

his rents, is not evidence against A, as to his employer's title, there being no other proof of his agency ad hoc (1) As to admissions made by partners and joint contractors, v post

The manager of a joint Hindu family, or karta, is the agent for the other members, and is supposed to have their authority to do all acts for their common benefit in the absence of the family (3) If the parties suing were minors during the period for which the accounts are asked (4) In respect of the admission of debts he may acknowledge, as he may create, debts on behalf of the family, but he has no power to revive a claim barred by limitation unless expressly authorised to do so (5)

The admissions of a wife merely as such cannot affect her husband. They will only bind him where she had expressed or implied authority from him to make them. Whether she had such authority or not, is a question of fact to be found by the Court, as in the other cases of agency. The cases on this subject are mostly those of implied authority, turning upon the degree in which the husband permitted the wife to participate either in the transaction of his affairs in general, or in the particular matter in question (6)

It has been already observed (7) that certain rules of admissibility are applicable in criminal cases only, but this is because the issues arise in criminal cases only, but in general the rules of admissibility are the same for the trial of civil and criminal causes. Conformably to this general doctrine the admissions of an agent may be equally received in a criminal charge against the principal. But it is a totally different question in the consideration of criminal as distinguished from civil justice how the person on trial may be affected by the fact when so established. It might involve him civilly and yet be not sufficient to convict him of a crime. Whether the fact thus admitted by the agent would suffice to charge the principal criminally without his personal knowledge or by agents in criminal cases

Admissions

(1) Ley v Peter 3 H & N 101 27 L J Ex 239 and generally as to admissions see Roscoe N P Ev 62 et seq as to admissions by ships officers see Phipson v Fy 5th Ed 238

(2) Kota Ramasami v Bangari Seshama 3 M 145 150 (1881) in which case it is also pointed out that the position of a Polygar differs from that of a manager of a Hindu family see also as to the karta and his relations to adult and minor members Chuckun Lall v Poran Chunder 9 W R 483 (1868) Obhoy Chunder v Pearce Mahun 1 W R F B 75 (1870) Gopalnarain v Muddomutti 14 B L R 21 32 (1874) [Silence evidence of ratification of acts of karta] Succaram Morari v Kaldas Kahani 18 B 631 (1894) [widow manager] Chakaji Shridhar v Vishnu Bobaji 15 534 (1893) [The manager must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of his powers]

(3) Jagan Nath v Mannu Lall 16 A 231 233 (1894)

(4) Obhoy Chunder v Pearce Mahun supra

(5) Chinnaya Nazudu v Gurnagham 5 M 169 T B (1881) [overruling Kumara Sami v Pala Nagappa 1 M 385

(1878) Kondappa v Subba 13 M 189 (1889) Bhasker Taiya v Vajalath Nethu 17 B 512 (1892) Gopalnarain v Moddomutti 14 B L R 21 49 (1874) followed in Dinkar v Appaji 20 B 155 (1874) The manager of a joint Hindu family or the executor of a Hindu will has no power by acknowledgment to revive a debt barred by law of limitation except as against himself] Shobanadri Appa v Srirangulu 17 M 221 (1893)

(6) See generally Taylor Ev, §§ 766—771 Roscoe N P Ev 22 Powell Ev 299 see judgment of Alderson B. in Meredith v Foote 11 M & W, 202 as to wife carrying on business see Taylor Ev § 605 and as to admissions in matrimonial causes which differ in some respects from ordinary non prors causes in so far as in the former the interests of public morality are concerned Plumer v Pitt 4 S & T 263 15 768 769

(7) And see Wigmore Ev § 4 where the learned author observes that this is the more worth emphasizing because the occasional appearance in works on the law of the title Criminal Evidence has tended to foster the fallacy that there are some separate groups of rules or some large number of modifications connivance would depend upon the particular rule of criminal law and not of evidence involved (1) Thus it has been said that —“An admission by an agent is never evidence in criminal, as it is sometimes in civil cases, in the sense in which an admission by a party himself is evidence. An admission by the party himself is in all cases the best evidence which can be produced, and supersedes the necessity for all further proof, and in civil cases the rule is carried still further, for the admission of an agent made in the course of his employment, and in accordance with his duty, is as binding upon the principal as an admission made by himself. But this has never been extended to criminal cases. Thus, in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor, it is not sufficient to show that such letter was written in consequence of an interview, but it must be shown that it was written in pursuance of instructions of the client (2) Where personal knowledge and authority are shown the admissions will be receivable. Hence the declarations of a messenger sent to a third party by the prisoner, if made with reference to the object of the mission, are admissible in evidence against him, where the evidence shows they were made by his authority (3) If in other cases the evidence is not admitted it is because in those cases the criminal law requires evidence of personal knowledge and authority of and in respect of the particular act charged before criminal liability can be established. This, however, is a matter of substantive law which may admit of real or apparent exceptions, as in the case of a newspaper proprietor who is prima facie criminally responsible for any libel it contains, though inserted by his agent or servant without his knowledge (4) Where a party is charged with the commission of an offence through the instrumentality of an agent, then it becomes necessary to prove the acts of the agent, and in some cases, as where the agent is dead, the agent's admission is the best evidence of those acts which can be produced. Thus on the impeachment of Lord Melville by the House of Lords (5), it was decided that a receipt given in the regular and official form by Mr. Douglas who was proved to have been appointed by Lord Melville to be his attorney to transact the business of his office as treasurer of the Navy, and to receive all necessary sums of money in the ordinary course of business” (6) as admis-

a person
a certain

A vakil in this country has not ordinarily any greater power to bind his client than that which is possessed by an attorney in England (7) An attorney employed in a matter of business is not an agent to make admissions for his client, except after action commenced, and in matters relating to that action (8) An admission made before action will, however, of course, affect the client if

Pleaders
Solicitors
Counsel

(1) Wigmore Ev § 1078

(2) R v. Dwyer, 14 Cox C C 486

(3) Browning v. State 33 Miss 48

(4) Wharton Cr Ev § 175

(5) Wharton Cr Ev p 595 Lord Tenterden however considered this case as falling within the general rule. It has been argued generally that to impute the agent's act to the principal criminal design must be brought home to the latter see Cooper v. Glad 6 H L C 746

(6) 29 How St Tr 746 ante

(7) Rosee Cr Ev 12th Ed 46, 47 in which the following criticism on this case is made: Had however Mr Douglas been alive at the time there can be no doubt that he must have been called and that he might have been called to prove the receipt of the money would probably not have been questioned. This case does not therefore as sometimes appears to have been thought in any way touch upon the rules that the admission of an agent does not bind his principal in criminal cases but merely shows that where the acts of the agent have to be proved those acts may be proved in the usual way.

(8) Prem Dookh v. Fether Ram, 2 Agra Rep 2 (186). See Pearson's Law of Agents in British India pp 16 17 and also Sukaria pp 17 114 15

(9) Hastings v. Watson 4 B & Ad. 111 112 113 114 115 116 117 118 119 120 121 122 123 124 125 126 127 128 129 130 131 132 133 134 135 136 137 138 139 140 141 142 143 144 145 146 147 148 149 150 151 152 153 154 155 156 157 158 159 160 161 162 163 164 165 166 167 168 169 170 171 172 173 174 175 176 177 178 179 180 181 182 183 184 185 186 187 188 189 190 191 192 193 194 195 196 197 198 199 200 201 202 203 204 205 206 207 208 209 210 211 212 213 214 215 216 217 218 219 220 221 222 223 224 225 226 227 228 229 230 231 232 233 234 235 236 237 238 239 240 241 242 243 244 245 246 247 248 249 250 251 252 253 254 255 256 257 258 259 260 261 262 263 264 265 266 267 268 269 270 271 272 273 274 275 276 277 278 279 280 281 282 283 284 285 286 287 288 289 290 291 292 293 294 295 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 303 304 305 306 307 308 309 310 311 312 313 314 315 316 317 318 319 320 321 322 323 324 325 326 327 328 329 330 331 332 333 334 335 336 337 338 339 340 341 342 343 344 345 346 347 348 349 350 351 352 353 354 355 356 357 358 359 360 361 362 363 364 365 366 367 368 369 370 371 372 373 374 375 376 377 378 379 380 381 382 383 384 385 386 387 388 389 390 391 392 393 394 395 396 397 398 399 400 401 402 403 404 405 406 407 408 409 410 411 412 413 414 415 416 417 418 419 420 421 422 423 424 425 426 427 428 429 430 431 432 433 434 435 436 437 438 439 440 441 442 443 444 445 446 447 448 449 450 451 452 453 454 455 456 457 458 459 460 461 462 463 464 465 466 467 468 469 470 471 472 473 474 475 476 477 478 479 480 481 482 483 484 485 486 487 488 489 490 491 492 493 494 495 496 497 498 499 500 501 502 503 504 505 506 507 508 509 510 511 512 513 514 515 516 517 518 519 520 521 522 523 524 525 526 527 528 529 530 531 532 533 534 535 536 537 538 539 540 541 542 543 544 545 546 547 548 549 550 551 552 553 554 555 556 557 558 559 560 561 562 563 564 565 566 567 568 569 570 571 572 573 574 575 576 577 578 579 580 581 582 583 584 585 586 587 588 589 590 591 592 593 594 595 596 597 598 599 600 601 602 603 604 605 606 607 608 609 610 611 612 613 614 615 616 617 618 619 620 621 622 623 624 625 626 627 628 629 630 631 632 633 634 635 636 637 638 639 640 641 642 643 644 645 646 647 648 649 650 651 652 653 654 655 656 657 658 659 660 661 662 663 664 665 666 667 668 669 670 671 672 673 674 675 676 677 678 679 680 681 682 683 684 685 686 687 688 689 690 691 692 693 694 695 696 697 698 699 700 701 702 703 704 705 706 707 708 709 710 711 712 713 714 715 716 717 718 719 720 721 722 723 724 725 726 727 728 729 730 731 732 733 734 735 736 737 738 739 740 741 742 743 744 745 746 747 748 749 750 751 752 753 754 755 756 757 758 759 760 761 762 763 764 765 766 767 768 769 770 771 772 773 774 775 776 777 778 779 780 781 782 783 784 785 786 787 788 789 790 791 792 793 794 795 796 797 798 799 800 801 802 803 804 805 806 807 808 809 810 811 812 813 814 815 816 817 818 819 820 821 822 823 824 825 826 827 828 829 830 831 832 833 834 835 836 837 838 839 840 841 842 843 844 845 846 847 848 849 850 851 852 853 854 855 856 857 858 859 860 861 862 863 864 865 866 867 868 869 870 871 872 873 874 875 876 877 878 879 880 881 882 883 884 885 886 887 888 889 890 891 892 893 894 895 896 897 898 899 900 901 902 903 904 905 906 907 908 909 910 911 912 913 914 915 916 917 918 919 920 921 922 923 924 925 926 927 928 929 930 931 932 933 934 935 936 937 938 939 940 941 942 943 944 945 946 947 948 949 950 951 952 953 954 955 956 957 958 959 960 961 962 963 964 965 966 967 968 969 970 971 972 973 974 975 976 977 978 979 980 981 982 983 984 985 986 987 988 989 990 991 992 993 994 995 996 997 998 999 1000

proof be given that he authorised the communication (1) A pleader or solicitor has in civil cases implied authority to make admissions of fact against his client during the actual progress of litigation, and the client is affected by admissions of fact made by them. But a plaintiff is not bound by an admission of a point of law, nor precluded from asserting the contrary in order to obtain the relief to which, upon a true construction of the law he may appear to be entitled (2) Nor is an opinion expressed by a vakil in the course of argument adversely to a claim which he undertook to advocate binding on his client when it is not in accordance with the law applicable to the case, and it is clearly not binding on the other contending defendant (3) These admissions of fact during litigation may be made either incidentally in reference to matters connected with the action and without any view to obviate necessity of proof admissions in such cases may be made in Court, or in chambers, or by documents or correspondence connected with the proceedings, and when made amount only to prima facie evidence (4) thus an undertaking (which is a step in the cause) to appear for A and B "joint owners of the sloop X," by the solicitor who afterwards appears for them is prima facie evidence of the joint ownership of A and B (5), so in an action on a bill, a notice, served by the defendant's solicitor, to produce "all documents relating to the bill which was accepted by the said defendant, is prima facie evidence of the acceptance (6) This class of admissions which are made, not indeed with the express intent of dispensing with proof of certain facts, but as it were incidentally, is generally the result of carelessness and though not regarded as conclusive admissions, is still considered, not unfrequently, as raising an inference respecting the existence of facts, which the adversary would otherwise have been called upon to prove (7) Admissions, however, made by solicitor during litigation the solicitor's admissions made for use on the two trials, admissions (9) admissible Admitted on the receivable

(1) See foot note 8 p 237

(2) Jotendra Mohun v Ganendra Mohun 18 W R 359 367 (1872) Musht Achyoo v Lallah Ranchandra 23 W R 400 401 (1875) See as to admissions by legal practitioners cases cited under s 58 post Field Ev 30 31 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 10 234 235 Taylor Ev §§ 772-774 Steph Dig Art 17—Barristers and solicitors are the agents of their clients for the purpose of making admissions whilst engaged in the actual management of the cause either in Court or in correspondence relating thereto but statements made by a barrister or solicitor on other occasions are not admissions merely because they would be admissions if made by the client himself

(3) Krishnasami v Rajagopala 18 M 73 83 (1895)

(4) Cordery 82 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 234 235 Taylor Ev § 773 In criminal cases a solicitor has no implied authority as in civil cases to affect his client by admissions of fact incidentally made R v Downer 14 Cox 486 v ante see s 58 post

(5) Marshall v Cliff 4 Camp 133

(6) Holt v Squire Ry & M 282, Taylor Ev § 773

(7) Taylor Ev § 773

(8) Peitch v Lyon 9 Q B 147, Taylor Ev § 774 Cordery 82 83 and cases there cited

(9) Doe v Bird 7 C & P 6 but see also Elton v Larkins 5 C & P 385 386

(10) Omabutte v Parushnath 15 W R, 135 (1871) but see Blackstone v Wilson 26 L J Ex 229 and remarks in Pearson's Law of Agency in British India p 428 and see Doe v Ross 7 M & W, 102 122

(11) Standage v Creighton 5 C. & P 406 Taylor v Hilda is 2 B & Ad 845 856 Taylor Ev § 774

as those of the solicitor, not only against the client(1), but against the solicitor in favour of the client (2) Admissions by counsel stand upon similar though a narrower footing A solicitor, admitted to prosecute or defend, represents his client throughout the cause, but a counsel represents his client only when speaking for him in Court (3) Therefore admissions made by counsel out of Court in conversation with the solicitor for the opposite side, are not evidence against his client Where, therefore, pending a rule nisi the attorney served with the rule inferred, from a conversation, out of Court, with the counsel who had moved the rule, that the latter would forbear to move to make it absolute for a certain time, and the rule was made absolute by that counsel within the time mentioned, the Court refused to re open the rule (4) But statements made by counsel during the conduct of the case are prima facie evidence against the client (5) Besides admissions of fact made incidentally during litigation they may also be expressly made for the purpose of dispensing with proof at the trial, in which case, in civil suits they are generally conclusive whether made by solicitor or counsel (6)

A guardian has, under the Hindu law, a qualified power of dealing with the property of an infant under his charge He can, in case of necessity, sell, charge, or let it for a long term But the infant is not absolutely bound by the act of the guardian, he could, on attaining majority, recover the property if it had been disposed of without legal necessity, and in the case of an uncertificated guardian, the burden of proving legal necessity would, generally speaking, be on the person asserting it (7) But he will be bound by the act of his guardian, in the management of his estate, when bond fide and for his interest, and prudently have done for a contract has been validly in such contract, it may be specifically enforced (9) Even an alienation made without necessity by an unauthorized de facto guardian will not necessarily be set aside (10) Where a minor will be bound by the act of his guardian, there he may be affected by his declarations made at the same time and forming part of the res gestæ, in respect of the particular act which constitutes a proper exercise of the functions of guardianship But although a guardian may have authority to manage the estate, or possibly even to make a partition it does not follow that he would have power to make admissions of previous transactions, so as to affect the

Guardian
and Ward

(1) Taylor v Willans supra

(2) Ashford v Price 3 Stark, 185 Cordery 83

(3) Richardson v Peto 1 M & G 896, per Tindal C J Taylor Ev § 783 and in one sense counsel is not the representative of the client for he has the power to act without asking his client what he shall do R v Registrar of Greenwich County Court 15 Q B D 54 58 Nor is he the agent (in the ordinary sense) of the client his position is a peculiar one Colledge v Horn 3 Bing 119 121 Matters v Munster L R 20 Q B D 141 Swinfen v Lord Clifmsford 5 H & N 890 see Wills Ev 2nd Ed 169 and also s 58 post

(4) Richardson v Peto supra and as to the practice of entering warrants of attorney on the record

(5) Ian Hart v Holley Ry & M 4 Hall v Hornan 2 L & F 165 affirmed 3 L T N S S 741 Cordery 83 see also notes to s 58 post and Taylor Ev § 783

(6) See s 58 post and as to power of counsels and pleaders to compromise & admissions in criminal trials ib

(7) Jugal Kishori v Anunda Lal 22 C 545 550 (1895) see Maynes Hindu Law 5th Ed §§ 191—197

(8) Maynes Hindu Law § 196 and cases there cited As to the onus in a suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made by a guardian see Lekraj Roy v Mahabab 10 B L R 35 (1881)

(9) Mr Sarvagyan v Fakharuddin Mahomed Chodhury (1901) 34 C, 163 (Full Bench)

(10) Tayammal v Kuppara Rowndan 18 M 115 (1915) (Art 44 of Limita is not applicable to alienation by unauthorized guardian)

estate of his ward (1) It has been held by the Madras (2) and Bombay (3) High Courts disapproving of a decision to the contrary effect of the Calcutta High Court (4), that a guardian has authority to acknowledge a debt on the part of the minor, provided that the debt is not barred by limitation at the date of the acknowledgment (5), and it be shown in each case that the guardian's act was for the protection or benefit of the ward's property (6) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that when a guardian acting within the scope of his authority and for the benefit of a minor, makes an acknowledgment of a debt, such an acknowledgment is by an agent duly authorized and gives a fresh start to the computation of Limitation (7) And in the Calcutta High Court it was held that where in a suit by reversioners to set aside an alienation by their maternal grandmother as made without legal necessity, an affidavit filed by their parents in another suit was tendered as an admission of such necessity, it was held on appeal that nothing in this act could make the affidavit relevant, for the reversioners had not derived their interest in the estate from their parents and the latter as their natural guardians were in no way authorized by them to make the admission (8) As to guardians for the suit, and next friends, v post

A partner charges the partnership by virtue of an agency to act for it How far his admissions are receivable depends therefore on the doctrines of agency as applied to partnership (9) Partners and joint contractors are each other's agents for the purpose of making admissions against each other, in relation to partnership transactions or joint contracts (10) Admissions by partners and joint contractors are receivable both on the ground of agency and of joint interest (11) After prima facie evidence of partnership, the declaration of one partner is evidence against his co partners as to partnership business (12), though

Partners
Joint-contractors
Parties interested in subject-
matter

(1) Surya Maahli v Bhagwati Konwar 10 C L R (P C) 377 (1881) But in Brajendra Coomar v The Chairman of the Dacca Municipality 20 W R 223 224 (1873) it was said that the guardian of an infant has no power to bind him by admissions As to an admission by the Court of Wards see Ram Autar v Raja Muhammad 24 I A 107 (1897) as to admission made merely for probative purposes see s 58 post

(2) Sabhanadri Appa v Sriravula 17 M 221 (1893) followed in Kailasa Padmachi v Ponnukannu Achi 18 M 456 (1894)

(3) Annappagaudu v Sangadigayapa 26 B 221 (1901) overruling Maharana Ramnalsingji v Vadilal Vakilchand 20 B 61 (1894)

(4) Waybun v Kadir Bukish 13 C 292 295 (1886) followed in Chhata Ranu v Billo Ali 26 C 15 (1898) Tilak Singh v Chok Singh 1 All L J 302 (1904)

(5) See cases in notes 2-4 ante

(6) See Annappagaudu v Sangadigayapa supra

(7) Ram Chandra Das v Gaya Prasad F B (1908) 30 A 238 dissenting from Tilak Singh v Chhutu Singh 26 A 598 and Mathew v Brise (1851) 14 Bea 431 Merkuich v Hardinghan (1830), 15 Ch D 349, Chinnery v Evans (1864) 11 H L C 115

(8) Manokarni Debi v Haripada

Mitter 18 C W N 718 (1914)

(9) Wigmore Ev § 1078

(10) Steph Dig Art 17 Lucas v De la Cour 1 M & S 249 Wheaton v Waring 1 S L C 644 2 Doug 652 Kah Kisser v Gopi Mahan 2 C W N 166 168 (1897) and see next note

(11) Taylor Ev §§ 393 743 Story on Partnership §§ 101-125 Re Whiteley (1891) L R 1 Ch 558 ante Steph Dig Art 17 Karsulla Sundari v Mukta Sundari 11 C 558 591 (1885) Chalho Singh v Jhara Singh 39 C 995 (1912)

(12) Roscoe N P Ev 71 Nichols v Doucine 1 Stark 81 Taylor Ev § 743, Lucas v De la Cour supra What admissions bind in the case of partners? Those only which relate to matters connected with the partnership For instance an admission by one partner that the two had committed a trespass would not bind the other In this case the declaration related to nothing in which there was that community of interest which makes the declaration of one defendant evidence against the other For v Waters 12 A & E 43 per Williams J See Taylor Ev § 751 and see generally as to Partnership ib §§ 598-601 743-754 787 Roscoe N P Ev 71 Steph Dig Art 17 Landley Partnership 128 162-166 Supp 40 Pearson's Law of Agency 428 429 Act IX of 1872 (Indian Contract Act) ss 239-266

the former is no party to the suit (1) Each member of a firm, being the agent of the others for all purposes within the scope of the partnership business,

the direct concurrence of each individual partner (2) "Though admissions by partners bind the firm when tendered by strangers, they do not necessarily have this effect when tendered inter se. Thus it has been held that, as between themselves, entries in the partnership books (3) made without the knowledge of a partner will, as against him, be inadmissible (4), and a similar rule holds as to directors and other members of a company inter se" (5) Admissions which are made by one partner, in fraud of the firm, are receivable against the latter (6), unless made collusively with the other side (7) The Madras High Court has held in several cases (in conflict with the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts) that it is not enough to show that an acknowledgment on payment by a partner was an act necessary for, or usual in the course of, the partnership business, but that to bind other partners it must be proved to have been authorized by them (8) But in a later case in that High Court it was held that where a promissory note which contained no indication that it was executed on behalf of the firm was executed by only two of three partners for money borrowed for the purposes of the partnership business, the promisee could recover also against the partner who did not execute it (9)

"When several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the general rule is, that the admissions of any one of these persons are receivable against himself and his fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or sued or whether an action be brought in favour of, or against, one or more of them separately, provided the admission relate to the subject-matter in dispute, and be made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered (10) Thus, as has been already seen, the representation or misrepresentation of any fact made by one partner with respect to some partnership transaction will bind the firm (11), and so also in the case of a joint-contract where A, B, C and D make a joint and several promissory note, either can make admissions about it as against the rest (12) In order to render the admission of one person receivable in evidence against another, it must relate to some matter in which either both were jointly interested or one was derivatively interested (13) through the other, and

(1) Wood v Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104, Roscoe N P Ev 71 Taylor Ev § 743

(2) Litch v Wedlake, 11 A & E, 959, Taylor Ev, § 598, as to acknowledgments of debt by partner giving new period of limitation vide post

(3) As to the principle on which partnership books are evidence see Hill v Manchester and Salford Waterworks Co., 5 B & Ad 875

(4) Hutcheson v Smith, 5 Ir Eq, 117, Stewart's case, 1 Ch App 58; Lindley Partnership 536

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 231

(6) Raff v Latham, 2 B & Ald. 795, Moore v Knight (1891) 1 Ch 547

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 749, and cases there cited

(8) K R F Firm v Seetharama, 37 M, 146 (1914), Wallis J expressing reluctance to be bound by other rulings as for instance Valasubramania Pillai v Ramanathan Chettiar, 32 M, 421 (1909).

Shankh Mohideen Sahib v Official Assignee 35 M, 143 (1912)

(9) Shanmuganatha Chettiar v Sri Naraya Ayyar 40 M 727 (1917) following Karmali Abdulla v Karimji Jivanji 1 C, 39 B 261 (1915) distinguishing Yuthu Sastrigal v Viranatha Pandhara 26 M L J 19 (1914)

(10) Taylor, Ev, § 743 cited and adopted in Kousuliah Sundari v Yuthu Sundari 11 C 588 590 (1888) s 18 cl (1) ante Hutchinson v Whiting 2 Doug 652 Wood v Braddick 1 Taunt. 104 as to acknowledgments of joint-debts for the purpose of the law of limitation vide post and Taylor Ev §§ 600 601, 724-747

(11) Taylor Ev § 741 and ante
(12) Hutchinson v Whiting 2 Doug 652 1 S L C 644 Steph Diz Art. 17, illust. (f)

(13) See s 18 cl. (2) and post

estate of his ward (1) It has been held by the Madras (2) and Bombay (3) High Courts, disapproving of a decision to the contrary effect of the Calcutta High Court (4), that a guardian has authority to acknowledge a debt on the part of the minor, provided that the debt is not barred by limitation at the date of the acknowledgment (5), and it be shown in each case that the guardian's act was for the protection or benefit of the ward's property (6) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that when a guardian acting within the scope of his authority and for the benefit of a minor makes an acknowledgment of a debt, such an acknowledgment is by an agent duly authorized and gives a fresh start to the computation of limitation (7) And in the Calcutta High Court it was held that where in a suit by reversioners to set aside an alienation by their maternal grandmother as made without legal necessity, an affidavit filed by their parents in another suit was tendered as an admission of such necessity, it was held on appeal that nothing in this act could make the affidavit relevant, for the reversioners had not derived their interest in the estate from their parents and the latter as their natural guardians were in no way authorized by them to make the admission (8) As to guardians for the suit, and next friends, v post

A partner charges the partnership by virtue of an agency to act for it How far his admissions are receivable depends therefore on the doctrines of agency as applied to partnership (9) Partners and joint contractors are each other's agents for the purpose of making admissions against each other, in relation to partnership transactions or joint contracts (10) Admissions by partners and joint contractors are receivable both on the ground of agency and of joint interest (11) After prima facie evidence of partnership, the declaration of one partner is evidence against his co partners as to partnership business (12), though

Partners
Joint-contractors
Parties
interested in subject-
matter

(1) Surya Meekhs v Blagueti Konuar 10 C L R (P C) 377 (1881) But in Brojendra Coomar v The Chairman of the Dacca Municipality 20 W R 273 224 (1873) it was said that the guardian of an infant has no power to bind him by admissions As to an admission by the Court of Wards see Ram Aitar v Raja Mubham ad 24 I A 107 (1897) as to admiss on made merely for probate purposes see s 58 post

(2) Sobhanadri Appa v Sriramula 17 M 221 (1893) followed in Kailasa Padachi v Ponnukannu Achu 18 M 456 (1894)

(3) Annapagaudu v Sangadigayapa 26 B 221 (1901) overruling Maharana Ramnalsingji v Vadilal Vakhatchand 20 B 61 (1894)

(4) Hajibun v Kadir Buksh 13 C 292 295 (1886) followed in Chhato Ram v Bito Ali 26 C 15 (1898) Tilak Singh v Chok Singh 1 All L J 307 (1904)

(5) See cases in notes 2-4 ante

(6) See Annapagaudu v Sangadigayapa supra

(7) Ram Chandra Das v Gaya Prasad F B (1908) 30 A 238 dissenting from Tilak Singh v Chhuttu Singh 26 A 598 and Mathee v Brise (1851) 14 Bea 431 Markweiz v Hardingham (1880) 15 Ch D 349, Chinnery v Evans (1864) 11 H L C 115

(8) Manokarim Debi v Haripada

Mitter 18 C W N 718 (1914)

(9) Wigmore Ev § 1078

(10) Steph Dig Art 17 Lucas v De la Cour 1 M & S 249 Whitcomb v Whitng 1 S L C 644 2 Doug 653 Kali Kussore v Gopi Mohan 2 C W N 166 168 (1897) and see next note

(11) Taylor Ev §§ 593 743 Story on Partnership §§ 101-123 Re Whiteley (1891) L R 1 Ch 558 ante Steph Dig Art 17 Kousullia Sundari v Mukto Sindori 11 C 558 591 (1885) Clallo Singh v Haro Singh 39 C 995 (1912)

(12) Roscoe N P Ev 71 Nichols v Douaine 1 Stark 81 Taylor Ev § 743 Lucas v De la Cour supra What admissions bind in the case of partners? Those only which relate to matters connected with the partnership For instance an admission by one partner that the two had committed a trespass would not bind the other In this case the declaration related to nothing in which there was that community of interest which makes the declaration of one defendant evidence against the other For v Waters 12 A & E 43 per Williams J See Taylor Ev § 751 and see generally as to Partnership ib §§ 598-601 743-754 787 Roscoe N P Ev 71 Steph Dig Art 17 Lindley Partnership 128 162-166 Supp 40 Pearson's Law of Agency 428 429 Act IX of 1872 (Indian Contract Act) ss 239-266

the former is no party to the suit (1) Each member of a firm, being the agent of the others for all purposes, within the scope of the partnership business,

the direct concurrence of each individual partner (2) "Though admissions by partners bind the firm when tendered by strangers, they do not necessarily have this effect when tendered inter se. Thus it has been held that, as between themselves, entries in the partnership books (3) made without the knowledge of a partner will, as against him, be inadmissible (4), and a similar rule holds as to directors and other members of a company inter se" (5) Admissions which are made by one partner, in fraud of the firm are receivable against the latter (6), unless made collusively with the other side (7) The Madras High Court has held in several cases (in conflict with the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts) that it is not enough to show that an acknowledgment on payment by a partner was an act necessary for, or usual in the course of, the partnership business, but that to bind other partners it must be proved to have been authorized by them (8) But in a later case in that High Court it was held that where a promissory note which contained no indication that it was executed on behalf of the firm was executed by only two of three partners for money borrowed for the purposes of the partnership business, the promisee could recover also against the partner who did not execute it (9)

"When several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the general rule is, that the admissions of any one of these persons are receivable against himself and his fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or sued or whether an action be brought in favour of, or against, one or more of them separately, provided the admission relate to the subject matter in dispute, and be made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered (10) Thus, as has been already seen, the representation or misrepresentation of any fact made by one partner with respect to some partnership transaction will bind the firm (11), and so also in the case of a joint contract where A, B, C and D make a joint and several promissory note, either can make admissions about it as against the rest (12) In order to render the admission of one person receivable in evidence against another, it must relate to some matter in which either both were jointly interested or one was derivatively interested (13) through the other, and

(1) Wood v Braddick 1 Taunt, 104
Roscoe N P Ev 71 Taylor Ev § 743

(2) Latch v Wedlake, 11 A & E 959,
Taylor Ev § 598 as to acknowledgments of debt by partner giving new period of limitation vide post

(3) As to the principle on which partnership books are evidence see Hill v Manchester and Salford Waterworks Co 5
B & Ad 875

(4) Hutchison v Smith 5 Ir Eq, 117,
Stearns case 1 Ch App 58; *Londley
Partnership* 536

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 231

(6) Rapp v Latham 2 B & Ald, 795,
Moore v Knight (1891) 1 Ch 547

(7) Taylor Ev, § 749 and cases there cited

(8) A R V Firm v Seetharama 37
M., 146 (1914) Wallis J expressing reluctance to be bound by other rulings as for instance *Polasubramania Pillai v
Ramanathan Chettiar*, 32 M., 421 (1909),

*Shakh Mohideen Sahib v Official
Assignee* 35 M 143 (1912)

(9) Shanmuganatha Chettiar v Sri nivas Ayyar 40 M 727 (1917) following Karmali Abdulla v Karimji Jiraji
P C 39 B 261 (1915) distinguishing Muthu Sastrigal v Viranatha Pandhara
26 M L J 19 (1914)

(10) Taylor Ev, § 743 cited and adopted in Kozhullali Sundari v Mukta Sundari 11 C 588 590 (1888) s 18 cl (1) ante Hutchison v Smith, 2
Doug 652 Wood v Braddick 1 Taunt, 104 as to acknowledgments of joint-debts for the purpose of the law of limitation vide post and Taylor Ev §§ 600 601, 724-747

(11) Taylor Ev § 741 and ante

(12) Hutchison v Smith 2 Dou-652 1 S L C 644 Steph Dir Art. 17, illust. (f)

(13) See s 18 cl. (2) and post

mere community of interest will not be sufficient. Thus, where two persons were in partnership, and an action was brought against them as part owners of a vessel, an admission made by the one as to a matter which was not a subject of co partnership, but only of co-part ownership, was held inadmissible against the other (1). Nor will the admissions of one tenant in common be receivable against his co tenant though both are parties on the same side of the suit (2). And an admission by a co tenant as to who is the landlord of a hold

(3) Nor is an admission by one ryot against his own interest, evidence to holds (4). And, where a joint contract is severed by the death of one of the contractors nothing that is subsequently done or said by the survivor, can bind the personal representative of the deceased (5), nor can the acts or admissions of the executor bind the survivor (6).

The rule that where there are several co contractors, or persons engaged in one common business or dealing, a statement made by one of them with reference to any transaction which forms part of their joint business is admissible as against the others (7), was applied in the case of Kowsulhah Sundari Das v Mukta Sundari Das (8).

The facts of this case were that, in a suit between a zemindar and his iyaradars for rent a person who was one of several jotedars in the mehal, was called as a witness for the zemindar and admitted the fact that an arrangement existed whereby he and his co jotedars had agreed to pay rent to the zemindar direct. This suit was decided in favour of the zemindar. The iyaradars then brought a suit against the jotedars, amongst whom was the witness abovementioned, to recover the sum which the jotedars ought to have paid to the zemindar direct, and which the iyaradars had been decreed to pay to payment to the iyaradars. In this suit the the zemindar's suit was received as evidence all the defendants. It was contended that the statement of the jotedar might have been received as an admission against himself only, but not as against the other defendants. But it was held on this principle above stated, that the evidence was admissible. As to admissions founded on derivative interest (v post). In an action for negligence or trespass, or in any other action for tort, the admission of one defendant will not be evidence against the others: the same rule prevails in criminal proceedings as the law cannot recognise any partnership or joint interest in crime (9).

The joint interest must be proved independently. An apparent joint

(1) Taylor Ev § 750 and other cases there and in §§ 751—753 cited Steph Dig Art. 17 Jagers v Pennings 1 Stark. R. 64 Brodie v Howard 17 C B 109 as to statements by co executors and admissions by one of several trustees v ante first para of commentary

(2) Dan v Brown 4 Cawen 483, 492

(3) Kali Kissen v Gopi Mohan 2 C. W N 166 (1897)

(4) Nurroohurry Mohanta v Narance Dassee W R F B 23 (1862)

(5) Atkins v Tredgold 2 B & C 23, Fordham v Wallis 10 Hare 217 Slaymaker v Gundackers Ex, 10 Serg & P 75

(6) Slater v Lawson 1 B & Ad, 396, Hathaway v Haskell 9 Pick, 24

(7) Per Garth C J in Kowsulhah Sundari v Mukta Sindari 11 C. 588 590 (1883) citing Taylor Ev § 743 Kemble v Farren 3 C & P 623 Lucas v De la Cour 1 M & S 249

(8) Lac cit supra.

(9) Taylor Ev § 751 admissions by joint defendants in actions for tort are not generally evidence, except against themselves unless there be proof of common object or motive Norton Ev 143 see s 10 ante and ab as to conspirators in crime Taylor Ev §§ 597 590 Daniel v Potter 1 M & M 503 Roscoe N P Ev 68 and observations in R v Hardwicke 11 East 578 nor in actions ex contractu unless they relate to a matter in which there is an identity of interest, Fox v Waters 12 A & E, 43

all his declarations made subsequent to the act to which they relate, and out of the course of his official duty' (1)

Limitation Act.

The Limitation Act deals with the subject of the effect of acknowledgment in writing to bar limitation. But one of several joint contractors, partners, executors, or mortgagees (2) is not chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed by, or by the agent of, any other or others of them (3)

In England it appears now to be settled law that a payment on account of debt or a written acknowledgment made by a partner in the usual course of business is sufficient to take a partnership debt out of the Statute of Limitations as against the other members of the firm, the partner being presumed to have authority payment or giving the acknowledgment (4) authority of the late partners to bind one another (5), unless the facts are such as lead to the inference that the partner as agent for the other partners (6) given by the executor of a deceased obligor jointly and severally liable with other obligors on a bond is an acknowledgment only of the several liability of the deceased obligor (7) An agreement by a debtor not to raise the plea of limitation is void under section 23 of the Indian Contract

Act as an attempt to defeat the provisions of the Limitation Act (8)

Persons from whom interest is derived

The subject of the second clause of s. 18 is usually included under the head of "privity" (9) the rule being that the admissions of one person are evidence against another in respect of privity between them (10) Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against a party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission (11) Thus where A sued B to recover a watch which B claimed

(1) Taylor, Ev. § 785, and id. § 786, so if a man become surety in a bond conditioned for the faithful conduct of a clerk or collector, confessions of embezzlement made by the principal after his dismissal cannot be given in evidence if the surety be sued on the bond. Smith v. Whittingham 6 C & P 78 rough entries made by the principal in the course of his duty or whereby he has charged himself with the receipt of money will at least after his death be received as proof against the surety not altogether as declarations made by him against his interest but because the entries were made by him in those accounts which it was his duty as clerk to keep and which the defendant had contracted that he should faithfully keep. Whitnash v. George 8 B & C 556. Goss v. Worlington, 3 B & B, 132

(2) Act IX of 1908 s. 19 The liability must appear upon the face of the acknowledgment and such liability cannot be read into it by proof al unde. Itapan v. Nenu, 12 Mad. L. J. 101 s. c. 26 M., 34 and as to the essentials of a valid acknowledgment, see Srinivas Krishna Shrivalkar v. Narhar Khandoo Khanolkar (1908) 32 B., 296

(3) Id. s. 21, see The Indian Limitation Act with notes by H. T. Rivaz 6th Edn. 98—101 and Field Ev. 125—127, Steph. Dig. Art. 17 as to principal and surety see Cockrill v. Sparkes 1 H. & C.

699 Re Po. lrs 30 Ch. D. 201

(4) Goodwin v. Partan (1880), 42 L. T. 568 in re Tucker (1894) 3 Ch. 429 and see Taylor Ev. § 600 and § 598 and Landley on Partnership 6th Ed. p. 271

(5) Watson v. Woodman (1875), 20 Eq. 30

(6) In re Tucker, supra.
(7) Read v. Price (1909) 1 K. B. 577. Roddan v. Morley 1 De G. & J. 1 In re Lacy (1907) 1 Ch. 330

(8) Rama nurthy v. Gopayya 40 M. 701 (1917) see Sitarama v. Krishnaswami 38 M. 374 (1915)

(9) See Steph. Dig. Art. 16, Taylor Ev. § 78 and generally as to admissions on the ground of privity id. §§ 90 758 787—794 Wills Ev. 2nd Ed. 174

(10) Taylor Ev. § 787, the term privity denotes mutual or successive relationship to the same rights of property, and privies are distributed in several classes according to the manner of this relationship: (1) privies in blood as heir and ancestor and coparceners (2) privies in law as executor to testator or administrator to intestate and the like (3) privies in estate or interest, donor and donee lessor and lessee joint tenants and the like id.

admissions by parties through whom to retain as administrator of C, deceased, a declaration by C that he had given the watch to A was held to be evidence against B (1) In proceedings for probate of a will a witness, who attended on the testatrix during her last illness, was asked to depose to a statement made to the witness by the testatrix as to a disposition of her ornaments by will The question was disallowed, but the Court of Appeal held that the question was improperly disallowed since a statement by the testatrix suggesting any inference as to the execution of a will would be an admission relevant against her representatives and would therefore be admissible as evidence (2) Where execution of a mortgage deed has been chaser by private contract than against an auction purchaser but it is clearly evidence as against both (3) "The ground upon which admissions bind those in privity with the party making them is that they are identified in interest, and of course, the rule extends no further than this identity (4) If a person who adopts another makes an admission after the adoption this admission will not bind the person adopted If the making of the admission is before the adoption it has been said to be a nice question upon which there is no authority, as to the effect of admissions made by a person who subsequently adopts in binding the person adopted, namely, whether the person adopted can be said to derive title from the adopter in such a way as to make the admission evidence against him (5) The case of co parceners and joint tenants are assimilated to those of joint promisors, partners, and others having a joint interest, which have been already considered In other cases, where the party by his admissions as heir, executor, or administrator is identified at the time he makes the admission as being able in evidence against the representative, in the same manner as they would have been against others claim see also Forbes v. Vir Mahomed 5 B L R 529 540 (1870) s e 14 W R P C 28 13 M I A 438 Mohun Shaloo v. Chittoo Meor 21 W R 34 (1874) Ahemum Kurce v. Gour Chunder 5 W R 268 (1866) Nund Pandah v. Goadhur 10 W R 89 (1868) Arudh Beharee Singh v. Ram Raj 18 W R 105 (1872) Situl Pershad v. Monohur Das 73 W R 325 (1875) Krishna samu Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar 18 M 73 (1894) Anundmoyee Choudhram v. Sleeb Chunder Marshall 455 (1862) Goreebollah Sircar v. Boyd 2 W R 190 (1865) Jnan Choudhry v. Doolar Chondry 18 W R 347 (1872) Sonu Gorukhal v. Rangammal 7 Mad H C R 13 (1871)

(1) Smith v. Smith 3 Bing N C, 29

(2) Nana v. Shankar 1 Bom L R 465 (1901) not however under s 11 as the head note suggests but this section But see also Atkinson v. Morris L R 1897 P D 40 [statements made by a testator are not admissible to prove the execution by him of a will] which was held inapplicable as it was based on the fact that the English Wills Act prescribes a particular form of proof while to the will in the case cited no such rule applied

(3) Narain Das v. Dilaxar, 41 A, 250, s e 521 C 830

(4) Taylor Ev § 787 "It is to be observed that admissions are relevant only so far as the interests of the persons who made them or of those who claim through such persons are concerned. On this principle a distinction must be made between statements made by an occupier of land in disparagement of his own title and statements which go to abridge or encumber the estate itself For example an admission by a patnidar or other holder of a subordate tenure affects the patni or other tenure as against him and those who derive their title from him but it will not affect the proprietary interest as against the zemindar or other superior so as to encumber or diminish his rights" Field Lx 6th Ed 90 91 see Scotches v. Chadwick 2 M & Robb 507 R v. Bliss 1 A & F 550 Papendi v. Evidgewater, 5 L & B 106 Horne v. Malkin, 40 L T, 196 and Taylor Ev § 789

(5) Broyendra Coomrao v. Chakrasen of Da. v. Munipal 20 W R, 223 224 (1871) per Colch C J

the party represented (1) Thus the declarations of the ancestor that he held the land as the tenant of a third person, are admissible to show the seisin of that person in an action brought by him against the heir for the land (2), and the declarations of an intestate are admissible against his administrator or any other claiming in his right (3) Where tenants sued for a declaration that their holding was mokurree at a given rent and the surbarakar of their zemundar admitted the right on behalf of the zemundar, who himself filed a petition corroborating his surbarakar's statement it was held that these admissions would bind any subsequent zemundar not being an auction purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue (4) The same principle holds in regard to admissions made by the assignee of a personal contract or chattel previous to the assignment where the assignee must recover through the title of the assignor and succeeds only to that title as it stood at the time of its transfer (5) But a distinction must be drawn between the case of an assignee of land or other property and that of an ordinary assignee of a negotiable instrument For, whereas the former has in general no title unless his assignor had, the latter may have a good title though his assignor had none Thus the declaration of a former holder of a note showing that it was given without consideration though made while he held the note was held to be not admissible against the indorsee, to whom the instrument had been transferred on good consideration and before it was overdue (6) For such an indorsee derives his title from the nature of the instrument itself and not through the previous holder Accordingly unless the plaintiff on a bill or note stands on the title of a former holder (as if he have taken the bill overdue or without consideration) the declarations of such former holder are not evidence against him (7)

Sales in execution and for arrears of revenue

The purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue is not privy in estate to the defaulting proprietor He does not derive his title from him, and is bound neither by his acts nor by his laches (8), nor by his admissions (9), nor by a decree against him (10) and proceedings between the defaulting proprietor and third parties with respect to the title to the land are not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit brought by the auction purchaser as against him (11)

(1) Coole v Brahmi 3 Ex. R. 185 per Parke B See Ram Srimati v Klajendra Narayan 31 C 871 (1904)

(2) Doe d Pettitt v B & A 223 In a suit it was attempted to prove a kabuliat by amongst other evidence proof of a so-called petition by the defendants' father in which he was represented as having admitted the kabuliat it appeared that the defendants' father represented to certain persons that this petition was his petition and requested them to verify his signature or to identify him as one of the petitioners It was held that this request amounted to a statement on the part of the defendants' father to these witnesses of all that was contained in the petition and amounted to a statement to them that he made the statements which appeared in the petition and that even if the petition had not been filed it was just as effective against the defendants as if it had been in fact filed Mohan Saloo v Chuttoo Mowar, 21 W. R., 34 (1874)

(3) Smith v Smith, 3 Buz. N. C. 29 v. ante Taylor Ex., § 787

(4) Watson & Co v Nobin Mohun 10 W. R. 72 (1868)

(5) Taylor Ex., § 790

(6) Woolway v Rouse 1 A. & F. 114 116 explaining Barrough v White 4 B. & C. 325 Taylor Ex., § 791 Byles on Bills, 15th Ed. (1891) 433

(7) Byles on Bills loc cit and cases there cited

(8) Moonslee Buool v Pran Dhan, 8 W. R. 227 (1867) (and v. ib. p. 67) followed in Radha Gobind v Raktal Das 12 C. 87 90 (1885) Watson & Co v Nobin Mohun 10 W. R. 72 (1868) as to the rights of the auction purchaser see Kool Deep Narain v Government of Ind. 11 B. L. R. 71 (1871) Forbes v Meer Mahomed 20 W. R. (P. C.) 44 (183)

(9) Rungo Monee v Raj Coomaree 6 W. R. 197 (1866)

(10) Id. Radla v Rakkhal supra, 12 C. 82 90 but as to purchasers of pattai taluqs sold under Reg. VIII of 1819 see ib. at p. 90 and Taraprasad v Ram Arising 6 B. L. R. App. 5 (1870) 14 W. R. 233

(11) Radha Gobind v Raktal Das supra

It has in some cases(1) been considered that a similar rule applies to ordinary execution sales and that a purchaser at such a sale is not in privity with, or the representative in interest of, the judgment debtor so as to be affected of the latter. This view appears of certain Privy Council decisions distinction between a private sale in satisfaction of a decree and a sale in execution of a decree (3) In both cases the purchaser merely acquires the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor(4); and therefore a suit to enforce an interest purchased at an execution-sale is held to be barred as against a purchaser at a private sale if the interest had been purchased at a private sale. The distinction between a private sale and a sale in execution of a decree, that under the former, the purchaser derives title through the vendor and cannot acquire a better title than that of the vendor. Under the latter, the purchaser notwithstanding he acquires merely the right, acquires that title by operation of law freed from all alienations or incumbrances the attachment of the property sold in execution only show that the rights of an execution-purchaser are in some respects different from those at a private sale. They do not afford any basis for the aforementioned broad proposition deduced from them(7) It is true that an execution-purchaser makes his purchase not from the judgment-debtor and

(1) Lala Parbhu v Mysine, 14 C., 401, 411—414 (1887), Gour Sundar v Hem-Chunder, 16 C., 355, 360 (1889), Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali, 20 C., 236, 239 (1892), for earlier decisions, see Runga Monee v Raj Coomaree, 6 W. R. 197 (1886), Musst Imrit v Lalla Debee, 18 W. R., 200 (1872)

(2) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C., 75—77 (1896)

(3) Dinendronath Sannal v Ram Kumar Ghose, 7 C., 107, 118, s. c., 8 I. A., 65 10 C. L. R., 281 (1880), Srimati Anandmayi v Dhanendra Chandra B. L. R. (P. C.), 122, 127 (1871)

(4) Id All that is sold and bought, at an execution sale is the right, title and interest of the judgment debtor with all its defects, Dorab Ally v Abdool Azeez 5 I. A. 116 125 (1878), followed in Sundara Gopalan v Venkatarada Ayyangar, 17 M. 228 (1893), the creditor takes the property subject to all equities which would affect it in the debtor's hands Megji Hansraj v Ramji Javia 8 Bom. H. C. R., 169, 174, 175 (1871), Sobhag Chand v Bhairchand 6 B., 193, 202 (1882) as to the different means available to purchaser of investigating title in the respective cases of private and execution sales, see Dorab Ally v Abdool Azeez supra 125 See also Kishan Lal v Ganga Rani 13 A. 28 (1890), Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali 20 C., 236, 239 (1892) Bapuji Balal v Saiyabhamabai, 6 B., 490 (1882)

(5) Raja Enayet v Giridhari Lal, 2 B. L. R. (P. C.), 75, 78 (1869) explained in Sobhag Chand v Bhairchand, 6 B., 193,

200 (1882) and see Kishna Lal v Ganga Ram supra

(6) Dinendronath Sannal v Ramkumar Ghose, supra, see also Srimati Anandmayi v Dhanendra Chandra, 8 B. L. R. (P. C.), 122 127 (1871), 14 M. I. A., 101, explained in Sobhag Chand v Bhairchand, 6 B., 193, 205 (1882), Musst Imrit v Lalla Debee 18 W. R. 200 (1872), Lalu Wulji v Kashiabai 10 B., 400, 405 (1886) Lala Parbhu v Mysine, 14 C., 401, 413 (1887), Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali 20 C. 236 239 (1892), in the case of Gour Sundar v Hem Chunder, 16 C. 355 (1889), it was held that a purchaser at a public sale in execution of a decree is not, but a purchaser at a private sale is the representative of the judgment debtor, followed in Janki Prasad v Ufai Ali 16 A., 284 (1894) but dissented from in Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C., 62 (1896) [as to the meaning of the terms 'representative and legal representative' see Badra Narain v Joy Kissen 16 A. 483 487 (1894) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C. 62 71 (1896) and s. 21 post] See also Pushronath Chaudh v Subraya Shitapa 15 B. 290 (1890), referred to in Burjari Dorabji v Dhunbai, 16 B. 21 (1891)

(7) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C., 76 (1896) the case of Lala Parbhu v Mysine supra based on an erroneous interpretation of the Privy Council decisions cited supra and is followed by Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali, supra. See 24 C., at p. 77, approved in Gulzari Mal v Madho Ram, F. B., 1 All. L. J., 65 (1904).

often against his wish, and he is not bound by some of the acts of the judgment-debtor, such as alienations made by the latter to defeat the decree but that does not show that his rights are not derived from the judgment debtor, or that he is not the representative in interest of the judgment debtor in any sense or for any purpose. Even a purchaser at a private sale is not bound by any prior alienation made by the vendor to defraud him, but that does not show that such purchaser is not a representative in interest of the vendor. Because the rights of an execution purchaser and a purchaser at a private sale are in some respects different, it does not follow that the execution purchaser is not to be regarded as a representative in interest of the judgment debtor even in those respects in which, and for those purposes for which his rights are not higher than those of the judgment-debtor whose right title and interest he has purchased (1). In a previous edition of this work it was pointed out in respect of admissions made by a judgment-debtor prior to attachment that in so far as the purchaser acquires only the title of the debtor, he should acquire it as qualified by the latter's admissions, though certain decisions of the Calcutta High Court would appear to have held otherwise. The view thus taken received support from some of the earlier cases (2) and has since been confirmed by recent decisions of the Privy Council (3) and the Calcutta High Court (4). The Judicial Committee have held that the equitable principle of estoppel laid down in the case of Ram Coomar Koondoo v Macqueen (5) which applies to any person, is equally binding on the purchaser of his right, title and interest at a sale in execution of a decree (6). If such a purchaser may be estopped, he may a fortiori be affected by the admissions of the judgment debtor whose interest he has purchased. The result of the cases would therefore appear to be that a purchaser at an ordinary execution sale is in privity with, and the representative in interest of, the judgment debtor within the meaning of the twenty first section, post, so as to be affected by the latter's admissions. Prior to the last mentioned decision of the Privy Council it had been held that, where the execution purchaser is himself an actual party to the admission, it may, so far as it can be considered as his, be used as evidence against him (7), and that a mortgagee differed from a simple money creditor in that he derives his title directly from the mortgagor, and is bound by his previous conduct in respect of the property mortgaged (8), therefore a purchase by a mortgagee at a sale in execution of a decree upon his mortgage of the right, title and interest of the mortgagor, who has been estopped from asserting a

(1) Ib 75 76

(2) Unaipoorna Dassee v Asfar Poddar 12 W R 143 (1874) [The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree is the representative in interest of the judgment debtor within the meaning of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 21] referred to in Kishan Lal v Ganga Ram 13 A 28 51 (1890) Musst Irist v Lalla Debee (1872) supra at the utmost the statements would be nothing more than evidence certainly they will not conclude him per Couch C J

(3) Mahomed Mozuffer v Kishori Mohun 22 C 909 (1895), s c 22 I A 129 1 C W N 38

(4) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub 24 C 62 (1896)

(5) L R I A Sup Vol 40 43 s c

11 B L R 46 18 W R 166

(6) Mahomed Mozuffer v Kishori Mohun 22 C 909 919 (1895) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub 24 C 62 77 (1896)

(7) Musst Irist v Lalla Debee 18 W R 200 (1872)

(8) Lola Parbhu v Mjine supra at p 413

(9) Poreashnath Mookerjee v Anathnath Deb 9 C 263 (1882) 9 I A 147 reported in lower Court sub nom Anathnath Deb v Bishtu Chunder 4 C 783 see also Kishori Mohun v Mahomed Mozuffer 18 C 188 198 (1890) s c in appeal to Privy Council 22 C 909 (1895)

(10) Krishnabhupati Devu v Vikrama Devu 18 M 13 18 (1894)

judgment debtor to the extent of such right, title and interest as he had in the property purchased at the date of the sale and represents the execution creditor in so far as he had a right to bring such right, title and interest to sale in satisfaction of his decree, and that when the plea of estoppel is available to a decree holder, it is likewise available to the purchaser at the execution sale as his representative or as one claiming under him. It has, however, also been held that a Court sale cannot by itself be taken to create an estoppel either in favour of or against a Court-purchaser as against or in favour of the person whose right, title and interest, the Court-purchaser buys from the Court, because the Court purchaser derives his title from proceedings which are entirely invidium as regards the judgment-debtor (1). And where property purchased in execution of a money decree was subject to a mortgage, but not a mortgage executed by the judgment debtor, although he would have been estopped from denying liability under the mortgage on account of his conduct in the mortgage transaction, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the purchaser was bound equally with the judgment debtor inasmuch as the right, title and interest of the latter had passed to him and his purchase was therefore subject to the mortgage (2). Where a purchaser claimed under a title partly created by a mortgagor it was held that he was estopped from pleading non transferability of the holding (3). Where a mortgagee was himself the purchaser it was held by the Allahabad High Court that he was estopped from denying the mortgagor's right to execute a prior mortgage of the property (4).

A man may bind himself by an admission, but he cannot bind by his admission those who do not claim under him but who before the admission had acquired a right (5). But part payment of the mortgage debt by the mortgagor and appearing in his handwriting, will give a fresh start of limitation to the mortgagee, even as against a person who had purchased a portion of such mortgaged property prior to such payment (6).

Statements whether made by parties interested (7), or by persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest (8), are admissions only if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statement (9). It would be manifestly unjust that a person who has parted with his interest in property, should be empowered to divest the right of another claiming under him by any statement which he may choose to make (10). And so admissions made by a debtor (whose property has been sold) subsequently to such sale are not evidence against the purchaser of the property (11). A statement relating to property made by a person when in possession of that property may be evidence against himself and all persons deriving the property from him after the statement but a statement made by a former owner that he had conveyed to a particular person could not possibly be evidence against third persons. If it were so I might sell and convey to B and afterwards declare that he had sold and conveyed to C, and

The admissions must be made during the continuance of the interest

(1) Gajanan v Nilo 6 Bom L R 864 (1904)

(2) Prayag Rag v Sidhu Prasad Tewari (1908) 35 C 177 and as to the estoppel see Sivat Chandra Dix v Copal Chandra Lala (1897) 20 C 296. Porter v Inceff (1905) 10 C W N 313 and Ganesh v Pursotton (1908) 18 B 311

(3) Ratha Kanta Chakravarti v Ramasanta Shahu (1912) 39 C 51

(4) Tota Ram v Hargobind 36 A 141 (1914) see Fakshi Ram v Luladlar 35 A 351 (1911). Bharbhur Dixai v Taraladi Lal 10 A 1 J (1910)

(5) Moratt v Castle Steel and Iron

Works Co 14 Ch D 58 63

(6) Domin Lal Sahu v Roshan Dubey 11 C W N 10. Krishna Chandra Saha v Bhairab Chandra Saha 9 C W N 8 1 C 107

(7) S 18 cl (1) ante

(8) S 18 cl (2) ante

(9) S 18 ante. Taylor Ex 11 794 504 599

(10) Doe v Hether 1 A & E 740. Kishan Kaur v Gour Chandra S W R 26 (1886) Taylor Ex 1 794

(11) Ahemum Kaur v Gour Chander supra

C might use the statement as evidence in a suit brought by him to turn B out of possession. If such evidence were admissible no man's property would be safe "(1) As for partners, by the very act of association each is constituted the agent of the others and of the firm for all purposes within the scope of the partnership concern and his acts and declarations bind his co partners and the firm unless he has in fact no authority to act for the firm in the particular matter, and the person with whom he is dealing either knows that he has no authority or does not know or believe him to be a partner (2) But an admission made by a partner before the partnership is not evidence against his co partner (3) After dissolution of a partnership the subsequent acts of the individual members are binding on themselves alone, except so far as they may be acts necessary to wind up the affairs of the partnership or to complete transactions begun but unfinished at the time of the dissolution (4) Declarations and admissions made after the dissolution relating to the previous business of the firm are admissible against all the partners interested in the transaction (5) Bankruptcy (6), or death will sever the joint interest, therefore in the latter case, the admissions of the survivors will not bind the estate of the deceased (7), nor conversely will those of his representatives bind the survivors (8) So, also, the declaration of a bankrupt, though good evidence to charge his estate with debt, if made before his bankruptcy, is not admissible at all if it were made afterwards (9) This equitable doctrine applies to the cases of vendor and vendee, grantor and grantee and generally, to all cases of rights acquired, in good faith, previous to the time of making the admission in question (10)

To be admissible the declarations must qualify or affect the title of the predecessor and not relate to independent matters. The statement must be one which directly affects the person's interest in the property itself, a mere statement against his interest in other respects as for instance that he is in debt, whence it might be inferred that he would be likely to part with or charge his property, does not come within this rule (11) It may further be added that it is not sufficient that the interest be subsequent in point of time, it must (as the words of the section point out) have been derived from the person who made the statement sought to be used as an admission (12)

Proof of
admissions

These admissions by third persons, as they derive their legal force from the relation of the party making them to the property in question may be proved by any witness who heard them, without calling the party by whom they were made. The question is, whether he made the admission and not merely whether the fact is as he admitted it to be. Its truth, where the admission is not conclusive—and it seldom is so—may be controverted by other testimony, and even by calling the party himself, but it is not necessary to produce him, for his declarations when admissible at all, will be received as original evidence, and not as hearsay (13)

Admissions
by strangers

Statements by strangers to a proceeding are not generally relevant as against the parties (14), but in some cases the admissions of third persons

(1) Per curiam in Clarke v Bindabun Chunder, W R, F B, 20 (1862), s c, Marshall 75

(2) Taylor 598

(3) Tunley v Evans 2 Dow & L 747
Catt v Howard 3 Stark, 3

(4) Taylor 598

(5) Pritchard v Draper (1830) 1 Russ & My 91

(6) In re Wolmershausen 38 W R (Eng) 537

(7) Atkins v Tredgold 2 B & C, 23

(8) Slater v Lanson 1 B & Ad 396

(9) Bateman v Bailey 5 T R 513

(10) Taylor Ev § 794 and cases there cited

(11) Beauchamp v Parry 1 B & Ad 89
Wills Ev 122
Coole v Bram 3 Ex 183, Taylor Ev § 792

(12) Field Ev 6th Ed 90 91 s 18 cl (2) ante

(13) Taylor, Ev, § 793

(14) Steph Dig Art 18, Coole v Bram, 3 Ex 183, Taylor Ev § 740, Barrough v White 4 B & C 323

strangers to the suit, are receivable (1) "These exceptions to the general rule arise when the issue is substantially upon the mutual rights of such persons at a particular time, in which cases the practice is to let in such evidence, in general, as would be legally admissible in an action between the parties themselves. Thus the admissions of a bankrupt made before the act of bankruptcy, but if made after cannot furnish of creditors and the danger of fraud" (4) So his answers on public examination are inadmissible not all parties other than process against debtors, to the execution creditor of a person whose position party to prove against another, are in the nature of original evidence, and not hearsay, though such person is alive and has not been cited as a witness (7) In the case noted plaintiffs who were two out of five brothers sued to establish their right to a two fifth share in properties which were sold in execution of a money decree against another brother U, and purchased by the defendant on the allegation that the properties when sold were the joint family properties of the five brothers. The defendant whose case was that the brothers were not joint at the date of the sale, and that the properties were exclusively owned by U put in a deposition given by another brother K in the suit in which the money decree against U was passed, in the course of which K stated that the family was not joint and the properties belonged exclusively to U. It was held that the deposition of K in the previous suit was not admissible against the plaintiffs (8)

"The admissions of a third person are also receivable in evidence against the party who has expressly referred another to him for information in regard to an uncertain or disputed matter. In such cases the party is bound by the declarations of the party referred to in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if they were made by himself" (9) Thus in an action against executors, the defendants having written to the plaintiff that if she wished for further information as to the assets it could be obtained from a certain merchant—the replies of the merchant were held receivable against the executors (10) In the application of this principle, it matters not whether the question referred to be one of law or of fact, whether the person to whom reference is made,

References

(1) Taylor Ev, § 759, see s 19, ante

(2) See Coole v Brahm 3 Ex, 185

(3) Jarnett v Leonard, 2 M & S, 265

in action by the trustees of bankrupts an admission by the bankrupt of the petitioning creditor's debt is deemed to be relevant against the defendants Steph Dig Art 18

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 759 and cases there cited see also 1x parte Etcards Re Tollmache 14 Q B D 415 1x parte Re ell Re Tollmache 13 Q B D 720

(5) Re Brunner 19 Q B D 572

(6) Steph Dig Art 18 Kempland v Macanly Peake 95 Williams v Bridges 2 Stark 42 as to admissions of an under sheriff or bailiff against the sheriff see Snayball v Co Ircke 4 B & Ad 541 Jacobs v Humphreys 1 C & M 413 Scott v Marshall 2 C & J 218 North v Miles 1 Camp 380 Edwards on Execution p 12

(7) Ali Mo din v Eliza Hanidathil 5

M 239 (1832)

(8) Agendranath Ghosh v La rence Inde Co 25 C W N 83 (1921)

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 760, see s 20, ante. Roscoe N P Ev 69 Steph Dig, Art 19 this comes very near to the case of arbitration ib note xiii

(10) Williams v Innes, 1 Camp, 364 see also Daniel v Pitt 1 Camp 366 Pea Ad Cas 238 as to the applicability of the rule in criminal cases see R v Mallory 15 Cox 458 [the accused told a constable that his wife would make out a list of certain property a list afterwards made out by her and handed to the constable in the husband's presence was left evidence against the latter Coleridge C 1 however expressly refrained from giving an opinion upon the question if the prisoner had been absent] As to reference to accused to examination of others taken in his presence see Russ Cr., 437, 1 C

have or have not any peculiar knowledge on the subject, or whether the statements of the referee be adduced in evidence in an action on contract, or in an action for tort (1) Whether the answer of the person referred to is conclusive against the party is, in England, a matter of some doubt (2) They will not be so conclusive under this Act unless the admission operates as an estoppel (3) To render the declarations of a person referred to equivalent to a party's own admission, it is not necessary that the reference should have been made by express words, but it will suffice if the party by his conduct has tacitly evinced an intention to rely on the statements as correct. Therefore, where a party on being questioned by means of an interpreter, gave his answers through the same medium, it was held that the language of the interpreter should be considered as that of the party, and that, consequently, it might be proved by any person who heard it, without calling the interpreter himself (3)

On the same principle (4) (though, as a general rule, the affidavits, depositions or inter vivos statements of a party's witnesses are not receivable against him in subsequent proceedings) (5), documents or testimony which a party has expressly caused to be made, or knowingly used as true in a judicial proceeding, for the purpose of proving a particular fact are evidence against him in subsequent proceedings to prove the same fact, even on behalf of strangers (6)

Proof of admissions against persons making them and by or on their behalf

21. Admissions are relevant, and may be proved as against the person who makes them, or his representative in interest; but they cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them, or by his representative in interest, except (7) in the following cases —

- (1) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under section 32
- (2) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, when it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body, relevant or in issue, made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable
- (3) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission

(1) Taylor, Ev § 761 and case there cited

(2) v s 31 post

(3) Taylor Ev, § 763 Fabrigan v Mostyn 20 How St Tr 122 123

(4) The following class of cases are explained in Boileau v Rutlin 2 Exch 660 675 as instances of admissions by conduct see Richards v Morgan 4 B & S 641 657 658 in which the grounds upon which such evidence is admitted are considered

(5) Gardner v Moulit 10 A & E, 464, Brickell v Hulze 7 A & E 454 Richards v Morgan supra

(6) Brickell v Hulze supra, Gardner v Moulit supra, Boileau v Rutlin supra, Richards v Morgan supra, Prichard v Bagshawe 20 L J, C. P. 161 11 C. B. 459, White v Douling 8 Ir L R., 128, Taylor, Ev §§ 763 764

(7) Müller v Babu Madho 19 A., 70 (1896), s c 23 1 A., 106

Illustrations

(a) The question between A and B is, whether a certain deed is or is not forged. A affirms that it is genuine, B that it is forged

A may prove a statement by B that the deed is genuine, and B may prove a statement by A that the deed is forged but A cannot prove a statement by himself that the deed is genuine, nor can B prove a statement by himself that the deed is forged.

(b) A, the captain of a ship, is tried for casting her away

Evidence is given to show that the ship was taken out of her proper course

A produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day, and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements, because they would be admissible between third parties, if he were dead, under section 32, clause 2

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta

He produces a letter written by himself, and dated at Lahore on that day, and bearing the Lahore post mark of that day

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because, if A were dead, it would be admissible under section 32, clause 2

(d) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen.

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value. A may prove these statements, though they are admissions, because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin, as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that that person did examine it and told him it was genuine

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustration

Principle—This section is an affirmation of the well known principle that a party's admissions are only evidence against himself and those claiming through him and not against strangers, and of the rule of law with regard to self regarding evidence, that when in the self serving form, it is not in general receivable, which is itself a branch of the general rule that a man shall not be allowed to make evidence for himself (1). Not only would it be manifestly unsafe to allow a person to make admissions in his own favour which should every slight and general rule

s 17 (Admission

s 3 (Relevant)

s 3 (Proof)

s 32 (Statements by persons who cannot be called as a witness)

s. 14 (States of mind or body)

Steph Dig., Art 15 Best Ev. §§ 519—520, Norton Ev. 151

(1) Best Ev. § 519 Norton Ev. 151, and p 247 notes (2) (1) & (4) post

(2) Ib., ante, p 215

(3) The reason of the rule is obvious. If A says 'B owes me money' the mere fact that he says so does not even tend to prove the debt. If the statement has any value at all it must be derived from some fact which lies beyond it, for instance, A's recollection of his having lent the money. To that fact of course A can testify but his subsequent assertions add nothing to what he has to say. It on the other hand A had said 'B does not owe me anything' this is a fact of which B might make use and which might be decisive of the case. Steph. Dig. Introd. 164 165 Norton Ev. 151. See Best Ev. § 519. Illustr (a) gives a double example showing how the same statement may be used against but not for the interest of the party making it

COMMENTARY.

As against the person who makes them

"As against the person who makes them" means "as against the person by or on whose behalf they are made" (1). Thus if admissions are made by a referee they would not ordinarily be relevant against him as "the person who makes them," but against the referor on whose behalf and as whose agent they are made. The expression "person who makes them" must, therefore, mean, the person who makes them either personally or through others by whose admission he is bound. With the exceptions mentioned in the notes to the preceding against the It is a well-strangers (3), only (4). And that he made ence of a hmb, an application ts that the admissions can only be proved as against the party has been already considered, and in accordance with this rule it has been held that where the accounts of a mortgagee who has been in possession are being taken his income tax papers are inadmissible as evidence in his favour, though they may be used against him (6). Notwithstanding the provisions of this section and the thirty second Road Cess Act, he used

A road cess return, ant, was filed by the plaintiff's vendors. It consisted of two parts, in one of which the joint properties of the plaintiff's vendors and the defendant were set out, and in the other the properties belonging to the defendant alone were mentioned. In a suit by the plaintiff for some lands as being the joint property of his vendors and the defendant, the latter put in the road cess return in order to disprove plaintiff's allegation, by showing that the lands were included in the second part. The lower Courts had relied on his return. It was contended in appeal that it was inadmissible under s. 95 of the Road Cess Act, being evidence in favour of the principal defendant. It was, however, held that the road cess return was evidence against the plaintiff claiming through his vendor, and it was none the less evidence merely because by admitting it as evidence against the plaintiff it became evidence in favour of the defendant (8). And in a later case it has been held that a road cess return filed by a temporary lessee is

(1) See Steph Dig Art 15. An oral confession is an admission provable under this section, Feros v Emperor 19 Cr L J 651.

(2) See In re Whiteley, L R 1 Ch 558 564 (1891). In this respect a distinction must be drawn between statements under the preceding sections and under s. 32 post. Under this last section the statements there enumerated are admissible against all the world. Norton v 143 Avudh Beharee v Ram Raj, 18 W R, 105 (1872).

(3) Heane v Rogers, 9 B & C, 577, 580.

(4) Section 115 supra, Powell, Ev, 247.

(5) In re Whiteley supra.

(6) Shah Glouan v Mussummut Ewa, 9 W R 275 (1868).

(7) Hem Chunder v Kali Prasunno 8 C W N 17 (1903) in which also the question of the returns being against pecuniary interest was considered.

(8) Beni Madhub v Dina Bundhu 3 C W N 343 (1899). See as to the use of these returns under ss. 21, 32 and other sections of this Act Hem Chunder Choudry v Kali Prasanna Bhaduri P C, 30 C, 1033 (1903). 30 I A 177, where in a suit for enhancement of the rent of talukdari, tenure road-cess returns though not conclusive were held to be admissible as evidence as a basis on which to ascertain the assets of the taluk and so fix a fair and equitable limit of enhancement.

admissible in favour of a superior landlord(1) and one filed by certain co sharers is admissible against others (2)

No definition has been given of this somewhat vague expression (3) 'Representative in interest'. Whatever scope may be given to these words it is apprehended that they will, generally speaking, include most of the privies in blood, law, or estate of which mention has been already made in the notes to sections 17—20, ante

Though admissions may be proved against the party making them, it is always open to the maker to show that the statements were mistaken or untrue, except in the single case in which they operate as estoppels (4)

The section proceeds to specify those cases in which an exception is permitted to the general rule, and admissions in a person's own interest are admissible in evidence. The first clause is considered under the thirty second section, post, which must be read in conjunction with it. Illustrs (b) and (c) refer to this clause

"The second clause has received no illustration in the Act probably because it has already been sufficiently treated of in the fourteenth section (ante) under the head of 'facts' showing the existence of any state of bodily feeling and in illustrs (l), (i) and (m) thereto, which, together with the notes thereon, should be here consulted. The fourteenth section merely declared that such facts are relevant. The present clause shows that such facts or statements may be proved on behalf of the person making them, notwithstanding the general rule that persons cannot make evidence for themselves by what they choose to say" (5)

The third clause provides that a fact which is relevant under the sixth section, ante, or some one of the sections following it, shall not be rejected simply because it assumes the form of an admission (6). Illustrs (d) and (e) refer to this clause. "Care must likewise be taken not to confound self serving evidence with res gestæ. The language of a party accompanying an act which is evidence in itself, may form part of the res gestæ and be receivable as such" (7)

It was held in the undermentioned(8) case, in which the second and the fourth defendants sold a jote to the first defendant and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied a partition which had taken place as well as the sale, that the statements previously made by them which went to show that there had been a partition and they had changed their attitude were admissible under the third clause of this section and the second clause of the eleventh section of this Act

In a suit against an insolvent and the Official Assignee for sale of mortgaged property, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that title deeds in his possession after the insolvency were deposited with him as security before the adjudication. Evidence of admissions by him at an earlier date than the adjudication to the effect that the deeds were then in his possession are inadmissible in his favour under this section not being within any of the exceptions to inadmissibility named in this section. An erroneous omission to object to such

(1) Sewdeo Narain Singh v Ajodhya Prasad Singh 39 C 1005 (1912)

(2) Chalho Singh v Jhero Singh 39 C 995 (1912) distinguishing Vusseerim v Gouree Sunkur 22 W R 192 and following Hem Chandra Choudry v Kasi Praranna (supra)

(3) See remarks in Islan Chunder v Beni Madhub 24 C 67 72 (1896) Unno-poorna Dassee v Nafur Poddar 21 W R 148 (1874) as to the meaning of the terms representative and legal representative see Baari Narayan v Jan

Aslam 16 A 483 48 (1894) Strouls Judicial Dictionary 64 (1890) Chauhan v Gonda Kaur 17 M 156 (1893) and ante notes to s. 1 — 0 ante in execution

(4) See ss 31—115 post

(5) Norton Ex 152

(6) Id Field Ex 6th Ed 94 see Fellows v Williamson 31 M 66 ante ss 8 and 14 and notes thereon

(7) Best Ex 159

(8) Bis Gyanee v Jassumut Moharajnessa 2 C W 91 (1897)

evidence does not make it admissible (1) Any statement as to rent payable for a holding made by a person in a sale certificate which was obtained by him as purchaser of the holding at a sale in execution of a decree against the former tenant being in the nature of an admission cannot be used as evidence on his behalf as such a statement does not come within the exceptions to this section (2)

Confessions

This section is subject to the special provisions relating to confession enacted in the twenty fourth twenty fifth and twenty sixth sections (3)

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant

22 Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question

Principle—The general rule is that the contents of a written instrument which is capable of being produced must be proved by the instrument itself and not by parol evidence (4) An exception to this rule prohibiting the substitution of oral testimony for the document itself exists according to English law in favour of the parol admissions of a party The admissions being primary evidence against a party, and those claiming under him are receivable to prove the contents of documents without notice to produce or accounting for the absence of, the originals (5) The principle upon which such evidence is receivable has been stated to be that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so and that therefore such evidence is not open to the same objection which belongs to parol evidence from other sources when the written evidence might have been produced (6) But the correctness of this reasoning and of the decisions founded upon it has been questioned and the dangerous consequences which are liable to follow on the reception of such evidence have been pointed out (7) For though what a party himself admits may fairly be presumed to be true there is no such presumption in favour of the truthfulness of the evidence by which such admission must be proved (8)

s 17 (Admission)

s 3 (Document)

s 3 (Relevant)

s 56 (Facts admitted)

s 63 (Secondary Evidence) ss 65 66 (Rules as to giving of secondary evidence) s 65 cl (b) (Written admissions as to contents of documents)

(1) Miller v Bab's Madio 19 A 76 (1896) s c 23 I A 106

(2) Raans Persad v Malath Adaya 31 C 380 (1903)

(3) R v Blarab Cl dcr 2 C W N 702 (1898)

(4) Taylor Ev § 396 ss 59 64 91 post

(5) Taylor Ev § 410 and cases there cited Roscoe N P Ev 63 Best Ev. §§ 525 526 and see M Itukaruppa Kaundan v Ra a Pilla 3 Mad H C R. 158 100 (1866)

(6) Slatterie v Pooley 6 M & W 669 per Parke B

(7) See observations of Pennefather C J in Laless v Quale 8 Ir Law R 385 cited ib § 412 and in Field Ev 6th Ed 95 Cunningham Ev 136 the views there expressed have been adopted in the present section which alters the law laid down in Slatterie v Pooley supra Norton Ev 152

(8) According to Slatterie v Pooley what A states as to what B a party has said respecting the contents of a document which B has seen is admissible whilst what A states respecting a document which he himself has seen is not admissible although in the latter case the chance of error is single in the former double per Reporter in 9 Com B 501 n c Darby v Ousley 1 H & N. 1 as to oral testimony by the party to the same effect see Farrow v Blomfield 1 F & F 653 Henan v Lester 12 C B. N S 781 as to the application of the rule in criminal cases see Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 7 and as to the case first cited see Chandra Kumar v Chandra Narpat Singh P C. (1906) 29 A. 184 L. R. 34 I A. 27, Heane v Rogers 9 B & C. 577

Taylor, Ev, §§ 410—414, Roscoe, N P Ev, 63, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 95, Cunningham, Ev, 135, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 7, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 219, 510 Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 444, Norton, Ev, 152, Best, Ev, §§ 525, 526

COMMENTARY.

When the existence, condition, or contents of the original document have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest, such written admission is admissible(1), but oral admissions except in the cases above mentioned, are excluded by the present section. The circumstances under which a party is entitled to give secondary evidence of a document are laid down in sections 65, 66, post "Where the question is not what are the contents of a document, but whether the document itself is genuine, that is, in the handwriting of the party whose writing or signature it is alleged to be, evidence may, of course be given to prove or disprove the forgery. This may be effected in a variety of ways, by the party, sections 21 70, by an attesting witness, section 68, by the oath of witnesses acquainted with the handwriting by experts, section 45, or by comparison of handwriting section 73, "Or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question." The effect of the last clause of this section seems to be, that if such a document is produced, the admissions of the parties to it that it is or is not genuine [even though such admissions involve a statement of the contents of a document] may be received"(2) This section does not, it is apprehended exclude admissions which the parties agree to make at the trial, in which case it becomes unnecessary to prove the fact so admitted (3)

23 In Civil cases(4) no admission is relevant if it is made either on an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given(5), or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together(6) that evidence of it should not be given (7)

Explanation—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under section 126.(8)

Principle—"Confidential overtures of pacification and any other offers or propositions between litigating parties, expressly or impliedly made without prejudice, (9) are excluded on grounds of public policy. For without this

- (1) S 65 cl (b) post
(2) Norton Ev 153
(3) S 58 post Cunningham Ev 136
cf Sheikh Ibrahim v Farata S Bom H C R A C J 163 (1871)

(4) The protection given by this section does not extend to criminal cases see s 29 post As to arbitration See p 105 at 14

- (5) Corv v Bretton 4 C & P 462
(6) This section as drafted in the original Bill contained infer that it was the intention of the parties that for infer that the parties agreed together that

(7) Laddock v Torrestor 3 M & G, 901 918 Steph Dig Art 20 adds "or if it was made under duress" Stockfleth v De Tastet 4 Camp 11 per Lord

Ellenborough see Taylor, Ev 793 and post

(8) Namely the matters mentioned in provisos (1) and (2) to s 126 post see notes to that section

(9) In re R & S Steamer Co L R, 6 Ch 877 827 per James L J does not without prejudice mean I make you an offer if you do not accept it the letter is not to be used against me 831 832 [Cited in Madhava v Gulsan 23 B 177 180 (1893)] Now if a man says his letter is without prejudice that is tantamount to saying, I make you an offer which you may accept or not as you like but if you do not accept it the having made it is to have no effect at all " per Mellish L J see also Walker " 23 Q B D, 335 337 per L:

protective rule it would often be difficult to take any steps towards an amicable compromise or adjustment, and, as Lord Mansfield has observed, all men must be permitted to buy their peace without prejudice to them should the offer not succeed, such offers being made to stop litigation, without regard to the question whether anything is due or not (1) It is most important that the door should not be shut against compromises (2) When a man offers to compromise a claim, he does not thereby necessarily admit it, but simply agrees to pay so much to be rid of the action

s. 17 ('Admission.')

s. 3 ('Relevant.')

s. 3 ('Evidence.')

s. 126 (Professional Communications)

Steph. Dig. Art. 20, Taylor, Ev. §§ 774, 795—797, 798, 799, Roscoe, N P Ev, 62, 63, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 421, Phillips, Ev, 326, 328 Cordery & Law relating to Solicitors 2nd Ed., 83

COMMENTARY.

Admissions
'without prejudice

Admissions either verbal or in writing by way of compromise or during treaty are, if made under the circumstances mentioned in the section, protected Generally, neither letters written without prejudice nor replies to such letters, though not similarly guarded can be used as evidence against the parties writing them (3) Thus a letter marked 'without prejudice' protects subsequent (4) and even previous (5) letters in the same correspondence Such letters however, are only protected if bona fide written with a view to a compromise (6) Thus a letter "without prejudice," which contains a threat against the recipient if the offer be not accepted, is admissible to prove such threat (7) So also if the admission be merely of a collateral or indifferent fact, such as the handwriting of a party, which is capable of easy proof by other means and is not connected with the substantial merits of the cause, it will be received, even though made pending negotiations (8), as also will offers without prejudice if the offer has been accepted (9) For if the terms proposed in such a letter are accepted a complete contract is established, and the letter, although written 'without prejudice' operates to alter the old state of things and to establish a new one A contract is constituted in respect of which relief by way of damages or specific performance would be given (10) The mere fact that a document is stated to have been written 'without prejudice' will not exclude it The rule which excludes documents marked 'without prejudice' has no application unless some person is in dispute or negotiation with another, and terms are

(1) Taylor Ev. § 795, and see ib., §§ 774, 796, 797 and cases there cited Roscoe N P Ev. 62, 63 Steph. Dig. Art. 20 Powell Ev. 300 Phillips Ev. 326

(2) Per Bowen L. J., in Walker v. Wilsher supra

(3) Roscoe N P Ev., 62, Paddock v. Forrester 3 M & G., 903 Hoghton v. Hoghton 15 Beav. 278 321 Walker v. Wilsher supra.

(4) Paddock v. Forrester, supra, Re Harris 44 L J Bly 33 It is not necessary to go on putting 'without prejudice' at the head of every letter ib. Walker v. Wilsher, supra, 337

(5) Peacock v. Harter 26 W R (Eng.), 109 In this case a second letter without prejudice was held to protect a previous letter not expressed to be without prejudice on the ground that the second letter was to be taken as a post script to the former

(6) Grace v. Baynton 21 Sol Jour. 631 cited in Cordery 83 In the case of Hicks v. Thompson Times 19th Jan. 1857 a lawyer's clerk sued for breach of promise of marriage sought to exclude his love letters because he had headed them all without prejudice.

(7) Kurtz v. Spence 58 L T 438

(8) Waldrige v. Kenneson 1 Esp., 143 see also per Lord Kenyon C J in Turner v. Raiton 2 Esp. 474

(9) Walker v. Wilsher, supra 337, In re Racer Steamer Co L R 6 Ch., 877

(10) Per Lindley L J in Walker v. Wilsher 23 Q B D, 335 at p. 337

an admission is made thus in a suit on a bill of exchange, where the defendant stated in a letter to the plaintiff that he had not had notice of the dishonour of the bill, but that if the debt was accepted without costs, he would give the plaintiff a cheque for it, and the plaintiff thereupon discontinued the action on payment of costs, it was held that the plaintiff was, in a second action on the bill, entitled to use the letter as proof of waiver of notice of dishonour. The first action being discontinued before the second was begun the conditional waiver became absolute and the letter admissible in evidence (2) Letters without prejudice cannot, without the consent of both parties, be read on a question of costs to show willingness to settle, although the mere fact and date of such letters or negotiations, as distinguished from their contents, may sometimes be received to explain delay (3) Perhaps, also, an offer of compromise, the essence of which is that the party making it is willing to submit to a sacrifice, or to make a concession (4) will be rejected, though nothing at the time was expressly said respecting its confidential character, if it clearly appears to have been made under the faith of a pending treaty, into which the party has been led by the confidence of an arrangement being effected (5) But in the absence of any express, or strongly implied, restriction as to confidence, an offer of compromise is clearly admissible and may be material as some evidence of liability (6), although it may not be proper to enquire into the terms offered (7) though it must still be borne in mind that such an offer may be made for the sake of purchasing peace and without admitting liability to the extent of the claim (8) Much depends upon the circumstances of the case (9) The rule does not apply to admissions made before an arbitrator, for though in this last case, the proceedings are said to be before a domestic forum, yet the parties are, at the time, contesting their rights as adversely as before any other tribunal (10) It has, however, been held that nothing which passes between the parties to a suit in any attempt at arbitration or compromise should be allowed to effect the slightest prejudice to the merits of their case as it eventually comes to be tried before the Court. No presumption can be raised against a party to a suit from his refusal to withdraw from the determination and submit to arbitration (11) An admission before an arbitrator is admissible in evidence although it is for the Court dealing with the facts to attach whatever weight it thinks proper to such an admission. The rule enunciated in this section does not apply to such admissions (12)

- {1} Madhav Rao v. Gokulbhai 23 B 177, 180 (1898) citing In re Daintrey Ex parte Holt (1893) 2 Q B 116

(2) Heldsforth v. Dinsdale 19 W R (Eng) 198

(3) Walker v. Halsey 23 Q B D, 335 see however Williams v. Thomas 31 L J Ch 674

(4) Thompson v. Austen 2 D & R 361

(5) Woldridge v. Kennison 1 Esp 144 Taylor Ev § 795

(6) Hallace v. Small 1 M & M 446 Harris v. Lauson ib 447; Nelson Smith 3 Stark R 129 Taylor Ev § 795

(7) Harding v. Jones 1 L J G 1 see also Thomas v. Morgan 1 L J M & R 496

(8) Mearns Naqar v. Amudde Mia

44 L J Q 191 Letters Patent appeal per Sanderson C J and Mockerjee J

(9) Field Ev 6th Ed ¶ 96 see also observations of Lord St Leonards in Jerlin v. Money 5 H L C 45 when an attorney goes to an adverse party with a view to a compromise or to an action you must always look with very great care at his evidence as to what then occurred

10 Dee v. Llewellyn 1 Ex 120

11 the admissions may be proved by the arbitrator Gregory 40 Q B 3 Esp 113 Taylor Ev § 795 799 see also Ev c 25 on estimating answers see s 112 post

12 McLachlan v. Singh 12 M & W 15

13 McLachlan v. Singh 12 M & W 15

14 McLachlan v. Singh 12 M & W 15

Confession caused by inducement, threat, or promise when irrelevant in criminal proceeding

24. A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority, and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him

Principle.—The ground upon which confessions, like other admissions, are received, is the presumption that no person will voluntarily make a statement which is against his interest unless it be true (1). But the force of the confession depends upon its voluntary character (2). The object of the rule relating to the exclusion of confessions is to exclude all confessions which may have been procured by the prisoner being led to suppose that it will be better for him to admit himself to be guilty of an offence which he really never committed (3). There is a danger that the accused may be led to incriminate himself that, it is under the admission of while seeking to obtain a character for activity and zeal, to harass and oppress prisoners, in the hope of wringing from them a reluctant confession (5).

ss 17—22 ('Admission')

s 3 ('Relevant')

s 3 ('Court')

s 28 (Confession after removal of impression caused by inducement)

s 80 (Presumpt on as to document purporting to be a confession)

Steph. Dig, Arts 21—23, Taylor, Ev, §§ 862—906 Best Ev §§ 551—553 3 Russ. Cr., 440—499, Powell Ev, 9th Ed, 104—116 Phipson Ev 5th Ed, 248—259, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 300—307, Norton Ev, 154—164, Cr Pr Code ss 163 343, Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed, 30—50 A Treatise on the Admissibility of Confession and Challenge of Jurors in criminal cases in England and Ireland by Henry H Joy Wigmore Ev, § 822 et seq

COMMENTARY.

In the first place, an important question arises as to the meaning of these words and as to the person on whom the onus rests of showing that the confession was voluntary or involuntary. The use of the word "appears," it has been

(1) Taylor Ev § 865 Phillips & Arn, Ev, 401 Best Ev, § 524 ante, p 217, note (7), Wills, Ev, 102

(2) Taylor Ev §§ 872 874, see remarks in R v Thomson L R. (1893) 2 Q B at p 15

(3) 3 Russ Cr., 442 per Littledale J in R v Court 7 C. & P., 486, but in R v Baldry 2 Den C C 430, Lord Campbell, C J., said The reason is not that the law supposes that the statement will be false but that the prisoner has made the confession under a bias and that therefore it would be better not to submit it to the jury But see also Lord Campbell's dictum in R v Scott, 1 D & B 47 48 and Taylor Ev § 874, R v Nabardup Gorman 1 B L R O S 15 22 23 (1868) R v Thomas 7 C. & P., 345

(4) Wigmore Ev § 822

(5) Taylor Ev § 874

(6) R v Barzanta, 25 B 168 (1900), s c 2 Bom. L. R. 761 765 On this, and what follows see the able article by 'Lex' in 2 Bom L R., 157, as also an article by another contributor at p 217 would be necessary if "proof" had been required. A confession may, it has been argued, appear to the Judge to have been the result of inducement on the face of it and apart from direct proof of that fact or a Court might perhaps in a particular case fairly hesitate to say that, it was proved that the confession had been unlawfully obtained and yet might be in a position to say that such appeared to it to have been the case (1). It is, however, to be observed that if the word "appear" is to be placed in opposition to the term "proof," there may be discrepancy between the terms of this section and the eightieth section in the case of recorded confessions which are presumed to be voluntary until disproved to be so. Perhaps therefore, it would be more correct to say that as under the third section, prudence is to determine whether a fact exists or not the use of the word "appear," while requiring proof, indicates that a less degree of such proof is required in this than in other cases. By whom then must the existence or non existence of the inducement, threat or promise be proved or made to appear? Is the confession to be presumed to be voluntary until the contrary be shown or must the prosecution in all or if not in all in what cases, establish its voluntary character before it can be admitted in evidence? This subject is one of considerable difficulty. In England the case law is not uniform. It has been held that a confession is presumed to be voluntary unless the contrary is shown (2) with the result that it is prima facie admissible and can only be excluded when it is proved or made to appear that the confession was not voluntary. On the other hand it has been held that the material question is whether a confession has been obtained by improper inducement and the evidence to this point being in its nature preliminary, addressed to the Judge who will require the prosecutor to show affirmatively to his satisfaction that the statement was not made under the influence of an improper inducement, and who in the event of any doubt subsisting on this head, will reject the confession (3). In the Crown case reserved R v Thompson (4), the head note of the report states the decision to be that in order that evidence of a confession by prisoner may be admissible, it must be affirmatively proved that such confession was free and voluntary, and this view of the decision has been adopted in Rosecoe on Criminal Evidence (5). No doubt the Court stated that the test by which the admissibility of a confession may be decided was—had it been proved affirmatively that the confession was free and voluntary (6). But, the proposition in the head note appears when the whole case is considered to be too broadly laid down. In the case it is stated that there was ground for suspicion (7) and Cave, J., who delivered the judgment of the Court, says later on (8) 'I prefer to put my judgment on the ground that it is the duty of the prosecution to prove in case of doubt that the prisoner's statement was free and voluntary.' It has been said that this section was intended merely to reproduce the English law and that the word appears occurs in Art. 22 of Sir James Fitzjames Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence as it does in this section (9). However this may be the law of this country is contained in the present section which must be fairly construed according to its language in order to ascertain what that law is.

Appears

Firstly as regards judicial confessions the Criminal Procedure Code contains provisions as to the manner in which they should be recorded.

(1) R v Basanta supra.
 (2) R v Williams 3 Russ. Cr. 497 see also R v Cleves 4 C. & P. 221
R v Watkins 4 C. & P. 548 Rosecoe
Cr. Ev. 53 11th Ed. Field Ev. 5th
 Ed. 138
 (3) R v Barrington 2 Den. C. C.
 44 n. where Parke B. said to counsel for the prosecution 'You are bound to satisfy me that the confession which you sought to use against the prisoner was not obtained from him by improper means'

Taylor Ev. § 52

(4) 1893 Q. B. 1
 (5) 11th Ed. p. 49
 (6) 1893 Q. B. at p. 17
 (7) Id. at p. 17
 (8) Id. at p. 18
 (9) Id. at p. 18
 (9) B. v. L. R. 234

Confessions of accused persons recorded by Magistrates are admissible in evidence, subject only to the provisions of sections 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The first of these sections provides that any Magistrate not

Such confessions must be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364. The Magistrate referred to in section 164 is a Magistrate other than the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried (1). If the confession is made before a competent Magistrate who is making the preliminary enquiry, it is sufficient if the provisions of section 364 are complied with (2). But a record is unnecessary when a confession is made in Court to the officer trying the case at the time of trial where the accused can be convicted on the plea of guilty (3). It is important that a Magistrate before recording the confession of an accused person then in custody of the police should ascertain how long the accused has been in custody. If there is no record of that fact the

In cases coming within that section the Court may supplement the defective statement defects confession taken under section 164 admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of the latter section (7).

Under section 80 of this Act whenever any document is produced before any Court purporting to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person was voluntary purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true

(1) R v Jesso 23 W R Cr 16 (1875). In the matter of Behari Hajdu 5 C L R 238 (1879). Krishna Monce v R 6 C L R 289 (1880). R v Anunt rani Singh 5 C 954 F B 330 followed in R v Yakub Khan 5 A 253 (1883). the provisions of s 164 however have no application to statements taken in the course of a police investigation in the town of Calcutta. R v Asimadhub Muter 15 C 59^c (1888) followed in R v Vistra Babaji 21 B 495 (1896). A Deputy Magistrate should not act as Magistrate in a case in which he is himself the prosecutor and take confessions of prisoners before himself. R v Boudnath Singh 3 W R Cr 29 (1865).

(2) Krishna Monce v R 6 C L R 289 (1880). R v Anunt rani Singh supra. Yakub Khan supra.

(3) In the matter of Chumman Shah 3 C 756 (1878).

(4) R v Narayan 25 B 543 (1901).

(5) Cr Pr Code s 533 this section applies to confessions and statements recorded under both ss 164 and 364 the corresponding section of the old Code (s 346 Act of 1872) dealt only with statements and confessions made in the course of a preliminary enquiry and did not apply to confessions recorded under s 122 (164 of present Code). R v Rai Ratan 10 B H C R 166 (1873), consequently when a confession taken under s 122 was inadmissible in evidence oral evidence was excluded by s 91 post ib. R v Shrivatsa 1 B 219 (1876). R v Manu Talooce 4 C 696 (1879), contra R v Rajayya 2 M 5 (1878) but irregularly recorded confessions and statements under either s 164 or 476 of the present Act may either be (1) remediable under s 533 or (2) not. In the case of (1) oral evidence is admissible in the case of (2) it is admissible at any rate in the case of an irregular record under s 164 (see next note).

(6) R v Liran 9 M 224 (1886). Jai Narayan v R 17 C 86^c (1890).

(7) R v Liran supra. Jai Narayan Rai v R supra. latter case dissent from in R v Vistra Babaji 21 B 495 (1901) (1896).

and that such evidence, statements or confession was duly taken. This formal certificate is all that the law in strictness requires, and is prima facie evidence of the voluntary character of the confession. It is the duty of the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the confession is not excluded by this section (1). It is to be feared, however, that such certificates are often not worth much as evidence of the absence of inducement. Assuming that a prisoner has been induced to confess he will not unlikely assure the recording Magistrate that his confession is quite voluntary, knowing that he will leave the Magistrate's presence in the custody of the police and remain in their charge for many days to come (2). In the case of extra judicial confessions there is no such prima facie evidence as that afforded by the certificate. In both cases, however, there is to be considered the effect of the word "appear" in this section. This as already stated does not connote strict "proof". Still, although very probably a confession may be rejected on well-grounded conjecture, there must (unless the onus lies upon the prosecution) be something before the Court on which such conjecture can rest (3). In the first place does the onus lie upon the prosecution in all cases to prove that a confession is voluntary before it can be used in evidence? If this be the law in England, which is doubtful it has been held that such a rule does not prevail in this country. In the absence of evidence it is not to be presumed that a statement objected to on the ground of its having been induced by illegal pressure is inadmissible (4). To require as the criterion of admissibility affirmative proof that a duly recorded and certified confession was free and voluntary is not consistent with the terms of this Act or with previous decisions or practice (5). Thus a statement in writing by an accused person containing allegations which, whether they are true or not, appear to

(1) R v Narayan 25 B 543 (1901) R v Jadub Das, 27 C., 295, s c 4 C W. N. 129 R v Basuanta, supra. See Circular of Bombay High Court (Bombay Government Gazette, 1900 Part I p 919 2 Bom. L. R. 157), requiring Magistrates before recording confessions to satisfy themselves by all means in their power including the examination of the bodies of the accused that the confessions are voluntary. See R v Gunesb Koormee 4 W. R. Cr. 1 (1865) where the prisoner retracted his statement when read over to him and said that he was compelled to make it and the Sessions Judge without making any inquiry or taking evidence upon the point submitted the prisoner's statement to the jury as a confession, it was held that the Judge was wrong in so doing and that he should rather have charged the jury not to accept the prisoner's statement as a confession. As regards the Sessions Court it has been held that it is not necessary for a Sessions Judge to read out to prisoners confessions made by them before a Magistrate and ask them if they have any objection to the reception of their confession R v Musser Sheikh 14 W. R. Cr. 9 (1870). But it appears to have been the opinion of Sir Michael Westropp in R v Kassimath Dinkar 8 Bom. H. C. R. 137 138 that not only the committing Magistrate but also the trying Court ought to make needful enquiries where allegations are made in a regular and proper manner to the Sessions Court that a confession before a Magistrate was improperly induced a procedure which was followed in the English Courts so far back as the 12th century (Pollock and Maitland History of English Law Book II pp 650 651). See also R v Narayan supra s c 3 Bom. L. R. 122.

(2) See remarks of Westropp C. J. in R v Kassimath Dinkar 8 Bom. H. C. R. 126.

(3) R v Dasanta 2 Bom. L. R. 761 765 (1900).

(4) R v Balaant Pendharkar 11 Bom. H. C. R. 137 138 (1874) R v Dada Aia 15 B 452 480 (1889) R v Bhairu Singh 3 A 338 339 (1880). A prisoner alleging that a confession was unduly extorted should offer some proof of his statements to the Court. So an accused retracting a confession alleging that it was caused by ill treatment by the Police has it is held the onus of establishing such ill treatment or other inducement. Emperor v Akabli Katone 22 C. W. N. 809 s c 19 Cr. L. J. 959.

(5) R v Basuanta - Bom. L. R. 761 765 (1900) s c 25 B 168 disapproving R v Balva Das 4 Cr. R. J. of 1893 1 B. v. H. C. in which Parsons J. held that a confession to be admitted at all in evidence must be proved to have been made voluntarily and not to have been caused by improper inducement.

indicate that the statement was not made voluntarily, is inadmissible (1) If it, however, "appears" that the confession is not voluntary, it must be excluded Unless this is disclosed by the evidence for the prosecution the onus of establishing this fact will be upon the accused—a fact which in a large number of, if not in most cases, the accused will not be in a position to establish It is in this connection that the question of the retraction of confessions becomes of the highest importance If a confession, which has been previously made, whether judicially or extra judicially, is not retracted at the trial, there appears to be little or no reason why it should not be accepted without any proof being given of its voluntary character And it has been held that the law does not require that the confession of an accused person should be corroborated before it is acted upon It is for the Court to say whether the confession is to be believed or not (2) This is, however, not so where, as is frequently the case, the confession is retracted at the trial In a very large percentage of Sessions cases the prisoners will be found to have made elaborate confessions, shortly after coming into the hands of the Police, not infrequently these confessions are adhered to in the committing Magistrate's Court, they are almost invariably retracted when the proceedings have reached a final stage and the prisoner is at the Bar of the Sessions Court "These recurrent phenomena, peculiarly suggestive in themselves, can scarcely fail to attract the anxious notice of Judges who regard the efficient administration of justice as matter in which they are directly and personally implicated, not as a mere routine work mapped out for them in the higher tribunals" (3) The retraction of confessions is, as was said by Straight, J, in R v Babu Lal (4), 'an endless source of anxiety and difficulty to those who have to see that justice is properly administered'

In R v Thompson (5) Cave, J, said, I would add that for my part I always suspect these confessions, which are supposed to be the offspring of penitence and remorse, and which nevertheless are repudiated by the prisoner at the trial It is remarkable that it is of very rare occurrence for evidence of a confession to be given when the proof of the prisoner's guilt is otherwise clear and satisfactory, but when it is not clear and satisfactory, the prisoner is not infrequently alleged to have been seized with the desire born of penitence and remorse to supplement it with a confession—a desire which vanishes as soon as he appears in a Court of Justice 'Were it not for the presumption raised by section 80 of this Act it is submitted that the rule which should be followed in all cases of retracted confessions, is to throw the onus on the prosecution of affirmatively proving the voluntary character of the confession No doubt, abstractedly considered, the mere fact that a confession is retracted raises no inference of improper inducement (6) Such retraction may be due to the fear of punishment for an offence, which has been the subject of a true and voluntary confession Having regard, however, to the notorious fact that confessions are frequently extorted in this country (7), retraction might not improperly be held to cast upon the prosecution the onus of showing that the confession was a voluntary one When a prisoner has confessed and afterwards pleads not guilty, the truth and voluntariness of the confession is denied by implication When a prisoner says he has been forced to confess, the Judge is put upon judicial enquiry, and that enquiry, it may well be urged, should prece-

(1) R v Taranath Roy Chowdry (1910), 37 C 735

(2) Emperor v Dhani, 20 Cr L J, 721, See Shicoprasad Koori v Emperor, 20 Cr L J 562

(3) 2 Bom L R 157

(4) 6 A at p 543 (1884), referred to in R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461 (1889)

(5) L R 1893 2 Q B, 12 18 cited

with approval in the Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Easistoti 22 C, at p 172 (1894)

(6) So in Shicoprasad Koori v Emperor, 20 Cr L J 562 it was held that the fact of retraction would not (necessarily) deprive a confession of its (prima facie) voluntary character

(7) See cases cited post

the admission of the confession and any examination into its truth (1) is, however, the law now stands, provided a confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is even though the confession be retracted A mere subsequent retraction of a confession, which is duly recorded and certified by a Magistrate, is not enough in all cases to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced (3)

According to some rulings of the Madras High Court a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars (4) That Court has, however, more recently held (5) in general conformity with the views expressed by the other High Courts (6), that it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence The weight to be given to such a confession must depend upon the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted, including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction (7) The credibility of such a confession is in each case a matter to be decided by the Court according to the circumstances of each particular case, and if the Court is of opinion that such a confession is true, the Court is bound to act, so far as the person making it is concerned, upon such belief (8) The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of prudence rather than of law (9) It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated in material particulars by credible independent evidence (10) or unless the character of the confession and the circumstances under which it was taken indicate its truth (11)

A retracted confession is almost always open to suspicion, and the Courts will therefore, in conformity with the abovementioned rulings, generally require corroborative evidence of its truth, even though there be no absolute rule

- (1) 2 Bom L R 161 163
 (2) R v Sreemity Mongola 6 W R C R (1866) R v Musamut Jema 8 W R Cr, 40 (1867) R v Balvant Pendharkar, 11 Bom H C R 157 (1874) R v Pella Gazi 4 W R Cr 16 (1865) [when prisoners confess in the most circumstantial manner to having committed a murder the finding of the body is not absolutely essential to a conviction R v Buddharuddeen 11 W R 20 (1869) a Judge held to have exercised a proper discretion in not passing sentence of death in a case in which the dead body was not found R v Bhutun Rujman 12 W R Cr 49 (1869) [the properly attested confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is sufficient for his conviction without corroborative evidence and notwithstanding a subsequent denial before the Sessions Court] but where there was misconduct of the police it was held that the prisoners could not safely be convicted on their own retracted statements without any corroboration Sofruddeen v R 2 C L R 132 (1878) See note & also Sheo-prasad Kori v Emperor 20 C L J 67 supra
 (3) A v Bastanta 25 B 168 (1900)

Emperor v Kabili Katone 19 Cr L J, 959

(4) R v Rangt 10 M 295 (1886) R v Bharmappa 12 M 123 (1888) in R v Ram Fayer 19 M 482 (1896) the confessions were corroborated

(5) R v Raman 21 M 83 88 (1897) As to the necessity of corroboration when it is used as against others than the maker see Yas v R 28 C 683 (1901)

(6) R v Bhutun Rujman 12 W R Cr 49 (1869) R v Gharja 19 B 728 (1894) R v Gambia 23 B 316 (1898) R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897) R v Khetia (1907) 29 A 434 post p 186

(7) R v Raman 21 M 83 88 (1897)

(8) R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897)

(9) R v Gharja 19 B 728 (1894)

(10) R v Mahabir 18 A 8 (1895)

See R v Jadbai Das 4 C W 129 & c 27 C 795

(11) R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897), see also R v Kashinath Dinkar 8 Bom 11 C R Cr Ca 126 138 (1871) R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461 (1882) R v Labh Lal 6 A 509 542 (1884) R v Jigar Pandra 2 C 50 77 (1894), Dhruv Legal Remembrance v Karna Bastru 2 C 164 (1894)

indicate that the statement was not made voluntarily, is inadmissible (1) If it, however, "appears" that the confession is not voluntary, it must be excluded Unless this is disclosed by the evidence for the prosecution the onus of establishing this fact will be upon the accused—a fact which in a large number of, if not in most cases, the accused will not be in a position to establish It is in this connection that the question of the retraction of confessions becomes of the highest importance If a confession which has been previously made, whether judicially or extra judicially, is not retracted at the trial, there appears to be little or no reason why it should not be accepted without any proof being given of its voluntary character And it has been held that the law does not require that the confession of an accused person should be corroborated before it is acted upon It is for the Court to say whether the confession is to be believed or not (2) This is, however, not so where as is frequently the case, the confession is retracted at the trial In a very large percentage of Sessions cases the prisoners will be found to have made elaborate confessions, shortly after coming into the hands of the Police, not infrequently these confessions are adhered to in the committing Magistrate's Court, they are almost invariably retracted when the proceedings have reached a final stage and the prisoner is at the Bar of the Sessions Court 'These recurrent phenomena, peculiarly suggestive in themselves, can scarcely fail to attract the anxious notice of Judges who regard the efficient administration of justice as a matter in which they are directly and personally implicated, not as a mere routine work mapped out for them in the higher tribunals' (3) The retraction of confessions is, as was said by Straight, J., in R v Babu Lal (4), an endless source of anxiety and difficulty to those who have to see that justice is properly administered'

In R v Thompson (5) Cave, J., said, 'I would add that for my part I always suspect these confessions, which are supposed to be the offspring of penitence and remorse, and which nevertheless are repudiated by the prisoner at the trial It is remarkable that it is of very rare occurrence for evidence of a confession to be given when the proof of the prisoner's guilt is otherwise clear and satisfactory, but when it is not clear and satisfactory, the prisoner is not infrequently alleged to have been seized with the desire born of penitence and remorse to supplement it with a confession—a desire which vanishes as soon as he appears in a Court of Justice' Were it not for the presumption raised by section 80 of this Act it is submitted that the rule which should be followed in all cases of retracted confessions, is to throw the onus on the prosecution of affirmatively proving the voluntary character of the confession No doubt, abstractedly considered the mere fact that a confession is retracted raises no inference of improper inducement (6) Such retraction may be due to the fear of punishment for an offence, which has been the subject of a true and voluntary confession Having regard, however, to the notorious fact that confessions are frequently extorted in this country (7), retraction might not improperly be held to cast upon the prosecution the onus of showing that the confession was a voluntary one When a prisoner has confessed and afterwards pleads not guilty, the truth and voluntariness of the confession is denied by implication When a prisoner says he has been forced to confess, the Judge is put upon judicial enquiry, and that enquiry, it may well be urged, should precede

(1) R v Taranath Roy Chowdry (1910) 37 C 735

(2) Emperor v Dhani, 20 Cr L J., 721, See Sheoprasad Aocri v Emperor, 20 Cr L J 562

(3) 2 Bom L. R. 157

(4) 6 A., at p 543 (1884), referred to in R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461 (1889)

(5) L. R., 1893 2 Q B, 12 18 cited with approval in the Deputy Legal Re-membrancer v Karuna Eastobi 22 C., at p 172 (1894)

(6) So in Sheoprasad Aocri v Emperor 20 Cr L J 562 it was held that the fact of retraction would not (necessarily) deprive a confession of its (prima facie) voluntary character

(7) See cases cited post

the admission of the confession and any examination into its truth (1) is, however, the law now stands, provided it was voluntarily made, the confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is even though the confession be retracted subsequent retraction of a confession, Magistrate, is not enough in all cases to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced (3)

According to some rulings of the Madras High Court a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars (4) That Court has, however, more recently held (5) in general conformity with the views expressed by the other High Courts (6), that it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. The weight to be given to such a confession must depend upon the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction (7) The credibility of such a confession is in each case a matter to be decided by the Court according to the circumstances of each particular case and if the Court is of opinion that such a confession is true, the Court is bound to act, so far as the person making it is concerned upon such belief (8) The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of prudence rather than of law (9) It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated in material particulars by credible independent evidence (10) or unless the character of the confession and the circumstances under which it was taken indicate its truth (11)

A retracted confession is almost always open to suspicion, and the Courts will therefore, in conformity with the abovementioned rulings, generally require corroborative evidence of its truth, even though there be no absolute rule

(1) 2 Bom L R 161 163

(2) R v Sreenivasa Mongala 6 W R C R (1866) R v Mussamut Jema 8 W R Cr 40 (1867) R v Balkant Pandharkar 11 Bom H C R 157 (1874) R v Pello Gazi 4 W R Cr 16 (1865) [When prisoners confess in the most circumstantial manner to having committed a murder the finding of the body is not absolutely essential to a conviction R v Buddurhudeen 11 W R 20 (1869) a Judge held to have exercised a proper discretion in not passing sentence of death in a case in which the dead body was not found R v Bhuttan Ruyuan 12 W R Cr 49 (1869) [the properly attested confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is sufficient for his conviction without corroborative evidence and notwithstanding a subsequent denial before the Sessions Court] but where there was misconduct of the police it was held that the prisoners could not safely be convicted on their own retracted statements without any corroboration Sofruddeen v R 2 C L R 13 (1878) See note 5 also Sheoprasad Kari v Emperor, 20 Cr L J 562 supra

(3) A v Bastania 25 B 168 (1900)

Emperor v Kabili Kaloue 19 Cr L J, 959

(4) R v Rang 10 M 295 (1886) R v Blarriappa 12 M 123 (1888) in R v Ram Eyer 19 M 482 (1896) the confessions were corroborated

(5) R v Ramran 21 M 83 88 (1897) As to the necessity of corroboration when it is used as against others than the maker see Yasin v R 28 C 683 (1901)

(6) R v Bhuttan Ruyuan 12 W R, Cr 49 (1869) R v Gharya 19 B, 728 (1894) R v Ganbia 23 B 316 (1898), R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897) R v Kelie (1907) 29 A 434 post p 185

(7) R v Ramon 21 M 83 88 (1897)

(8) R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897)

(9) R v Gharya 19 B 728 (1894)

(10) R v Mahabir 18 A 78 (1895) See R v Jadab Das 4 C W 129, s c 27 C 295

(11) R v Maiku Lal 20 A 133 (1897), see also R v Kashinath Dinkar 8 Bom H C R Cr Ca 126 138 (1871), R v Dada Anu 15 B 452 461 (1899), R v Fahu Lal 6 A 509 542 (1884), R v Jagat Chandra 22 C, 50, 77 (1894), Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Bastia 22 C 164 (1894)

of law requiring corroboration of a retracted confession, the matter is one of prudence and it is prudent as a general rule to require corroboration (1) This procedure will in effect practically achieve the same results as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a retracted confession inasmuch as though these decisions require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character the truth of voluntariness may not unreasonably, though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established. In a recent case, where a friend of the accused had made a statement to a Police-officer (which was taken down in writing) but at the trial had denied having made it and the Presiding Judge had admitted the statement in evidence both to discredit its maker and also as evidence against the accused in that it contained statements made to the Police corroborating confessions made by the accused, it was held by the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that the said document ought not to have been used in evidence against the accused but that his confessions were not made irrelevant under this section by the addition of the statement (2)

The law, as it at present stands may thus be summarized (a) In the case of judicial confessions recorded in the manner prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code, the confession is to be held prima facie to be voluntary until the contrary is shown (b) Both in the case of judicial and extra judicial confessions the onus is upon the accused of showing that under this section a confession he has made is irrelevant (c) While the mere fact of retraction is not in itself sufficient to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced in ordinary cases as a general rule corroborative evidence of the truth of the confession and by implication of its voluntariness is required. Where a Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that the confessions must be taken to be voluntary and true because there was no evidence of ill treatment by the Police and the confessions had been repeated before the committing Magistrate nearly a month after they had been made and recorded the Court said "There is undoubtedly retracted it is, in a case of circumstances"

In other cases the Court is not at liberty to act upon mere conjecture and its rejection of a confession must be based upon the nature of the confession the facts disclosed by the evidence for the prosecution or adduced in proof of his plea of not guilty by the accused. If from the evidence given by the prosecution it appears doubtful whether the confession was voluntary the onus will of course lie upon the Crown to affirmatively establish that the confession was voluntary and that it is admissible. If in such case this be not established or if it appears, upon the evidence adduced by the prosecution or the accused that the confession was not voluntary it must be rejected under the terms of this section. S. 27 not only qualifies ss. 25, 26 but also this (4)

This and the succeeding sections up to and including the fortieth section, deal only with the specific form of admission known as a confession. But the preceding sections up to and including the twenty second section deal with admissions generally in both criminal as well as civil cases. The twenty first section therefore makes all confessions admissible except those which are

(1) R v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty S. B. (1911) 38 C. 559. Emperor v. Musat Jauar 19 Cr. L. J. 275 (the confirmation should be not only as to the general story of the crime but as to the accused's connection with it. In Moharrat Ali v. Emperor 23 C. W. N. 886 the confession was rejected. Upendra Nath Das v.

Emperor 19 Cr. L. J. 826. Bladw v. Emperor 19 Cr. L. J. 861, 46 I. C. 1003.

(2) R v. Narayan Raghunath Patil (1907) J. B. 111 (Full Bench).

(3) R v. Durgaya 3 Bom. L. R. 441 (1901).

(4) Amiruddin v. Emperor 45 C. 557.

declared to be irrelevant or which are prohibited by this and the following sections. By sections 24—26 the Legislature intended to throw a safeguard around prisoners (1)

It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what constitutes an inducement a term which of course includes torture. The question is one for the discretion of the Judge, and its decision will vary in each particular case (1 post). A statement is inadmissible under this section only if the Court considers it to have been made in consequence of "any inducement, threat or promise" (2). The relevancy of the confession is to be determined by the Court that is the Judge or the Magistrate, and not the jury (3). "Section 24, whilst requiring the inducement to be offered by a person in authority, leaves it entirely to the Court to form its own opinion as to whether the inducement threat or promise was sufficient to lead the prisoner to suppose that he would derive some benefit or avoid some evil of a temporal nature by confessing (4). It is immaterial to whom a confession obtained by undue influence, is made. Thus a confession so tainted is irrelevant whether made to the Sessions Judge (5) or Magistrate (6) or any Police officer (7) or any other person e.g. the Traffic Manager of a Railway (8) or the Master of a vessel (9). It is also immaterial whether the confession be made to the same person who has used undue influence (10) or whether it be made to a person other than the one who has held out the inducement, threat or promise (11). 'Confessions made some days after arrest may also often be true but such confessions will I believe in almost every instance not have been made voluntarily but have been extorted by maltreatment or induced by witness for the Crown (12). Confessions obtained by undue influence especially by the Police and this fact has been the subject of frequent judicial and public comment (14). 'The reports show that many confessions are induced by improper means, and that innocent

Confession by an accused person

(1) R v Ra a Birapa 3 B 12 17 (1878) per West J., as to the construction of ss 24—26 see The Madras Law Journal Jan and Feb 1899 pp 12—44

(2) R v Halwant Pendi arkar 11 Bom H C R 137 138 (1874)

(3) R v Hannah Moore 21 L J Mag Ca 199 see R v Navroji Dadabhai 9 Bom H C R 358 367 (1872)

(4) R v Navroji Dadabhai supra at p 36 per Sargent C J see also s 28 post

(5) R v Mussamat Luchoo 5 N W P 86 (1873)

(6) Id R v Ra a Birapa 3 B 12 (1878) R v Asghar Ali 2 A 260 (1879) R v Ueer 10 C 775 (1884)

(7) R v Mussamat Luchoo supra R v Ra a Birapa supra

(8) R v Navroji Dadabhai supra

(9) R v Hicks 10 B L R App 1 (1872)

(10) R v Hicks supra R v Mussamat Luchoo supra R v Ra a Birapa supra R v Asghar Ali supra R v Ueer supra

(11) R v Navroji Dadabhai supra R v Mussamat Luchoo supra

(12) R v Gobardhan 9 A 578 566

(1887) per Brodhurst J

(13) Id R v Madar Weekly Notes (1880) p 59 cited in R v Belary Singh 7 W R Cr 3 (1867) [exposition of a Police-officers powers of arrest and detention on the view to the suppression of torture] R v Sagal Sanba 21 C 647 660 661 (1893)

(14) See R v Kohdai Kahar 5 W R Cr 6 (1866) R v Behary Singh 7 W R Cr 3 (1867) R v Nityo Gopal 2 W R Cr 80 (1875) Babu Lal 6 A 509 517 543 (1884) R v Gobardhan 9 A 578 566 (1887) R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461 (1889). It appears to be well known that the Police are in the habit of extorting confessions by illegal and improper means. They find that no enquiry is made of them as to the truth of such charges but they are merely told they must obtain convictions per Pethe ram C J R v Ra amund All W N (1880) p 221 Stephen Hist of Criminal Law p 442 First Report of Indian Law Commissioners and the Report of the late Police Commission Section 163 Cr P Code expressly forbids any such inducement as is mentioned in this section being offered people often accuse themselves falsely is known to the reader of any book on Evidence"(1)

When a confession has been received and it afterwards appears from other evidence, that an inducement, threat, or promise was held out the proper course for the Judge is to strike the confession out of the record and to tell the jury to pay no attention to it (2) A Magistrate acts without due discretion when as a prosecutor, he holds out promises to prisoners as an inducement to confess (3) A Police officer acts improperly and illegally in offering any inducement to an accused person to make any disclosure or confession (4) In deter-

this section it is necessary have exercised inducement in

'), and (b) the nature of the inducement, threat, or promise [such inducement must (a) have reference to the charge, and (b) be sufficient, etc.] The word accused in sections 24 to 26 includes any person who subsequently becomes accused provided that at the time of making the statement criminal proceedings were in prospect (5)

"Person in authority"

Such a person must be in fact a person in authority. The mere belief of a confessing accused is not enough. But what is such a person (6) No definition or illustration is given of this expression. It is an expression well known to English lawyers on questions of this nature, and although, as all rules of evidence which were in force at the passing of the Act are repealed the English decisions on the subject can scarcely be regarded as authorities, they may still serve as valuable guides (7) A too restrictive meaning should not be placed on these words (8) The test would seem to be had the person authority to interfere with the matter and any concern or interest in it would appear to be held sufficient to give him that authority, as in R v Warringham (9), where Parke, B., held that the wife of one of the prosecutors and concerned in the management of their business was a person in authority, and we find the rule so laid down in Archbold's Criminal Practice (10) Accordingly, it was held that a travelling auditor in the service of the G I P Railway Company was a 'person in authority' within the meaning of this section (11) The members of a panchayat which sat to consider whether two persons should be excommunicated from caste for having committed a murder were held not to be persons in authority (12) case the where a that he el(14), a

(1) R v Dada Ana 15 B 452 461 (1889) per Jermine J

(2) R v Garner 1 Den C C 329

(3) R v Pashon Singh 1 W R Cr 24 (1864)

(4) R v Dhanum Dutt 8 W R Cr, 13 (1867) Cr Pr Code s 163

(5) Smith v Emperor 19 Cr L J 189 s c 43 1 C 605

(6) R v Ganesh Chandra 50 C, 127 (1923)

(7) R v Narroji Dadabhai 9 Bom H C R 354 368 (1872) per Sargent, C J

(8) Nazir Jhamdar v R 9 C W N 44 (1905)

(9) 2 Den C C 447

(10) R v Narroji Dadabhai supra 369 per Sargent C J 'The inducement and authority must all be understood in relation to the prosecution, that is to say, a person is deemed to be a person in authority within the meaning of this rule only if he stands in certain relations which are considered to imply some power of control or interference in regard to the prosecution. Wills Fv 210 Smith v Emperor 19 Cr L J 189 (the expression has a wider meaning than the actual prosecutor)

(11) P v Narroji Dadabhai supra

(12) R v Mohan Lal 4 A 46 (1881) And see also R v Fernandez 4 Bom L R, 785 (1902) where the member of a Panch was held to be a person in authority

(13) Nazir Jhamdar v R 9 C W N 474 (1905) followed in R v Jasha Bena 11 C W N 904 (1907)

(14) R v Karia Biraja 3 B 12 (1878) R v Fakira Appaja 40 B, 220 (1916)

collecting and assistant janclayet(1) & Police Constable(2), Superintendent of Excise(3), Military Officer(4), & Magistrate(5), and a Sessions Judge are "persons in authority" & are also the master of a vessel(6), the prosecutor(7), or his wife(8) or his attorney(9) the master or mistress of the prisoner, if the offence has been committed against the person or property of either but otherwise not(10), and generally any person engaged in the arrest detention examination or prosecution of the accused(11) It has been held in England not to be necessary that the promise or threat should be actually uttered by the person in authority if it was uttered by some one else in his presence and truth acquiesced in by him, so as to appear to have his confirmation and authority(12) A confession made to, but not induced by, a person in authority is admissible(13) while conversely a confession induced by though not made to such a person will be rejected(14) Confessions procured by inducements proceeding from persons having no authority are admissible(15)

The inducement must (a) have reference to the charge against the accused person that is the charge of an offence in the Criminal Courts(16) The inducement must have reference to the offence the subject of the prisoner's position as he does or does not confess(18) And if the inducement be made as to one charge it will not affect a confession as to a totally different charge(19) An

(1) R v Ganesh Chandra 30 C 127 (1973)

(2) R v Mussamat Lucloo & N W P 86 (1873) R v Shephard 7 C & P 519 R v Pountney 7 C & P 307 R v Laugler 2 C & K 227 R v Millen 3 Cox 507 as to private persons arresting see 3 Russ Cr 464 and note Roscoe Cr Ev 17th Ed 40 the wife of a constable is not a person in authority R v Hardick 1 C & P 98 note (b)

(3) Ruknialli v Emperor 29 C W N 451 s c 19 Cr L J 574

(4) Smith v Emperor 19 Cr L J 189

(5) R v Aslgar Ali 2 A 260 (1879) R v Ueer 10 C 77a (1884) R v Cleaves 4 C & P 221 R v Cooper 5 C & P 535 R v Parker L & C 42 R v Ramdhun Sing 1 W L Cr 24 (1864) [Honorary Magistrate acting as prosecutor] also it has been held in England the Magistrate's Clerk R v Dren 8 C & P 140 But see R v Fakiro Appaya 40 B 220 (1916) in which it was questioned whether a statement made before a commuting Magistrate is governed by this section or by the Criminal Procedure Code section 287

(6) R v Hicks 10 B L R App 1 (182) but see also R v Moore 2 Den 526 explaining R v Parratt 4 C & P 50

(7) R v Jenks R & R 429 R v Jones R R 152

(8) R v Worthingham ante R v Upchurch 1 R & M C C 465 R v Taylor 8 C & P 733 R v Moore 2 Den C C 522 R v Sleeman Dears C C 249

(9) R v Croxdon 2 Cox 67

(10) R v Moore 2 Den 572

(11) See Taylor Ev §§ 873 84 Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 40 Phipson Ev 3rd Ed 228 ib 5th Ed 250 Wills Ev 210 R v Moore 2 Den C C 522 576 ib 2nd Ed 307

(12) R v Laugler 2 C & K 225 R v Taylor 8 C & P 733 Quare whether the section by the use of the words "proceeding from" enacts a different rule It is submitted not but see Field Ev 136 ib 6th Ed 96

(13) R v Gibbons 1 C & P 97 R v Tyler 1 C & P 179

(14) R v Boswell 1 Car & M 584 R v Blackburn 6 Cox 333

(15) See Roscoe Cr Ev 44 Field Ev 136 ib 6th Ed 96

(16) See R v Mohan Lal 4 A 46 (1881)

(17) In R v Hicks 10 B L R App 1 a confession under threat made for purpose other than to extort confession was held to be inadmissible but the correctness of this ruling is doubtful

(18) R v Garner 2 C & K 970 Phipson Ev 3rd Ed 229 ib 5th Ed 251 Taylor Ev §§ 879-881 3 Russ Cr 42 43 Steph Dg Art 27 Wills Ev 210 ib 2nd Ed 302 the threat must be a threat to prosecute or take some step adverse to the defendant's interests connected therewith i.e. the prosecution and the promise must be a promise to forbear from some such course ib

(19) R v Horner 3 Russ Cr 452n unless here two crimes being charged both form parts of the same transaction R v Hearn 1 Car & M 109 inducement relating to some collateral matter unconnected with the charge will not exclude a confession (1). Thus a promise to give the prisoner a glass of spirits(2), or to strike off his handcuff(3) or let him see his wife(4), will not be a bar to the admissibility of the confession. The inducement need not be expressed, but may be implied from the conduct of the person in authority, the declarations of the prisoner, or the circumstances of the case(5), nor need it be made directly to the prisoner, it is sufficient if it may reasonably be presumed to have come to his knowledge, providing of course, it appears to have induced the confession (6).

The advantage to be gained or the evil to be avoided

Secondly—The inducement must (b) in the opinion of the Court be sufficient (see next paragraph) and the advantage to be gained, or the evil to be avoided, must (a) be of a temporal nature, therefore any inducement having reference to a future state of reward or punishment does not affect the admissibility of a confession, thus a confession will not be excluded which has been obtained from the accused by moral or religious exhortation, however urgent whether by a chaplain(7), or others(8), e.g., Be sure to tell the truth (9) "I hope you will tell because Mrs G can ill afford to lose the money (10), you", kneel down and tell me the truth if you have committed a fault do not don't run your soul into more sin, evil must (b) have reference to the future, for instance, that by confessing he will happen to him(17), that steps will be taken to get him off(18), that he will be pardoned(19), that he

(1) Taylor Ev, § 880

(2) R v Serton cited in Joy on Confession 17—19 is not law Taylor Ev § 880 3 Russ Cr 442 Roscoe Cr Ev, 42 12th Ed 38

(3) R v Green 6 C & P 652

(4) R v Lloyd ib 393

(5) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 251 R v Gillis 17 Ir C I 534 cited

(6) Ib Taylor Ev § 882 but a promise or threat to one prisoner will not exclude a confession made by another who was present and heard the inducement R v Jacobs 4 Cox 54 and see R v Bate 11 Cox 686 where a confession by a prisoner was received although an inducement had been held out to an accomplice which might have been communicated to the prisoner but see R v Harding 1 Arm M & O 340

(7) R v Gilham 1 Moo C C 186 (in this case the gaol chaplain told a prisoner that, as the minister of God he ought to warn him not to add sin to sin by attempting to dissemble with God and that it would be important for him to confess his sins before God and to repair, as far as he could any injury he had done the prisoner after this made two confessions to the gaoler and mayor which were held to be admissible)

(8) R v Jarvis L R 1 C C R, 96 R v Reete ib 367

(9) R v Court 7 C & P 486 R v Helles 1 Cox 247 "as a universal rule

an exhortation to speak the truth ought not to exclude confession per Erle J in R v Moore 2 Den C C 522 523

(10) R v Lloyd 6 C & P 393

(11) R v Reete L R 1 C C R, 362

(12) R v Wild R & M 452

(13) R v Jarvis L R 1 C C R 96

(14) R v Sleeman Dears 269

(15) Thus in R v Mohan Lal 4 A, 46 supra the evil threatened (excommunication for life) had no reference to the criminal proceedings against the prisoners. The case of R v Hick 10 B L R App 1 supra is also open to the objection that it is not in accord with this portion of the section

(16) R v Naroji Dadabhai 9 Pcm H C R 258 (18 2)

(17) R v Mussumat Lucloo 5 V W P 86 (1873)

(18) R v Kaia Birapa 3 B 12 (1878), or that if he confessed to the Magistrate he would get off R v Ramdhan Singh 1 W R Cr (1864)

(19) R v Asghar Ali 2 A 260 (18 9) R v Radhanath Dosadh 8 W R Cr, 33 (1867) Bish Manjee v R 9 W R Cr 16 (1868) [promises of immunity by the police] R v Jagat Chandra 22 C, 50 73 (1894) see Roscoe Cr Ev 45 Abdul Karim v R 1 All L J 110 (1904) a confession however made under promise of pardon may be admissible under s 339 Cr Pr Code R v Asghar Ali see supra, R v Hanmant 1 B 610 (1877)

would be let off if he disclosed everything(1) or the like. A promise or threat as to some purely collateral matter will not exclude the confession (v ante)

As the admission or rejection of a confession rests wholly in the discretion of the Judge, it is difficult to lay down particular rules a priori, for the government of that discretion, and the more so, because much must necessarily depend on the age, experience, intelligence, and character of the prisoner, and on the circumstances under which the confession was made. Language sufficient to overcome the mind of one, may have no effect upon that of another, a consideration which may serve to reconcile some contradictory decisions where the principal facts appear similar in the Reports, but the lesser circumstances, though often very material in such preliminary enquiries, are omitted (2). The reported cases in which statements by prisoners have been held inadmissible are very numerous. Various expressions have been held to amount to an inducement. But the principle has been thus broadly stated. It does not turn upon what may have been the precise words used, but in each case, whatever the words used may be, it is for the Judge to consider before he admits or rejects the evidence, whether the words used were such as to convey to the mind of the person addressed an intimation that it will be better for him to confess that he committed the crime, or worse for him if he does not (3). It is not because the law is afraid of having the truth elicited that these confessions are excluded, but it is because the law is jealous of not having the truth (4). The following are given as examples of confessions which have been admitted or rejected. It has been already mentioned that confessions induced by mere moral or religious exhortation are admissible. 'At one time almost any invitation to make a disclosure was held to imply some threat or promise, but a sounder practice has since prevailed and the words used are construed in their natural sense, so that many of the older decisions are no longer safe guides (5). Such expressions, therefore as 'what you say u ' or for or against you ' will not exclude imports a mere caution (7). Nor does the hout it, ' amount to a threat (8). There is, however, one form of inducement, namely, 'you had better tell the truth' and equivalent expressions which are regarded as having acquired a fixed meaning in this connection as if a technical term and are always held to import a threat or promise (9). Thus, 'you had better pay the money than go to jail' constitute an inducement (10). The terms of the inducement constantly involve both threat and promise, a threat of prosecution if disclosure is not made, a promise of forgiveness if it is. The following for instance, have been

'Sufficient to give the accused grounds "

(1) R v Ganesh Chandra 50 C 127 (1923)

(2) Roseoe Cr Ev 40 see cases there collected.

(3) R v Garner 2 C & K 920 925 per Erle J

(4) R v Mansfield 14 Cox C C 938 640 per Williams J

(5) Wills Ev 212 ib 2nd Ed 303 See judgment of Parke B in R v Baldry 2 Den at p 445

(6) R v Baldry 2 Den 430 over ruling several earlier cases

(7) R v Jarvis L R 1 C C R 96 Il rights case 1 Law 48 and see R v Long 6 C & P 179 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 255

(8) R v Reason 12 Cox 278

(9) Wills Ev 212 ib 2nd Ed 303

The words 'you had better' seem to have acquired a sort of technical meaning per Kelly C B in R v Jarvis supra see also per Field J in R v Usher 10 C 775 776 (1884) and per Sargent C J in R v Navroji Dadabhai 9 Bom H C R 358 (1872) R v Fennell 7 Q B D 147 R v Hatts 49 L T 780 R v Walkley 6 C & P 175 but this construction will not prevail if such a statement is accompanied by other words which indicate that it was not intended in this sense as if 'you had better as good boys tell the truth' R v Reeve L R 1 C C R 362 I dare say you had a hand in it you say as well tell me all about it is an inducement R v Croxden 2 Cox 67

(10) R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C R 358 (1872)

inducement relating to some collateral matter unconnected with the charge will not exclude a confession (1). Thus a promise to give the prisoner a glass of spirits (2), or to strike off his handcuffs (3), or let him see his wife (4), will not be a bar to the admissibility of the confession. The inducement need not be expressed but may be implied from the conduct of the person in authority, the declarations of the prisoner, or the circumstances of the case (5), nor need it be made directly to the prisoner, it is sufficient if it may reasonably be presumed to have come to his knowledge, providing of course, it appears to have induced the confession (6).

The advantage to be gained or the evil to be avoided

Secondly—The inducement must (b) in the opinion of the Court be sufficient (see next paragraph) and the advantage to be gained, or the evil to be avoided, must (a) be of a temporal nature, therefore any inducement having reference to a future state of reward or punishment does not affect the admissibility of a confession, thus a confession will not be excluded which has been obtained from the accused by moral or religious exhortation, however urgent whether by a chaplain (7), or others (8), e.g., 'Be sure to tell the truth' (9) 'I hope you will tell because Mrs G can ill afford to lose the money' (10), 'you had better, as good boys, tell the truth' (11), 'kneel down and tell me the truth' (12), 'if you have committed a fault do not true' (13) 'don't run your soul into more sin, for the advantage or evil must (b) have reference to the proceedings against the accused (15) as, for instance, that by confessing he will not be sent to jail (16), that nothing will happen to him (17) that steps will be taken to get him off (18), that he will be pardoned (19), that he

(1) Taylor Ev. § 880

(2) R v Sexton cited in Joy on Confession 17—19 is not law. Taylor Ev. § 880. 3 Russ. Cr. 445. Roscoe Cr. Ev. 42. 12th Ed. 38.

(3) R v Green 6 C & P 655.

(4) R v Lloyd ib. 393.

(5) Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 251. R v Gilks 17 Ir. C. 1. 534 cited.

(6) Ib. Taylor Ev. § 885 but a promise of threat to one prisoner will not exclude a confession made by another who was present and heard the inducement. R v Jacob 4 Cox 54 and see R v Bate 11 Cox 686 where a confession by a prisoner was received although an inducement had been held out to an accomplice which might have been communicated to the prisoner but see R v Harding 1 Arm. M. & O. 340.

(7) R v Gilham 1 Moo. C. C. 186 (in this case the gaol chaplain told a prisoner that as the minister of God he ought to warn him not to add sin to sin by attempting to dissemble with God and that it would be important for him to confess his sins before God and to repair as far as he could any injury he had done the prisoner after this made two confessions to the gaoler and mayor which were held to be admissible).

(8) R v Jarvis L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96. R v Reece ib. 367.

(9) R v Court 7 C & P 426, R v Helles 1 Cox 247, as a universal rule

an exhortation to speak the truth ought not to exclude confession. per Erle J., in R v Moore 2 Den. C. C. 522. 523.

(10) R v Lloyd 6 C & P 393.

(11) R v Recte L. R. 1 C. C. R. 367.

(12) R v Wild R. & M. 452.

(13) R v Jarr L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96.

(14) R v Sleean Den. 269.

(15) Thus in R v Mohan Lal 4 A. 46 supra the evil threatened (excommunication for life) had no reference to the criminal proceedings against the prisoners. The case of R v Hick 10 B. L. R. App. 1 supra is also open to the objection that it is not in accord with this portion of the section.

(16) R v Narayan Dadabhai 9 Bom. H. C. R. 258 (1872).

(17) R v Mussamat Lichoo 5 N. W. P. 86 (1873).

(18) R v Rama Birappa 3 B. 12 (1878) or that if he confessed to the Magistrate he would get off. R v Ramdhan Singh 1 W. R. Cr. (1864).

(19) R v Asghar Ali 2 A. 260 (1879). R v Rodhanath Dasadh 8 W. R. Cr. 53 (1867). Bish Manjee v. R. 9 W. R. Cr. 16 (1868) [promises of immunity by the police]. R v Jagat Chandra 22 C. 50. 73 (1894) see Roscoe Cr. Ev. 45. Abdul Karim v. R. 1 All. L. J. 110 (1904) a confession however made under promise of pardon may be admissible under s. 339. Cr. Pr. Code. R v Asghar Ali see supra, R v Hanmantia 1 B. 610 (1877).

would be let off if he disclosed everything (1) or the like. A promise or threat as to some purely collateral matter will not exclude the confession (vide ante)

As the admission or rejection of a confession rests wholly in the discretion of the Judge, it is difficult to lay down particular rules, a priori, for the admission or rejection of a confession, so, because much must necessarily

"Sufficient to give the accused grounds"

and character of the prisoner, and confession was made. Language sufficient to overcome the mind of one, may have no effect upon that of another, a consideration which may serve to reconcile some contradictory decisions where the principal facts appear similar in the Reports, but the lesser circumstances, though often very material in such preliminary enquiries, are omitted (2). The reported cases in which statements by prisoners have been held inadmissible are very numerous. Various expressions have been held to amount to an inducement. But the principle has been thus broadly stated: 'It does not turn upon what may have been the precise words used, but in each case, whatever the words used may be, it is for the Judge to consider, before he admits or rejects the evidence, whether the words used were such as to convey to the mind of the person addressed an intimation that it will be better for him to confess that he committed the crime or worse for him if he does not' (3). It is not because the law is afraid of having the truth elicited that these confessions are excluded, but it is because the law is jealous of not having the truth (4). The following are given as examples of confessions which have been admitted or rejected. It has been already mentioned that confessions induced by mere moral or religious exhortation are admissible. At one time almost any invitation to make a disclosure was held to imply some threat or promise, but a sounder practice has since prevailed and the words used are construed in their natural sense, so that many of the older decisions are no longer safe guides (5). Such expressions therefore as 'what you say will be used as evidence against you, or for or against you' will not exclude a confession (6), for such language imports a mere caution (7). Nor does the expression, 'I must know more about it' amount to a threat (8). There is, however, one form of inducement, namely 'you had better tell the truth' and equivalent expressions which are regarded as having acquired a fixed meaning in this connection as if a technical term and are always held to import a threat or promise (9). Thus 'you had better pay the money than go to jail' constitute an inducement (10). The terms of the inducement constantly involve both threat and promise, a threat of prosecution if disclosure is not made, a promise of forgiveness if it is. The following for instance have been

(1) R v Ganesh Chandra 50 C 127 (1923)

(2) Roseoe Cr Ev 40 see cases there collected

(3) R v Garner 2 C & K 970 925 per Erle J

(4) R v Mansfield 14 Cox C C 938 640 per Williams J

(5) Wills Ev 212 1b 2nd Ed 303 See judgment of Parke B in R v Baldry 2 Den at p 445

(6) R v Baldry 2 Den 430 overruling several earlier cases

(7) R v Jarvis L R 1 C C R 96 Wright's case 1 Law 48 and see R v Long 6 C & P 179 Phipps on Ev 2nd Ed 255

(8) R v Reason 12 Cox 228

(9) Wills Ev 212 1b 2nd Ed 303

The words 'you had better' seem to have acquired a sort of technical meaning per Kelly C B in R v Jarvis supra see also per Field J in R v Usher 10 C 715 76 (1884) and per Sargent C J in R v Navroji Dadabha 9 Bom H C R 358 (1872) R v Fennell 7 Q B D 147 R v Hatts 49 L T 780 R v Walkley 6 C & P 175 but this construction will not prevail if such a statement is accompanied by other words which indicate that it was not intended in this sense as if 'you had better as good boys tell the truth' R v Reeve L R 1 C C R 362 'I dare say you had a hand in it you may as well tell me all about it' is an inducement R v Croxson 2 Cox 67

(10) R v Navroji Dadabha, 9 Bom H C R 358 (1872)

held to be such statements when made by persons in authority, "If you don't tell the truth, I will send for the constable to take you" (1), "if you tell me where my goods are, I will be favourable to you" (2), "if you confess the truth nothing will happen to you" (3), "if you don't tell me, I will give you in charge of the police till you do tell me" (4), "if you are guilty, do confess, it will perhaps save your neck, you will have to go to prison, pray tell me if you did it" (5), "I only want my money, if you give me that you may go to the devil" (6), "unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a Magistrate" (7), "the watch has been found, and if you do not tell me who your partner was, I will commit you to prison" (8), "if I tell the truth shall I be hung?" "No, nonsense, you will not be hung" (9), "tell me what really happened, and I will take steps to get you off" (10), "if you confess to the Magistrate, you will get off" (11), "it is no use to deny it, for there are the man and boy who will swear they saw you do it" (12), "I shall be obliged if you would tell me what you know about it, if you will not, of course, we can do nothing for you" (13), "I will get you released if you speak the truth" (14), "you had better split and not suffer for all of them" (15). A confession made under a promise of pardon is inadmissible (16). The threat or promise need not be in express terms, if the intention is still clear, as in the case of the following statements: "If you (the person in authority) forgive me, I (the prisoner) will tell you the truth. Reply 'Anne, did you do it?' (17). 'If you don't tell me, you may get yourself into trouble, and it will be the worse for you' (18). But a promise or threat must be imported. Thus the following statements have been held not to exclude the confession: "I must know more about it" (19), "now is the time for you to take it [the stolen property] back to the prosecutrix" (20).

25 No confession made to a Police officer (21), shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence (22).

Principle.—The powers of the police are often abused for purposes of extortion and oppression (23), and confessions obtained by the police through

(1) R v Hearn, 1 Car & M 109
Wills Ex 212 ib 2nd Ed 303 R v Richards 5 C & P 318

(2) I v Cass 1 Lea 293 note

(3) R v Mussa nat Luchoo 5 N W P, 86 (1873)

(4) R v Luchhurst Dears C C 245

(5) R v Upchurch 1 Moo C C 465

(6) R v Jones R & R 152

(7) R v Thompson 1 Lea 291

(8) R v Parratt 4 C & P 570

(9) R v Windsor, 4 F & F 366

(10) R v Rama Barapa 3 B 12 (1878)

(11) R v Ramdhun Sing 1 W R., Cr, 24 (1864)

(12) R v Mills 6 C & P 146

(13) K v Fortridge 7 C & P., 551

(14) R v Dhurum Dutt 8 W R Cr 13 (1867) Emperor v Dinanath Jundary 45 B 1086 (1921) s c 23 Bom L R. 338 see Zeala v Emperor 37, 1 C, 814, where the statement was held admissible

(15) K v Thomas 6 C & P, 353

(16) R v Asghar Ali 2 A 260 (1879)

R v Radhanath Dosadh 8 W R Cr 53 (1867) and as to confession induced by knowledge that reward and pardon had been offered see R v Blackburn 6 Cox 333 K v Boswell 1 Car & M 584, R v Dinghy 1 C & K 637, Emperor v Anant Kumar Banerji 32 C L J, 204

(17) P v Mansfield 14 Cox 639, Wills Ex 12 ib 2nd Ed 303

(18) R v Golej 10 Cox 536

(19) R v Reason 12 Cox 228, Phipson Ev 3rd Ed 233

(20) P v Jones 12 Cox 241

(21) In Upper Burma after the word 'Police officer' the words 'who is not a Magistrate' are to be inserted see Act XIII of 1898

(22) The above section was taken from s 148 Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) see R v Babu Lal, 6 A 509 512 (1834) As to statements made to a Police-officer investigating a case and as to the use of police reports and diaries and statements made before the police. See Cr Pr Code, and v Salt v R (1909), 36 C. 560 Sikandar v Emperor 20 Cr L J 83

(23) See Extract from The First Report of the Indian Law Commissioners cited in Field Ev., 140 142, and remarks of Straight J, in R v Babu Lal 6 A., 507 542 (1834), and Mahmood J ib., 523, but see also remarks of Duthoit J ib., 550

Confession made to a Police officer not to be proved undue influence have been the subject of frequent judicial comment (1) "The object of this section is to prevent confessions obtained from accused persons through any undue influence being received as evidence against them," (2) If a confession be "made to a Police-officer, the law says that such a confession shall be absolutely excluded from evidence, because the person to whom it was made is not to be relied on for proving such a confession, and he is moreover suspected of employing coercion to obtain the confession" "The broad ground for not admitting confessions made to a Police-officer is to avoid the danger of admitting false confessions" (3)

s. 26 (Confession while in custody of police) s. 27 (Facts discovered in consequence of information)

COMMENTARY.

The rule enacted by this section is without limitation or qualification, and a confession made to a Police-officer is inadmissible in evidence, except so far as is provided by the twenty seventh section, post (4) It is better in construing a section such as the 25th which was intended as a wholesome protection to the accused, to construe it in its widest and most popular signification. The enactment in this section is one to which the Court should give the fullest effect (5) The terms of the section are imperative and a confession made to a Police-officer under any circumstances is inadmissible in evidence against the accused. The next section does not qualify the present one, but

Construction of section

other hand, the twenty sixth section cannot be treated as an exception or proviso to the twenty fifth section. The two sections lay down two clear and definite rules. In this section the criterion for excluding a confession is the answer to the question—to whom was the confession made? If the answer is, that it was made to a Police officer, it is excluded. On the other hand, the criterion adopted in the twenty sixth section for excluding a confession is the answer to the question—under what circumstances was the confession made? If the answer is, that it was made whilst the accused was in the custody of a Police officer, the confession is excluded, 'unless it was made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate' (7) Therefore a confession to a Police officer, even though made in the presence of a Magistrate, is inadmissible (8) The provisions

(1) v ante notes to s. 25

(2) Per Garth. C J. in R v Hurribole Chunder 1 C 207 215 (1876) 25 W R Cr 36 see also in the matter of Hiran Miya 1 C L R. 21 (1877) R v Panicham 4 A. 198 204 (1882) Sections 25 26 27 differ widely from the law of England and were inserted in the Act of 1861 (from which they have been taken) in order to prevent the practice of torture by the police for the purpose of extracting confessions. Steph. Introd. 165

(3) R v Babu Lal 6 A. 509 532 (1884) per Mahmood J. and v ib 544 per Straight J. ib 513 per Oldfield J.

(4) In the matter of Hiran Miya 1 C L R. 21 (1877) R v Babu Lal 6 A. 509 (1884) See Es. peror v Hira Gobatt 21 Bom. L R 724 cited under s. 8 ante See also to construction of this section the Madras Law Journal Jan and Feb 1895 pp 31—36

(5) Per Garth C J. in R v Hurribole Chunder 1 C 215 216 (1876) 25 W R Cr 36 but see dictum of Stuart C J. in R v Panicham 4 A. 198 203 (1882) in which however Straight J. seems not to have concurred and which was dissented from by the Calcutta Court in Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 365 641 (1885) the prohibition in this section must be strictly applied R v Panicham 4 A. 204 per Straight J.

(6) R v Hurribole Chunder supra 215 in the matter of Hiran Miya supra R v Babu Lal 6 A. 509 532 (1884)

(7) R v Babu Lal 6 A. 59 532 (1884) per Mahmood J. and v ib 544 545 per Straight J.

(8) Ib R v Domun Kahar 12 W R, Cr 82 (1869) R v Mon Mohan 24 W R Cr 33 (1875) in this case the confession was made to the Magistrate but the report shows that had it been made of the section are unqualified and it is therefore immaterial whether the confessing party was, at the time of making the confession, accused or not, or whether he was in police custody or not, and whether the confession was made to a Police officer in the presence of a Magistrate or not. When a Police-officer has evidence before him sufficient to justify the arrest of an accused, he should not, preliminary to the arrest, examine him and record his statement. The evidence of the Police-officer in regard to such statement cannot be regarded except as a confession to a Police officer and is inadmissible under this section and is also inadmissible against the co accused (1).

Police-officers "

In construing this section the term "Police officer" should be read not in any strict technical sense but according to its more comprehensive and popular meaning (2). A confession, therefore, made to the Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta was held to be inadmissible (3). The provisions of this section apply to every Police officer and are not to be restricted to officers of the regular police force (4). The following persons are "Police officers" within the meaning of this section: a police inspector of a police head constable (7), police Munsiffs in the Presidencies of Madras (10), police Munsiffs in the Provinces (11), police Munsiffs in the Native States as well as those of British India (14). It is immaterial whether such Police officer be the officer investigating the case, the fact that such person is a Police-officer invalidates a confession (15). A confession made to a Police officer in the presence and hearing of a private person is not to be considered as made to the latter, and is therefore excluded by the section (16). But a policeman who overhears a conversation may be in the position of an ordinary witness and competent to depose to what he heard. It was, therefore, held that the evidence of a policeman who overheard a prisoner's statement made in another room, and in ignorance of the policeman's vicinity and uninfluenced by it, was admissible; the statement not being made to a Police officer, nor to others whilst in his custody (17). A confession is not taken without the scope of this section by the fact that it was made to a person, not in his capacity of a Police officer, but as an Acting Magistrate, and Justice of the Peace (18). In this last cited case, Pontifex J., while agreeing that the

to the police it would have been held to be inadmissible Muthukumaraswami Pillai v King Emperor 35 M 397 (1912) (Abdur Rahim and Miller JJ dissenting)

(1) R v Jaddab Das 4 C W N 129 (1899) as to incriminating statements of one accused against another to Police officer see Zeala v Emperor, 37 I A 114 s c 10 Bur L T 270

(2) R v Hurribale Chunder 1 C 207, 215 (1876) per Garth C J. In the matter of Hiran Miya 1 C L R 21 (1877), R v Bhima 17 B 485 486 (1892) per Jardine J. R v Salemuiddin Sheikh 26 C 570 (1899) R v Nagla Kala 22 B 235 (1896)

(3) R v Hurribale Chunder, supra
(4) R v Salemuiddin Sheikh 26 C 569 (1899)

(5) R v Bhima supra, R v Kamala 10 B 595 (1886)

(6) R v Pancham 4 A 198 (1882)

(7) In the matter of Hiran Miya 1 C L R 21 supra

(8) A v Pagaree Shaha 19 W R Cr., 51 (1873), Adu Sikdar v R 11 C, 635

(1885)

(9) R v Macdonald 10 B L R App., 2 (1872) R v Pitambar Jina 2 B 61

(1877) R v Pandharinath 6 B., 34 (1881) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 (1884)

(10) R v Mussamat Luchoo, 5 N W P 86 (1873)

(11) R v Salemuiddin Sheikh 26 C., 569 (1899) See Nair Jhamdar v R 9 C W N 474 (1905)

(12) R v Sanu Papi 7 M 287 (1883), see R v Bhuja 17 B 485 486 (1892)

(13) Emperor v Wazir Singh 3 P R., Cr (1918) s c 19 Cr L J 364 Abd Foong v Emperor 22 C W N 834 s c 28 C L J 105

(14) R v Nagla Kala 22 B., 235 (1896)

(15) In the matter of Hiran Miya 1 C L R 21 supra

(16) R v Pancham 4 A 198 201 supra

(17) R v Sageena 7 W R Cr 56 (1867)

(18) R v Hurribale Chunder, 1 C., 207 supra confession there in question was inadmissible added that he did so "without going so far as to say that this section of the Evidence Act renders inadmissible a confession made to any person connected with the police for there are cases as such informant cannot be used as evidence against him on his trial (2) A statement made to a Police-officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police if it is an admission of an incriminating circumstance, cannot be used in evidence under this and the following section (3) (v post)

This section only provides that no confession made to a Police officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence. It may however be proved for other purposes. It does not preclude one accused person from proving a confession made to a Police-officer by another accused person tried jointly with him. But under such circumstances it would be the duty of the Judge to instruct the jury that such confession is not to be received or treated as evidence against the person making it but simply as evidence to be considered on behalf of the other (4). So again it has been held that statements made by accused persons as to the ownership of the property in an inquiry under section 523 Act VI of 1882 (5). In this case West J observed. Confession in this section of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) means as in the twenty fourth section, a confession made by an accused person which it is proposed to prove against him to establish an offence. For such a purpose a confession might be inadmissible which yet for other purposes would be admissible as an admission under the eighteenth section against the person who made it (the twenty first section) in his character of one setting up an interest in property the object of litigation or judicial enquiry and disposal (6).

Against

An admission made by an accused person to a Police officer may be proved if it does not amount to a confession (7) that is if it is not a statement by him that he committed the crime with which he is charged or a statement suggesting the inference that he did so. So where the prosecutor's watch chain and a sum of money had been stolen from him as he was travelling by rail to Calcutta and evidence was tendered of a statement made by the prisoner to the constable who arrested him to the effect that the watch and Rs 1000 had been given to him by his sister and that he had bought the chain Phear J admitted this evidence observing that there is a distinction in the Act between Admissions and Confessions (8). This statement was clearly not a confession of the theft or dishonestly receiving stolen property with which he was charged as it was not a statement that he had stolen the goods or come by them dishonestly, nor does the statement suggest any inference that he was guilty of the offences

Admission made to Police-officers

- (1) Ib at p 218
 (2) Moler Shekh v R 21 C 392 (1893)
 (3) R v Jazecha a 19 B 363 (1894)
R v Buxi o Anant 3 W R Cr 21 (1865)
 (4) R v P tan ber J na 2 B 61 (1876)
 (5) R v Tr bhova i Manekchand 9 B 131 (1884)
 (6) Ib 134
 (7) R v Macdonald 10 B L R App 2 (1872) followed in R v Dabee Pershad 6 C 530 (1881) 7 C L R 541 Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray

- 49 C 167 (1922) see also R v Kangal Mal 41 C 601 (1905) ref to n Ran p t v Emperor 20 All L J 178
R v Nabad v Goswa 1 B L R O S C 15 (1868) 15 W R Cr 71 in which it was held that the answer did not amount to a confession of guilt but was a statement of facts which if true showed that the prisoner was innocent and v Bar nd a Kumar Glose v R (1909) 37 C 91 and Emperor v Kangan Mal 41 C, 601 (1914) foll n Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray 49 C 167 (1922)
 (8) R v Macdonald supra.

with which he was charged, but, on the contrary, if true, it showed that he was innocent (1) So where one of the three prisoners tried for murder made two statements, of which the first was—"Sir, I have something to give you" M A gave me this paper yesterday evening to keep for him, and the other was a detailed statement of how the deceased met his death Wilson, J., admitted the first statement (from which no inference of guilt could be drawn), but rejected the second (which led to the inference " . . .") ment took part in the commission of the statement by an accused person to a Police relies is inadmissible (3) A statement made by an accused to the police which does not amount directly or indirectly to an admission of any incriminating circumstance, is admissible in evidence hence where the accused was found carrying away a box at night, and when asked by a policeman on duty about him, this statement

ng the box (4) And ven if it tells against the accused, is admissible if it does not amount to a confession, and that it is for the Court to decide, according to the particular circumstances, whether a statement amounts to a confession or not (5) As was pointed out in the under mentioned case (6) a useful test as to admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution If the latter rely on the statements of the accused to the police as being true then they may, and probably in many cases will be found to, amount to confessions If on the other hand the statements of the accused are relied on not because of their truth but because of their falsity they are admissible They are in such cases brought forward to show what the defence of the accused is and that as the defence is untrue this is a circumstance to prove the guilt of the accused Exculpatory statements may amount to admissions Statements by the accused to the police, pointing out the place where, according to him the crime was committed by others or where he concealed himself after it, are admissible as admissions whether they are regarded as information leading to discovery under section 27 or as statements made as part of defence (7), and in a recent case in the Madras High Court where a complainant's sworn statement charging another with an offence had been recorded by a Magistrate as a statement under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code it was held admissible against him on a charge of perjury, although it amounted to an indirect confession of his guilt of another offence (8)

(1) But a statement although intended to be made in self-exculpation and not as a confession may nevertheless be an admission of an incriminating circumstance and if so it is excluded by ss 25 and 26 R v Pandharinath 6 B 34 (1831) v post R v Haj 46 B 961 (1922)

(2) R v Meher Ali 15 C 589 (1883) foli in Legal Remembrancer v Lala Mohan Singh Kay 49 C 167 (1922) Muthu Kumarasami Pillai v King Emperor 35 M 397 (1917) see also R v Jagrup 7 A 646 (1885) in which however the statement was held not to amount to a confession

(3) P v Malleus 10 C., 1022 (1834) A v Pandharinath 6 B 34 37 (1831) A v Vana 14 B 260 263 (1889) R v Jaicharan 19 B 363 (1894) See R v Ha Sher Mahomed 46 B 961 (1922)

here the statement though self-exculpatory was inadmissible as it amounted to an admission of an incriminating circumstance.

(4) R v Malomed Ebrahim 5 Bom 1 R 31 (1903) distinguishng A v Pandharinath supra. See R v Haji Sher Mahomed 46 B 961 (1922)

(5) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909) 37 C 91

(6) R v Kangal Mah Cr Ref 30 of 1905 Cal H C 18th Sept., 1905 41 C 545 foli in Legal Remembrancer v Lala Mohan Singh Ray 49 C. 167 (1922). R v Haji Sher Mahomed 46 B 961 (1922)

(7) Emperor v Kangan Mall 41 C., 545 per Woodroffe and Mookerjee JJ

(8) Maddala Ramanijammam (in re) 37 M 977 (1916)

26 No confession made by any person whilst he is in the custody of a Police officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be proved as against such person

Confession by accused while in custody of police not to be proved against him

Explanation—In this section 'Magistrate' does not include the head of a village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St George or in Burma or elsewhere, unless such headman is a Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882 (1)

Principle.—The object of this section (as of the last) is to prevent the abuse of their powers by the police (2) The last section excludes confession to a Police officer under any circumstances The present section excludes confessions to any one else while the person making it is in a position to be influenced by a Police officer, unless the free and voluntary nature of the confession is secured by its being made in the immediate presence of the Magistrate in which case the confessing person has an opportunity of making a statement uncontrolled by any fear of the police (3)

s 25 (Confession to a Police officer)

s 27 (Facts discovered in consequence of information)

COMMENTARY.

The law is imperative in excluding what comes from an accused person in custody of the police if it incriminates him (4) The prohibition in this section must be strictly applied (5) This section does not qualify the preceding one (6) but this section as well as the last is qualified by the following one (7) The twenty fifth section applies to all confessions to Police officers, the present section to all confessions to any person other than a Police officer made by persons whilst in police custody These last-mentioned confessions are inadmissible unless made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate (8) But a confession inadmissible under this section against the confessing party, might, however be admissible in favour of a co accused (9) The word Police officer in this section includes the Police officers of Native States as well as those of British India (10) As to the meaning of these words see Commentary to the preceding section

Construction

As this section relates to confessions made to persons other than Police officers whilst the accused is in the custody of the police a confession made to such third person by an accused whilst the latter is not in such custody is not excluded by the section Where, therefore, a woman who was not in the custody of the police at the time made a confession to a Village Munsif, whom the

Police-custody

(1) The above section was taken from s 149 Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) see R v Bobu Lal 6 A 509 512 (1884) The explanation to this section was added by s 3 Act III of 1891 It alters the law as laid down by the Madras High Court in R v Ramarajasa 2 M 5 (1878) See R v Nagla Kala 22 B 237 (1896) See now the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898)

(2) R v Mon Molun 24 W R Cr 33 36 (1875) per Birch J

(3) In the matter of Hiran Misa 1 C L R 21 (1877) per Ainslie J R v Hurrbole Chunder, 1 C 207, 215 (1876)

(4) R v Mathews 10 C 1022 1023 (1884) per Field J See as to the construction of this section the Madras Law Journal Jan and Feb 1895 pp 36-44

(5) R v Pancham 4 A 198 204 (1882) per Straight J

(6) R v Damun Kahar 12 W R, Cr, 87 (1869) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 532 v ante p 265

(7) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 (1884), see note to s 27 post

(8) v ante

(9) R v Pitamber Jina 2 B, 61 (1876)

(10) R v Nagla Kala 22 B, 235 (1896)

Court held not to be a Police-officer within the meaning of the preceding section, it was held that the confession could not be excluded under this section (1) Some sort of custody appears to be sufficient. So where the prisoners were among certain persons who had been "collected" by a police patel on suspicion and the police patel had himself accused them of complicity in the offence, the prisoners were deemed to be in the custody of the police (2) In the under mentioned case (3) a person under arrest on a charge of murder was taken in a tor ga, from the place where the offence was committed, to Godhra. A policeman rode in front. In the course of the journey, the prisoner was taken to a longa and went to a neighbour's house, while the policeman meanwhile proceeded slowly. In the absence of the police officer, the prisoner's friend with reference to the alleged offence. At the trial it was proposed to ask what the prisoner had said, on the ground that she was not then in custody, and that this section did not Native State, who is not a Police officer, does not become that of a Police officer, merely because his subordinates, the warders of the jail are members of the police force of that State. In the absence of any suggestion of a close custody inside the jail, such as may possibly occur when an accused person is watched and guarded by a Police officer investigating an offence this section does not exclude such a jailor from giving evidence of what the accused told him while in jail. In the case cited (6) an accused, an under trial prisoner, was sent up by the Magistrate in whose lock up he was, in the custody of two policemen, to a hospital for treatment. The policemen made him over to the doctor and waited in the verandah to take him back. While with the doctor in his room, the accused made a confession of his guilt. At the trial, the confession was allowed to be proved. A question having arisen whether the confession was properly let in, it was held that the confession was excluded by this section, because the accused who was in police-custody up to his arrival at the hospital remained in that custody while the policemen were standing outside on the verandah.

In the immediate presence of a Magistrate

If the confession be made to a third person the presence of a Magistrate is necessary in order to render the confession admissible under this section. But a confession made to the Magistrate himself conforms to the requirement of the section and is admissible even though the confessing party be at the time in the custody of the police (6). In the case decided under section 119 of Act XXV of 1861 (Criminal Procedure Code) from which the present section of this Act has been taken it was held that, in order to give weight to confessions of prisoners recorded under section 149, there should be a judicial record of the special circumstances under which such confessions were received by the Magistrate, showing in whose custody the prisoners were and how far they were quite free agents (7). In another case decided under the same section it was held that the words "a Magistrate" mean "any Magistrate" and not merely "the Magistrate having jurisdiction" (8). The word "Magistrate" in this section includes Magistrates of Native States as well as those of British India. And so a confession made by a prisoner while in police-custody, to a First-class

- | | |
|--|--|
| (1) R v Sama Pappi 7 M. 287 (1836) | 33 (1875) R v Almadhab Mitter 15 C. |
| (2) R v Kamaliar , 10 B. 595 (1886) | 595 (1888) |
| (3) R v Lester , 20 B. 165 (1894) | (7) R v Kodas Aahar , 5 W. R., Cr. |
| (4) R v Taleya , 20 B. 795 (1895) | 6 (1886) see Criminal Procedure Code |
| (5) Emperor v Mallangouda 42 B., 1 | as 164 364 533 |
| (6) R v Man Mohun 24 W. R., Cr. | (8) R v Vahala Jetha 7 Bom. H. C. |
| | R. C. C. 56 (1870) |

Magistrate of the Native State of Muli in Kathiawar, and duly recorded by such Magistrate in the manner required by the Code of Criminal Procedure, was held to be admissible in evidence (1)

27. Provided that, when any fact is deposed (2) to as discovered (3) in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence (4), in the custody of a Police-officer (5), so much of such information whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, may be proved (6)

How much of information received from accused may be proved

Principle—The broad ground for not admitting confessions made under inducement, or to a Police officer, or by persons whilst in custody is the danger of admitting false confessions (7). But the necessity for the exclusion disappears in a case provided for by this section when the truth of the confession is guaranteed by the discovery of facts in consequence of the information given. It is this guarantee, afforded by the discovery of the property, for the correctness of the accused's statement, which is the ground of the admission of the exception to the general rule. The fact discovered shows that so much of confession as immediately relates to it is true (8).

s. 24 (Confession caused by inducement)

s. 25 (Confession to a Police officer)

s. 26 (Confession by accused while in police-custody)

Steph Dig., Art 22, Taylor, Ev., §§ 902, 903, Phipson Ev. 5th Ed., 2nd Wills, Ev., 214, 1b, 2nd Ed., 303, Roscoe Cr. Ev., 49, 3 Russ. Cr. 482—485 (9)

COMMENTARY.

The submission of a person to the custody of a Police officer within the terms of section 46(1) of the Criminal Procedure Code is custody within the meaning of this section (10). Though the words 'in the custody of a Police-officer' might seem to indicate that this section was intended to be a proviso to the preceding section only and that it is inapplicable when the information relating to the fact discovered thereby constitutes a confession "made to a Police officer," it has, however, been held that this section

Construction of section

(1) R v Nagla Kala 22 B 235 (1896)

(2) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) ran thus—Deposed to by a police officer etc. [see Bishoo Manjee v R 9 W R Cr, 16 17 (1868)] The words in italics were omitted in the amended section substituted by Act VIII of 1869 and the omission has been here retained. As the section now stands the fact may be deposed to by any one. Field Ev. 45. But it must be deposed to Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray 49 C 167 (1922).

(3) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 ran thus—Discovered by him which italicised words were omitted in the amended section substituted by Act VIII of 1869 post.

(4) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 ran thus—or in the custody etc. post.

(5) This word has the same meaning as in ss 25 and 26 ante see R v Nagla Kala 22 B 235 238 (1896).

(6) This section replaces s 150 of Act

XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) as amended by Act VIII of 1869 see R v Babu Lal 6 A 512 516 (1884).

(7) See cases cited in the notes to ss 24 25 26 ante.

(8) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 513 517 546 (1884). R v Nana 14 B 260 264 (1889). 3 Russ. Cr 483. Taylor Ev. §§ 902 903. But not only are confessions excluded when obtained by means of improper inducements but also the acts of the prisoner done under the influence of such inducements unless confirmed by the finding of the property for the same influence which might produce a groundless confession might produce groundless conduct. 3 Russ. Cr 485.

(9) As to the English authorities see R v Nana 14 B 260 265 (1889). R v Rana Birappa 3 B 12 17 (1878). R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 517 547 (1884).

(10) Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray 49 C, 167 (1922).

is a proviso not only to the preceding section but also to the twenty fifth section, and that, therefore, so much of the information given by an accused to a Police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not as distinctly relates to the facts thereby discovered, may be proved (1) It qualifies also section 24, ante (2) But the present section only qualifies the twenty fifth section when the accused person is in the custody of the police, therefore, confessions to Police-officers by persons who are accused but not in custody, or are in custody, but not accused, or are neither accused nor in custody, do not fall within the present section (3) This section also qualifies the twenty fourth section (4) Therefore, whatever the inducement that may have been applied, or made use of towards the accused, there is nothing in the law which forbids policemen or others from, at any rate going so far as to say "In consequence of what the prisoner told me, I went to such and such a place and found such and such a thing" Moreover they may repeat the words in which the information was couched whether they amount to a confession or not, provided they relate distinctly to the facts thereby discovered (5) This section does not apply to information generally within the meaning of the word "information" as discovered in consequence of such confession so much thereof as relates distinctly to the facts thereby discovered may be proved under this section But though the present section qualifies the twenty fourth section, it will not be applicable in every case that falls within the scope of that section which enacts that confessions unduly obtained are irrelevant whether the confessing party was in custody or not But the present section refers to confessions made by accused persons in custody Therefore confessions made by persons when accused but not in custody, or in custody but not accused or neither accused nor in custody, will not be rendered admissible by the present section even if there is discovery (6) This section as a qualification of the imperative rules contained in sections 24—26, should be strictly construed and applied (7)

(1) Field Ev 145 ib 6th Ed 105 P v Pagoree Sitala 19 W R Cr 51 (1873) and see under the old law R v Pella Gazi 4 W R Cr 19 (1865) R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R 242 (1874) R v Rana Birapa 3 B 12 (1878) R v Panclam 4 A 198 (1887) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 F B (1884) Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 (1885) R v La alia 10 B 595 (1886) R v Anna 14 B 260 (1889) Suree dranath Mukerjee v Emperor 16 A L J 478 s c 19 Cr L J 935 See generally as to the construction of this section the Madras Law Journal supra p 74 et seq March 1895 123 et seq April 1895

(2) Amiruddin v Emperor 45 C 557

(3) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 513 533 534 F B (1884) per Oldfield and Mahmood JJ v post

(4) R v Mirza (1909) 31 A 592

(5) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 545 per Straight C J ib per Brodhurst J citing Taylor Ev § 907 [contra per Mahmood J ib 535 and L v Anarpala Weekly Notes (1882) 225 see also to the same effect that s 27 does not qualify s 24 R v Musunnat Luchoo 5 N W 1 86 (1873) R v Rama Birapa 3 B, 12 16 (1878) per West J — It is not pretended that any discovery of facts through information derived from R occurred after that statement was made Its defect as made under undue influence therefore was not and could not be counteracted in the only possible way This qualification of the rule enacted in s 24 by that enacted in the present section is in accordance with the English law upon the subject see Taylor Ev § 903 The question does not appear to have been discussed by the Calcutta and Madras Courts in any reported case But under the corresponding section of Act XXV of 1861 (s 150) it was held by the former Court that where a Police officer had offered an inducement to make a confession no part of his evidence as to the discovery of facts in consequence of such confession was admissible R v Dhurum Dutt 8 W R Cr 13 (1867) see also Bishoo Manjee v R 9 W R Cr 16 17 (1869)

(6) See R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 (1884)

(7) R v Panclam 4 A 198 (1887) See Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 642 (1885) In R v Ram Charan 24 W R Cr 36 (1875) Jackson J commented upon a prevailing tendency to disregard the provisions of s 26 of the Evidence Act which has occurred in this case as well as in others recurred to but had although not

The words "any fact" are qualified by the word "discovered" as used in the section: under the present section, it is not every statement made by a person accused of any offence while in the custody of a Police officer, connected with the production or finding of property, which is admissible. Whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases, be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statements made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made, in order to render the statement admissible. Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence, and thus mediately, but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered, are not admissible (1) "No judicial officer [dealing with the provisions of this section] should allow one word more to be deposed to by a Police officer, detailing a statement made to him by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a fact, than is absolutely necessary to show how the fact that was discovered is connected with the accused, so as in itself to be a relevant fact against him. The twenty seventh section was not intended to let in a confession generally, but only such particular part of it as set the person, to whom it was made, in motion, and led to his ascertaining the fact or facts of which he gives evidence" (2) The test of the admissibility under this section of information received from an accused person in the custody of a Police officer, whether amounting to a confession or not is — "Was the fact discovered by reason of the information and how much of the information was the immediate cause of the fact discovered, and as such a relevant fact?" (3)

The discovery referred to in this section is that made to or by a Police-officer and the section applies in such a case though the facts are already known to persons other than Police officers (4). The word "discovery" may either be known before or after hearing some thing, unknown till then. It is in the latter sense that the word is used in this section, that is, in the sense of a finding upon a search or inquiry, of articles connected with the crime or other material fact, the reason being that it is only this kind of discovery which proves that the information, in consequence of which the discovery was made, is true and not fabricated. The statements admitted by the section are statements preceding finding upon search or inquiry (5). It is not now necessary that the discovery should be by the deponent (6), if the latter be a Police officer investigating a case, he will not be allowed to prove an information received from a person accused of an offence in the custody of a police officer, on the ground that a material fact was thereby discovered justified by facts to the proviso contained in s. 27. Tara Singh v. Cross 50 P. R. 11 Cr. J. 23 (1915).

Discovered

(1) R. v. Jora Hasji 11 Bom. H. C. R. 242 (1874).

(2) R. v. Babu Lal 6 A. 509 546 (1884) per Straight C. J. cited and adopted by Norris J. in Adu Shikdar v. R. 11 C. 635 641 (1885).

(3) R. v. Commer Shabib 12 M. 153 (1888) in which it was also said that the reasonable construction of s. 27 is that in addition to the fact discovered so much of the information as was the immediate cause of the discovery is legal evidence.

(4) Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Raj 49 C. 167 (1922).

(5) See The Madras Law Journal

supra March 1895 pp. 80 85. R. v. Jora Hasji 11 Bom. H. C. R. 242 (1874). R. v. Rama Birapa 3 B. 12 (1878). R. v. Nana 14 B. 260 (1889) in all the cases under this section where the statements were held to be admissible the discovery was of articles or other material facts. The section as thus understood enacts the same rule as is given in Taylor's §§ 902 903 (R. v. Rama Birapa supra, 17 R. v. Nana supra 265) for an example of an admission subsequent to discovery see R. v. Kamal Fukeer 17 W. R. Cr. 50 (1872).

(6) Under s. 150 Act XXX of 1861 the words were discovered by him the italicised words have been omitted in the present section.

by him when that fact was already known to another Police officer (1) When the Police succeed in discovering property in consequence of information received from an accused, it is not competent to the police to replace the property in the place whence it is discovered and to ask the other accused to produce the property because there is no further discovery under this section as against the other accused (2) While statements preceding finding upon search or inquiry are admissible under this section on the other hand, mere statements, which lead to no physical discovery after they are made, are inadmissible (3) In the case of statements made while pointing out the scene of the crime, the general rule is that if a prisoner points out or shows the scene of the offence and objects around as connected therewith, and makes contemporaneous statements in reference thereto as amounting to "conduct" relevant under accompanying statements are not admissible being no such "discovery" as is required by it, nor do they fall within the first Explanation to the eighth section and are therefore wholly excluded (4) So where the prisoner, besides the formal recorded confession, made a confession to the Police officers before and during his pointing out particular places and particular articles said to have been connected with the murder of which he was charged, West, J., observed 'A confession of murder made to a police constable is not at all confirmed by the prisoner's saying, 'this is the place where I killed the deceased' and when starting from the pointing to a ditch or a tree, a long narrative of transactions, some of them altogether remote from any connection with the spot indicated is allowed to be deposed to as a confession by the prisoner, the intent of the Evidence Act is not fulfilled but defeated' (5) From the statement 'This is the place where I killed the deceased,' there is no 'discovery' within the meaning of this section, and therefore no guarantee of the truth of the statement, and further, the prosecution had not, in the particular case, shown that any act done by the accused under contemporaneously makes declarations as regards them the act of production or delivery itself may be proved as 'conduct' under the eighth section, ante but as there is no "discovery," the accompanying statements are not admissible under the present section nor under the first Explanation to the eighth section, ante (7) So where a Police officer deposed that the accused told

(1) Adu Sikdar v R 11 C 635 642 (1885)

(2) R v Beshya 2 Bom L R 1089 (1900)

(3) R v Rama Birapa 3 B 12 (1878), see the Madras Law Journal supra 81

(4) Ib, 82 R v Jora Haspi 11 Bom H C R 242 246 (1874) R v Rama Birapa 3 B 12 16 17 (1878) that is assuming the accompanying statements to amount to confessions the rule however as to such statements when more particularly stated appears to be that if such statements are really explanatory of the acts they accompany they may be proved (R v Jora Haspi supra 245 246 R v Rama Birapa supra, 17) subject however to the further proviso that s 8 so far as it admits a statement as included in the word conduct cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by ss 25 26 R v Aana 14 B 260 263 (1889)

(5) R v Rama Birapa supra, 16 17

(6) Tara Singh v Crown 50 P R, 11 Cr J 23 (1915)

(7) R v Jora Haspi 11 Bom H C R, 247 (1874) in this case the first prisoner produced a bill hook and knife from the field and the second prisoner a stick and each made a certain incriminatory statement which the Court held to be inadmissible both under this section since there was no discovery and under s 8 Explanation (1) it however held that the acts of the prisoners could be proved R v Panchara 4 A, 198 (1882) see R v Kamala 10 B 595 597 (1886) Adu Sikdar v R 11 C, 635 640 661 (1885) as to accompanying statement see Taylor, Ex 1 903 3 Russ., Cr., 484 him "that he had robbed K R of Rs 48, whereof he had spent Rs 8, and had Rs 40," and that he, the accused, made over Rs 40 to him, the statement was held inadmissible, as no facts were discovered thereby. The High Court disapproved of the opinion of the Sessions Judge who had admitted this statement on the ground that the confession was the necessary preliminary of the surrender of the Rs 40, and that the surrender must necessarily have been accompanied or immediately preceded by some explanatory statement (1). But where the accused makes a statement, as to the locality of certain property, and after, and upon such statement, the police accompany him to the locality, where upon arrival, accused by his own act produces the property, such statements may be admissible as leading to the discovery of the property (2) (v post)

In the first place, whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases, be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statement made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made in order to render the statement admissible (3). In the next place, the practical test to determine whether or not there is such a connection between the information and the discovery has been stated to be as follows — "In regard to the extent of the words 'thereby discovered,' we may derive some assistance from the test applied by the Courts in dealing with proximate and remote causes of damage, namely, whether what followed was the natural and reasonable result of the defendant's act" (4). It was formerly held by the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts (5) that where an article said to be connected with an offence was produced by the party himself after giving information in respect of it, the article could not be said to have been discovered "in consequence of the information." It was said that in such a case the article is discovered by the act of the party and not in consequence of the information. But this view was subsequently dissented from in, and (so far as the Bombay Court is concerned) overruled by, a case (6), in which the facts were as follows. The accused, in the course of the police-investigation, was asked by the police where the property was, and replied that he had kept it and would show. He said that he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which it was kept. It was held that the statement of the accused that he had buried the property in the fields was admissible under this section, as it set the police in motion and led to the discovery of the property, and that a statement is equally admissible whether it is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves, or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed. This view of the section has also been adopted by the Calcutta High Court (7). And in a case in the Allahabad High Court, where the accused was charged with the murder of a person, and was found with evidence whether in this case it was declared that this section qualifies sections 21, 25 and 26 (8).

(1) Adn Shikdar v R supra 640 641
 (2) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889) v
 post
 (3) R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R
 242 244 (1874)
 (4) R v Nana 14 B 260 267 (1889),
 per Jardine J
 (5) R v Pantham 4 A 193 204
 (1882), R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 44

(1884) per Straight J R v Kamala 10
 B 595 597 (1886)
 (6) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889)
 (7) Legal Remembrancer v Chema
Nashya 25 C 413 (1897) and see also
R v Pagaree Shaha 19 W R Cr 57
 (1873) in which case the party himself produced the property
 (8) R v Murr (1909) 31 A, 592

by him when that fact was already known to another Police officer (1) When the Police succeed in discovering property in consequence of information received from an accused, it is not competent to the police to replace the property in the place whence it is discovered and to ask the other accused to produce the property because there is no further discovery under this section as against the other accused (2) While statements preceding finding upon search or inquiry are admissible under this section on the other hand, mere statements, which lead to no physical discovery after they are made, are inadmissible (3) In the case of statements made while pointing out the scene of the crime, the general rule is that if a prisoner points out or shows the scene of the offence and objects around as connected therewith, and makes contemporaneous statements in reference thereto his acts may be given in evidence, as amounting to "conduct" relevant under the eighth section ante, but the accompanying statements are not admissible under the present section, there being no such "discovery" as is required by it, nor do they fall within the first Explanation to the eighth section and are therefore wholly excluded (4) So where the prisoner, besides the formal recorded confession, made a confession to the Police-officers before and during his pointing out particular places and particular articles said to have been connected with the murder of which he was charged, West, J., observed "A confession of murder made to a police constable is not at all confirmed by the prisoner's saying, 'this is the place where I killed the deceased' and when starting from the pointing to a ditch or a tree, a long narrative of transactions, some of them altogether remote from any connection with the spot indicated is allowed to be deposited to as a confession by the prisoner, the intent of the Evidence Act is not fulfilled but defeated" (5) From the statement 'This is the place where I killed the deceased,' there is no "discovery" within the meaning of this section, and therefore no guarantee of the truth of the statement, and further, the prosecution had not, in the particular case, shown that any act done by the accused had been so explained by his statements as to make the latter admissible under the first Explanation of the eighth section (6) Similarly, in the case of statement accompanying production of articles the general rule is that if the prisoner himself produces or delivers articles said to be connected with the offence, and contemporaneously makes declarations as regards them the act of production or delivery itself may be proved as 'conduct' under the eighth section, ante but as there is no "discovery" the accompanying statements are not admissible under the present section nor under the first Explanation to the eighth section, ante (7) So where a Police officer deposed that the accused told

(1) Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 642 (1885)

(2) R v Beshja 2 Bom L R 1087 (1900)

(3) R v Rama Birapa 3 B 12 (1878), see the Madras Law Journal supra 81

(4) Id., 82 R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R. 242 246 (1874) R v Rama Birapa 3 B 12 16 17 (1878) that is assuming the accompanying statements to amount to confessions, the rule however as to such statements when more particularly stated appears to be that if such statements are really explanatory of the acts they accompany they may be proved (R v Jora Hasji supra 245 246 R v Rama Birapa supra, 17) subject however, to the further proviso that s 8 so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct" cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by ss 25 26 R v Nana 14 B 260 263 (1889)

(5) R v Rama Birapa supra 16 17

(6) Tara Singh v Crown 50 P R., 11 Cr J 23 (1915)

(7) R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R., 242 (1874) in this case the first prisoner produced a bill hook and knife from the field and the second prisoner a stick, and each made a certain incriminatory statement which the Court held to be inadmissible both under this section since there was no discovery and under s 8 Explanation (1) it however held that the acts of the prisoners could be proved R v Pancham 4 A., 198 (1882) see R v Kamalia 10 B. 595 597 (1886), Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 640 661 (1885), as to accompanying statement see Taylor, Ex § 903 3 Russ., Cr., 484 him ' that he had robbed A R of Rs 48 whereof he had spent Rs 8, and had Rs 40' and that he the accused made over Rs 40 to him the statement was held inadmissible as no facts were discovered thereby. The High Court disapproved of the opinion of the Sessions Judge who had admitted this statement on the ground that the confession was the necessary preliminary of the surrender of the Rs 40 and that the surrender must necessarily have been accompanied or immediately preceded by some explanatory statement (1) But where the accused makes a statement as to the locality of certain property and after, and upon such statement the police accompany him to the locality, where upon arrival accused by his own act produces the property such statements may be admissible as leading to the discovery of the property (2) (v post)

In the first place whatever be the nature of the fact discovered that fact must in all cases be itself relevant to the case and the connection between it and the statement made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made in order to render the statement admissible (3) In the next place the practical test to determine whether or not there is such a connection between the information and the discovery has been stated to be as follows — In regard to the extent of the words 'thereby discovered' we may derive some assistance from the test applied by the Courts in dealing with proximate and remote causes of damage namely whether wh — ndant s act (4) It ourts (5) that where by the

In consequence of information party himself after giving information in respect of it the article could not be said to have been discovered in consequence of the information. It was said that in such a case the article is discovered by the act of the party and not in consequence of the information. But this view was subsequently dissented from in and (so far as the Bombay Court is concerned) overruled by a case (6), in which the facts were as follows. The accused in the course of the police investigation was asked by the police where the property was and replied that he had kept it and would show. He said that he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which it was kept. It was held that the statement of the accused that he had buried the property in the fields was admissible under this section as it set the police in motion and led to the discovery of the property and that a statement is equally admissible whether it is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed. This view of the section has also been adopted by the Calcutta High Court (7) And in a case in the Allahabad High Court where the accused was charged re found evidence whether In this case it was declared that this section qualifies sections 24 25 and 26 (8)

(1) Adu Si kdar v R supra 640 641

(2) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889) v

post

(3) R v Jora Hasj 11 Bom H C R 247 244 (1874)

(4) R v Nana 14 B 260 267 (1889)

per Jardine J

(5) R v Pancham 4 A 198 204

(1882) R v Bab Lal 6 A 509 44

(1884) p. Straught J R v Kamal a 10 B 595 597 (1886)

(6) R Na a 14 B 260 (1889)

(7) Legal Rene brancer v Ciema Nanyo 25 C 413 (1897) and see also

R Pagare Sdaha 19 W R Cr 57 (1833) in which case the party himself

produced the property

(8) R Vsr (1909) 31 A 592

From an accused person in custody

Section 150 of Act XXV of 1861, as amended by Act VIII of 1869, was re-embodied in the twenty-seventh section of the Evidence Act with slight alterations of language. The only alteration on which any stress can be laid is the omission of the word "or" (1) This shows that the operation of the proviso is restricted to information from an accused person in custody of the police, and does not apply to information from accused persons not in custody of the police (2) It would appear, therefore, that in order to bring a case of discovery within the scope of this section, it is necessary that the party making the statement should be both accused and in custody at such time and that (a) a confession obtained by inducement under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty-fourth section, or (b) a confession made to a Police officer (3), will not be affected by the operation of the twenty-seventh section when the person confessing is at the time (a) neither accused nor in custody, (b) in custody but not accused, (c) accused but not in custody,—notwithstanding any discovery in consequence thereof, (d) a confession made to any person other than a Police officer by a person who was at the time in the latter's custody, but not accused, is inadmissible even though it may lead to discovery, unless indeed it was made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

Where a fact is discovered in consequence of information received from one of several persons charged with an offence, and when others give like information, the fact should not be treated as discovered from the information of them all. It should be depose that a particular fact has been discovered from the information of AB, and this will let in so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered (4). In the case of R v Babu Lal (5) Straight, J., observed as follows: "I have more than once pointed out that it is not a proper course where two persons are being tried, to allow a witness to state 'they said this' or 'they said that' or 'the prisoners then said.' It is certainly not at all likely that both the persons should speak at once and it is the right of each of them to have the witness required to depose as nearly as possible to the exact words he individually used. And, I may add, where a statement is being detailed by a constable as having been made by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a certain fact, or certain facts, the strictest precision should be enjoined on the witness, so that there may be no room for mistake as to what he has heard. In dealing with statements of this kind which are in substance of things that what each stated. If the witness was not clear upon this point, and the witness refused to be more explicit, the Judge should have paid no attention to it." And in a recent case it was held that where two prisoners gave information which led to the arrest of another person it was necessary that the information of each should be precisely and separately stated (6).

How much
of such information
may be proved

Upon this question there is little or no difference in the views of the several High Courts (7). Assistance in the construction of the words "as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered" (8) may be derived from a consideration

(1) S. 150 ran 'accused of any offence or in the custody of a police-officer'

(2) R v Babu Lal 6 A., 509, 513 (1884) per Oldfield J. see The Madras Law Journal supra pp 128 129, April 1895

(3) R v Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 533 (1884). A confession made to a Police officer by a person who is not in the custody of the police even though such confession led to discovery, would not be admissible in evidence because it could not fall under the purview of s. 27, which is restricted to persons 'in the custody of a Police officer' per Mahmood J. and see per Oldfield J. at p 513 supra

(4) R v Ram Churn 24 W. R., Cr., 36 (1875)

(5) 6 A. 509 (1884) at pp 549 550
(6) Ram Singh v Crown 50 P. R., 7 Cr. J. 12 (1915)

(7) Per Sargent C. J. in R v Nana 14 B. 260 263 (1889), and see R v Commer Sahib 12 M., 153 154 (1899)

(8) See Legal Remembrancer v Lal Mohan Singh Ray 49 C., 167 (1922).

of the principle upon which the enactment contained in this section is founded. Statements admissible under this section are so admissible because the discovery rebuts the presumption of falsity arising from the fact of their being made under inducement, or to the police, or to others while in police custody. The discovery proves not that the whole, but that some portion of the information given is true namely, so much of the information as led directly and immediately to or was the proximate cause of, the discovery only such portion of the information is guaranteed by the discovery, and hence only such portion of the information is admissible. A prisoner's statement as to his knowledge of the place where a particular article is to be found, is confirmed by the discovery of that article and is thus shown to be true. But any explanation as to how he came by the article, or how it came to be where it is found, is not confirmed by the discovery, and as the presumption of falsity as to these other statements is not rebutted therefore proof of them is prohibited. In the words of West J. It is not all statements connected with the production or finding of property which are admissible—those only which lead immediately to the discovery of property and so far as they do lead to such discovery are properly admissible.

Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence and so mediately(1) but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered are not to be admitted, as this would rather be an evasion than a fulfilment of the law, which is designed to guard prisoners accused of offences against unfair practices on the part of the police. For instance, a man says 'You will find a stick at such and such a place. I killed Rama with it.' A policeman, in such a case, may be allowed to say he went to the place indicated, and found the stick, but any statement as to the confession of murder would be inadmissible. If instead of 'you will find,' the prisoner has said, 'I placed a sword or knife in such a spot,' where it was found, that, too, though it involves an admission of a particular act on the prisoner's part, is admissible, because it is the information which has directly led to the discovery, and is thus distinctly, and independently of any other statement connected with it. But if, besides this, the prisoner has said what induced him to put the knife or sword where it has been found, that part of his statement, as it has not furthered, much less caused, the discovery, is not admissible. The words in the twenty seventh section of the Evidence Act 'whether it amounts to a confession or not' are to be read as qualifying the word 'information' in the immediately preceding context, not the words 'so much', and the effect is that, although ordinarily a confession of an accused while in custody would where also the narrative of antecedent events was held admissible as admissions not amounting to confessions.

(1) The relevancy of mediate connection appears to be the ratio decidendi of the case of R v Pagaree Shaha 19 W R Cr 71 (1873) in which a wider construction was put on the words as relates distinctly so as to admit not only so much of the information as leads directly and immediately to the discovery of the fact but also the portion which leads mediately by way of explanation. Though Brodhurst J in referring to this case in R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 at p 518 (1884), says that no difference is noticeable in the rulings of R v Pagaree Shaha supra R v Jora Hasji post, R v Pancham 4 A, 198 (1882) as to the extent to which statements or confessions of accused persons can be proved by a Police-officer under s 27 it is however submitted that the ruling in R v Pagaree Shaha supra is not reconcilable with the principle laid down in R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R 242 (1874), R v Rama Birapa 3 B 12 17 (1878), R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 (1884), Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 (1885), P v Commer Sahib 12 M 153 (1888), R v Nana 14 B 260 (1887) and is indeed virtually overruled by Adu Shikdar v R, supra referred to in Legal Remembrancer v Chema Nashya 25 C. 413 (1897) see The Madras Law Journal supra April 1895 p 129 et seq and Field E., 146. In the last cited case it was said per Banerjee J. The view I take is in no way inconsistent with that taken by the Court in Adu Shikdar v R as the part of the information or statement that is here used as evidence against the accused under s 27 relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered and does not go beyond it,' p 416.

From an accused person in custody

Section 150 of Act XXV of 1861, as amended by Act VIII of 1869, was re-embodied in the twenty-seventh section of the Evidence Act with slight alterations of language. The only alteration on which any stress can be laid is the omission of the word or (1) This shows that the operation of the proviso is restricted to information from an accused person in custody of the police and does not apply to information from accused persons not in custody of the police (2) It would appear therefore that in order to bring a case of discovery within the scope of this section it is necessary that the party making the statement should be both accused and in custody at such time and that (a) a confession obtained by inducement under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty-fourth section or (b) a confession made to a Police officer (3) will not be affected by the operation of the twenty-seventh section when the person confessing is at the time (a) neither accused nor in custody (b) in custody but not accused (c) accused but not in custody—notwithstanding any discovery in consequence thereof (d) a confession made to any person other than a Police officer by a person who was at the time in the latter's custody but not accused is inadmissible even though it may lead to discovery unless indeed it was made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

Where a fact is discovered in consequence of information received from one of several persons charged with an offence and when others give like information the fact should not be treated as discovered from the information of them all. It should be deposed that a particular fact has been discovered from the information of 1B and this will let in so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered (4). In the case of R v Bibu Lal (5) Straught J. observed as follows: "I have more than once pointed out that it is not a proper course where two persons are being tried to allow a witness to state they said this or they said that or the prisoners then said. It is certainly not at all likely that both the persons should speak at once and it is the right of each of them to have the witness required to depose as nearly as possible to the exact words he individually used. And I may add where a statement is being detailed by a constable as having been made by an accused in consequence of which he discovered a certain fact or certain facts the strictest precision should be enjoined on the witness so that there may be no room for statements of this kind which are a mere assemblage of things that what each stated. If the witness was not clear upon this point and the witness refused to be more explicit the Judge should have paid no attention to it. And in a recent case it was held that where two prisoners gave information which led to the arrest of another person it was necessary that the information of each should be precisely and separately stated (6)." It is clear upon this point and the witness refused to be more explicit the Judge should have paid no attention to it. And in a recent case it was held that where two prisoners gave information which led to the arrest of another person it was necessary that the information of each should be precisely and separately stated (6).

How much
of such information
may be proved

Upon this question there is little or no difference in the views of the several High Courts (7). Assistance in the construction of the words as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered (8) may be derived from a consideration

(1) S. 150 ran "accused of any offence or in the custody of a police-officer"

(2) R v Bibu Lal 6 A. 509 513 (1884) per Oldfield J. see The Madras Law Journal supra pp. 129 Apr. 1895

(3) R v Bibu Lal 6 A. 509 533 (1884). A confession made to a Police officer by a person who is not in the custody of the police even though such confession led to discovery would not be admissible in evidence because it could not fall under the purview of s. 27 which is restricted to persons "in the custody of a Police officer" per Mahmood J. and see per Oldfield J. at p. 513 supra

(4) R v Ran Churn 24 W. R., Cr. 36 (1851)

(5) 6 A. 509 (1884) at pp. 549 550

(6) Ram Singh v Crown 50 P. R. 7 Cr. J. 15 (1915)

(7) Per Sargent C. J. in R v Vana 14 B. 260 263 (1889) and see R v Commer Sabib 17 M. 153 154 (1888)

(8) See Legal Remembrancer v Lal Mohan Singh Ray 49 C. 167 (1922)

of the principle upon which the enactment contained in this section is founded. Statements admissible under this section are so admissible because the discovery rebuts the presumption of falsity arising from the fact of their being made under inducement, or to the police, or to others while in police-custody. The discovery proves not that the whole, but that some portion of the information given is true, namely, so much of the information as led directly and immediately to, or was the proximate cause of, the discovery only such portion of the information is guaranteed by the discovery, and hence only such portion of the information is admissible. A prisoner's statement as to his knowledge of the place where a particular article is to be found, is confirmed by the discovery of that article and is thus shown to be true. But any explanation as to how he came by the article, or how it came to be where it is found is not confirmed by the discovery, and as the presumption of falsity as to these other statements is not rebutted therefore proof of them is prohibited. In the words of West J. It is not all statements connected with the production or finding of property which are admissible—those only which lead immediately to the discovery of property and so far as they do lead to such discovery are properly admissible.

Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence and so mediately(1) but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered are not to be admitted, as this would rather be an evasion than a fulfilment of the law, which is designed to guard prisoners accused of offences against unfair practices on the part of the police. For instance, a man says 'You will find a stick at such and such a place. I killed Rama with it.' A policeman, in such a case, may be allowed to say he went to the place indicated, and found the stick, but any statement as to the confession of murder would be inadmissible. If instead of 'you will find' the prisoner has said, 'I placed a sword or knife in such a spot where it was found that too, though it involves an admission of a particular act on the prisoner's part, is admissible, because it is the information which has directly led to the discovery, and is thus distinctly, and independently of any other statement connected with it. But if, besides this, the prisoner has said what induced him to put the knife or sword where it has been found, that part of his statement, as it has not furthered, much less caused, the discovery, is not admissible. The words in the twenty seventh section of the Evidence Act 'whether it amounts to a confession or not' are to be read as qualifying the word 'information' in the immediately preceding context, not the words 'so much', and the effect is that, although ordinarily a confession of an accused while in custody would where also the narrative of antecedent events was held admissible as admissions not amounting to confessions.

(1) The relevancy of mediate connection appears to be the ratio decidendi of the case of R v Pagaree Shaha 19 W R Cr 71 (1873) in which a wider construction was put on the words as relates distinctly so as to admit not only so much of the information as leads directly and immediately to the discovery of the fact but also the portion which leads mediately by way of explanation. Though Brodburst J in referring to this case in R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 at p 518 (1884) says that no difference is noticeable in the rulings of R v Pagaree Shaha supra R v Jora Hasji post R v Pancham 4 A 198 (1882) as to the extent to which statements or confessions of accused persons can be proved by a Police officer under s 27 it is however submitted that the

ruling in R v Pagaree Shaha supra is not reconcilable with the principle laid down in R v Jora Hasji 11 Bom H C R 242 (1874) R v Ra a Bvraja 3 B 12 17 (1878) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509 (1884) Adu Shikdar v R 11 C 635 (1885) R v Conner Sabib 12 M 153 (1888) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1887) and is indeed virtually overruled by Adu Shikdar v R supra referred to in Legal Remembrancer v Chena Nashya 25 C 413 (1897) see The Madras Law Journal supra April 1895 p 129 et seq and Field Ed 146 In the last cited case it was said per Banerjee J 'The view I take is in no way inconsistent with that taken by the Court in Adu Shikdar v R as the part of the information or statement that is here used as evidence against the accused under s 27 relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered and does not go beyond it' p 416

be wholly excluded, yet if, in the course of such a confession, information leading to the discovery of a relevant fact has been given, so much of the information as distinctly led to this result may be deposed to, though, as a whole, the statement would constitute a confession which the preceding sections are intended to exclude"(1) So where two persons B and R, accused of offences under section 414 of the Penal Code, gave information to the police which led to the discovery of the stolen property (this information being to the effect that the accused had stolen a cow and a calf, and sold them to a particular person at a particular place) the Appellate Court observed that, "If he (the Sessions Judge) had applied, as he should have done, the rule thereby (section 27) laid down, he ought to have held that that portion of H's (the police witness) statement in which he deposed 'they said they got' (I suppose this was intended to mean stole) 'the cow from LT,' 'they said that they had stolen a cow and a calf,' 'they have stolen it from S G, of Jaitpur,' 'they had stolen a goat in Belupur and sold it,' was inadmissible. The only fact about the cow and calf which was admissible as distinctly relating to the discovery of those animals at A R J's was that they sold it at Madanpur to him. As to the goat, there is nothing to show from the constable's deposition, that it was in consequence of what the accused told him that he found the goat in Chelganj '(2) So also where the prisoner told the police that certain cloths had been left by him with some of the prosecution witnesses, and the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the ons should would be ng "The o much of evidence

The statement made by the prisoner in this case, viz, that he had deposited the cloths produced with the witnesses, who delivered them up on demand, was the proximate cause of their discovery and was admissible in evidence. If he had proceeded further and stated that they were cloths which he stole on the day mentioned in the charge from the complainant, that statement would not be evidence, for it would be only introductory to a further act on his part, viz, that of leaving the cloths with the witnesses, and on that ground it would not be evidence. The fact discovered by the information, and how the fact discovered, and as such a relevant fact? (3) Again, an accused was charged under section 411 of the Penal Code, with dishonestly receiving stolen property. In the course of the police investigation, the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it, and would show. He said he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept. The Court held that the statement by the accused that he had buried the property in the fields, distinctly set the police in motion, and led to the discovery of the property. But the statement that "he had kept" the property was not necessarily connected with the fact discovered and was therefore not admissible (4) In the case cited (5) it was held legitimate

(1) R v Jora Haspi, 11 Bom H C R, 242, 244 245 (1874), and see R v Rama Biraja 3 B 12, 17 (1878)

(2) R v Babu Lal 6 A 509, 549, 550, per Straight, J (1884) and ib 514 per Oldfield J, and 518 per Brodhurst J. The explanation of Straight J as to the meaning of s 27 (at p 546) was followed by the Calcutta High Court in Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C, 635, 641 (1885). as to the confessional statements in which case v ante

(3) R v Commer Sabib, 12 M, 153 (1888). The Court added. This appears to us substantially the principle on which the cases reported in Adu Shikdar v R, R v Pancham and R v Jora Haspi were decided, ib, at p 154. Sankappa Rai v R (1903) 31 M, 127.

(4) R v Nana 14 B, 260, 265 (1889)

(5) Gurdit Singh v Emperor, 19 Cr L J 439, s c, 44 I C, 967.

1 "I will point but it was not will point out certain property which I obtained as my share of the booty in the dacoity' In another case(1) the accused made a statement during investigation by the police as to his having thrown a darr and a gandasa into the canal. In consequence of the statement the police recovered the darr and the gandasa from a the fact that the darr and by the accused. It was held statement and the discovery e. When a confession as a whole is excluded whether by reason of sections 26 or 25 or 24 so much of the information given by the person making the confession when the accused was in custody as distinctly relates to the relevant fact thereby discovered is admissible. Under section 27 only so much of the information whether amounting to a confession or not as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved. Even if a single statement contains more information than what is contemplated in section 27 the statement is not to go in as a whole nor is it to go in as a statement at all, but what is admissible is the particular information given by the statement which leads to the discovery (2)

28 If such a confession as is referred to in section 24 is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat, or promise, has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant

Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement threat or promise relevant Principle—If a confession has been obtained from the prisoner by undue means, any statement afterwards made by him under the influence of that confession cannot be admitted as evidence (3). But the confession in the case mentioned in this section is deemed to be voluntary and is received as the result of reflection and free determination unaffected and uninduced by the original threat or promise (4) s 24 (Confession caused by inducement) s 3 (Relevant)

s 3 (Court)

Steph. Dig. Art 27. Possee (r Ev 12th Ed 41 43 ib 13th Ed 41-44 Taylor Ev 878 3 Pass Cr 458-463 Plapson Ev 5th Ed 352 207 Wallis Ev 2nd Ed 300 Field, Ev 6th Ed. 107

COMMENTARY.

This section forms an exception to the law provided by the twenty fourth section(5) and as a qualification of that section should be read together with it. The impression caused by the inducement may have been removed by mere lapse of time, or by an intervening act such as a caution given by some persons of superior authority(6), to the person holding out the inducement. An inducement may continue to operate on a man's mind for a considerable time after

Confession unaffected by original inducement

(1) Kapur Singh v Emperor 20 Cr L J 305 s c 50 1 C 481

(2) Amiruddin Ahmed v Emperor 45 C 557 s c 22 C W N 703

(3) 3 Russ Cr 458

(4) See notes post and Introduction ante as also s 24 ante Steph Dg Art 22

(5) R v Pancham 4 A 198 201 (1838)

(6) R v Lingate, 1 Phillips Ev 414,

Roscoe 12th Ed 41 [the prisoner on being taken into custody had been told by a person who came to assist the constable that it would be better for him to confess but on his being examined before the committing Magistrate on the following day he was frequently cautioned by the Magistrate to say nothing against himself a confession under these circumstances before the Magistrate was held to be clearly admissible] R v Dale 11 Cox 686 it was uttered(1), but, on the other hand, it may be altogether removed by subsequent statements which precede the confession, and which clearly inform the defendant that he must expect no temporal advantage from making one(2) Thus where a Magistrate had told a prisoner that if the latter would confess he would use his influence to obtain a pardon for him, and had afterwards received a letter from the Secretary of State refusing the pardon, which letter the Magistrate communicated to the prisoner, a confession subsequently made was held to be admissible(3) It is for the Court to decide under all the circumstances of the particular case whether the improper influence was totally done away with before the confession was made In this, as well as other respects, the admissibility of the confession is a question for the Judge(4) Where the latter is satisfied that the influence has really ceased, the confession will be admitted(5) But there ought to be strong evidence that the influence has ceased In R v Sherrington(6), Patteson, J., rejected a second confession saying "there ought to be strong evidence to show that the impression under which the first confession was made, was afterwards removed, before the second confession can be received I am of opinion in this case that the prisoner must be considered to have made the second confession, under the same influence as he made the first, the interval of time being too short to allow of the supposition that it was the result of reflection and voluntary determination"

Confession otherwise relevant not to become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, etc

29 If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him

Principle.—In order that a confession should be invalidated, there must be an inducement operating to influence the mind of the accused either by

R v Roster 1 Phillips Ev 414 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 41 R v Houss 6 C & P 404 see Phipson Ev 3rd Ed 236 3d 5th Ed 252 Field Ev 149 3d 6th Ed 107 Norton Ev 166 167 as to the statutory form of warning see 11 & 12 Vic c. 42 s 18

(1) Wills Ev 213 3d 2nd Ed, 303, R v Heutt 1 C & M 534 R v Ganesh Chandra 50 C 127 (1923)

(2) Ib R v Cleus 4 C & P, 221

(3) R v Cleus supra see also R v Horcs 6 C & P 404

(4) 3 Russ Cr 458 Field, Ev, 149, 3d 6th Ed 107

(5) For cases where the inducement has been held to have ceased see Roscoe, Cr Ev 12th Ed 41 Phipson Ev, 5th Ed 252 and where held not to have ceased Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed, 42, Phipson Ev 3d 5th Ed and R v Mussumat Luchoo 5 N.W. P 86 88 (1873) [where a confession had been made upon the inducement held out by the police that nothing would happen if the prisoner confessed and the prisoner made two different confessions the one before the Magistrate and the other before the Sessions Judge who accepted both confessions but did not record any opinion on the point the Appeal Court held that it was not prepared to say that the confession made before the Sessions Judge was made after the impression caused by the promise had been fully removed] Reg v Navrojs Hadabhai 9 Bom H C R 358 370 (1872) [where an inducement was held out to the prisoner in his house and he was immediately after taken to the Traffic Manager of a Rail way in whose presence he signed a receipt for a certain sum of money Sargent C. J. said it would be impossible to hold that the impression was removed in the short interval which elapsed between the inducement and the signing of the receipt] R v Sherrington post, R v Ganesh Chandra 50 C 127 (1923)

(6) 2 Lewin C C 123 cited in Roscoe Cr Ev 47, 48 3 Russ Cr 458 hope of escape or through fear of punishment connected with the charge. Such inducement must relate to the charge and reasonably imply that the position of the accused with reference to it will be rendered better or worse according as he does or does not confess. If the confession be obtained by any other influence, it will not be invalidated (though its weight may be affected (1), however much it would have been more proper not to have exerted such influence, and however much the statement itself may become liable to suspicion) origins of a confession. In relating to the charge, held and do not affect the testi- monial trustworthiness of the confession

- s. 21 (Proof of admissions against persons making them.)
- s. 3 ("Evidence")
- s. 3 ("Relevant")
- s. 123 (Criminating answers)

Steph. Dig., Art. 24, Taylor, Ev. §§ 881, 882, Roscoe Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 44, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 251, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 304, Phillips and Arnold, Ev., 420, 421, Norton, Ev., 167, Best, Ev., § 529, Cr. Pr. Code (Act 1 of 1893) as 163, 313, Wigmore, Ev., § 823, Joy & Confessions, 50

COMMENTARY.

The principle of testimonial untrustworthiness being the foundation of Non-invaliexclusions, the confessions should be taken into account unless their cause was datinsuch that the accused was likely to have been induced to untruly confess (3) origins of a
The non invalidating origins of a confession, which are mentioned in this section confession are,—(a) promise of secrecy, (b) deception, (c) drunkenness, (d) interrogation, (e) want of warning. But there may be others. So what the accused has been overheard muttering to himself or saying to his wife or to any other person in confidence will be receivable in evidence (4)

This does not make the confession inadmissible, though a confidence is Promise of thus created in the mind of the prisoner and he is thrown off his guard. The secrecy true question seems to be—does such confidence render it probable that the prisoner should be thus induced untruly to confess himself guilty of a crime of which he was innocent (5). Thus A was in custody on a charge of murder, B, a fellow prisoner, said to him, "I wish you would tell me how you murdered the hoy—pray split." A replied, "Will you be upon your oath not to mention what I tell you?" B went upon his oath that he would not tell. A then made a statement,—held that this was not such an inducement to confess as would render the statement inadmissible (6)

Where a prisoner in jail on a charge of felony, asked the turnkey of the Deception jail to put a letter into the post for him, and after his promising to do so, the ad the turnkey, instead of was held that the contents prisoner as a confession, notwithstanding the manner in which it was obtained (7). In another case,

- (1) R v Spilsbury 7 C & P, 187, v post, Best Ev. § 529
- (2) Norton Ev. 167, see s. 246 ante Taylor, Ev., § 881, Best Ev. § 529 see notes to R v Gavin 15 Cox 656 and R v Brackenbury 17 Cox 628 (1893)
- (3) Wigmore Ev. § 823 thus a confession is not excluded because of any breach of confidence or deception. The question in all cases is was the inducement such as by possibility to elicit an untrue acknowledgment of guilt? See § 824
- (4) R v Simons 6 C & P 540 R v Sageena, 7 W R., Cr. 56 (1867) but not what he has been heard to say in his sleep
- (5) Joy on Confessions 50
- (6) R v Shaw 6 C & P 373 R v Nababurip Goswami 1 B L R Cr 15 23 (1868) and when a witness promised that what the prisoner said should go no further, the confession was received R v Thomas 7 C & P 345
- (7) R v Derrington 2 C & P 418 R v Nababurip Goswami, supra, 23

artifice was used to induce a prisoner to suppose that some of his accomplices were in custody, under which mistaken supposition he made a confession and it was admitted in evidence (1)

Drunkenness

Whether the prisoner be made drunk for the purpose or with the motive of getting a confession, or made the confession while he had made himself drunk, it is equally receivable (2)

Interroga-
tion

Much less will a confession be rejected merely because it has been elicited irrelevant as a confession, though the fact that it was so elicited might be material to the question whether such statement was voluntary (5) And a confession elicited by questions put by a Magistrate has been held admissible in England (6) In India the law expressly provides for the examination of the accused person by the Court (7) When the confession is contained in an answer given by a witness to a question put to him in the witness box, the provisions contained in section 132, post, must be borne in mind

Want of warning

A voluntary confession, too is admissible though it does not appear that the prisoner was warned, and even though it appears on the contrary that he was not so warned (8) It is no part of the duty of a Magistrate to tell an accused person that anything he may say will go as evidence against him (9) The Criminal Procedure Code (10) enacts that no Police officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of any investigation under Chapter XIV, any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will

Consideration of proved confession affecting person making it and others jointly under trial for same offence

30 When more persons than one are being tried jointly for the same offence, and a confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some other of such persons is proved, the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession

(1) R v Burley 1 Phillips & Arn 420 see also R v Rann Churn 20 W R Cr 33 (1873) in which the deception practised consisted of a statement made by the Police officer to the prisoner that the latter's brother in law had given out that he was guilty

(2) R v Spilsbury 7 C & P 167 in which case Coleridge, J said This [the fact that the prisoner was drunk] is matter of observation for me upon the weight that ought to attach to this statement when it is considered by the jury See Best Ev § 529

(3) As to the English rule in regard to admissions obtained by questions by the police see R v Brackenbury 17 Cox 678 R v Best C C A (1909) 1 K B 692, (overruling R v Gavin 15 Cox 656), Rogers v Hawkins (1893) 67 L J A B 576 R v Milar (1895) 18 Cox 54 R v Goddard (1896) 60 L P, 491 R

v. Husted (1839) 19 Cox 16 R v Mal (1893) 17 Cox 689 Taylor Ev § 881 Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 44 As to answers given to the police not amounting to a confession of guilt see R v Nababur Cox 1 B L R Cr 15 20 (1868)

(4) Taylor Ev § 881
(5) Barindra Kumar Ghose v P (1909) 37 C 91

(6) R v Rees 7 C & P 569 R v Ellis 1 Ry & M 432 cited in R v Nababur Cox supra 25

(7) Field Ev 150 16th Ed 103 Cr Pr Code s 342

(8) Taylor Ev §§ 881 892 see Field Ev 6th Ed 108 R v Nababur Cox 1 B L R Cr 15 (1868) the decision in which on this point has been followed by the present section

(9) R v Uzzar 10 C 775 777 (1844)
(10) S 163 (Act V of 1898)

Explanation.—"Offence," as used in this section, includes the abetment of, or attempt to commit, the offence (1)

Illustrations

(a) A and B are jointly tried for the murder of C. It is proved that A said—"B and I murdered C." The Court may consider the effect of this confession as against B.

(b) A is on his trial for murder of C. There is evidence to show that C was murdered by A and B, and that B said—"A and I murdered C."

This statement may not be taken into consideration by the Court against A, as B is not being jointly tried.

Principle.—When a person makes a confession, which affects both himself and another, the fact of self implication takes the place, as it were, of the sanction of an oath, or, is rather supposed to serve as some guarantee for the truth of the accusation against the other (2). For when a person admits his guilt and exposes himself to the pains and penalties provided therefor, there is a guarantee for his truth (3). The guarantee, however, is a very weak one, for if the fact of self inculpation is not in all cases a guarantee of the truth of a statement even as against the person making it, much less is it so as against another. Further, a confession may be true so far as it implicates the maker but may be false and concocted through malice and revenge so far as it affects others. While such a confession deserves ordinarily very little reliance, it is pretend relieving

s. 3 (Court')

s. 3 (Prove!')

Norton, Fr, 169, Cunningham, Ev, 26, 27 148 Field Ev, 126-159 ib, 6th Ed 113-115

COMMENTARY

The general rule of English law (3) and the rule which prevailed in India prior to the passing of this Act (6) is and was, that the confession of an accused person is only evidence against himself and cannot be used against others. This section forms an exception to this rule. The grounds upon which it has been enacted have been adverted to, but the weakness of the guarantee afforded by self implication and the dangerous and exceptional character of the evidence require that this section should be construed very strictly (7) and accordingly, such a construction has been applied to each of its terms. Thus it has been held that a person who pleads guilty is not being "tried jointly", that

(1) This explanation was inserted in this section by Act III of 1891 s. 4 and alters the law in this respect as laid down in R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 (1873) Badli v R 7 M 579 (1884) R v Alagappa Balu Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886).

(2) R v Belat Ali 19 W R Cr 67 (1873) per Phear J R v Jagrup 7 A 646 648 (1885) per Straight J. The object sought by the rule of law is a safe guard for sincerity and for information. R v Nur Mohamed 8 B 223 227 (1883) per West J.

(3) R v Daji Narsu 6 B 288 291 (1882) per West J.

(4) See remarks on this section in Cunningham s Ev 26 27 148.

(5) Roscoe Cr Ev 49 50 Taylor Ev 33 104 871 Phupson Ev 5th Ed 253 Powell Ev 9th Ed 113 521.

(6) R v Kally Churn Lohar 6 W R Cr 84 (1866) R v Bus ruddi 8 W R Cr 35 (1867) R v Durbaroo Dass 13 W R Cr 14 (1870) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 71 (1874) per Phear J. The provision contained in the section is a new one, there being no similar rule either in Act II of 1855 or in the Criminal Procedure Codes of 1861 1872.

(7) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 64 (1873) per Glover J R v Molappa Bin 14 Ind Jur N S 19 (1890), see R v Sadhu Mundul supra Field, Ev 156 ib 6th Ed 115, Norton, Ev, 169.

not sentenced, merely because it was possible that the evidence elicited at the trial might enable the Court to determine whether to pass a sentence of death or transportation it was held that his confession could not be considered as against his co accused, as there was in fact under such circumstances after the plea of guilty, no joint trial (1) In a case in the Madras High Court a distinction was drawn between a trial before a Sessions Court, where a prisoner who pleads guilty at the outset and is convicted on his plea cannot be tried jointly with others against whom the trial proceeds, and a trial before a Magistrate In this case all the accused were tried jointly and some confessed the crime and implicated their co accused in statements under section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) and after their statements had been recorded and the evidence for the prosecution closed pleaded guilty under section 250 (1) of that Code and it was held that these statements were admissible under this section (2) A confession made by a co accused with B in a dacoity case is not admissible under this section against B in a proceeding under section 110 Criminal Procedure Code though admissible against him as well as against the confessor in the dacoity case (3) A statement by an accused person which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making the statement may directly repudiate his participation in the crime Such a statement may be taken into consideration against the person who however,

accessory against the

co-accused if sufficient corroboration is forthcoming (4) not), and either to read out his confession made previously, or to allow a person to give an account of what the prisoner had told him (8) or to take a statement which he makes (9) for the Court and either to s a witness (6), see what the convicted or

The meaning of this expr definition (10), or the same offence (12) But when two definition arising out of a single transaction the confession of the one may be the same legal For the same specific same

of the same offence

Kalu Patil supra 148 R v Ra : Saran
8 A 304 309 (1886)

(1) Ib

(2) Basu Reddi (in re) 38 M 302
(1915) per Aylmer J distinguishing R v Pakhu 19 B 195 (1894) and R v Pirbhu 17 A 524 (1895) as relating to trials before Sessions Courts and R v Laksh Nayya 22 M 491 (1899) as based on them

(3) Mafizuddin v King Emperor 33 C L J 70 (1921) and see Amir Allah Pramanick v Emperor 22 C W N 405

(4) Jasoda v Emperor 53 I C 691

(5) R v Kalu Patil supra 148 R v Chhna Pavulci supra

(6) Venkataram v R supra 104 R v Pakhu supra 198 R v Chhna Pavulci supra Quare whether co accused can be examined as a witness after conviction and before sentence see R v Anaya 3 Bom L R 437 (1901) Where two prisoners are tried together for differ ent offences committed in the same transaction it is improper and illegal to examine one prisoner as a witness against the other In the matter of A David 5 C L R 574 (1880) referred to in Bishnu Banuar v R 1 C W N 35 (1896)

(7) R v Pakhu supra 197 R v Chhna Pavulci 23 M 151 154 (1899) but see R v Kalu Patil R v Ram Saran supra loc cit

(8) Venkataram v R supra 103

(9) R v Pirbhu 17 A 524 (1895) s c W N (1895) 111

(10) R v Malappa Bin 14 Ind Jur N S 19 0 (1890) R v Nur Mahomed 8 B 3 76 (1883)

(11) R v Alagappan Bai Weir 3rd Ed 499 (1886) see also Deputy Legal Rebrancer v Karu a Bastobi 22 C, 164 173 (1894)

(12) Badi v R 7 M 579 (1884) sub non Malomed Salib Weir 3rd Ed 495, R Malappa Bin supra.

used against the other, though it inculcates himself through acts separable from those ascribed to his accomplice, and capable therefore, of constituting a separate offence from that of the accomplice (1) Prior to the insertion of the Explanation to this section, the commission of an offence and the commission of its abetment were held to be different offences. Thus it was held that, upon the trial of A for murder and B for abetment thereof, a confession by A implicating B could not be taken into consideration against B under this section (2) Act III of 1891 has however, by the insertion of the Explanation to this section, altered the law in this respect. But this Explanation applies only to cases where one person is charged with an offence and another is actually charged with, and tried for abetment of it (3) Where there is a joint trial of accused persons under entirely different sections of the Penal Code, the confession of a co accused cannot be taken into consideration against the other (4) But if a joint trial has commenced in which the prisoners are charged under different sections and afterwards the charge is altered so that all the prisoners are then tried under the same section their confessions may be admissible against each other. Thus where A and B were being jointly tried before a Court of Sessions the first for murder and the second for abetment of murder, a confession made by A that he himself had committed the murder, at the instigation of B was put in as evidence against A

nt of murder
he confession
t the original without any urges from the commencement, and that no objection having been taken by B, who was represented by a Vakil, to the admissibility of A's confession against him when the charge against A was altered the Sessions Judge was justified in using the confession against B also (5)

Confes
sion

The word must be construed as meaning the same in this section as in the twenty fourth, twenty fifth and twenty sixth sections (6) The subject of incriminatory statements which fall short of full admissions of guilt has been already dealt with. A mere admission from which no inference of guilt follows, is not within this section though it implicates others and is evidence, therefore, only against the maker. Before a statement can be taken into account to a "confession" on which all are charged (7) the other evidence might well

(1) R v Nur Mohamed 8 B 223 (1883)

(2) Badji v R 7 M 59 (1881) and see R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 (1873) R v Alagapppan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 497 499 (1873)

(3) Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Bastab 22 C 164 173 (1894)

(4) R v Bala Patel 5 B 63 (1882) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 497 499 (1873) Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Bastab supra loc cit R v Alagapppan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886) R v Malappa Bin 14 Ind Jur N S 19 (1890)

(5) R v Gorind Babli 11 Bom H C R 278 (1874)

(6) R v Jagrup 7 A 646 648 (1885)

(7) R v Mohesh Bwas 19 W R

Cr 16 (1873) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R

Cr 57 (1873) R v Belat Ali 19 W R

Cr 67 (1873) R v Amrita Govinda

10 Bom H C R 497 500 501 (1873)

R v Kukree Ooran 21 W R Cr 43

(1874) R v Banuaree Lall 21 W R

Cr 53 (1874) R v Naga 23 W R

Cr 24 (1875) R v Kesilub Boon 25

W R Cr 8 (1876) R v Ba joo

Clo dhy 25 W R Cr 43 (1876) R

v Gauraj 2 A 444 (1879) R v Mulu

2 A 646 (1880) R v Daji Narsu 6 B

288 (1882) Voor Dur v R 6 C 29

(1880) Bishan Dutt v R 2 All L J

53 (1904) Sital Singh v Emperor 46 C

70a cited under s 10 Quare—As to the correctness of the decision of R v Bakur

Khan 5 W P 213 (1873) the statement in which case it is submitted did not amount to a confession on Shakeber Ma

v Emperor 18 C L J 590 (1913)

tatement is to be used be a confession in the
that of a confession "

Where the inherent quality of the statement by the prisoner is not a confession, it cannot be used against the other accused (1) "This Court has already had occasion in more than one case to point out that confessions, which are made use of under the thirtieth section of the Evidence Act, in the first place, can only be used so far as they make the confession for which all are being tried, and second evidence of an accomplice" (2) "The test intended should be applied to a statement of one prisoner proposed to be used in evidence as against another, is to see whether it is sufficient by itself to justify the conviction of the prisoner jointly tried with the other" In fact to use a popular and must tar himself and the per same brush" (3)

To render the statement of one person jointly tried with another for the same offence liable to consideration against that other, it is necessary that it should amount to a distinct confession of the offence charged (4) In one case (5), it appears to have been held that the word 'confession' is limited to confessions of actual guilt, but it would seem that this is not so and that the term will include statements which amount either to a direct admission of constructive guilt, or statements short of such admission, but from which the inference of Constructive guilt follows (6)

From a consideration of the principle upon which this kind of evidence is admitted, it is plain that a statement which entirely exonerates the maker and inculpates his fellow prisoner is not within the section (7) inasmuch as it does not amount to a confession of the maker's own individual guilt of the offence for which he and the others are jointly tried, nor is such a statement which affects himself and others but the latter only Such a statement can afford no guarantee whatever of its own truth, being made without either the sanction of an oath, or of that substitute for that sanction which consists in the self inculpation of the maker, whatever (8) The rule he confession must affect the maker thereof namely — "That before a confession of a person jointly tried with the prisoner can be taken into consideration against him it must appear that that confession implicates the confessing person substantially to the same extent as it implicates the person against whom it is to be used, in the commission of the offence for which the

Affecting
himself and some other

(1) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 97 500 501 (1873) the passage in quotation marks as per West J

(2) R v Naga 21 W R Cr 24 (1875) per Phear J

(3) R v Ganraj 2 A 444 446 (1879) per Bright J the same argument was offered but not accepted in R v Bakur Khan 5 N W P 213 (1873)

(4) R v Daji Narsu 6 B 288 (1887) and see Sankappa Rai v R (1908) 31 M 127

(5) R v Bajor Choudhry 25 W R Cr 13 (1876)

(6) See R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R 497 (1874) R v Ganraj 2 A 444 (1879) R v Mohesh Bhusas 19 W R Cr 16 (1873) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W

R Cr 57 (1873) See Indian Penal Code ss 114 149

(7) R v Keshub Bona 25 W R Cr 8 (1876) R v Belat Ali 19 W R Cr 67 (1873) R v Banwaroo Lall 21 W R Cr 53 (1874) R v Ganraj 2 A 444 (1879) R v Minu 2 A 646 (1880) R v Daji Narsu 6 B 288 (1887) Noor Bur v R 6 Cr 279 (1880) Bshan Datt v R 2 All L J 53 (1904) see also R v Mohesh Bhusas 19 W R Cr 16 (1873) R v Amrita Govinda 10 Bom H C R Cr 497 (1873) R v Khukree Oora 21 W R Cr 43 (1874), R v Banjoo Choudhry 25 W R Cr 43 (1876)

(8) R v Belat Ali 19 W R Cr 67 (1873) per Phear J prisoners are being jointly tried" (1) It is this self implication which is supposed to afford a guarantee for the truth of the statement Agun "this section must be interpreted to mean that the statement of fact made by the prisoner, which amounts to a confession of guilt on his part, may be taken into consideration, so far, and so far only as that particular statement of fact itself extends against the other prisoners, who are being tried as well as himself for the offence which is thus confessed I think the two illustrations which are given to this section bear out this view If this be so we must be careful not to apply statements made by R I D, before the Magistrate against other prisoners than himself further than those same statements amount in themselves to a confession of guilt on his part" (2) Neither can the statement of prisoner under section 30 of in pari delicto, when, that is the confessing prisoner implicates himself to the full as much as his co prisoner whom he is criminating' (3) The ratio decidendi of the above cases is that statements which inculpate the maker more than, or equally with, others alone can afford any satisfactory guarantee of their truth Less weight is to be asser degree than others, lesser degree) implicates the statement will be excluded, according to the rulings of the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts

Very little, if any,

blame on others

who makes it, and

High Courts (4) Lastly, no guarantee whatever is afforded by a statement which entirely exonerates the maker, and such a statement is therefore in all cases inadmissible

Made

The confessions may have been made at any time before or at the trial (3) This section is not to be read as if the words at the trial were inserted after

(1) R v Belat Ali 19 W R Cr 67 10 B L R 453 (1873) per Phear J followed in R v Ganraj 2 A 444 (1879) R v Mulu 2 A 646 (1880) R v Babajibin Sathu 14 Ind Jur N S 175 (1890) see R v Mohesh Bhusas 19 W R Cr 16 (1873)

(2) R v Mohesh Bhusas 19 W R Cr 16 23 per Phear J 10 B L R 455n But see for statement before Magistrate under section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code Bani Reddi (in re) 38 M 302 (1915)

(3) R v Baijoo Choudhry 25 W R Cr 43 (1876) per Glover J that is only when the confessor makes both equally guilty of the offence The rule is laid down more broadly in R v Belat Ali supra and the cases which follow it A fortiori a statement which implicates the confessing prisoner more than his co-prisoners would appear to come within this section [see R v Belat Ali supra in which Phear J seems to have thought admissible a statement by a prisoner who made certain of his fellows accessories before the fact and not actual actors in the transaction which constituted the foundation of the charge] But the decisions of the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts will exclude a confession which implicates the maker in a lesser degree than his co accused unless the self implication and the implication of others is substantially the same See however as to this R v Nur Mahamed 8 B 223 277 (1883) in which the confession tended to reduce the guilt of the maker to that of a subordinate agent of another as principal cf also R v Govind Babi 11 Bom H C R 278 (1874)

(4) R v Taranath Roy Choudhry (1910) 37 C 375

(5) In R v Ashoolash Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 488 (1878) Garth C J appears to have been of opinion that a confession under s 30 must not be one made at the trial for he says (at p 488) The word proved in s 30 must refer to a confession made beforehand. But see R v Tanya talad post and in no reported case has it ever been objected to the admissibility of a confession that it was made at the trial In R v Chandra Vall 7 C 65 (1881) and R v Lakshman Bala 6 B 124 (1882) the objection to the admissibility of the confessions taken and recorded by the Sessions Judge at the trial was not to the fact of their having been made at the trial but to their not having been proved in post the word "made," and the word "recorded" substituted for the word "proved" Therefore, a confession duly made any time by one of several accused persons who are under trial jointly for the same offence can be taken into consideration under section 30 as against the other accused persons (1) It is not necessary that the confession, to be taken into consideration, should have been made in the presence of the co prisoners against whom it is offered in evidence (2)

But though this section allows a confession to be used against another prisoner although made in his absence, it yet requires that such confession should be "proved" as against the prisoner to whose prejudice it is to be used. Therefore, where two accused persons were jointly tried before the Sessions Judge on a charge of murder and the Judge examined each of the accused in the absence of the other, making the latter withdraw from the Court during the examination of the former, though without objection from the pleaders of the accused persons, it was held that the examination of each accused could be used only against himself and not against his fellow accused (3) Provided a confession is only proved afterward it is immaterial whether or not the co prisoners were present at the time of making it. When a confession is used for the purposes of this section, the person to be affected by it has a right to demand that it be strictly proved and shown to have been, in all essential respects, taken and recorded as prescribed by law (4) When a confession of one prisoner is taken in the absence of the other prisoners and the latter have had no opportunity of denying or even of knowing what their fellow prisoner has said, such a confession cannot be said to have been "proved," it is only after proper proof is given that it may be taken into consideration (5)

* Proved "

The word "Court" in section 30 of the Evidence Act means not only the "Court" Judge, in a trial by a Judge with a jury, but includes both Judge and jury (6)

By this section the Legislature has only bestowed a discretion upon the Court to take into consideration such confession (7) While under section 21 admissions (which include confessions) are relevant and may be used against the persons making them, the present section merely provides that the Court may take them into consideration against other persons, and this distinction is significant and shows that under this section the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co accused (8) When more persons than one are jointly tried for the same offence, the confession made by one of them, if admissible in evidence at all should be taken into consideration against all the accused, and not against the person alone who made it (9) The law which prevailed before the passing of this Act required a conviction to be

May take into consideration "

(1) R v Tanja salad 14 Ind Jur S 516 (1890)

(2) H C Proceedings 31st July 1885 Weir 3rd Ed 499 R v Lakshman Bala 6 B, 124 125 (1882) see R v Bepin Biswas 10 C 970 974 (1884) In R v Bepin Biswas 10 C 970 974 (1884) it was held that in that particular case the confessions of two of several accused persons made in the absence of the others were of no weight against the latter

(3) R v Lakshman Bala 6 B 124 (1882) following R v Chandra Nath 7 C 65 (1878) in these cases the confessions were objected to not merely because they were made during the absence of the co prisoners but because they were not afterwards proved in any way nor opportunity given to them to know what had been said against them

(4) R v Chander Bhattacharjee 24 W R Cr 42 (1875) [Cr Pr Code] 1872 s 122 (s 164 of Act V of 1898) i.e. in the manner provided by ss 345 346 (ss 342 364 of Act V of 1898)

(5) R v Lakshman Bala supra R v Chandra Nath supra

(6) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 F B (1868)

(7) R v Sadin Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 71 (1874) per Phear J

(8) R v Laht Mohan Chuckerbutty, S B (1911) 38 C 559

(9) R v Ka Biraja 3 B, 12 (1878)

based on evidence, excluding from that term statements of the character mentioned in this section (1) And in so far as a statement by a witness only is "evidence" according to the definition given of that term when used in this Act, a confession by an accused person affecting himself and his co accused is not "evidence" in that special sense (2) These words do not mean that the confession is to have the force of sworn evidence (3) But such a confession is nevertheless evidence in the sense that it is matter which the Court, before whom it is made, may take into consideration in order to determine whether the issue of guilt is proved or not (4) The wording however, of this section (which is an exception) shows that such a confession is merely to be an element in the consideration (5) of all the facts of the case, while allowing it to be so considered, it does not do away with the necessity of other evidence (6) For even when regarded as evidence and taken at its highest value, it is of too weak a character to found a conviction upon it alone and hence corroboration should be required in all cases if instead of being the statement of a fellow prisoner would not in general testimony of an accomplice given before the Court under the sanction of an oath and a process of careful examination and capable of being tested by cross examination, is yet by its nature such that as against an accused, it must be received with caution, still more so must be the confession of a fellow prisoner, which is only the bare statement of an accomplice, limited to just so much as the confessing person chose to say and guaranteed by nothing except the penit

(1) v ante construction

(2) v ante s 3 and see Proceedings 24th January 1873 7 Mad H C R App 15 [a conviction founded on such confession alone is a case of no evidence and bad in law] R v Kalivappa Gounden (1893) Weir 3rd Ed 494 [although confessional statements may be considered they cannot be accepted as evidence of any fact necessary to constitute the offence] R v Bayaji Kom 14 Ind Jur N S 384 (1886) [the statement of a co accused is not technically evidence within the definition given in s 3 v post] R v Khandia 15 B 66 (1890) [referred to in R v Nirmal Das 22 A 445 447 (1900) [conviction held to be bad as though a confession could be taken into consideration it was not evidence within the definition given by s 3 and could not therefore alone form the basis of a conviction], R v Naga 23 W R 24 (1875) R v Chunder Bhuttacharjee 24 W R 42 (1875) R v Narain Tel mentioned in R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty (v post) [the Legislature avoids saying that confessions of this sort are evidence and may be used as evidence it says merely the Court 'may take into consideration' such confession] R v Dip Narain 37 A 247 (1915)

(3) R v Nirmal Das 27 A 445 (1900)

(4) R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 481 F B (1878) Emperor v Babar Ali 47 C 789 (1915), v ante s 3, see next note

(5) Proceedings 24th January 1873 7 Mad H C R App 15 With respect to the words taken into consideration' see R v Chunder Bhuttacharjee 24 W R Cr 42 (1875) R v Nagar 23 W R Cr 24 (1875) and see note (3) p 181 In R v Bayaji Kom Andu 14 Ind Jur N S 384 (1886) followed in R v Khandia 15 B 66 (1890) it was held that the words taken into consideration in s 30 of the Evidence Act mean 'taken into consideration' for the purpose of arriving at a conclusion of fact and though a co accused's statement is not technically evidence within the definition given in s 3 it may still be used quantum valeat for the basis of a reasonable inference and if a jury think it sufficiently supported by a partial or qualified admission of guilt on the part of the accused himself and by admitted physical facts pointing to his connection with the crime imputed to him they are not precluded by law any more than by reason from a finding of guilty thus sustained

(6) Ciddigadu v R (1909) 33 N 46 (7) R v Mohesh Bixas 19 W R Cr 16 25 (1873) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R 69 71 (1874) R v Malappa Bim 11 Bom 11 C R 196 198 (1874) R v Naga 23 W R Cr 24 (1875) R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 (1878), Emperor v Sadat Khan 43 B 739 v 21 Bom L R 448 20 Cr L J 497 see ss 133 114 post What corroboration is necessary depends on the facts of each case ab

do not stand upon the same but on a lower footing than the testimony of an accomplice (3). And although the instance of corroboration which is appended to Illust (b) of section 114 is corroboration to be found in accounts of an occurrence given by accomplices, there is no indication that the Legislature intended in this passage by the term "accounts given by the accomplices" anything other than accounts given in due course of examination as witnesses. Therefore the mere confessions of prisoners do not come within the scope of this legislative declaration (4), and there is no express provision in the Act to limit, in any case, the operation of the rule that confessions of co-prisoners, standing alone, are legally insufficient for conviction.

Having regard to the foregoing considerations, the Courts have established the following rules with regard to this species of evidence —

(1) If there is (a) absolutely no other evidence in the case (5), or (b) the other evidence is inadmissible (6) such a confession alone will not sustain a conviction.

Thus (a) a conviction of a person who is being tried together with other persons for the same offence cannot proceed merely on an uncorroborated statement in the confession of one of such other persons (7). So where two prisoners were convicted under sections 312 and 203 of the Penal Code and there was not, as the Court observed, a particle of evidence against the second prisoner except the confession of the co prisoner, it was held that the case was one of no evidence, and that the conviction was bad in law and should be set aside (8). If a prisoner were convicted upon such evidence, whether by a jury or otherwise, and were to appeal to the High Court, the conviction ought to be set aside, further, any Sessions Judge trying such a case before a jury ought to direct them to acquit the prisoner (9). (b) Where the only evidence against the second prisoner was a confession made by the first prisoner, and a statement made by the second prisoner to a police constable, it was held that the latter statement was inadmissible and that the second prisoner could not be convicted solely on the confession of the first (10).

(1) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 71 (1874) per Phear J and see R v Naga 23 W R 24 (1875) R v Bhowani 1 A 664 (1878) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 (1878) R v Bepin Biswas 10 C 970 (1884) R v Dosa Jiva 10 B 231 (1885) R v Krishnabhat ib 319 (1885) R v Ram Saran 8 A 306 (1885) R v Alagappan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886) R v Babaji bin 14 Ind Jur N S 175 (1888) R v Ganapabhat 14 Ind Jur N S 20 (1889) [the corroborative evidence must be more cogent and should be more strictly examined by the Court than when an accomplice gives evidence as a witness] Emperor v Babar Ali Gazi 42 C 789 (1915) Muthukumeraswami Pillai v Emperor 35 N 397 (1912) and see post commentary on section 133

(2) S 133 post

(3) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 404 496 (1878) per Jackson and Ainslie JJ R v Babaji bin 14 Ind Jur N S 175 (1888) [confessions made by accused persons at a joint trial cannot be treated as the evidence of accomplices against one other] R v Lakshmya Pandaram 22 M 491 493 (1899) Giddigadu v R (1909) 33 M 46

(4) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 71 (1874) per Phear J R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 494 496 (1878) per Jackson and Ainslie JJ

(5) Proceedings 24th January 1873 7 Mad H C R App 15 followed in R v Ambigara Hulagu 1 M 163 (1876) R v Bhatani 1 A 664 (1878) R v Ram Chand ib 675 (1878) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 F B (1878) R v Dasa Jiva 10 B 231 (1885) R v Khandsa 15 B 66 (1890)

(6) R v Ambigara Hulagu 1 M 163 (1876)

(7) See cases cited in note (2) ante
(8) Proceedings 24th January 1873 7 Mad H C R App 15 followed in R v Ambigara Hulagu 1 M 163 (1876)

(9) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 490 (1878) per Garth C J

(10) R v Ambigara Hulagu supra

(2) (a) The confession of co prisoners, to be rendered trustworthy must be ident evidence, and not by the testimony of all the persons

(a) It is clear, for the reasons above mentioned, that though admissible under section 30 and capable of being taken into consideration, no weight can be attached to the confession unless it is in the first place corroborated. The confessions of persons tried jointly for the same offence may be "considered" as against other parties then on their trial with them but such confessions, when used as evidence against others stand in need of corroboration (4) When confessions of one co prisoner are admissible against another co prisoner, the utmost value that can be claimed for them is that if there is other untailed evidence against the accused they may be "considered" together with such evidence (5) The corroborative evidence must be more cogent and should be more strictly examined by the Court than when an accomplice gives evidence as a witness for a confession cannot be treated as of the same value as the evidence of an accomplice (6) Verification proceedings do not add any value to an approver's evidence or to a confession and cannot be regarded as corroboration (7) (b) In the next place the corroboration must be by independent evidence and not by the testimony of accomplices or approvers. For, if

of one accomplice is not sufficient corroboration of another. And further, in so far as confession does not stand as high as the testimony of an accomplice there is a greater necessity for independent corroboration (8) (c) Thirdly, not only must there be corroboration as to the corpus delicti, but also as to the identity of all the persons concerned. This is no technical rule but one founded

(1) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 (1873) R v Koonjo Leth 20 W R Cr 13 (1873) post R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 (1874) R v Naga 23 W R Cr 24 (1885) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 (1878) R v Dosa Jita 10 B 231 (1885) R v Ram Saran 8 A 306 (1885) R v Alagappan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886) R v Ganapabhat 14 Ind Jur N S 20 (1889)

(2) R v Jaffir Ali supra R v Molesh Biswas 19 W R Cr 16 (1873) R v Koonjo Leth supra 3 [The confession of A. L. of course could not have been legally used against the others at all excepting to such an extent as it was substantially corroborated by unimpeachable evidence aliunde per Phear J] R v Sadhu Mundul supra R v Malapa bin 11 Bom H C R 196 R v Bayoo Cloddry 25 W R Cr 43 (1876) R v Dosa Jita 10 B 231 (1885) R v Ram Saran 8 A 306 (1885) R v Alagappan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886)

(3) R v Molesh Biswas supra 21 R v Sadhu Mundul supra R v Budhu Vanku 1 B 475 (1876) R v Kalappa Gound Weir 3rd Ed 494 (1883) R

v Dosa Jita supra R v Ram Saran supra

(4) R v Jaffir Ali supra

(5) R v Alagappan Bali supra

(6) R v Ganapabhat 14 Ind Jur N S 20 (1889)

(7) R v Lalit Molai Cluckerbutty S B (1911) 38 C 559

(8) R v Molesh Biswas 19 W R Cr 19 25 (1873) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 58 [Tainted evidence is not made better by being double in quantity as it would be where the only corroboration is accomplice testimony] R v Ram Saran supra [a second accomplice does not improve the position of the first] R v Koonjo Leth supra 3 ante R v Sadhu Mundul supra R v Malapa bin Kafara supra and cases cited ante One confession does not corroborate another Takanah v R 10 C W N xi (1905) It may be generally stated that where there are two sets of evidence neither of which can alone be accepted without corroboration they cannot each in its turn be taken to corroborate the other and joined together so as to justify any Court in acting on such evidence R v Jadab Das 4 C W N 129 (1889) s c 27 C. 295

on long judicial experience (1) The question is not whether the story is generally true, but whether it is true in the particular points which affect the persons who are accused by him, because it is just at those points that the reason for suspicion and uncertainty comes into force (2) The accomplice (and, therefore, a fortiori, a confessing prisoner) must be corroborated not only as to one but as to all of the persons affected by the evidence, and corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner does not entitle his evidence against another to be accepted without corroboration (3)

(3) The confessions of prisoners are not sufficient corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice, either as to the corpus delicti or the identity of the person affected (4) For the corroboration which is needed of an accomplice's testimony is evidence which is independent of accomplices But a confession of a more trustworthy by a tainted confession (v ante)

Upon the question as to what independent evidence is legally sufficient corroboration of the confession, it is necessary to bear in mind that being evidence of a very defective character, the confession requires especially careful scrutiny before it can be safely relied on (5) The corroborative evidence must be examined by the Court than when

There is no doubt as to the sufficiency of independent and credible evidence, or of a confession made by the accused (7) in addition to the confession by his co prisoner implicating him, but doubt may arise in cases where the evidence is circumstantial (8) The rulings on this point are not uniform In one case it seems to have been thought that if the other evidence

(1) R v Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty S B (1911) 38 C 559

(2) R v Mohesh Biswas supra at p 21 and see R v Budhu Nanku 1 B 47 (1876), and R v Chiturl Purushotam cited in note to same R v Sadhu Mundul, supra R v Kallappa Gounden Weir 3rd Ed 494 (1883) R v Dosa Jeta 10 B 231 233 (1885) [In this case the prisoner was released as the confession was not corroborated by any independent evidence to show that the appellant was one of the house-breakers] R v Ram Saran 8 A 306 (1885) see p 184 note ante

(3) R v Ram Saran supra

(4) R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 57 (1873) R v Mohesh Biswas 19 W R Cr 16 21 25 (1873) R v Mohappa bin 11 Bom H C R, 196 (1874) R v Ishra bhat 10 B 319 (1885) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 (1874) R v Naga 23 W R Cr, 24 (1875) R v Ra 1 Saran 8 A 306 (1885) R v Bajoo Choudhry 25 W R Cr 43 (1876) R v Budhu Nanku 1 B 475 (1876) R v Bepin Biswas 10 C 970 (1884) R v Alagappan Bali Weir 3rd Ed 499a (1886) R v Clendinning Ibrahim 14 Ind Jur N S 125 (1888)

(5) R v Sadhu Mundul 21 W R Cr 69 (1874) R v Naga 23 W R Cr 24 (1875)

(6) R v Ganapabhat 14 Ind Jur N S 20 (1839) see also R v Sadhu Mundul supra

(7) See R v Jaffir Ali 19 W R Cr 39 60 (1873) R v Bajoo Choudhry 25 W R 44 (1876) R v Bujaji A 14 Ind Jur 384 (1886) see R v Barn Hayer 19 M 482 (1896) where under the circumstances of that case the corroborating evidence was held to be sufficient

(8) See (1) as to possession or discovery of property (a) on charge of theft dacoity dishonestly receiving R v Jaffir Ali supra R v Naga supra R v Ra Saran R v Koonja Leth supra R v Chunder Bhuttacharjee supra R v Kallappa Gounden supra R v Hardeja 5 N W P 217 (1873) R v Krishnabhat supra R v Dosa Jeta supra (b) on a charge of murder or injury to the body R v Ram Saran supra (2) as to other circumstantial evidence (a) absence from home R v Jaffir Ali supra R v Bepin Biswas supra (b) sudden disappearance R v Bajoo Choudhry supra (c) presence in company of other accused R v Kallappa Gounden supra R v Ram Saran supra (d) medical evidence R v Sadhu Mundul supra (e) all feeling R v Bajoo Choudhry supra (f) finding of instrument of crime R v Mohesh Biswas supra

'tends' to conviction it would be sufficient (1) Where, in another prosecution, the circumstantial evidence constituted a very strong prima facie case, it was held to be sufficiently corroborative (2) Again, it has been held that corroboration by circumstantial evidence is not sufficient "unless the circumstances constituting corroboration would if believed to exist, themselves support a conviction (3) Lastly it has been said that "how far any corroborative evidence would be sufficient coupled with the confession to convict a prisoner, must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case" (4)

Upon the manner in which the confessions are to be taken into consideration and upon the relation in which the confessions stand towards the other evidence in the case, the rulings are also not uniform. In some it has been laid down that they cannot be used as the basis of a case but only as corroborative of other independent evidence because they are not 'evidence' (5) or if they are 'evidence' they are evidence of a very weak character (6) In other cases they have been treated as the basis of a case requiring only corroboration. The matter however is of no practical importance as whether they be treated in either of the above modes the issue of guilt will (if the confessions be sufficiently corroborated) be determined upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence including therein the confessions and the other independent evidence, both of these are elements in the case which, when combined, offer the material for the Court's decision whichever of the two be regarded as the prior element or basis (7)

In the undermentioned case it was held by the Calcutta High Court that a retracted confession should carry practically no weight as against a person other than the maker because it is not made on oath, it is not tested by cross examination and its truth is denied by the maker himself, who has thus lied on one or other of the occasions, and that the very fullest corroboration would be necessary in such a case far more than would be demanded for the sworn testimony of an accomplice on oath (8) In another case it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that a retracted confession may be taken into consideration (that is used as evidence) against not only the person making it but persons tried jointly with the confessing accused for the same offence and that, as regards the person making it such a confession may even without any corroborative evidence form the basis of a conviction, and that, as regards other co accused, although corroborative evidence may be necessary, it is not necessary that such evidence should by itself be sufficient to support a conviction and semble that a conviction based on the unsupported evidence afforded by the confession of a co accused would not be unlawful (9) In another case it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that a retracted confession cannot ordinarily take the place of legal proof, and that under this section only a confession in the true sense of the word may be taken into consideration and that it would be unsafe to place any reliance on a retracted confession as against a co accused (10) In a case in the Bombay High Court it was said that

(1) P v Chunder Bhattacharyee 24 W R Cr 42 (1875) per Jackson J A similar view seems to be indicated in R v Bayaji Kani 14 Ind Jur 384 (1886)

(2) P v Naga 23 W R Cr 24 25 (1875) per Phelar J

(3) R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 481 per Jackson and MacDonnell JJ

(4) Id 490 per Garth C J

(5) R v Chunder Bhattacharyee 24 W R Cr 42 (1875)

(6) R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty 4 C 483 per Jackson MacDonnell and Broughton JJ

(7) This seems to be the view of Garth C J in R v Ashoolosh Chuckerbutty supra As a matter of convenience however it may be desirable to make the confession on the starting point or basis and then to consider how far the independent evidence direct or circumstantial supports it

(8) Yasun v R 28 C 689 (1901)

(9) R v Aehri (1907) 29 A 434

(10) R v Lal Mohan Chuckerbutty S B (1911) 38 C 559 and R v Tara Nath Roy Choudhry (1910) 37 C 373 and Yasun v R (1901) 28 C 689

"confession" in this section cannot be restricted to one that has not been retracted and that once a confession has been proved it may be taken into consideration (1) In this case eleven men were charged with dacoity and there was no direct evidence, but seven of them confessed each his own guilt and implicated all the others. It was held that while there is nothing in this section which would prevent a Court from convicting after taking the confessions of the co accused into consideration, the Indian High Courts have adopted a rule of practice according to which a conviction founded only on the confessions of a co accused prisoner cannot be sustained.

This section must be read subject to the provisions contained in those which precede it. Therefore a confession by one of several persons, which is inadmissible under sections 24—26, and when there is no "discovery" under section 27, will be inadmissible under this section as against both the maker of it and the person implicated thereby. If it is not inadmissible, under sections 24—26, against the maker, it is admissible under this section, provided that it satisfies its terms, as well against the maker as against the other whom it affects. If, however, it is excluded by sections 24—26, but there is discovery under section 27, then so much of the whole, as leads immediately to the discovery being made admissible thereunder is also admissible under section 30 against both, if it is a "confession" on the part of the maker and 'affects himself and some other' co accused, but not otherwise. A confession partly (2) admissible against the maker under section 27 is admissible under section 30 against his fellow-prisoner, only when the admissible part is a 'confession' of the maker's guilt, and "affects" himself and the co accused as against whom it is considered. If the admissible part is a "confession," and "affects" both persons, it cannot be first rejected as against co-prisoner B on the ground that the whole confession was unduly obtained, and then that very part admitted as against the maker A, on the ground of discovery, but should be admitted under section 30 against both (3), though on taking it into consideration no weight would be attached to it, as against B, unless it was sufficiently corroborated, and the mere discovery, though it might be sufficient for the conviction of A, would not generally, of itself apart from other evidence to show B's complicity, corroborate A sufficiently as to B's being concerned in the offence. But a statement made in Court by one accused, incriminating a co accused but exculpating himself, is not a "confession" and cannot legally be taken into consideration as against the co accused. A statement made to the Police by an accused person to the effect that if certain other persons were sent for, he would see that some other property was traced out, is not evidence to prove that the accused had been guilty of abetment of theft (1).

As against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession

31. Admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted, but they may operate as estoppels under the provisions hereinafter contained

Admission not conclusive proof but may estop

Principle.—The policy of the law favours the investigation of truth by all expedient methods. The doctrine of estoppels, by which further investigation is precluded, being an exception only for the sake of general convenience not be extended beyond the reasons on which it is founded, whether written or oral, which do not operate by way of estoppel,

(1) Emperor v. Gangappa Kardappa 38 B. 156 (1914), per McCleod, J. See R. v. Khanda bin Pandea 15 B. 66 (1890).

(2) See R. v. Rama Biraja, 3 B. 12 (1878).

(3) Ib.

(4) Busham Dutt v. R., 2 A. L. J., 53, 2 Cr. L. J. 22 and for definition of 'confession,' see Hakiman v. R., 2 Cr. L. J., 230.

constitute only prima facie and rebuttable evidence against their makers and those claiming under them, as between them and others (1)

s 17 ('Admission' defined)

s 116 (Estoppel)

s 4 ('Conclusive proof')

Taylor, Ev, §§ 817—819, 851—861, Norton Ev, 151, Phipson, Lr, 5th Ed, 417, Roscoe, N P Ev, 62, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 422, Best Ev, §§ 529 530

COMMENTARY

Effect of admissions

This section deals with the effect, in respect of conclusiveness, of admission, when proved. Every admission is evidence against the person by whom it is made, but it is always for the Court to consider what weight, if any, is to be given to an admission, or any other evidence, it is not conclusive merely because it is legally admissible (2). It is only so in certain cases, for instance, where it has been acted upon by the party to whom it was made (3). 'A statement made by a party is not, ipso facto, conclusive against him, though ments were mistaken or untrue, except in the case in which they operate as estoppels (5). The subject was clearly illustrated in the case of Heane v Rogers (6), in which Bayley, J, observed 'There is no doubt but that the express admissions of a party to the suit, or admissions implied from his conduct, are evidence, and strong evidence against him but we think that he is at liberty to prove that such admissions were mistaken or were untrue, and is not estopped or concluded by them, unless another person has been induced by them to alter his condition, in such a case, the party is estopped from disputing their truth with respect to that person (and those claiming under him), and that transaction, but as to third persons he is not bound. It is a well-established rule of law, that estoppels bind only parties and privies and not strangers' (7). The

(1) Powell Ev 422. Thus a receipt endorsed on a bill and generally all parcel receipts are only prima facie evidence of payment. s 289 in general a person's conduct and language have not the effect of operating against him by way of estoppel' per Chamlre J in Smith v Taylor, 1 N R 210.

(2) Eviley v Bulley L R 9 Ch App 739 747, Ajetun v Ram Sebuk 12 W R 156 (1869).

(3) Janan Choudhry v Doolar Choudhry, 18 W R 347 (1872) Brojendra Coomar v The Chairman Dacca Municipality 20 W R, 223 (1873) Yasant Puttu v Radhabhai 14 B 312 (1889). An admission made by a party in other cases may be taken as evidence against him but cannot operate against him as an estoppel in a case in which his opponents are persons to whom the admission was not made and who are not proved to have heard of it or to have been in any way misled by it or to have acted in reliance upon it. Chunder Kant v Pearce Mohan 5 W R 209 (1866) see Mussumat Oodey v Mussumat Ladoo 13 Moo I A, 585, 600 (1870).

(4) Ajetun v Ram Sebuk supra. Though written statements may be accepted from accused as is the practice in Courts under the Calcutta High Court they cannot take the plea of evidence nor of examination contemplated by section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Amrita Lal Ha ra v R 42 C 957 (1915) dissenting from P v Anusuya A W N, 1 (1903).

(5) See s 115 post and notes thereto as to admissions which have been held to operate or not as estoppels.

(6) 9 B & C 577 586 587.

(7) See Janan Choudhry v Doolar Choudhry 18 W R 347 (1872), Ajetun v Ram Sebuk 12 W R 156 (1869) Ram Saran v Pran Peary 13 Moo I A 551 (1870) Soojan Bidee v Achmut Al 14 B L R App 3 (1874) Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashinee 20 W R 112 (1873) Brojendra Coomar v Chairman Dacca Municipality 20 W R 223 (1873) Sreenmully Debia v Billa Soondarce 21 W R 422 (1874) Mussumat Oodey v Mussumat Ladoo 13 Moo I A 585 599 600 (1870) Mussumat Lutefoosusa v Goor Suran 18 W R 485 493 494.

doctrine propounded in this case, that a party is always at liberty to prove that his admissions were founded on mistake, unless his opponent has been induced by them to alter his condition, is as applicable to mistakes in respect of legal liability, as to those in respect of matters of facts (1) Where a defendant seeks to make use of statements which have been put in evidence, and to treat them as admissions by the plaintiff who put them in, it is competent for the plaintiff to show the real nature of the transaction to which they relate and to get rid of the effect of the apparent admissions (2) Even if an admission was made with a fraudulent purpose, the party making it may show what was the real state of facts (3) So where a trader, intending to defraud his creditors delivered his goods to a friend, and made out an invoice to him and a receipt for the fictitious price, it was held open to him, when these documents were put in evidence, in an action brought by him to recover the goods from the pretended purchaser, to shew that they were untrue (4) And a party claiming under another who has made admissions as to a transaction to which that other was a party, is at liberty to allege and prove that the admissions were made with a fraudulent purpose, and were not true, and to show the real nature of the transaction (5)

But though a mere admission is not legally conclusive, the circumstances under, or the occasion upon which, it was made, or its formal and deliberate character, may entitle it to the greatest weight and may require very strong and clear evidence to rebut the inferences which may be drawn from it (6) Although it may be shown that the facts were different from what on a former occasion they were stated to be, and though it may be shown (if it were so) that a former statement is false, strong evidence may, under the particular circumstances, be required to prove that what the parties had deliberately asserted was altogether untrue (7) Moreover, an admission, if of a sufficiently

(1872) [where a defendant seeks to make use of statements which have been put in evidence and to treat them as admissions by the plaintiff who put them in it is competent for the plaintiff to show the real nature of the transaction to which they relate and to get rid of the effect of the apparent admissions] See also Mussumat Ushrufooneesa v Baboo Gridharee 19 W R 118 (1873) in which the Privy Council held that the fact of a party having admitted the execution of a deed in a former suit did not prevent her from contesting the validity of the transactions evidenced thereby and showing that it was colourable and not real and see generally as to the ordinarily inconclusive character of admissions Sreenath Nag v Mon Mahinee 6 W R 35 (1866) Gordon Stuart v Bheoj Gobind 8 W R 291 (1867) Grish Chunder v Issur Chander 12 W R 226 (1829) Mahomed Hanef v Mohur Ali 15 W R 280 (1871) Shaikh Kon urroodeen v Shaikh Manje 16 W R 220 (1871) Mussumat Ushrufooneesa v Baboo Gridharee 19 W R 118 (1873) Bodh Singh v Ganesh chander Sen 19 W R 356 (1873)

(1) Neaton v Liddiard 12 Q B 925 927 such a mistaken impression however will not exclude his admission though it will impair its weight as evidence against him Neaton v Belcher 1 R B 921.

Taylor Ev § 819 Roscoe N P Ev 62 1 Phillips & Arn 354 see Gopi Lal v Chundralal Bhoojee 19 W R 13 (1873) as to admissions involving erroneous conclusions of law

(2) Mussumat Foolbibi v Goor Surun 18 W R 485 (1872)

(3) Ram Surun v Mussumat Pronpeary 13 Moo I A 551 (1870) Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashnee 20 W R 112 (1873) Brojendra Coomar v Chairman Dacca Municipality 20 W R 223 224 (1873) Sreenutty Debia v Binola Soondoree 21 W R 432 (1874)

(4) Boyes v Foster 27 L J Ex 262

(5) Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashnee 20 W R 112 (1873)

(6) Soorjan Bibee v Achmut Ali 14 B L R App 3 (1874) 21 W R 414 Hunso Kooer v Sheo Gobind 24 W R 431 432 (1875) Mahomed Hanef v Mohur Ali 15 W R 280 (1871) the value of an admission depends upon the circumstances under which it was made Roscoe N P Ev 62 R v Simmons 1 C & K 164 166 where it is a mere inference drawn from facts the admission goes no further than the facts proved Bulley v Bulley L R 9 Ch 739 and generally as to the weight to be attached to admissions v ante

() Soorjan Bibee v Achmut Ali supra see last note and post grave character, may have the effect of shifting the onus of proof (1) "As the weight of an admission depends on the circumstances under which it was made these circumstances may always be proved to impeach or enhance its credit. Thus the admission (unless amounting to an estoppel) may be shown by the party against whom it is tendered to be untrue or to have been made under a mistake of law or fact, or to have been uttered in ignorance, levity or an abnormal condition of mind. On the other hand, the weight of the admission increases with the knowledge and deliberation of the speaker or the solemnity of the occasion on which it was made" (2). As to admissions made "without prejudice, and admissions obtained under compulsion ante, s. 23

(1) Farbes v Mir Mahomed 5 B L R 529 540 (1870) 14 W R (P C) 28 13 Moo I A 438 Chandra Kistiar v Chaudri Narpit Sing P C (1906) 29 A

148 L R 34 I A 27 (2) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 217 Best Ev §§ 529 530 Taylor Ev §§ 854—861 N P Ev 62

STATEMENTS BY PERSONS WHO CANNOT BE CALLED AS WITNESSES

The provisions in the following section constitute further exceptions to Section 32 the rule which excludes hearsay (1) As a general rule, oral evidence must be direct (2) The eight paragraphs of the following section may be regarded as exceptions to that general rule The purpose and reason of the hearsay rule is the key to the exceptions to it, which are mainly based on two considerations a necessity for the evidence and a circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness (3) It may be impossible, or it may cause unreasonable expense or delay to procure the attendance of a witness who if present before the Court, could give direct evidence on the matter in question and it may also be that this witness has made a statement either written or verbal with reference to such matter under such circumstances that the truth of this statement may reasonably be presumed In such a case the law as enacted by section 32 dispenses with direct oral evidence of the fact and with the safeguard for truth provided by cross examination and the sanction of an oath, the probability of the statement being true depending upon other safeguards which are mentioned in the following paragraphs (4) The truth of the declarations are deemed to be prima facie guaranteed by the special conditions of admissibility imposed An important difference between the law in India and in England is that in the latter country this class of evidence can only be received where the author of the statement is dead (5) The ground for its admissibility being the absence of any better evidence the other conditions mentioned in the section under which, in India, such evidence is receivable are consonant with reason and general convenience These conditions of admissibility apply to all the eight classes of evidence which it comprises It is for the Judge in his discretion to say whether the alleged expense and delay is such as justifies the admission of the evidence without insisting on the attendance of the author of the statement (6) The statement referred to in all the eight paragraphs of section 32 are evidence against all the world unlike statements receivable under the sections relating to admissions, which may only be proved as against the person who makes them or his representative in interest (7) But an admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead it would be relevant as between third persons under the thirty second section (8)

The nature of the evidence in the case of depositions in former trials, and the grounds upon which such evidence is receivable is considered in the Notes to section 33 post Section 33

The general ground of admissibility of the evidence mentioned in both sections 32 and 33 is that in the cases there in question no better evidence is to be had (9)

(1) See Sturla v Freccia L R 5 App Cas 639 per Lord Blackburn

(2) S 60 post

(3) Wigmore Lv § 1420

(4) Field Ev 169 170 ib 6th Ed 123 124

(5) Steph Dig Art 25

(6) Norton Ev 174 175

(7) ib 143 Field Ev 6th Ed, 132, 133

(8) S 21 cl (1) ante ib illa (b)

(c) as to cess returns see Cess Act IV (B C) of 1880

(9) Steph Introd, 165

Statements
is to cause of death
(s 32, cl
1).

The ground of admissibility of "dying declarations," as they are called is said to rest, firstly on necessity(1), the injured person, who is generally the instance known a statement made by a person, who did not expect to live many hours, turn out to be wholly and utterly untrue (4) According to English law it is the impression of impending death, and not the rapid succession of death in point of fact, which renders the testimony admissible, but it is still doubtful what is meant by "impending" From the English cases the true principle would seem to be that the Judge must be satisfied that the expectation of death is so immediate as to give to the declaration a solemnity sufficient to dispense with those sanctions necessary to ensure the purity of evidence in other cases (5) But in so far as it is not necessary under this Act that the declaration should have been made under expectation of death(6), the first named ground appears to be more properly that on which this kind of evidence is receivable When, however, the statement has been so made, it will further have the sanction

ording and in ero it is s being given where questions have been put (7) But the above-mentioned sanction has nothing to do with the nature of the crime or other act to which the evidence relates, it is just as existent in the case of declarations relating to the commission of one offence as another Further, if this evidence be admitted on the ground of necessity, that necessity is just as likely to exist where the deceased person has been robbed, or raped, or assaulted, as where he or she has been murdered (8) And therefore under the Act the statement is admissible whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of the death of the person, who made the statement, comes into question (s post) Three reasons have been given for restricting the application of this evidence to cases of homicide (a) the danger of perjury in fabricating declarations, the truth or falsehood of which it is impossible to ascertain, (b) the danger of letting in incomplete statements, which, though true as far as they go, do not constitute "the whole truth," (c) the experienced fact, that implicit reliance cannot in all cases be placed on the declarations of a dying person, for his body may have survived the powers of his mind, or his recollection if his senses are not impaired, may not be perfect, or, for the sake of ease, and to be rid of the importunity atever they choose to sug not been regarded by the evidence in all cases other mind when estimating the weight to be allowed to dying statements in particular cases (10) This kind

(1) Taylor, Ev. § 716, Norton Ev. 176, Roscoe, Cr Ev., 10, 13th Ed 29, 30 This ground seems not to have been admitted in R v Bissorunjun Mookerjee, 6 W R Cr, 75 (1866)

(2) Taylor, Ev., §§ 714 717 718 R v Bissorunjun Mookerjee, supra. In the matter of Sheik Tenoo 14 W R Cr, 11 13 (1871) see observation of Eyre L C B in R v Woodcock 1 Lea, 502 cited in the last mentioned case at p 13 and in Field Ev 6th Ed, 124 Anderson B., in Ashian's case 2 Lew Cr 147, Wigmore

Ev § 1438

(3) Whitley Stokes ii 841

(4) Field Ev 6th Ed 127, 128

(5) Taylor Ev. § 718

(6) s post s 32 cl (1) Commentary

(7) Taylor § 714, R v Mitchell (1892)

17 Cox 503 R v Smith (1901) 65 J

P, 426 but see R v Whitmarsh (1898)

62 J P 680

(8) R v Bissorunjun Mookerjee supra

76

(9) Taylor Ev. § 716

(10) Field, Ev 6th Ed., 125

of evidence has been found to be on the whole useful and necessary, but the caution with which it should be received has often been commented upon. It will often happen that the particulars of the violence to which the deceased has spoken were likely to have occurred under circumstances of confusion and surprise calculated to prevent their being accurately observed. The consequences also of the violence may occasion an injury to the mind, and an indistinctness of memory as to the particular transaction. The deceased may have stated his inferences from facts, concerning which he may have drawn a wrong conclusion, or he may have omitted important particulars, from not having his attention called to them. Such evidence, therefore, is liable to be very incomplete. He may naturally, also, be disposed to give a partial account of the occurrence, although possibly not influenced by animosity or ill will. But it cannot be concealed that animosity, and resentment are not unlikely to be felt in such a situation (1). Such considerations show the necessity of caution in receiving impressions from accounts given by persons in a dying state, especially when it is considered that they cannot be subjected to the process of cross examination, and the security afforded by the terror of punishment and the penalties for perjury cannot exist in this case. Further the remarks before made on verbal statements which have been heard and reported by witnesses apply equally to dying declarations, namely, that they are liable to be misunderstood and misreported, from inattention, from misunderstanding or from infirmity of memory (2). Where the declaration of a

as made on the 13th year, and there was or accelerated by the wounds received at the dacoity, or that it was the transaction which resulted in his death, it was held that his declaration ought not to have been admitted in evidence (3).

The English rule as to the admissibility of these statements is subject to several restrictions which, The considerations which of evidence have been said all suspicion of sinister motives a fair presumption arises that entries made likely to bring clerks into disgrace with their employers, that, as most entries made in the course of business are subject to the inspection of several persons, an error would be exposed to speedy discovery, and that, as the facts to which they relate are generally known but to few persons, a relaxation of the strict rules of evidence in favour of such entries may often prove convenient if not necessary, for the due investigation of truth (4).

Statements made in the post) course of business ice of (s 32, cl 2)

The ground of reception of such statements is the presumption that what a man states against his interest is probably true. Self interest is a sufficient security against wilful misstatement mistake of fact, or want of information on the part of the declarant. The place of the tests of oath and cross examination is in some measure supplied by the circumstances of the declarant and the Statements against interest (s 32, cl 3)

(1) Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 33 34
Phill & Arn Ev 251 see Taylor Ev § 722 falsehood and the passion of revenge must also be guarded against and this more especially in India see remarks in Field Ev 6th Ed 127 128 Whitley Stokes u 841 cited ante

(2) Roscoe Cr Ev 1b 1 Phill & Arn 1b

(3) R v Rudra Fakeraffia 2 Bom L R 331 (1900)

(4) Taylor Ev § 697 Walls Ev, 2nd Ed 181 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 271, Hope v Hope (1893) W N., 20 C A.

character of his statement. Lastly, the inconveniences that would result from the exclusion of this kind of evidence are considered to be greater, in general than any which are likely to be experienced from its admission (1). The third clause of section 32 extends the rule as accepted in English Courts. For, while in the latter the interest involved must be pecuniary or proprietary, no other kind being sufficient (2) under the Indian Act the statement is admissible when, if true, it would expose or would have exposed, the declarant to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages (v. post). It may well be thought that a declaration by which a man makes himself liable to a criminal prosecution or payment of damages, offers as good a guarantee for its truthfulness as one simply against his pecuniary or proprietary interest (3). Though the ground of admissibility of this kind of evidence is the improbability that a party would falsely make a declaration to fix himself with liability, yet cases may be put where his doing so would be an advantage to him (4).

Matters of public and general interest
(s. 32, cl
4)

The admissibility of hearsay evidence respecting such matters, is said to rest mainly on the following grounds. "That the origin of the rights claimed is usually of so ancient a date, and the rights themselves are of so undefined and general a character that direct proof of their existence and nature can seldom be obtained, and ought not to be required that in matters in which the community are interested all persons must be deemed conversant, that, as common rights are naturally talked of in public and as the nature of such rights excludes the probability of individual bias what is dropped in conversation respecting them may be presumed to be true, that the general interest which belongs to the subject would lead to immediate contradiction from others, if the statements proved were false that reputation can hardly exist without the concurrence of many parties unconnected with each other, who are all alike interested in investigating the subject that such concurrence furnishes strong presumptive evidence of truth, and that it is this prevailing current of assertion which is resorted to as evidence for to this every member of the community is supposed to be privy and to contribute his share (5). The term "interest" here does not mean that which is interesting from gratifying curiosity, or a love of information or amusement, but that in which a class of the community have a pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected (6). But hearsay is not evidence of matters of mere private interest, for respecting these direct proof may be given, and no trustworthy reputation is likely to arise (7). But although a private interest

(1) Taylor Ev. § 668. Best Ev. § 500. Phipson Ev. 15. 5th Ed. 262. Wills Ev. 2nd Ed. 184. Wigmore Ev. § 1457. the attention and care ordinarily given by men to concerns in which their interests are involved are supposed to be a sufficient guarantee against misceoracy. It is however easy to conceive cases e.g. that of a heedless spendthrift heir who has just succeeded to an inheritance in which these guarantees would be of little value. This is however a point concerned not with the admissibility but with the weight of the evidence. Field Ev. 6th Ed. 133. and see note post.

(2) Sussex Peerage Case 11 C. & F. 103 114 explained and acted upon in Davis v. Lloyd 1 C. & F. 276. Illustration (f) is particularly pointed to this case and indicates the departure in this Act from the English rule.

(3) Norton Ev. 184.

(4) Best Ev., § 500, e.g. the accounts of the receiver or steward of an estate have through neglect or worse got into a state of derangement which it is desirable to conceal from his employer and one very obvious way of setting the balance straight is falsely charging himself with having received money from a particular person. Id.

(5) Taylor Ev. § 608 and cases there cited. R. v. Bedfordshire 4 E. & B. 542. Starkie Ev. 4th Ed. 43 50 186 190.

(6) R. v. Bedfordshire supra per Lord Campbell.

(7) Id. and see per Lord Kenyon in Morewood v. Hood 14 East 377n. Norton Ev. 183. In Hicks v. Sparks 1 M. & S. 690 Bayley J. modifies rule thus. "I take it that where the term public right is used it does not mean public in the literal sense but is synonymous with general that is what concerns a multitude of persons." Gresley Ev. 305.

should be involved with a matter of public interest, the reputation respecting rights and liabilities affecting classes of the community cannot be excluded or this relaxation of the rule against the admission of hearsay evidence would often be found unavailing (1) Evidence of this description is frequently included under the general term "reputation" (2) Strictly speaking, "general reputation" is the general result or conclusion formed by society as to any public fact or member of the community (3) such as have possessed a knowledge on the subject derived either from their own observation or the information of others (3)

Section 32 in its fifth and sixth clauses deals with which are usually treated by English text-writers as a matter of pedigree and is in some respects more exact from the English rule on the same subject (v post) The grounds upon which this class of statements is received are—necessity—such inquiries generally involving remote facts of family history known to but few, and incapable of direct proof, and—the special means of knowledge which are possessed by the declarant (4) clis 5, 6)

As to statements in documents relating to a transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed or the like, see post, and the thirteenth section, ante

Statements in document relating to transaction by which any right or custom was created claimed and the like

As to statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions (v post)

Statements made by a number of persons and expressing feelings or impressions

Before statements or depositions under section 32 or 33 are admissible, it must be shown that the circumstances and conditions mentioned and imposed by those sections exist, as that the person who made the statements sought to be proved is dead, or cannot be found, or the like The burden of proving this is on the person who wishes to give the evidence (5) If the terms of a deposition made by a person since deceased are such that it does not come within the provisions of these sections it will not be admissible otherwise, for instance under section 11 (6) Whenever any statement relevant under section 32 or 33 is proved, all matters may be proved either in order to contradict or corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross examination the truth of the matter suggested (7) Burden of proof, contradiction corroboration

(1) R v Bedfordshire supra

(2) Starkie Ev 4th Ed 43 et seq 186n see as to the difference between reputation of a fact and evidence of a fact Mosely v Davis 11 Price 167 arguendo

(3) Starkie Ev 43 44

(4) See Taylor Ev § 63 Phipson

Ev 5th Ed 291 Gresley Ev 319, and post

(5) S 104 post

(6) Belu Ram v Malabir Singh, A C (1912) 34 A 311

(7) S 158 post see further as to proof, the Commentary to ss 32, 33 post

Cases in which statement of relevant fact by person who is dead or cannot be found, etc. is relevant.

When it relates to cause of death

Or is made in course of business

Or against interest of makers

Or gives opinion as to public right or custom, or matters of general interest

Or relates to existence of relationship

32 Statements, written or verbal(1), of relevant fact made by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable, are themselves relevant facts in the following cases—

(1) When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question

Such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not, at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, and whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question (2)

(2) When the statement was made by such person in the ordinary course of business(3), and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty, or of an acknowledgment written or signed by him of the receipt of money, goods, securities or property of any kind, or of a document used in commerce written or signed by him, or of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written or signed by him (4)

(3) When the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when, if true, it would expose him or would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages (5)

(4) When the statement gives the opinion of any such person as to such right, custom or matter had arisen (6)

(5) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption between persons as to whose relationship by blood, marriage or adoption the person

(1) As to the meaning of this expression see Chandra Nath v. Nulmadhub Bhattacharjee, 26 C 236, s. c., 3 C W N 88 (1898), and post A reply made by signs by a person unable to speak in answer to a question put to him taken together with the question amounts to a verbal statement Emperor v. Sudhucharan 49 C 600 Q Lup v. Abdullah 7 A.

395

(2) Ill (a)

(3) As to the meaning of ordinary course of business see Ningara v. Bhar matta 23 B, 63 (1897)

(4) Ills (b), (c), (d) (e) (h) (i). s. 21, ills (b) (c)

(5) Ills (e), (f)

(6) Ill (i)

making the statement had special means of knowledge, and when the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.(1)

(6) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption between persons deceased, and is made in any will or deed relating to the affairs of the family to which any such deceased person belonged, or in any family pedigree, or upon any tombstone, family portrait or other thing on which such statements are usually made, and when such statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.(2)

Or is made in will or deed relating to family affairs

(7) When the statement is contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in section 13, clause (a) (3)

Or in document relating to transaction mentioned in S 13, cl (a)

(8) When the statement was made by a number of persons, and expressed feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question (4)

Or is made by several persons and expresses feelings relevant to matter in question

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A was murdered by B, or A died of injuries received in a transaction in the course of which she was ravished

The question is, whether she was ravished by B or

The question is, whether A was killed by B under such circumstances that a suit would lie against B by A's widow

Statements made by A as to the cause of his or her death, referring respectively to the murder, the rape, and the actionable wrong under consideration, are relevant facts (5)

(b) The question is, as to the date of A's birth

An entry in the diary of a deceased surgeon, regularly kept in the course of business, stating that, on a given day, he attended A's mother and delivered her of a son, is a relevant fact (6)

(c) The question is, whether A was in Calcutta on a given day

A statement in the diary of a deceased solicitor, regularly kept in the course of business, that, on a given day, the solicitor attended A at a place mentioned, in Calcutta, for the purpose of conferring with him upon specified business is a relevant fact (6)

(d) The question is, whether a ship sailed from Bombay harbour on a given day

A letter written by a deceased member of a merchant's firm, by which she was chartered, to their correspondents in London to whom the cargo was consigned, stating that the ship sailed on a given day from Bombay harbour is a relevant fact (6)

(1) Ills (k) (1) (m)

(2) Ills (k) (1) (m)

(3) See s 13 ante v post notes -- clause (7)

(4) Ill (n) v post

(5) S 32 cl (1)

(6) S 32 cl (2)

- (e) The question is, whether rent was paid to A for certain land

A letter from A's deceased agent to A, saying that he has received the rent on A's account and held it at A's orders is a relevant fact (1)

- (f) The question is, whether A and B were legally married

The statement of a deceased clergyman that he married them under such circumstances that the celebration would be a crime is relevant (1)

- (g) The question is, whether A a person who cannot be found wrote a letter on a certain day

The fact that a letter written by him is dated on that day is relevant. (2)

- (h) The question is, what was the cause of the wreck of a ship

A protest made by the captain, whose attendance cannot be procured is a relevant fact (2)

- (i) The question is, whether a given road is a public way

A statement by A, a deceased headman of the village that the road was public, is a relevant fact (3)

- (j) The question is, what was the price of grain on a certain day in a particular market

A statement of the price made by a deceased buyer in the ordinary course of his business, is a relevant fact

- (k) The question is, whether A, who is dead, was the father of B

A statement by A that B was his son, is a relevant fact (4)

- (l) The question is, what was the date of the birth of A

A letter from A's deceased father to a friend announcing the birth of A on a given day, is a relevant fact (5)

- (m) The question is, whether and when A and B were married

An entry in a memorandum book by C, the deceased father of B of his daughter's marriage with A on a given date is a relevant fact (5)

- (n) A sues B for a libel expressed in a printed caricature exposed in a shop window

The question is as to the similarity of the caricature and its libellous character

The remarks of a crowd of spectators on these points may be proved (6)

Principle.—The general ground of admissibility of the evidence mentioned in this section is that in the cases there in question no better evidence is to be had (7) As to the further and particular grounds on which each of the several classes of evidence mentioned are admitted, see Introduction, ante, and Note, post

s. 3 ("Relevant")

s. 3 ("Fact")

s. 3 ("Evidence.")

s. 3 ("Court.")

s. 3 ("Document")

s. 118 (Who may testify)

s. 163 (What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under s. 32)

s. 104 (Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible)

s. 38 (Relevancy of deposition)

s. 80 (Presumption as to documents produced as record of evidence)

s. 114, all (f) (Presumption as to course of business)

s. 8 all (j) (k) (Examples of dying declarations)

(1) s. 32 cl. (3)

(2) s. 32 cl. (2)

(3) s. 32 cl. (4)

(4) s. 32 cl. (5) & (6)

(5) s. 32 cl. (5) & (6)

(6) s. 32 cl. (8)

(7) Steph Introd. 165

- s. 21, cl (1), (b), (c) (Proof of admission by, or on behalf of, person making it) ss 13, 48 (Public and general customs or rights)
- s. 90 (Ancient documents) s. 42 (Judgments relating to matters of a public nature)
- ss 47, 67 (Proof of handwriting) s. 65, cl (d) (Secondary evidence)
- s. 50 (Opinion on relationship when relevant)

Dying Declarations —Steph Dig, Art 26 Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1430—1452, Taylor, 1 v, §§ 714—722, 3 Russ, Cr, 324—362, Best, Ev, § 505, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 299—304, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed 29—34, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 91—88, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 105—198, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 124—128, Norton, Ev, 175—177. Declarations in the course of business —Steph Dig, Art 27, Taylor Ev, § 697—713, Best Ev, § 501, Roscoe, N P Ev, 60—62, Wigmore, Ev §§ 1517—1561, Powell, Ev 9th Ed 316—323, Smith L C Note to Price v Torrington, Wharton Ev §§ 239—257, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 271—278, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 178—183, Field Ev, 6th Ed 128—131, Norton, Ev, 177—179. Declarations against interest —Steph Dig, Art 28, Wigmore Ev, §§ 1453—1477, Taylor, Ev, §§ 668—696, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 262—270, Best, Ev, § 50, Roscoe, N P Ev, 55—59, Smith L C Note to Higham v Ridgway, Powell Ev, 9th Ed 366—316, Wharton, Ev, 226—237, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 184—194, Act IX of 1908 (Limitation), s. 20, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 131—136, Norton, Ev 179—181. Declarations as to public rights —Steph Dig, Art 30, Taylor, Ev §§ 607—634, Best, Ev, § 497, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 279—290, Wigmore, Ev, § 1563, Roscoe, N P Ev, 48—51, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 338—349, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 221—234, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 136—138, Norton, Ev, 184—188. Declarations as to relationship —Steph Dig, Art 31, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1480—1510, Taylor, Ev §§ 635—637, Best, Ev, § 498, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 291—298, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 211—220, Roscoe, N P Ev, 44—48, Hubback's Ev of Succession, 618—711, Wharton, Ev, §§ 201—225, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 349—357, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 139—143, Norton, Ev, 183—190. Statements in documents relating to transaction mentioned in s. 13 —Field, Ev, 6th Ed 143, Norton, Ev, 190—192. Statements by a number of persons expressing feelings or impressions —Field, Ev, 6th Ed 144, 145, Norton, Ev 192—193, cases cited.

COMMENTARY.

The word "person" must not be read as "persons." If a statement, "Person" written or verbal, is made by several persons, and one or some of them is or are dead, and one or others is or are alive, the statement of the deceased person or persons is admissible under this section notwithstanding that the other person or persons who also made the statement is or are alive. In such a case the statement is not one statement, but each person making the statement must be taken to have made the statement for himself or herself, and if any one of the makers of the statement is dead, the statement made by that person is admissible under this section if it comes under one or other of its clauses, being thus the statement of a person who is dead. It may in such a case however be for legitimate comment that the statement of the deceased person is received with caution, if the party tendering it has not without proper call the author or authors of the statement still living to depose to its a but the matter cannot be placed higher than that (1)

The conditions upon which the statement may be tendered are the ead

Committee to be inadmissible in evidence as statements of a deceased person. It was attempted to distinguish the case on the ground that the defendant had himself (after the person whose statements were filed was dead) filed certain other statements of this same man. As to this the Privy Council observed: "But those documents, which were doubtless filed in case the respondent's (plaintiff's) documents should be admitted, are not evidence, and their production by the appellant (defendant) cannot be held to compel the Court to depart from the rules of evidence in the decision of the case." (1) Where the document can be brought under this section by proof of the death of the person who prepared it or other facts contemplated by this section, it can be used not only as corroborative but as independent evidence. (2) This section has no application to the case of a witness who has been fully examined and cross-examined, but who happens to die before the termination of the suit. In such a case it is not open to either party to apply under this section for the admission of the previous statement made by the witness. (3)

See Notes to section 33, post

Incapable of giving evidence

See Notes to section 33, post

Delay or expense

FIRST CLAUSE

Statement
as to cause
of death

The first clause is widely different from the English law upon the subject of "dying declarations," according to which, (a) this description of evidence is admissible in no civil case and in criminal cases only in the single instance of homicide that is, murder or manslaughter where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the dying declaration. (4) On the other hand under this Act the statement is relevant whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of the death of the person who made the statement comes into question. (5) And further, (b) according to English law certain conditions are required to have existed at the time of declaration, viz it is necessary that the declarant should have been in actual danger of death that he should have been aware of his danger and have abandoned all hope of recovery and that death should have ensued. (6) The existence of the last condition is of course as necessary under person who made it was or was not at the time when it was made, under expectation of death. (7) Therefore, whether the declarant was or was not in actual danger

(1) Jagatpal Singh v Jageshwar Bahsh 25 A 143 (1902)

(2) Charlitter Raj v Kailash Belari 4 Pat L W 213 s c 44 I C 422

(3) Sahdeo Narain Deo v Kusum Kumari 46 I C 929

(4) Taylor Ev §§ 714 716 thus in a trial for robbery the dying declaration of the party robbed has been rejected, and where a prisoner was indicted for administering drugs to a woman with intent to procure abortion her statements in extremis were held to be inadmissible s b § 715 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 28 79 3 Russ Cr 354 362

(5) S 32 cl (1) Illustration (a) gives an example of a civil as well as of a criminal case and as an example of the latter a charge of rape. Even under the previous law as contained in s 371 of Act XXV of 1861 and s 29 Act II of 1850 it was held that the rule of English law restricting the admission of this evidence to cases of homicide had no application in India and that the dying declaration of a deceased person was admissible in evidence on a charge of rape R v Bisso Prinji Mookerjee 6 W R, Cr 75 (1866) Field Ev 171 Norton Ev 175 of death and knew or did not know himself to be in such danger, are considerations which will no longer affect the admissibility of this kind of evidence in India. But these considerations ought not to be laid aside in estimating the weight to be allowed to the evidence in particular cases (1). Of course before the statement can be admitted under this section the declarant must have died. Where a person making a dying declaration chances to live, his statement cannot be admitted in evidence as a dying declaration though it may be relied on under s. 157 to corroborate the testimony of the complainant when examined in the case (2).

(6) Taylor Ev § 718 Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 28 31 3 Russ Cr 354 362

(7) S 32 cl (1) R v Degumber Thakoor 19 W R Cr 44 (1873), R v Blechinden 6 C L R 278 (1880)

The statement must be as to the cause of the declarant's death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death (3) that is be cause and circumstances of the death and not previous or subsequent transactions (4) such independent transactions being excluded as not falling within the principle of necessity on which such evidence is received (5). Nor must they include matter inadmissible from the mouth of a witness—e.g. hearsay or opinion (6) and whatever the declaration may be it must be complete in itself, for, if the dying man appears to have intended to qualify it by other statements which he is prevented by any cause from making it will not be received (7).

The person whose declaration is thus admitted is considered as standing in the same situation as if he were sworn as a witness. It follows therefore, that when the declarant if living would have been incompetent to testify by reason of imbecility of mind or tender age his dying declarations are inadmissible (8). And his credibility may be impeached or confirmed in the same manner as that of a witness (9). In a trial for dacoity the statement of a deceased person ought not to be admitted in evidence in the absence of evidence to show that his death was caused or accelerated by the wounds received at the dacoity, or that the dacoity was the transaction which resulted in his death (10). As to the weight which should be attached to this kind of testimony, and the caution with which it should be received, ante p. 303.

The declarations may be oral or written (11). A person was tried for the murder of one D. The deceased had been questioned by a Police officer, a statement

Subject matter of the declaration

Competency and credibility

Form of statement

(1) Field Ev loc cit Norton Ev 175. Under the law which was in force prior to this Act (s. 371 Act XXV of 1861) s. 29 Act II of 1855 and which with one modification relating to the entailment by the deceased of hopes of recovery was similar in this respect to the English law it was held that before a dying declaration could be received in evidence it must be distinctly found that the declarant knew or believed at the time he made the declaration that he was dying or likely to die. In the matter of Sheikh Tenoo 15 W R Cr 11 (1871) R v Bissorunjun Mookerjee 6 W R Cr 75 76 (1886) R v Symbur Singh 9 W R Cr 2 (1868) as to the English rule see R v Glosier 16 Cox 471 (1888) in which the result of the case law is stated and R v Mitchell 17 Cox 503 (1892) and text books cited supra.
(2) R v Rana Suttu 4 Bom L R 434 (1902).

(3) S. 32 cl. (1) Steph Dig Art 26.
(4) R v Mead 2 B & C 605 R v Hind 8 Cox 300 R v Murton 3 I & F 492 Steph Dig Art 26 Khana v R 67 P L R 2 Cr L J 237.

(5) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 300 301 so also in America the declarations are restricted to the res gesta ib and cases there cited.

(6) Taylor Ev § 720 citing R v Sellers Carr C L 233 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 300 301 citing 1 Greenleaf s. 159 note (a).

(7) Taylor Ev § 721.

(8) R v Pike 3 C & P 598 R v Dru 1 Le. C C 338 R v Perkins 9 C & P 295 Taylor Ev § 717 Field Ev loc cit Norton Ev 175 see s. 118 post.

(9) S. 158 post Steph Dig Art 135. This rule is also established in America. Thus previous consistent statements by the deceased not made under the fear of death were admitted for this purpose (Felder v State 59 Am Rep 777 cited in Phipson Ev) and dying declarations were allowed to be corroborated by proof of prior consistent statements though the latter were not admissible themselves as dying declarations (State v Blackburn 80 N C 474 cited in Best Ev p. 45) see also Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 33 3 Russ Cr 361.

(10) R v Ridda 25 Bom 45 (1900).

Magistrate and a Surgeon, the deceased was unable to speak, but was conscious and able to make signs. Evidence was offered and admitted to prove the questions put to D, and the signs which she had made in answer to such questions, as the questions were verbal states "verbal state-he gestures may is to the meaning of the gestures was not. Sometimes declarations by dying persons are made on oath, in which case, assuming them to be in the presence of the accused and otherwise formal, and that an opportunity for cross examination has been given they are depositions. The essence of a dying declaration so called is that it is not upon oath. The lapse of time between the declarations and death is immaterial, and the presence of the accused at the making of the declaration is unnecessary. But it cannot be used as a deposition unless taken in the presence of the accused with all the usual formalities of a deposition and unless admissible within the terms of the following section (v post)(3). Though the declaration must in general narrate facts only, and not mere opinions (v ante), and must be confined to what is relevant to the issue(4), it is not necessary that the examination of the deceased should have been conducted after the manner of interrogating a witness in the cause though any departure from this mode may affect the weight of the declarations(5). Therefore in general it is no objection to their admissibility that they were made in answer to leading questions(6) or obtained by earnest solicitation(7). But where a statement ready written was brought by the father of the deceased to a Magistrate who accordingly went to the deceased and interrogated her as to its accuracy paragraph by paragraph it was rejected(8). A declaration is not irrelevant merely because it was intended to be made as a deposition before a Magistrate but is irregular and inadmissible as such(9).

Record and
proof of declaration

The right to offer the declaration in evidence is not restricted to the prosecutor, but it is equally admissible in favour of the accused(10). When a Judge is sitting with a jury, the admissibility of this evidence in any particular case is a question to be decided by the Judge alone(11). Before the statement can be the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code(13). If this be done and the injured person die or become incapable of giving evidence at the Sessions the depositions so taken will, subject to the provisions of the following section be admissible in evidence without further proof(14). If the statement be not taken

(1) R v Abdulla 7 A 385 F B (1885) Bata v R Punj Rec 1886 p 2 cited in Henderson's Cr Pr Code. So also in America it has been held that the declaration may be by signs or any other method of expressing thought. Com v Casey 11 Cush 417 421 cited in Best Ev p 456.

(2) Chandrika Ram Kolar v King Emperor 1 Pat 401.

(3) Norton Ev 175 176. Roscoe Cr Ev 12th Ed 32. If the evidence be inadmissible under s 33 it may yet be admissible under s 32 cl (1). R v Roch a Mohato 7 C 42 (1881).

(4) S 32.

(5) Taylor Ev § 720.

(6) R v Smith 10 Cox 82, but see also R v Mitchell 17 Cox 503 cited post.

(7) R v Fagent 7 C & P 238. R v Reason 1 Str 499. R v Hithorth 1 F & F 382.

(8) R v Fitzgerald Ir Cir Rep 168 169 cited in Taylor Ev § 720 where see observations of Crampton J in the same cause.

(9) R v Woodcock 1 East P C 556. Steph Dig Art 26 v post.

(10) R v Scarfe 1 M & Rob 551.

(11) Cr Pr Code s 298. Taylor Ev

§ 23a 24. Roscoe Cr Ev 35.

(12) S 104 illust (a) post.

(13) Ch XXV Act V of 1894 see Field Ev loc cit.

(14) Field Ev loc cit, ss 33 80 post.

down in the presence of the accused, and as a formal deposition, it will none the less be relevant under this section, but, before it can be admitted in evidence, it must be proved to have been made by the deceased it is not rendered admissible without such proof because it was taken down by a Magistrate. The writing made by such Magistrate cannot be admitted to prove the statement of the deceased without making it evidence in the ordinary way by calling the Magistrate who took down the declaration and heard it made. If the Magistrate either speak to the words of the writing made by himself or may speak to the writing itself as being an accurate reproduction of what the deceased had said in his presence (1). A dying declaration recorded in the absence of the accused and by a Magistrate other than the inquiring Magistrate is not admissible until it is proved by the recording officer (2). In this case what is admissible is the oral statement of the deceased and not the record of it, and such oral statement must be proved by the person who recorded it and heard it made (3). A dying declaration made to a Police officer in the course of an investigation may, if reduced to writing, be signed by the person making it, and may be used as evidence against the accused (4), if such writing be properly proved by the Police officer in whose presence it was signed, and the declaration, which it embodies, was made. A petition of complaint and examination of complainant on oath admissible as dying declarations under this clause are not matters required to be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of section 91 so as to exclude oral evidence of their terms (5). The written record of a dying declaration not taken down in the presence of the accused is admissible when it is proved by a witness that the statements contained therein were, in his presence, recorded by a Magistrate and read over to the accused who admitted their correctness (6). And it has been held by the Madras High Court that though the written record of a statement made to a Police officer in the course of an investigation is inadmissible (under section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code) oral evidence of such statement (whether it had been taken down in writing or not) is admissible (7). "A declaration should be taken down in the exact words which the person who makes it uses in order that it may be possible from those words to arrive precisely at what the person making the declaration meant. When a statement is not the ipsissima verba of the person making it, but is composed of a mixture of questions and answers, there are several objections open to its reception in evidence, which it is desirable should not be open in cases in which the person has no opportunity of cross examination. In the first place the questions may be leading questions, and in the condition of a person making a dying declaration there is always very great danger of leading questions being answered without their force and effect being freely comprehended. In such circumstances the form of the declaration

(1) R v Fata Aduji 11 Bom H C R 247 (1874) R v Samiruddin 8 C 211 (1881) 10 C L R. 11 followed in R v Daulat Kungra (1902) 6 C W N 921 and see as to proof of dying declaration R v Mathura Thakur (1901) 6 C W N 72.

(2) Panchu Das v R (1907) 34 C 698 11 C W N 666.

(3) Gowridas Namasudra v R (1909) A C 36 C 665.

(4) See Cr Pr Code s 162. Field Ev 4th Ed 161 such a declaration is admissible not under s 162 of the Cr Pr Code which is a purely negative provision but under the general law as embodied in s 32 cl (1) of the Evidence Act. The Code merely declares that that law shall not be affected by the fact that the declaration was made to a Police officer in the course of an investigation.

(5) Gauridas Namasudra v R A C (1909) 36 C 665 referred to in Emperor v Balaram Das 49 C 358.

(6) Emperor v Balaram Das 49 C 358.

(7) Muthukunarasami Pillai v King Emperor 35 M 397 (1912) Letters Patent appeal reviewing R v Vilkanta 35 M 247 (1912) and see Famindra Nath Banerjee v R 35 C 281 (1908), Emperor v Hammaraddi, 39 B 58 (1915).

should be such that it would be possible to see what was the question and what was the answer, so as to discover how much was suggested by the examining Magistrate and how much was the production of the person making the statements "(1)

SECOND CLAUSE

Statements made in the course of business

Statements made in the course of business, whether written or verbal, of relevant facts by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense, are themselves relevant. Though the statement is admissible, whether it be verbal or written(2), the effect of the statement as to weight may be very different in the two cases. The words "and in particular" in this clause seem to point to the superior force of written over verbal statements (3)

Illustrations (b), (c), (d), (g), (h), (j) refer to this Clause as also Illustration (b) and (c) of section 21, the leading case in English law on the subject being that of Price v Torrington (4). In this case the plaintiff, who was a brewer, brought an action against the Earl of Torrington for beer sold and delivered, and the evidence given to charge the defendant was that the usual way of the plaintiff's dealing was that the draymen came every night to the clerk of the brew house, and gave him an account of the beer they had delivered out, which he set down in a book kept for that purpose to which the draymen set their names, and that the drayman was dead but that this was his hand set to the book, and this was held good evidence of a delivery, otherwise of the shop-book itself singly, without more (5). Thus also where the plaintiff, a Mahomedan lady, sued for her deferred dower, an entry as to the amount of her dower entered in a register of marriages kept by the Mughalid, since deceased, who celebrated the marriage was held to be admissible as evidence of the sum fixed, being an entry kept in the discharge of professional duty within the meaning of this section (6). In another case, a deed of conveyance which purported to bear the mark of the defendant as vendor was tendered in evidence. The defendant, however, denied that she had ever put her mark to it. It was proved to be attested by a deed writer, who was dead, and it was manifestly all in his writing, including the words descriptive of the markswoman. The mark was that of the defendant, was held apparently on the ground that it had been used in his business (7). The section makes particular mention of statements contained in business books(8), in receipts(9), in documents used in commerce, such as invoices, bills of lading, charter parties, waybills(10), and of statements by a person who cannot be called as a witness,

(1) R v Mitchell 17 Cox C C 503 507, per Cave J adding It appears to me, therefore that a statement taken down as this was giving the substance of questions and answers cannot be said to be a declaration in such a sense as to make it admissible in evidence and that this document cannot be admitted upon that ground"

(2) S 32 cl 2 ante, ill (j) Stapylton v Clough 2 E & B 933, Edie v Kingsford 14 C B 750, R v Buckley 13 Cox 293

(3) Norton v 177

(4) 1 Smith L C (9th ed) 352 and notes Salkeld 285, as to English rule see Taylor Ev § 1 697 713, Steph Dig. Art 27 Roscoe N P Ev 60 62 Best

Ev § 501 Phipson Ev 5th Ed, 271, Wills Ev 2nd Ed 178 183 Powell Ev. 9th Ed 316—323

(5) See also Doe v Turford 3 B & Ad 898 in which the earlier cases are cited and discussed

(6) Zakari Begum v Sakina Begum 19 C 689 (1892) 19 I A, 157

(7) Abdulla Paru v Gannibai 11 B 690 (1887)

(8) Illustrs, (b), (c) as to the admissibility and effect of entries in books of account and official records whether the maker is dead or not v post ss 34 35

(9) For some cases relating to dakhilas see Field Ev, loc cit

(10) As to letters of advice see R v Tarascharan Dey 9 B L R, App, 42

made in the ordinary course of business, consisting of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written, or signed by him (1) In a suit to recover loss sustained on the sale by the plaintiffs of goods consigned to them by the defendants for sale by their London firm account sales are good prima facie evidence to prove the loss unless and until displaced by substantive evidence put forward by the defendants (2) It cannot, however, be said that the execution of a mortgage-deed is an act done in the ordinary course of business (3) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 21 and the present section, cess returns cannot, under section 95 of the Road Cess Act be used as evidence in favour of the person by whom, or on behalf of whom, they are filed (4) Entries in accounts relevant only under section 31 are not by themselves alone sufficient to charge any person with liability corroboration is required But where accounts are relevant under this clause they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not as in the case of accounts admissible only under section 31, require corroboration Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both the sections and in that case the necessity for corroboration does not apply (5) In the case cited (6) it was held that a medical certificate of testator's soundness of mind made twenty six days after the execution of the will was admissible under this clause, and was relevant but that a letter by the testator speaking of his relations with his wife in whose favour he subsequently made the will was not admissible Although zemindari papers cannot be admitted under section 34 as corroborative evidence, without independent evidence of the fact of collection at certain rates they can be used as independent evidence if they are relevant under this clause (7) The entries in the diary of a deceased chaukidar relating to birth and death are not admissible under this clause, where from the evidence it appears that the entries were not made by the chaukidar at all, as he was an illiterate person, but by other persons who deposed that they made the entries at the request of the chaukidar It was held that the entries were admissible either under section 157 or section 159 or possibly under both (8) Under section 34 talab baki papers are not sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability Talab baki papers may be evidence under this clause, but before they can be admitted a landlord must show that the person making the statement is dead and that the entries were made by him in the ordinary course of business (9)

(1872) In this case the prisoner was charged with forging for the purpose of cheating and using as genuine a forged railway receipt for the purpose of obtaining from a Railway Company certain goods which had been entrusted to the Company to be carried from Delhi to Calcutta The Standing Counsel for the prosecution sought to prove the delivery of the goods to the Company by putting in a letter from the consigner at Delhi to his partner in Calcutta advising the despatch of the goods submitting that the letter was a document used in commerce written or signed by a person whose attendance could not be procured etc The Court (Macpherson J) refused to receive the evidence and intimated a doubt whether such a letter would under any circumstances be receivable since it was beyond the instances specified in the section As to estimates see Hari Chintaman v Mora Lakshman 11 B 97 (1886)

(1) Illustration (g)

(2) Barlow v Chun Lal 28 C 209 (1901)

(3) Aingana v Bharmappa 23 B 63 65 0 (1877)

(4) Hem Chandra v Kali Prasanna 26 C 824 838 (1899) But they are otherwise admissible Ciatro Singh v Jhara Singh 39 C 995 (1912) following Hen Chandra Choudry v Kali Prasanna Bhaduri P C 30 C 1033 30 I A 177 distinguishing Nusseeran v Gourae Sunkur 27 W R 192 (1874) and see Seed v Naran Singh v Ajudhya Prasad Singh 39 C 1005 (1912)

(5) Rampyarabai v Balaji 6 Bom L R 50 (1904) s c 28 B 294

(6) Woolmer v Daly 1 Lahore 173

(7) Char tar Rai v Kailash Belari 4 Pat L W 213 s c 44 I C 422

(8) Musummat Naina Koor v Gobardhan Singh (1919) Pat 357

(9) Umed Ali v Nawab Khaji Haiderulla 31 C L J 68

the declarations must have been made a mere personal custom not involving such limitation appears in the words and from a consideration of the Illustrations thereto. It may be that the framers of the Act considered the accuracy which is generally produced by commercial or professional routine to be a sufficient guarantee of the credibility of this class of evidence without having recourse to the guarantee which exists in the obligation to discharge an imposed duty faithfully. Declarations in the course of duty differ, in English law, from those against interest, in requiring contemporaneity, personal knowledge, and the exclusion of collateral matters, none of which restrictions are declared by the section to exist upon the admissibility of such declarations in Indian Courts.

Course of business

The applicability of this clause entirely depends on the exact meaning of the words 'course of business' (2). In using the phrase the Legislature probably intended to admit in evidence statements similar to those admitted in England as coming under the same description. The subject is dealt with in Chapter XII(3) of Mr Pitt Taylor's treatise on the Law of Evidence, and the cases which he has collected show that this exception to the general rule against hearsay extends only to statements made during the course, not of any particular transaction of an exceptional kind, such as the execution of a deed of mortgage, but of business or professional employment in which the declarant was ordinarily or habitually engaged. The phrase was apparently used to indicate the current routine of business which was usually followed by the person whose declaration it is sought to introduce (4). The expression 'course of business' occurs in more than one place in the Evidence Act. Thus in section 16, where there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business according to which it would naturally have been done is a relevant fact. Illustration (a) to that section is evidently the case of Hetherington v Kemp (5). The 'course of business' there put forward was

It was not a usage in a private business of the same weight as the ordinary business of the Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct, and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case. What is meant by the common course of public and private business? Illustration (f) with its explanations refers to the public business of the Post Office. Private business would apparently apply to such a case as that alluded to above (Hetherington v Kemp). If the expression was meant to include the dealings of a private individual apart from his avocation or business, different language would have been used. The Explanation to Illustration (c) of the same section (114) speaks 'of a man of business,' which in its well known popular sense must mean a man habitually engaged in mercantile transactions or trade. Again, of a professional avocation. The illustration is that of a broker, to whom letters are shown for the purpose of advice.

(1) Hope v Hope (1893) W N 20 c a R v Worsh 4 Q B 132 Massey v Allen 11 Ch D 558 563 "the entry must be made in the course of business in the performance of duty" ib, per Hall V C an apparent exception is presented by the case of Doe v Turford 3 B &

Ad 890 but see as to this case Wills Ex 128

(2) Ningaua v Bharmappa 23 B 63
 64 (1897) per Candy J

(3) Chapter VII Part III of 10th Ed

(4) Ib at p 70 per Fulton J

(5) 4 Camp 193

Again, by section 31, entries in books of accounts, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant. In Munchershaw Bezoni v The New Dhurmsay Spinning and Weaving Company(1), West, J., referred to a private account tendered in evidence, which had been entered up casually once a week or fortnight, with none of the claims to confidence that attach to books entered up from day to day, or (as in banks) from hour to hour as transactions take place. 'These only' (he said) 'are, I think, regularly kept in the course of business.'

Having regard then, to the above considerations, there can, I think, be no doubt that the expression 'in the ordinary course of business' in the second clause of this section must be read in the same sense. It may in one sense be true that it is in the ordinary course of business for a mortgage deed to contain recitals of the boundaries of the land mortgaged. But that would not make the recitals evidence. The question is whether the mortgage deed itself is a statement made in the ordinary course of business. Looking at the particulars set out in the second clause of this section which though not exhaustive may fairly be taken as indicating the nature of the statements made in the course of business and looking at the sense in which the expression is apparently used in other sections of the Evidence Act, it cannot be said that a mortgage deed executed by an agriculturist falls within that term. It is not the 'profession, trade or business' (to borrow the words used in section 27 of the Contract Act), of an agriculturist to execute mortgage deeds. (2) A family pedigree kept by the family chronicler prepared by him from time to time from information supplied by members of the family is admissible under this clause as having been kept in the ordinary course of business by a professional man or a person whose business it was to keep the books for the benefit of the families (3).

According to the English rule, it is necessary that the declarant should have had personal knowledge of the transaction recorded (4). But this appears not to be law in India (5). Under the present section it seems to be not necessary that the person making the entry or other statement should have had a personal knowledge of the fact recorded or stated, it is sufficient to show that the statement was made in the ordinary course of business, the question as to how the person making the statement came to know about the matter, though it might affect the weight to be given to the statement not affecting its

Personal knowledge

(1) 4 B 5*6 583 (1880). This decision was not approved of by the Privy Council in Deputy Commissioner Bara Banki v Rani Persad 27 C 118 (1899) s c 4 C W N 147.

(2) Vingala v Bharmappa 23 B 63 65 67 (1897) per Candy J.

(3) Molansing v Umed Ramol v Dalpat sing Aambaji 23 Bom L R 289 (1922).

(4) Bran v Preece 11 M & W 773 where the facts were as follows—It was the ordinary duty of one of the workmen at a coal pit named H to give notice to the foreman of the coal sold. The foreman who was not present when the coal was delivered being himself unable to write employed a man named B to make the entries in the books from his dictation and these entries were read over every night to the foreman H and the foreman being dead B was called with the book to prove delivery of the coal but the evidence was held inadmissible, on the ground that although the entries made under the foreman's direction might be regarded as made by him yet as he had no personal knowledge of the facts stated in them but derived his information second hand from the workman there was not the same guarantee for the truth of the entries as in Price v Torrington where the party signing the entry had himself done the business. See Taylor v 35 609 700 708 Wills Ev 123 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 372 Steph Dig Art 27 Powell Ev loc cit Ryan v Ryan (1889) 3 P Wms 139.

(5) R v Hanmanta 1 B 610 (1877). The observations of the Privy Council as to the necessity of personal knowledge and belief which must be found or presumed in any statement of a deceased person (Jagatpal Singh v Jogeshwar Baksh) 25 A 143 (1902) relate to statements under cl (5) of the terms of which require special means of knowledge.

admissibility (1) So it has been held that account books containing entries not made by, nor at the dictation of, a person who had a personal knowledge of the truth of the fact stated, if regularly kept in course of business are admissible as evidence under section 34 and semble under the second clause of this section (2)

Contemporaneous-
ness

According to the English rule, the statement must also have been made at the time of, or immediately after, the performance of the transaction (3) Thus an interval of two days has sufficed to exclude a declaration (4) But contemporaneousness is not required by the section for the admissibility of the evidence though in determining the weight to be allowed to it in particular cases it will always be important to consider how far the statement or entry was contemporaneous with the fact which it relates (5)

Collateral
matters

Further, entries made in the course of business are, under English law, evidence only of those things which according to the course of business it was the duty of the person to enter and are no evidence of independent collateral matters, however intimately any such collateral matters may be incorporated in the statements (6) Thus, where the question was whether A was arrested in a certain parish, —a certificate annexed to the writ by a deceased sheriff's officer, stating the fact, time, and place of the arrest returned by him to the sheriff was held inadmissible on the ground that the duty merely required the fact and time but not the place of the arrest to be returned (7) But this restriction on inadmissibility is not imposed in terms by the section The statement or entry, in order to be admissible under the Act must relate to a relevant fact (8), and it would appear to make no difference so far as the question of admissibility is concerned, whether this fact is connected with the performance of a duty or is merely an independent collateral matter Whether this fact naturally finds a place in the narrative, what is the nature of its connection with the fact the statement of which was matter of duty and whether this connection was such as to raise a presumption of accuracy of information or observation, must however, be questions of importance in estimating the weight due to such evidence when it relates to collateral matters merely (9)

Extrinsic
proof

The person wishing to give the evidence must give extrinsic proof of the death of the declarant or of the existence of the other circumstances conditional to the admission of this evidence (10) Similar evidence of the ordinary course of business will also be necessary (11) "one, evidence must be given that it is in the to have made it, and this may be done by evidence of the person who it or who is conversant with his handwriting (12)

(1) R v. Hanmanta supra Field Ev loc cit Cunningham Ev 156

(2) R v. Hanmanta supra.

(3) Doe v. Turford 3 B & Ad 890 Sturla v. Freccia 5 App Cas 623 Smith v. Blakey L R 2 Q B 326 The Henry Coxon 3 F D 156 Taylor Ev § 704

(4) The Henry Coxon supra

(5) Field Ev loc cit Cunningham Ev 157

(6) Chambers v. Bernascone 1 C M & R 347, Taylor, Ev § 705

(7) Id. per Lord Denman — We are all of opinion that whatever effect may be due to an entry made in the course of any office reporting facts necessary to the performance of a duty the statement of other circumstances however naturally they may be thought to find a place in the narrative is no proof of these circumstances

(8) And must have been made in the ordinary course of business

(9) Field Ev loc cit cases may perhaps however occur in which the matter in question is so collateral and the entry for this and other reasons is of such an unusual character that it can scarcely be said to have been made "in the ordinary course of business"

(10) v. ante Intro to ss 32-33 s. 104 post Field Ev loc cit Phipson Ev 5th Ed 272 and cases there cited

(11) In connection with this see s 114 illustr (f) post

(12) Field Ev loc cit as to ancient documents see s 90 post Doe v. Davell 10 Q B 314 Riggs v. Miller v. Whalley 28 L R Ir 144, and see ss 47, 67 post as to proof of handwriting

THIRD CLAUSE

The leading case on the subject matter of this clause is that of Higham v Ridgway (1). There the question was whether one William Fowden, junior, was born before or after the 16th April, 1768. The plaintiff, in order to prove that his birth was subsequent to that date, tendered in evidence the following entries from the Day Book and Ledger of a man midwife, who had attended the mother of William Fowden, junior, at his birth and was since deceased —

Statements against interest

DAY BOOK ENTRIES

22nd April 1768

38* Richard Fallow's wife, Brimhall Filus circa hor 9, matutin, cum forceps, etc., paid

[Then followed in the same page the entry in question without any intervening date]

Wm Fowden, Junr's† wife 70* filus circa hor 3 post merid, nat, etc

LEDGER ENTRY

Wm Fowden, junr, 1768

Aprilis 22 Filus natus etc

Wife

26th Haustus purg

1 6 1

0 15 0

Pd 25th Oct, 1768

2 1 1

It was held that all these entries were connected together or one whole and that the entry as to the payment of the man midwife's charges rendered them all admissible. It will be observed that the entry of the date (22nd April, 1768) was in no way against the interest of the person who made it, but was collateral to that portion of the entry, namely,—“Pd (paid) 25th Oct, 1768” which was against interest, as showing that a certain sum of money was no longer due and owing to such person. On this point Lord Ellenborough said “It is idle to say that the word ‘paid’ only shall be admitted in evidence without the context, which explains to what it refers, we must, therefore, look to the rest of the entry to see what the demand was which he thereby admitted to be discharged” (v post). The statements, provided they be relevant, may be either written or verbal. The form in which such declarations are ordinarily offered is that of written entries, the inaccuracy with which oral statements are repeated makes them less satisfactory, but such objection lies to the credibility of the statement and not to its reception (2). Such entries are not receivable where better evidence is to be had to prove the same fact, as where the maker of the entry is himself forthcoming personally, but they are not the less receivable because the same fact may be proved by evidence of another description. “For instance, in Higham v Ridgway, the evidence of the entry of the accoucheur would not have been rejected, because the evidence of a midwife

(1) 2 Smith's L. C. (9th Ed.) 348 10 East 109. Illustration (b) in this case with the portion of the entry which was against interest omitted. It is intended to illustrate the rule as to statements made in the course of business not that as to the present class of statements which is exemplified by Illustrations (e) and (f). See Aingasa v Bharmappa 23 B. 69 (1897) see also Doe v Datus referred to in the last mentioned case and in Hari

Chintaman v Mero Lakshman 1 B. 97 (1886)

* The figures 38 and 79 referred to the corresponding entries in the Ledger

† This was the designation at that time of the father of the William Fowden junr in question

(2) Cf. Section and Mussammat Zaynub v Hadjee Baba 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 54 (1866) Best Ev. § 502

who was present at the delivery, might have been forthcoming, though this may seem at first sight to militate against the rule that the best evidence shall alone be received. The entry of the accoucheur would not have been receivable if he himself had been forthcoming because then his testimony on oath would have been superior to his entry, which was not on oath, but as we shall see hereafter, when we come to consider the rule, that the best evidence must always be given the rule applies to the quality and not the quantity of evidence, and that a fact may often be proved by independent testimony, notwithstanding there may be two distinct ways of proving it (1) The distinction should be observed between mere admissions and statements receivable under the present Clause. An admission may or may not be against the interest of the maker at the time when it is made. An admission merely as such is neither receivable in maker's favour nor in favour of his representatives in interest, nor against any person other than the maker or his representative. On the other hand an admission which amounts to a statement against interest within the meaning of this Clause may not only be received in favour of the maker thereof and his representatives but is evidence in favour of or against strangers. A class of statements which may be admissible under this Clause is that of endorsements or entries in respect of the payment of interest due on bonds and similar instruments (2) Such endorsements or entries if made before the claim became barred by the law of Limitation would be against the interest of the payee, inasmuch as they are admissions of payment but if they are made after the claim became so barred they would be for and not against the creditor's interest inasmuch as by the admission of a small payment he would be enabled to recover the larger remaining portion of the debt such payment having the effect of preventing the claim to the capital sum from being barred. Whether then the endorsement or entry is admissible as an entry against interest, depends upon the question whether it was bond fide made before the claim became barred by Limitation and it ought not to be admitted until it be shown by evidence dehors the instrument that it was made at a time when it was against the interest of the creditor to make it (3) (See next paragraph) Recitals in documents not inter partes are ordinarily irrelevant unless the statements in the documents can be brought within the conditions of this section. Statements in documents not inter partes limiting the interest of the executants by declaring the boundaries of certain land fall within this clause and are therefore admissible in evidence if the conditions necessary to bring this section into operation are proved (4)

The main difference between the rule enacted by this section and the English law (5) upon the same subject consists in the nature of the interest to

(1) Norton Ex 181 Thus the mere fact that there has been a written receipt given for money will not preclude the proof of payment by the oral evidence of witnesses who saw the payment. Thus in the case of Middleton v Melton (10 B & C. 317) a private book kept by a deceased collector of taxes containing entries by him acknowledging the receipt of sums in his character of collector was also held to be admissible evidence in an action against his surety although the parties who had paid him were alive and might have been called 'ib 182

(2) See s. 20 of Act IV of 1908 (Limitation) and ib Art 75 Sched II and remarks in Field Ex loc cit Norton Ex 182 183

(3) Taylor Ex §§ 690-696 and cases there cited Rose v Bryant 2 Camp 321 Field Ex loc cit Norton Ex 182 183 Briggs v Wilson 5 D M & G 12 The express provision of s. 20 of the Limitation Act that the payment whether of interest or principal must have been made before the right to sue had become barred appears to require proof of the time of payment

(4) Rajadasi Sardar v Ganga Charan Bhattacharya 53 I C 863

(5) See Steph Dig Art 28 Taylor Ex § 668-696 Roscoe N P Fv. 55-59 Best Ev § 500 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 184-194 Powell Ex 9th Ed. 306-316 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 267-270 Smith L C Note to Higham v Ridgway

which statement must be opposed. According to the latter the interest involved must be (a) pecuniary or (b) proprietary. But declarations against interest in any other sense, as for instance an admission of liability to criminal prosecution, do not come within the rule (1). Thus where the question was whether A was lawfully married to B, a statement by a deceased clergyman that he performed the marriage under circumstances which would have rendered him liable to a criminal prosecution was held not to be relevant as a statement against interest (2). But in so far as the present section includes (c) an interest in escaping a criminal prosecution the statement would have been admissible under this Act (3). Further, under the present section the interest to which the statement may be opposed may be (d) an interest in escaping a suit for damages. The section not only extends the English rule by recognising two additional forms of interest but also in rendering this class of statements under certain circumstances admissible even if the persons who made them be still living.

An entry against interest means an entry prima facie against the interest of the maker that is to say, the natural meaning of the entry, standing alone, made it (4). If the entry is prima facie for purposes irrespective of its effect on the entry in the handwriting of a person whose interest was followed by other entries pointing to a loan to J. W. was held to be admissible as evidence whether or not the effect of it when admitted would be to establish the existence of a debt due to the testator (5). Where the fact that the declaration is against the declarant's interest does not clearly appear from the statement itself, it is permissible to give independent evidence to supply this want (6). Though the statement must have been prima facie against an interest specified by the section yet the amount of the interest is immaterial so far as the admissibility of the declaration is concerned (7). When a declaration is partly against interest, only such part is admissible (8).

The declarations must have been against interest at the time they were made, it is not sufficient that they might possibly turn out to be so afterwards (9). Statements and entries against interest may be received as evidence of independent and collateral matters which though forming part of the declaration, were not in themselves against the interest of the declarant. A statement, though indifferent in itself, becomes against the proprietary interest of the

(1) The Sussex Peerage case 11 C & F 108

(2) Ib

(3) Illustration (f) Norton Ev 183
184 Field Ev 184 185 Cunningham Ev 158

(4) Taylor v Witham L R 3 Ch D 605 607 per Jessel M R following Parke B in R v Inhabitants of Lower Heyford. Of course if you can prove of unde that the man had a particular reason for making it and that it was for his interest you may destroy the value of the evidence altogether but the question of admissibility is not a question of value. The entry may be utterly worthless when you get it if you shew any reason to believe that he had a motive for making it and that though apparently against his interest yet really it was for it but that is a matter for subsequent consideration when you estimate the value of the testimony. Ib per Jessel M R

(5) Ib

(6) Wills Ev 134 see Murray v Zaynub v Hadjee Baba 2 Ind Jur N S 54 (1866)

(7) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 752 Field Ev loc cit but upon the amount of interest involved the degree of attention likely to secure accuracy must materially depend. Ib

(8) Byjot Chand Mahatap v Kahi Pada Clatterjee 17 C W N 1013 (1913)

(9) Ex parte Edwards Re Tollmache 14 Q B D 415 416 Massey v Allen 13 Ch D 558 Smith v Blakey L R 2 Q B 376 [the interest must not be too remote] Wigmore Ev § 1466

declarant when made as a material part of a deed, the object of which is to limit his proprietary interest. It cannot be said not to affect his interest because assuming it to be material, the deed if it were struck out, would be less effective than it otherwise would be. If, on the other hand, the statements were unconnected with the purpose of the deed and were not in themselves adverse to the declarant's interest, they would doubtless have to be rejected (1). In an early case where the declarations were partially against interest the rule was applied as follows: "We cannot concur in the opinion of the learned

It is a statement by is reduced or affected,

it. The effect of it is to cut down the proprietary right, to subject it to the tenure or incumbrance which is mentioned. It is true that in one part of it there is what may be said to be not against his interest but in his favour, namely, the amount of the original rent and increased rent payable to him. But when a document of this kind is tendered in evidence, it is not to be divided into parts and the part which is in favour of the person making it rejected, and that which is against his interest accepted. The question is whether taking the document as a whole of the person making it that may be looked at, but determined is whether it has been made under such circumstances as make it reasonable to suppose that it was done bona fide and the statements are true" (2). So in the undermentioned case (3) the plaintiff sued in 1893 to recover possession of certain land. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title. The latter tendered in evidence a registered mortgage deed of adjacent land executed in 1877, which set forth the boundaries of the land comprised in the mortgage, and as one of such boundaries, referred to the land in question as then belonging to the plaintiff. At the date of the deed there was no litigation existing between the present litigants, and at the date of the present suit the mortgagor was dead. It was held that the statement in the deed was admissible under this clause of this section. The Court referring to the case cited in the preceding note at the foot of this page and pointing out that the law under and previous to this Act was the same, observed as follows: "If then a statement of a zemindar that there was a certain ghatalah occupant in portion of his mehal was held to be a statement against the interest of the zemindar in the same way the statement of a registered occupant of a survey number in the Bombay Presidency that he is indebted in a certain sum of money which is a charge on his land must be held to be both against his pecuniary and proprietary interest. If so, then the same case quoted above is also an authority for holding that the whole statement is admissible in evidence not only to prove so much contained in it as was adverse to the interest of the person making it, but to prove any collateral fact contained in the statement which fact was not foreign to the part actually against interest and formed a substantial part of it" (4). Thus, accounts are admissible, some items of which charge the declarant though other connected items discharge him or even show a balance in his favour, for it is not to be presumed that a man will charge himself falsely for the mere purpose of getting a discharge, and in the latter case the debit items would still be against interest, since they diminish the balance in his favour (5). A statement

(1) Ningaua v. Bharnappa 23 B 63 71 72 (1897) following case next cited.

(2) Rajah Leclanund v. Mustannut Lakhputte 22 W. R. 231 233 (1874) per Couch C. J. cited and followed in

V. N. N. v. Bharisappa 23 B 63 67 91 (1897).

(3) Ningaua v. Bharnappa 23 B 63 (1897).

(4) Id.

(5) Taylor Ev. 1 674.

by a deceased Sapinda that he had received a sum of money for consenting to an adoption, thereby invalidating such consent, has been held admissible under this clause (1)

But it is immaterial that the declaration may prove, in the circumstances which have happened at the time when it is sought to be put in evidence, to be for the interest of the declarant, or even that it can be shown by independent evidence to have been in truth for his interest at the time when it was made, provided that, standing by itself it was, at the time when it was made against his interest (2)

A declaration is against the pecuniary interest of the declarant who makes it, (1) Pecuniary whenever it has the effect of charging him with a pecuniary liability to another, or of discharging some other person upon whom he would otherwise have a claim (3) A declaration may be against the pecuniary interest of the person who the parts of the liability the state is part of the charge of which the entry shows the subsequent (5) liquidation Notwithstanding the provisions of the twenty first section and the present section, cess returns cannot, under section 95 of the Road Cess Act, be used as evidence in favour of the person by whom or on whose behalf they are submitted (6) But they can be used as evidence otherwise (7)

Declarations made by persons in disparagement of their title to land are (11) Proprietary admissible, if made while the declarant was in actual possession (8) of the property (9) as statements against their proprietary interest And as in the absence of other declaration by an absolute interest that he has no interest in the land whatever (12) So where a Hindu widow had

(1) Danakota Ammal v Balasundara Mudaliar 36 M 19 (1913)

(2) Taylor v Witham L R 3 Ch D 605 Wills Ev 130 131 ante

(3) Doe v Robson 15 East 32 33 per Bayley J Wills Ev 130 Higham v Ridgway affords an example of a statement which discharges another and Williams v Graves (see next note and illustrate (c) of a statement charging the maker)

(4) Steph Dig Art 28 thus where the question was whether A received rent for certain land a deceased steward's account charging himself with the receipt of such rent for A was held to be relevant although the balance of the whole account was in favour of the steward ib id (d) Williams v Graves 8 C & P 592 see Raja Leelanund v Mussamut Lakkpatee 22 W R 231 (1874)

(5) Taylor Ev § 675 Steph Dig Art 28 R v Heyford cited in Note to Higham v Ridgway in 2 Smith L C alter Doe v Lockes 1 M & R 261 in Taylor v Witham L R 3 Ch D 605 Jessel M R followed R v Heyford and dissented from Doe v Lockes There is nothing in the Act to prevent the admission of the statement in the case above mentioned any objection that may be made will go to the weight and not to the admissibility of such evidence Field Ev 181

(6) Hem Chandra v Kali Prasanna 26 C 832 833 (1899) s c 8 C W N 17 and see Hem Chandra Choudhry v Kali Prasanna Bhaduri P C 30 C 1033 30 I A 177

(7) Saidoo Narain v Ajodhya Prasad 39 C 1005 (1912) Chalko Singh v Jhero Singh 39 C 995 (1912)

(8) There ought to be some evidence that the declarant was actually in possession since otherwise his declaration that he has an interest though limited may appear to be a statement rather in his favour than otherwise

(9) The English rule adds and as to matters within his personal knowledge or belief Phypson Ev 5th Ed 262—263 Taylor Ev § 683 Trinbliston v Keims 9 C & F 780 alter under this section v post

(10) Taylor Ev § 683

(11) Phypson Ev 5th Ed 262—263 Wills Ev 136 Field Ev loc cit Taylor Ev §§ 684—686 Norton Ev 179 180

(12) Grey v Redman 1 Q B D 161

executed, in favour of one B D, a varaspatra or deed of heirship, this deed was in subsequent suit between the heir of B D, and a mortgagee of certain property covered by it, admitted in evidence as being against the widow's proprietary interest as by it she divested herself of her widow's estate in the property (1) Thus also a statement by a deceased occupier of land that he held a life estate in it under a particular will, of which C and B were executors was held admissible to prove the existence and executors of the will, being against proprietary interest on account of its two fold limitation of the declarant's estate to a life interest, and under a particular document (2) A statement by a landlord who is dead that there was a tenant on the land is a statement against his proprietary interest (3)

A distinction however exists between statements which limit the declarant's own title and those which go to abridge or encumber the estate itself. According to English law the former are admissible even between strangers whereas the latter are only so as against the declarant and his privies. Thus admissions by the holder of a subordinate title are not receivable to affect the estate of his superior which he has no right to alienate or encumber—e.g., those of an occupier, his landlord's title or those of a tenant for life, the title of the remainderman or reversioner. The ground for this distinction is said to be that, though it is unlikely (to take a specific instance) that a person possessed of an absolute interest in property will admit that he is only a tenant, many causes might induce a tenant to acknowledge the existence of an easement or a highway, or the like which might be either not inconvenient or even absolutely beneficial to him (4)

(III) Interest in escaping a criminal prosecution or a suit for damages

It has been already noticed that the section at this point extends the English rule (5). The words 'would have exposed him' mean 'would have exposed him at the time that the statement was made'. It was hardly intended that ant to a prosecution or suit for damages (6). This construction is supported by the rule laid down with regard to statements against pecuniary and proprietary

(1) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman 11 B 89 (1886)

(2) Sly v Sly 2 P D 91 so again where the question was whether A (deceased) gained a settlement in the parish of B by renting a tenement a statement made by A whilst in possession of a house that he had paid rent for it was held relevant because it reduced the interest which would otherwise be inferred from the fact of A's possession. R v Exeter L R 4 Q B 341 Steph Dig Art 28 ill (f)

(3) Abdul Aziz v Ebrahim 31 C 965 (1904) following Burla Mundari v Megh Nath 2 Cal L J 4n (1905)

(4) R v Bhiss 7 A & E 550 Scholes v Chadwick 2 M & Rob 507 Howe v Malk 40 L T 196 27 W R (Eng) 340 Papendick v Bridgewater 5 E & B 166 [In this case the question was whether there was a right of common way over a certain field. A statement by A a deceased tenant for a term of the land in question that he had so much right was held to be relevant as against his successors in the term but not as against the owner of the field.] Phipson v 5th Ed 262—263 Steph Dig Art 78 Powell v Taylor Ex 1 687 It is difficult to see any objection in principle to treating declarations by an occupier of land which admit the existence of an easement over it as being within the rule since the admission of its existence might well be considered a statement against interest. See remarks in Wills v 136 137 Probably here as elsewhere under the Act any objection that may be made will go not to the admissibility but to the weight of the evidence.

(5) v ante Intro to ss 32 33

(6) The construction given in the text and adopted in the first edition from Whitley Stokes n 874 Field Ex 185 was subsequently approved by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Acholas v Asphar the final judgment in which is reported in 24 C 216 (1896). The decision of the Court however upon this point having been given during the course of the examination of the witnesses has not been reported.

interest (1) On the other hand it may be said that if the fact that the risk had passed away was not known to the declarant the statement might in the belief of the latter though not in fact be against his interest and thus have the guarantee which is proper to this class of evidence

The statement against interest is not only evidence of the precise fact which is against interest but of all connected facts (though not against interest) which are necessary to explain or are expressly referred to by the declaration and whether contained in the same or other document (2) (v. ante Interest) Thus in an action by the executor of one T by which it was sought to establish against the defendant a debt of £2000 as due to the testator's estate for money lent and where the defence was that the defendant had received it as a gift the plaintiff tendered in evidence a private account book of the deceased containing (a) entries of several sums of £20 each purporting to have been received from the defendant as quarterly payments of interest and (b) an entry stating that the defendant had on a particular date acknowledged that he had borrowed of the testator the sum of £2000 The defendant objected to the admissibility of the book on the ground that the tendency of the entries was to establish the claim for £2000 in favour of the estate But it was held that the entries of the receipt of interest taken by themselves (3) were at the time admissible notwithstanding that the entry by which the testator recorded the becomes admissible (5) So statements by tenants have been admitted to prove not merely the fact that they were tenants but also both the amount (6) and the payment (7) of the rent and the nature of the tenure (8) But disconnected facts though contained in the same document or statement are inadmissible statements not referred to in or necessary to explain declarations against interest and are not relevant merely because they were made at the same time or recorded in the same place (9) Upon the question in the case of written entries as to what is to be deemed the whole statement within the meaning of the rule it would seem that the same tests which exist in regard to admissions must be applicable here namely that the statement which is sought to be given in evidence as a part of the main statement must if antecedent have been incorporated in it by reference and if contemporaneous have been virtually parcel of it (10)

The statements are admissible although the declarant had no personal knowledge of the fact stated but received them merely on hearsay (11) Nor

Personal knowledge contemporaneousness

(1) See Ex parte Edwards and Massey v Allen (v. ante)

(2) Angaria Bharappa 23 B 63 (1897) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 263 Steph Dg Art 28 Powell Ev 9th Ed 307 308 Wills E 2nd Ed 386 Taylor Ev §§ 67 680 Higlan v Raguay 2 Smth L C (v. ante p 325) Taylor v Withan 3 Ch D 311

(3) v. ante

(4) Taylor v Withan L R 3 Ch D 605 supra and see ante Higlan v Ridgway and the remarks on debtor and creditor accounts Rajah Isclan d v Mssa ul Lakhfi 22 W R 231 (1874)

(5) Pracobl Halso 4 Taunt 16

(6) R v Br gla 31 L J M C 63

(7) R v Exeter L R 4 Q B 341

(8) Doe v Jones 1 Camp 367

(9) Steph Dg Art 28 Doe Bct 11 7 C B 456 Anglt Waterford 4 Y & Coll 293 Whaley Carlisle 15 W R (Eng) 1183 Ngala Blarappa 23 B 63 (1897) v. ante

(10) Wills E 132 b 2nd Ed 187

(11) Crease v Barrett 1 C M & R 919 Percival v Na so 7 Ex 1 Taylor E § 669 but see Wills E 133 134 b 2nd Ed 189—191 these were cases of declarations against pecuniary interest in England declarations against proprietary interest are not admissible unless the declarant adds his own belief to the hearsay Tr nobleston v Kemm 9 C & F 780 The Act however makes no such distinction As to the decision in Jagajpal Singh v Jagajal Baksl 25 A 143 (1907) which refers to cl (5) see notes to cl (2) ante

is it necessary that such statements should be contemporaneous with the fact recorded, it is sufficient that they are made at any subsequent time (1) These circumstances affect the weight, not the admissibility of the declaration

Extrinsic proof must be given of the declarant's death or of the existence of the other circumstances under which alone this evidence is receivable and that the statement was either made written or signed by him or if made or written by another on his behalf that it was authorized or adopted by the declarant (2) Further if the declarant purports to charge himself as the agent or receiver of another it is generally necessary in addition to give some proof that he really occupied the alleged position (3)

FOURTH CLAUSE

Illustration (1) exemplifies this clause the points to be regarded in which are that (a) opinion may be given in evidence as to the existence of (b) any public custom or right (c) or of any matter of public or general interest (d) provided there was a probability of knowledge on the part of the declarant and (e) provided the declaration was made ante litem motam. The grounds upon which the evidence in this and the seventh clause mentioned is admitted are considered in the note to such last clause and in the Introduction ante. It is not essential to the admissibility though it is to the weight of the declarations that they should be corroborated by proof of the exercise of the right within living memory (4) The best way to prove ancient rights is to prove particular acts and usage as far back as living memory goes and then adduce evidence of reputation in regard to the preceding time In a suit in which the question was whether there existed a custom of the Kadwa Kaabi caste to which the parties belonged prohibiting a widow from adopting a son the lower Court apparently considering that it would be unreasonable to oblige the plaintiff to incur the expense of procuring the attendance of the witnesses admitted in evidence under this clause a statement signed by several witnesses to the effect that a widow of this caste cannot adopt according to the custom of the caste without the express authority of her husband It was Held that the fourth clause of the thirty second section was not applicable to the case as the evidence was required to prove a fact in issue and not merely a relevant fact The statement was therefore inadmissible to prove the alleged custom (5)

The statement declared by the Act to be relevant is a statement which gives the opinion of the reputation which the declarant's belief alone but also the concurring opinions of others similarly interested to himself and those opinions in their turn may be based in part on earlier traditions extending back through any number of generations This is what is understood in this connection by the term reputation But if the declarant's circumstances were such that he was apparently competent to testify as to what the common report upon the subject was it will be presumed till the contrary

(1) Doe v Turford 3 B & Ad 890 897 898

(2) Doe v Haakins 2 Q B 212
Barry v Bebbington 4 T R 514
Lancaster v Lovell 6 C & P 437
Exeter v Warren 15 Q B 773
Bradley v Jones 13 C P 822
quære whether the Act adopts a different rule by the use of the word made in the opening clause of the section Field v Field 180 181 186 6th Ed 132 133 as to proof of handwriting see ss 4 67 and as to documents 30 years old see s 90 post

(3) Taylor v Fyfe §§ 682 683 as to independent evidence of the existence of the charge suitably liquidated ante pp 327-328

(4) Crease v Barrett 1 C M & R 919 930 and cases cited in Taylor v Fyfe § 619

(5) Patel Chandran v Patel Manilal 15 B 565 (1890)

Statements giving opinion as to public right or custom or matter of public or general interest

Opinion Particular facts is shown that his utterance was an expression of opinion common both to himself and others. Reputation as to the existence of particular facts is inadmissible. The declaration must relate to the general right, and not to particular facts which support or negative it, or the latter not being equally notorious are liable to be misrepresented or misunderstood and may have been connected with other facts which if known would qualify or explain them (1). Thus if the question be whether a road is public or private declarations by old persons since dead that they have seen repairs done upon it, are inadmissible (2). On the other hand on the same question declarations by deceased residents in but which indirectly do so as by setting up an inconsistent private claim or by omitting all mention of it where mention might reasonably have been expected (5).

The terms public and general are sometimes used as synonymous (6). But a distinction is drawn in English law between the two terms public and general when dealing with the question of the competent knowledge of the declarant ^{general interest}.

parish or manor. The distinction is when the point in issue is of a public or presumed from the circumstances under which the declaration was made (7). But as this clause requires a probability of knowledge in all cases this distinction ceases to be of importance in India. In both classes of rights public and general the rights must have been one of the existence of which if it existed, the declarant would have been likely to be aware (8). Instances of owners to repair a bridge or sea wall manorial customs and the like. On the other hand questions as to the boundaries of two private estates the existence of a private right or way over a field a custom of electing the master of a grammar school and the like have been held to be matters of a private nature (9).

(1) Wills Ev 2nd Ed 222—223 and cases there cited Taylor Ev § 617 Steph Dig Art 30 [Declarations as to particular facts from which the existence of any such public or general right or custom or matter of public or general interest may be inferred are deemed to be irrelevant.]

(2) R v Bliss 7 A & E 550

(3) Crease v Barrett 1 C M & R 925

(4) Drinkwater v Porter 7 C & P 181

(5) Drinkwater v Porter supra followed in Sivasubramania v Secretary of State 9 M 285 294 (1884). [No distinction can be drawn between evidence of reputation to establish and to disprove a public right.] Taylor Ev § 620 Field Ev 6th Ed 177 138

(6) As to the meaning of the term interest v a te Introd to ss 3 33 R Bedfordshire 4 E & B 535

(7) Taylor Ev §§ 609—612 Steph Dig Art 30 Phipson E 5th Ed 9 as to the meaning of general custom or right see s 48 post as to whether the rights mentioned in this clause are incorporeal only see Gujri Lall v Fateh Lall 6 C 180 186 187 (1880) and cf Sivasubramania v The Secretary of State 9 M 285 (1884)

(8) S 37 cl (4)

(9) S Taylor Ev §§ 613 614 where a large number of cases are collected

"The Indian decided cases furnish few examples (1) Illustration (i) is taken from those parts of the country in which the village system still exists it has long died out, if it ever perfectly existed, in Lower Bengal Public rights or customs are little understood, and the order of the Government or of the Executive head of a district is often accepted as conclusive concerning them In large zemindaries questions, however, occasionally arise somewhat analogous to those which occur in manors in England, such for example as to the zemindars right to take dues on the sale of trees or to receive one fourth of the sale proceeds in cases of involuntary sale, as in execution, or in case of a house sold privately (2)

Declarations by deceased persons as to private rights are inadmissible since these are not likely to be so commonly or correctly known, and are more liable to be misrepresented (3) In the undermentioned case it was held that neither cl 4 nor cl 5 of this section justifies the admission of hearsay evidence upon the question whether a particular person survived another or upon the question whether a man was at the time of his death joint with or separate from other members of his family nor can the grounds of the opinion of a deceased person as to the existence of a custom even if stated to a witness be as such proved under this section (1) The grounds upon which evidence of reputation upon general custom is receivable do not apply to private titles, either with regard to particular custom or private prescriptions as it is not generally possible for strangers to know any thing of what concerns only private title (5) Reputation may, however, be given in evidence under this Act in proof of private rights if it consists of the written statements mentioned in the seventh clause post

Form of the
declaration

Declarations as to the public and general rights may be made in any form or manner (6) The statements under this clause may have been written or verbal But reputation as to matters of general interest is not confined to the declarations here mentioned It may be evidence by recitals in deeds wills or other documents under the provisions of the seventh clause The following are instances of the manner in which declarations as to matters of public and general interest may be made they may be made by or in statements, verbal or written, giving opinions (7), maps prepared by or in the direction of persons interested in the matter (8) deeds and leases between private persons (9), orders, judgments, and decrees of Courts if final (10)

Lis mota
and
interest

In order to prevent bias the declarations to be admissible, must have been made ante litem motam, or before the commencement of any controversy, legal or otherwise, touching the matter to which they relate By lis mota is meant the commencement of the controversy and not the commencement of the suit (11) This qualification is not confined to matters of public and general interest but equally governs the admissibility of hearsay evidence in matters

(1) See Sivasubramanya v The Secretary of State 9 M 265 (1884) post

(2) Field Ev 6th Ed 138—as to Manorial customs see s 42 post and as to presentments of Customary Courts see Wills Ev, 2nd Ed 230—232

(3) Taylor Ev, §§ 615 616 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 279—Rescoe N P Ev 49 and cases there cited Heimger v Droe 25 B 433 440 441 (1900) s c 3 Bom L R 1 [S 32 cl (4) is manifestly inapplicable to a document purporting to deal with the right of a private individual as against the public in which the interests of the individual formed the subject matter of the statements] as to the evidence of ancient possession post

(4) Mussamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar 8 O C 94 I C (1902) 361 I A 125

(5) Moreland v Wood 14 East 379

"

(6) Steph Dig Art 30

(7) S 32 cl (4) ante

(8) Hammond v Bradstreet 10 Ex 390 see cl (7) post

(9) Plaxton v Dare 10 B & C 17

(10) S 42 post, Steph Dig Art 30

Illustr (b)

(11) Harkeley Peerage case 4 Camp 417 Monckton v Atty Genl 2 Russ &

Wyl 161, Taylor, Ev § 629

of pedigree(1) "There must be, not merely facts which may lead to a dispute, but a lis mota or suit, or controversy preparatory to a suit, actually commenced, or dispute arisen, and that upon the very same pedigree or subject matter which constitutes the question in litigation"(2) Therefore, declarations will not be rejected in consequence of their having been made with the express view of preventing disputes(3), they are admissible if no dispute has arisen, though made in direct support of the title of the declarant(4), and the mere fact of the belief that he stood, in pari jure with the will not render his statement inadmissible(5) erived, although made after a claim had been asserted but finally abandoned(6), or after the existence of non contentious legal proceedings involving the same right(7) or after the existence of contentious legal proceedings involving the same right only collaterally and not directly(8) for the controversy must have related to the particular subject in issue(9) But declarations made after the controversy has originated are inadmissible although the existence of the controversy was not known to the declarant, for to enquire into this would be to enter into a collateral issue(10) The admissibility of declarations terminates with the commencement of the controversy and the termination of this admissibility is not affected by its being shown that proceedings were fraudulently commenced with the view to exclude the possibility of any such declaration(11) and the evidence will be excluded even though the former controversy were between different parties, or had reference to a different property or claim, if matters to which the statement relates were clearly under discussion in the former dispute(12)

FIFTH & SIXTH CLAUSES

For the purpose of Indian Courts the extent to which hearsay evidence with regard to relationship is admissible may be summarized shortly under three heads—(a) statements made orally or in writing by persons deceased, etc., having special knowledge, ante litem motam (section 32, fifth clause) (b) statements in writing as to relationship between persons deceased in wills or deeds relating to the affairs of the family to which they belonged, etc., made ante litem motam (section 32, sixth clause), (c) opinion shown by conduct as to the existence of a relationship by a person who had special means of knowledge (section 50) (13)

Clauses fifth and sixth, which are exemplified by Illustrations (k) (l) and (m), together with section 50 post, deal with the relevancy of certain facts which are treated by English text writers under the single head of 'matters of pedigree' There are, however, important differences between the English and Indian law on the subject of the statements which are dealt with by the above mentioned clauses of this section There is further a distinction to be noted between the kinds of evidence to which each clause refers The statement

(1) See cls (5) and (6) its operation may therefore be illustrated by indistinct reference to both these classes of cases Taylor Ex § 628

(2) Davies v. Loandes 7 Scott V R 214 per Lord Denman Taylor Ex § 630 and cases there cited

(3) Berkeley Peerage case supra

(4) Doe v. Davies 10 Q B 314 325 [although a feeling of interest will often cast suspicion on declarations it will not render them inadmissible Per cur]

(5) Taylor Ex §§ 630 631

(6) Phipson Ex 5th Ed 251 citing Hubb Ex of Suc 668

(7) Ib Briscoe v. Lomax 8 A & E 198 citing Hubb Gee v. Ward 7 F & B 509

(8) Ib Freeman v. Phillips 4 M & S 486

(9) Taylor Ex § 632 Wills Ex 2nd Ed 230—see as to this Field Ex 6th Ed 137

(10) Shedden v. Atty Genl 30 L J P & M 217 Berkeley Peerage case, supra

(11) Shedden v. Atty Genl supra

(12) Taylor Ex § 633

(13) Bejay Bahadur v. Bhupindar, 17 A 465 459 (1895). see s 50, post

declared relevant by the fifth clause is a statement relating to the existence of any relationship between persons living or dead, as to whose relationship the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, such as the statement of deceased relatives, servants and dependants of the family (1) The statement mentioned in the sixth clause is a statement relating to the existence of relationship between deceased persons only. This last clause does not embrace the case of a statement of relationship between a deceased person and a living person (2) It does not deal with the question by whom the statement is to be made nor does it require that it should have been made by a person who had special means of knowledge possibly on the ground that it is improbable that any person would insert in a solemn deed, will etc., any matter the truth of which he did not know or had not satisfactorily ascertained (3) but states that it must be contained in the documents or other material things therein mentioned. It has been recently held that a family pedigree kept by the family chronicler prepared by him from time to time from information supplied by members of the family was admissible both under the second clause as also under this clause as having been kept by a person engaged by the members of the family to keep a record of the family events (4)

Besides the documents and other material things mentioned in the sixth clause family bibles, coffin plates mural tablets hatchments, rings, armorial bearings and the like, amongst Christians and horoscopes among Hindus, are examples of other documents and things on which such statements are usually made (5) It has been held that a horoscope is inadmissible unless its correctness is vouched either by its writer or by a person with special means of knowledge (6) As to statements contained in wills (7) and deeds (8) see the cases noted below. Inscriptions on tombstones mural inscriptions and the like may be proved by any secondary evidence (9) The statement in a

(1) Garurudhwaja Prasad v Soparandhuwaja Pershad 27 I A 238 251 (1900) s c 23 A 37 51 Oriental Life Assurance Co v Narasimha Chari 25 M 183 207 209 in which the statements of the deceased himself his sister and others were tendered or admitted as to the report of a punchayet as evidence of pedigree see Ajabasing v Vanabhai 26 I A 48 (1898) 25 B 1 3 C W N 130

(2) Raminarain Kalia v Monee Bibee 9 C 613 614 (1883)

(3) Field Ev 189 190 ib 6th Ed 139—140

(4) Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalpat sing Kanhai 24 Bom L R 289 (1922)

(5) See generally Taylor Ev §§ 650—657

(6) Krishnamachariyer v Krishna nacher 38 M 166 (1915) Horoscopes have been held inadmissible in two earlier cases Raminarain Kalia v Monee Bibee 9 C, 613 (1883) The chief ground on which the evidence was rejected in this case was that it was not shown that the attendance of the writer was not procurable Satis Chunder v Mohendra Lal 17 C 849 (1893) [quære as to this case assuming the horoscope to have been tendered as stated under cl (6) that clause does not require that the maker of the statement should have had any special means of knowledge and if tendered under cl (5),

Raminarain Kalia v Monee Bibee which this case purported to follow does not seem in point Further upon the question whether the evidence is limited to cases where the question in issue is one of relationship v post and whether the words relates to the existence of relationship cover statement as to the commencement of relationship in point of time v post] A distinction is to be observed between horoscopes tendered under s 32 cl (6) and under s 32 cl (5) as the statements of persons having special means of knowledge and as being an admission under ss 17 18 See as to their use as admissions Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan 17 M 134 (1893) See Rottanbhai v Chabildas 13 B 7 (1888)

(7) Nul Moore v Musunni Zuheer unnessi 8 W R 371 (1867) [where the incidental mention of a child's age in the recital of a will was held to be no proof of the exact age of such child the Report does not show whether the child was dead at the time the evidence was offered] If dead the case is no longer law Field Ev 6th Ed 142] Chamanbhai v Sultan chand 20 B 562 (1895)

(8) Timsa v Daravilla 10 M 362 (1887) [in which it was ruled that a statement as to relationship in a deed held to be invalid was admissible in evidence]

(9) S 65 cl (d) post see definition of document in s. 3 ante

genealogical table filed by a member of a family who is dead, regarding the descendants of another member of the family, before any question arose as to the latter as also a record of family events are relevant under this clause (1) Statements, whether they are tendered under the fifth clause or the sixth clause, must, in order to be relevant, have been made ante litem motam (2), and for the admissibility of statements under either of these clauses it must be shown that the attendance of the person who made the statement is not procurable (3) So where a plaintiff tendered in evidence a boroscope under the sixth clause, but was unable to say who wrote it, and therefore unable to say whether the writer was dead, or could not be found, etc., the document was on this, as on other grounds, held to be inadmissible (4) It will in no way affect the admissibility of this class of evidence that witnesses might have been called to prove the very facts to which it relates (5) A register of baptism while evidence of that fact and of the date of it, furnishes even if it states the date of a person's birth, no proof of the age of that person further than that at the date of such ceremony the person referred to was already born Evidence regarding the date of a man's birth has been held under certain circumstances to be admissible under the fifth clause, but in the case of an entry in the register in question there is nothing to show by whom the statement entered was made much less that the person making the statement had any special means of knowledge (6)

According to English law (7) declarations made by deceased relatives are admissible if made ante litem motam to prove matters of pedigree only They are relevant only in cases in which the pedigree to which they relate is in issue but not to cases in which it is only relevant to the issue (8) Thus where the question was whether A, sued for the price of horses, and pleading infancy, was on a given day an infant or not, the fact that his father stated in an affidavit in a Chancery suit to which the plaintiff was not a party that A was born on a certain day, was held to be irrelevant (9) The terms 'matters of pedigree' or 'genealogical purpose' are confined primarily to issues involving family succession (testate or intestate), relationship and legitimacy, and secondly, to those particular incidents of family history which are immediately connected with and required for the proof of, such issues—eg, the birth, marriage, and death of members of the family, with the respective dates and places of those events, age, celibacy, issue or failure of issue, as well, probably, as occupation, residence, and similar incidents of domestic history necessary to identify individuals (10) The principle upon which such evidence has been admitted has,

The statements are admissible to prove the facts contained therein on any issue

(1) Shyamanand Das v. Rana Kanta 32 C 6 (1904) Mohansing v. Delpat 46 B 753

(2) vide post p 341

(3) Ramnarain Surjan v. Monce Bibee 9 C 613 (1883) Surjan Singh v. Sardar Singh 27 I A 183 (1900) s c 5 C W N 49 2 Bom L R 942

(4) Ib

(5) Taylor Ev § 641

(6) Collier v. Baron 2 N L R 34 as to proof of date of birth after lapse of years see Nauab Shah Ara Begum v. Anabi Begum P C (1906) 11 C W N 130

(7) Taylor Ev §§ 635–657 Roscoe N P Ev 44–48 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 291–295 Steph Dig 31 Best Ev § 498 Powell Ev 9th Ed 349–357 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 211–223

(8) Steph Dig Art 31 Powell Ev 207 when they are not required for some genealogical purpose they will be rejected see next case

(9) Haines v. Guthrie L R 13 Q B D 818 (1881) this case (in which all the authorities on this point are fully considered) is not law in India see note 2 p 338

(10) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 291—citing Taylor Ev §§ 643–646 Steph Dig Art 31 Hubbards Ev of Succession 204 468 648–650 citing Hood v. Lady Beau champ 8 Sim 26 Shields v. Boucher 1 D G & S 40 Rishon v. Nesbitt 2 M & R 554 Lotat Peerage 10 Ap Cas 763 see also Powell Ev 201 Taylor Ev § 642 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 211 it was at one time a moot point in English law whether evidence as to date and place of birth was admissible even in pedigree cases but the weight of opinion was in favour of its admissibility (Taylor Ev § 642) and this view has been adopted as regards the date of birth, been stated to be that the time of one's birth relates to the commencement of one's relationship by blood, and a statement therefore, of one's age, made by a deceased person having special means of knowledge, relates to the existence of such relationship within the meaning of the fifth clause of this section (1)

But under the Act the declarations are admissible on any issue provided they relate to a fact relevant to the case (2) Thus where in a case one of the questions was as to whether the plaintiff deed, the plaintiff in a former suit, verified was held to be admissible under the fifth certain persons were born and their ages (3) "It was contended on the part of the plaintiff, on the authority of the English cases, that, as the question at issue in this case did not relate to the existence of any relationship by blood marriage, or adoption, the section did not apply, and the statements were excluded by the ordinary rules of evidence. I think that on this point the law in India under the Evidence Act is different to the law of England, and that the effect of the section is to make a statement made by such a person relating to the existence of such relationship, admissible to prove the facts contained in the statement on any issue, and that the plaintiff was admissible here to prove the order in which the sons of S were born and their ages, and when admitted, it to my mind satisfactorily proves that the defendant was the son who was born on the 6th of June, 1868" (4) So also a statement under this clause was admitted to prove the date of the plaintiff's birth for the purpose of the decision of a question of Limitation (5) Not only are such declarations admissible in proof of relationship upon any issue, whether of pedigree or not, but they are also admissible in cases other than those of pedigree to prove the commencement of the relationship in point of time or the date of the birth of the person in question (6) It would appear according to English law that hearsay evidence must be confined to such facts as are immediately connected with the question of pedigree, and that incidents which, although inferentially tending to prove are not immediately connected with, the question of pedigree, will be rejected (7)

Persons from whom declarations are receivable

In England such declarations are only admissible when made by deceased relatives by blood or marriage, and further the declarants must be legitimately related (8) But under the Act the statement may be made by any person by the framers of the Act [s. 32 illustrates (1) (m) Bepin Behary v Sreedam Chunder 13 C 42 (1886) Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain 20 C 758 (1893) Oriental Life Assurance Co Ltd v Narasimha Chari 25 M 183 209 210 (1901) the words 'relates to the existence of relationship' being wide enough to cover statements as to the commencement of relationship in point of time and as to the locality when it commenced or existed See Field Ev 191 As to the admissibility of the evidence in cases other than 'pedigree cases' vide post

(1) Oriental Life Assurance Co Ltd v Narasimha Chari 25 M 183, 209 210 (1901) See also Jagatpal Singh v Jagatshar Baksh 25 A 143 152 (1902) in which the question was whether one P S from whom the respondents descended was born before Z S from whom the appellants had descended

(2) Dhan Mull v Ram Chunder 24 C 265 (1890) s. c. 1 C W N, 270 cited in Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain 20

C 758 760 [overruling Bepin Behary v Sreedam Chunder, 13 C, 42 (1886)] followed in Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain 20 C 758 (1893)

(3) Dhan Mull v Ram Chunder, supra.

(4) Id per Petheram C J

(5) Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain supra

(6) Id Dhan Mull v Ram Chunder supra.

(7) Taylor Ev, § 644

(8) Taylor Ev §§ 635-638 Doe v Barton 2 M & R 28, see Doe v Darus 10 Q B 314 As to declarations by a deceased person as to his own illegitimacy see Phipson Ev 5th Ed 292 and cases there cited and Field Ev, 6th Ed 140 141 under the Act such a declaration would be relevant as against strangers s. 47 of the repealed Act II of 1835 rescinded the English rule on this subject and admitted the declarations not only of illegitimate members of the family but also of persons who though not related by blood or marriage were yet intimately provided only that such person had special means of knowledge of the relationship to which the statement relates. Proof of this special means of knowledge is a

as to who were her heirs, and made at a time when no controversy on the subject was in contemplation, and letters written by her, in reply to enquiries by the wasita officer, explaining and confirming such statements, was held to be admissible in evidence in support of the legitimacy of such heirs, and under the circumstances to be conclusive in their favour (5). A statement relating to the existence of any relationship contained in a document signed by several persons some only of whom are dead, is admissible in evidence under the fifth clause of this section (6). In a recent case it was held by the Privy Council that a statement on a point of relationship which was made with special means of knowledge five years ante litem motam in a will executed by a Hindu widow since deceased and was corroborated by other relatives against their interest and was not contradicted by reliable evidence, was conclusive where other evidence conflicted (7). And in another case where a material issue was whether the plaintiffs were sons of a paternal uncle of a deceased lady, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that a plaint in a suit filed by her ante litem motam in which she so described them was admissible (8).

According to English law, it is not necessary that the declarant should have had personal knowledge of the facts stated, it is sufficient if his information purported to have been derived from other relatives, or from general family repute, or even simply from "what he has heard," provided such "hearsay upon hearsay" as it has been called, does not directly appear to have been derived from strangers (9). But if the declarant's information purport to have been derived entirely from persons whose declarations on the subject are admissible (11). 'If this were not so, the main object of relaxing the acquainted with the members and state of the family. The latter portion of this section would have included servants friends and neighbours who are excluded (Johnson v Lawson 2 Bing 86) under English law. The rule laid down by this Act is still more general in its terms than the Act of 1855 as it renders admissible not merely the statements of persons deceased but also of persons whose evidence is not procurable for other reasons. As to a person claiming as illegitimate son establishing his alleged paternity see Gopalasami v Arunachellam 27 M 32 34 35 (1903).

Personal knowledge

(1) S 104 post see Taylor Ev § 640 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 213—214.

(2) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi 12 C 219 222 (1885) 12 I A 183 see also Bejai Baladur v Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A 456 (1895).

(3) Slam Lall v Radha Bibee, 4 C

L R 173 (1879)

(4) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi supra

(5) Baqar Ali v Anjuman Ara 25 A 236 (1903) s c 7 C W N 465

(6) Chandra Nath v Nirmadhab Bhutta chajee 26 C 236 s c 3 C W N 88 (1898)

(7) Kedar Nath v Mathu Mal P C, 40 C 555 (1913)

(8) Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sathar 39 A 426 (1917)

(9) Taylor Ev § 639 Shedden v Attorney General 30 L J P & M 217 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 293 Wills Ev, 2nd Ed 218. See Mohansing United Rao v Dalpatasing Kanvaji 24 Bom L R 289 (1922)

(10) Davies v Loundes 6 M & G, 525

(11) Thus the declarations of a deceased widow respecting a statement which her husband had made to her as to who his ordinary rules of evidence would be frustrated since it seldom happens that the declarations of deceased relatives embrace matters within their own personal knowledge "(1) A similar rule will be followed in cases under the Act provided all the statements come from persons whose declarations on the subject are admissible (that is, persons who are shewn to have had special means of knowledge) the evidence will not be rejected merely on the ground that the declarant had no personal knowledge of the facts stated. But where on a question of relationship the statements of certain witnesses who were supposed to be speaking from information derived from others were sought to be made admissible, but these witnesses did not state the persons from whom they derived that information nor at what period of time they derived it, the evidence was rejected (2) In other words, where the witness is speaking from hearsay he must show that his knowledge comes from a person whose statements are admissible. The statement however, which is relied on, must be shown to be the statement of a person whose statement is admissible under this section. So in the undermentioned case the alleged author of a document R G S had died before the trial but the exhibit in question is merely a genealogical table filed on behalf of G in a claim made by him for certain villages. The document being an exhibit hnding unel held that the docu (G s) relation to the docu personal knowledge and tent of a deceased person which is admissible in evidence. For aught that appears the genealogical table in question might never have been seen or heard of by G, personally, but have been entirely the work of his pleader (3) But where a kursinama was pro by the pen of gomasta establish the same fact in

(1) According to English law in the case of marriage, repute and conduct need not be confined to the family, general reputation among and treatment by, friends and neighbours being receivable, except in certain c as evidence of marriage (5) But th merely on the statements of some as general reputation, and can only be tendered on a question of pedigree, and in England, as the statement of a deceased relation (6) or in India as the state ment of a

The ground

partly the

because situated for knowing, raises a reasonable presumption that the facts concurred cousins were have been received see Taylor Ev § 639

(1) Taylor Ev § 639 and cases there cited

(2) Musli Shafiqunnissa v Shaban Ali 9 C W N 105 (1904) a c 16 A, 581

(3) Jagatpal Singh v Jageshwar Singh 25 A 43 (1902) s c 7 C W N 209

(4) Shahadi Begam v Secretary of State for India P C (1907) 34 C 1059, L R 4 I A 194

(5) Taylor Ev § 578 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 367 107 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 206—209 Field Ev., 6th Ed., 144, as to conduct see note to s 50 post

(6) Stedden v Patrick 30 L J P M, & A 217 231 232. There is no doubt that general reputation of a marriage may be given valcat quantum. A person living in a particular neighbourhood—say in New York—may be called to say that the reputation in New York was that A and B were man and wife but you cannot ask who any particular individual not being a member of the family said on the subject that is getting into a different class of evidence ab per Sir C Cresswell see also Wills Ev 2nd Ed 206—207

(7) S 32 cl (5) ante as to opinion expressed by conduct, see s 50 post in are true (1) While, however, provision has been made by the Act in s. 50 for the reception in evidence of c appears to be none for the admission of t But in a later case it has been held nce of direct proof, consent to a marriage in Burmah may be inferred from the conduct of the parties as established by general reputation (2)

The declarations need not refer to contemporaneous events; thus state- Contemporaneousments as to matters o for such a restriction " ness.
let in, by preventing it whose declaration is to be adduced in evidence "(4)

It has been already observed that in matter of public or general interest Particular declarations as to particular facts are excluded But the same rule does not facts apply in cases of pedigree "In cases of general right which depend upon immemorial usage, living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what passed in their own time, and to supply the deficiency, the law receives the declarations of persons who are dead There, however, the witness is only allowed to speak to what he has heard the dead man say respecting the reputation of the right of way, or of common, or the like A declaration, with regard to a particular missible In matters the relationship of pa
the family are admitted, but here, as the reputation must proceed on particular facts such as marriages, births, and the like, from the necessity of the thing, the hearsay of the family as to these particular facts is not excluded General and the family transactions is thus dropped in conversa-
rue "(5)

As in the case of statements with regard to public and general rights, de- Lis mota clarations as to relationship must have been made before the question in dispute in relation to which they are proved, was raised (6), but they do not cease to be relevant because they were made for the purpose of preventing the question from arising (7) Further, the fifth clause of section 32, does not apply to statements made by interested parties in denial, in the course of litigation, of
It has been held by the Privy Council, record handed down from generation of the family died or was born, but a document drawn up on a particular occasion for a specific purpose by a member of the family) was to be treated as a mere declaration made by the person who made or adopted it It was also held in the same case that to make a statement inadmissible as post litem motam the same thing must be in controversy before and after such statement is made, and that thus pedigree was admissible

(1) Taylor Ev §§ 577 578 Phipson
Ev 5th Ed 362

(2) My Me v My Mishue Ma J C
(1912) 39 I A 57 39 C 392

(3) Monckton v Attorney General 2 R
& Myl 157 Davies v Loandes 6 M &
G 525 Phipson Ev (5th Ed 293) citing
Hubb 659 Taylor Ev § 639

(4) Taylor Ev § 639 quoting Lord
Brougham

(5) Berkeley Peerage Case 4 Camp
415 416 per Sir James Mansfield

(6) S 32 cls (5) and (6) v ante, p 337 In Bahadur Singh v Mohar Singh, 24 A 94 107 (1901) where it was objected that the statements were inadmissible as having been made post litem the Privy Council held that the heirship of the then claimant was not really in dispute at that time and that the construction of the Act contended for would practically exclude any attainable evidence in that case

(7) Steph Dig Art. 31 *Berkeley
Peerage Case* 4 Camp 401—417, and see
Loxat Peerage Case L R 10 Ap Ca.,
797 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 217

(8) Narain Asar v Chandi Din, 9 A, 467 (1886)

In the first place, it is to be observed, with reference to the law prevailing in India that while the fourth clause admits parol evidence of reputation in proof of public or general rights and customs, the present clause does not provide for the admissibility of parol evidence of reputation in the cases to which it applies (1) The Act, therefore (being in this respect in accord with English law), does not admit parol evidence of reputation in proof of private rights and customs. It, however, declares that reputation to be relevant in proof both of public and private rights (in respect of such last mentioned rights departing from the English rule) which consists of statements contained in any deed, will or other document relating to any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence. In this respect it appears to deal with both public and private rights upon the same footing. Further, the present section includes any deed, will or other document, so that the rule as to ancient documents receivable either as evidence of reputation or as acts of ownership is in terms extended and enlarged for under this clause a statement in any relevant document, though not more than thirty years old, and however recent, is admissible (2) In practice however the rule under the Act in this last mentioned respect must remain much the same as that under English law since, in the case of modern documents, direct proof by witnesses will in most cases be procurable, and the conditions under which this form of hearsay testimony is alone admissible will not be found to exist. Moreover, even where such conditions exist, recent documents may often for various causes, be of little weight (3)

EIGHTH CLAUSE

Statements made by a number of persons and expressing feelings or impressions

Statements made by a number of persons and expressing feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question are relevant, and may be proved by the testimony of persons other than those who made them, when such persons are dead, or cannot be found or have become incapable of giving evidence, or when their attendance cannot be procured, without an amount of delay or expense, which under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable (4) Some or all of these conditions will necessarily be found to occur, at any rate in by far the greater number of cases when relevant evidence of this character is tendered. The meaning of this clause has been said to be "that when a number of persons assemble together to give vent to one common statement, which statement ex-
— ? — their feelings or impressions, not of an individual but an aggregate of individuals as the exclamations of a crowd, and the evidence is receivable on account of the difficulty or impossibility of procuring the attendance of all the individuals who composed such crowd or aggregate of persons (6) So to prove that a cartage destroyed before the trial was meant to represent two of the relations of the defendant, exclamations of recognition by spectators in a public

(1) The statement made relevant by cl (7) must be written and the word 'verbal' at the commencement of this section has no application to this clause

(2) Norton Ev. 192 Field Ev 6th Ed 143-144, in Hurronath Mullick v Nittanund Mullick 10 B L R 263 (1872) the document in question was executed only 18 months before suit was brought. As to the admissibility of reports accompanying orders as hearsay evidence of reputed possession see Dinomoni Choudhuran v Brojo Mohini 29 C 198 (1901)

(3) Hurronath Mullick v Nittanund Mullick supra

(4) S 3 cl (8) illust (n) Field Fr. 6th Ed 144

(5) R v Ram Dutt 23 W R Cr 35 38 (18 4) per Jackson J

(6) Norton Ev 193 Field Ev 6th Ed 144 Taylor Ev §1 576 779

in are true (1) While, however, provision has been made by the Act in s 50 for the reception in evidence of conduct as proof of relationship, there appears to be none for the admission of the general reputation above mentioned. But in a later case it has been held by the Privy Council that, in the absence of direct proof consent to a marriage in Burmah may be inferred from the conduct of the parties as established by general reputation (2)

The d ments as for such a let in, by whose dec

It has been already observed that in matter of public or general interest Particular declarations as to particular facts are excluded. But the same rule does not facts apply in cases of pedigree. In cases of general right which depend upon immemorial usage living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what passed in their own time, and to supply the deficiency, the law receives the declarations of persons who are dead. There, however, the witness is only allowed to speak to what he has heard the dead man say respecting the reputation of the right of way or of common or the like. A declaration with regard to a particular fact which would support or negative the right, is inadmissible. In matters of pedigree it being impossible to prove by living witnesses the relationship of past generations the declarations of deceased members of the family are admitted. But here as the reputation must proceed on particular facts such as marriages births and the like, from the necessity of the thing,

As in the case of statements with regard to public and general rights de Lis mota
clarations as to relationship must have been made before the question in dispute in relation to which they are proved was raised (6), but they do not cease to be relevant because they were made for the purpose of preventing the question from arising (7). Further the fifth clause of section 32 does not apply to statements made by interested parties in denial in the course of litigation, of

It has been held by the Privy Council, record handed down from generation
of the family died or was born, but a document drawn up on a particular occasion for a specific purpose by a member of the family) was to be treated as a mere declaration made by the person who made or adopted it. It was also held in the same case that to make a statement inadmissible as post litem motam the same thing must be in controversy before and after such statement is made and that this pedigree was admissible

(1) Taylor Ev §§ 577 578 Phipson
Ev 5th Ed 367

(2) Me v M. Malae Ma J C
(1912) 39 I A 57 39 C 397

(3) Monckton v Attorney General 2 R
& Myl 157 Davies v Loundes 6 M &
G 575 Phipson Ev (5th Ed 293) citing
Hubb 659 Taylor Ev § 639

(4) Taylor Ev § 639 quoting Lord
Brougham

(5) Berkeley Peerage Case 4 Camp
415 416 per Sir James Mansfield

(6) S 37 cls (5) and (6) v a te p 337 In Baladur Singh v Malar Singh
24 A 94 107 (1901) where it was objected that the statements were inadmissible as having been made post litem the Privy Council held that the hearsay of the then claimant was not really in dispute

at that time and that the construction of the Act contended for would practically exclude any attainable evidence in that case

(7) Steph Dig Art 31 Berkeley
Peerage Case 4 Camp 401-417 and see
Lovat Peerage Case L R 10 Ap Ca.
797 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 217

(8) Aaram Kuar v Claudi Din 9 A., 467 (1886)

as a declaration made and adopted by a deceased member of the family, and touching the family reputation, on the subject of its descent, and not shown to be post litter — it is to be a family document, it from his it, the document section does not make it necessary to show by whom such statements were made(2)

SEVENTH CLAUSE

Statements a documents relating to transaction by which any right or custom was created claimed and the like

Statements contained in any deed will, or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in cl (a) of the thirteenth section, that is, any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed modified, recognized, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence may be proved under this clause. The thirteenth section which should be read together with the present clause, relates to both public and private rights and customs(3). The present clause, therefore, relates to private, as well as public rights and customs(4). According to English law, declarations, written or with verbal and written, and, the latter with written, statements relating to public or general rights and customs in general accordance with the English law upon the same subject so far as the latter extends. The first mentioned clause admits the verbal or written statement giving the opinion of some particular persons to the existence of such rights. But hearsay as to matters of general interest is not confined to such declarations. It may be proved under this clause by recitals and descriptions of the public or general right, in wills, deeds, leases, maps, surveys, assessments, and the like(6) however recent such documents may be(7). In a suit by a zemindar to recover certain forest tracts from Government, the plaintiff relied on certain accounts called ayukul accounts as furnishing proof of the inclusion of the said tracts within the limits of his zamindari. Held, that inasmuch as they were from time to time prepared for administrative purposes by village officers, and were produced from proper custody and otherwise sufficiently proved to be genuine they were admissible as evidence of reputation(8).

(1) Kalka Prasad v Mathura Prasad P C (1908) 30 A, 510

(2) Jekangir v Sheoray Singh 37 A 600 (1915)

(3) v ante, s 13

(4) See Hurrenath Mullick v Nittanund Mullick 10 B L R 263 (1872) in which the custom was a family custom.

(5) v ante cl (4) and post

(6) S 32 cl (7) Norton Ev, 190 see Phipson Ev 5th Ed 279—290, Roscoe N P Ev 48—51, Powell Ev, 9th Ed 237—249 Best Ev § 497, Steph Dig Ari 30 Taylor Ev §§ 607—634 Brett v Beales M & M, 416 Curzon v Lomax 5 Esp, 60 Plaxton v Dare 10 B & C 17, Doe v Hittcomb 4 H L C 425, Coombs v Gaether M & M 398 Roscoe N P Ev 214, Private Acts—Curzon v Lomax supra Carnarvon v Lullebois 13 M & W 313 Beaufort v Smith 4 Ex, 450, Roscoe N P Ev, 188, Manor books and prescutions

—Phipson Ev 5th Ed 282—Private Maps—R v Milton 1 C & F, 58 Harmond v Bradstreet, 10 Ex 390 Piper v Fulcher 28 L J Q B 12 Daniel v Hulkin 7 Ex 429 Ancient Public Surveys—Freeman v Reed 4 B & S 174 Smith v Bracklow L R 9 Eq 241 Daniel v Walkin supra Modern public surveys—Bidder v Bridges, 34 W R (Eng) 514 54 L T 529 affirmed W N 1886 p 148 Ancient public assessments—Plaxton v Dare supra Phipson Ev 5th Ed 282 Cooke v Banks 2 C & P 478 Ely v Caldecott, 7 Eng 433

(7) Norton Ev 192, the words of the clause are in any deed will etc but v fast as to judgments orders and decrees which are admissible in matters of public or general interest only see s 42 post

(8) Sitasubramanya v Secretary of State 9 M, 235 (1884)

But further, this section deals with rights and customs generally, private expect a higher species of evidence. It is, therefore, a rule that ancient documents (i.e., documents more than 30 years old) purporting to be a part of the transactions to which they relate, and not a mere narrative of them, are receivable in evidence that those transactions actually occurred, provided they be produced from proper custody (1)

But to prove or disprove a right or custom it is not enough to adduce evidence of a transaction in which or in the course of which the right or custom was asserted or denied, though the transaction will be relevant under section 13 cl (a) if it be one by which the right or custom was asserted or denied. When the question was whether a tenant held lands under the naldi or bhaoli systems of rent, and the Court based its decision on a statement contained in a hebanama executed by the deceased grandfather of the tenant, it was held that the hebanama was not admissible under this clause read with section 13, cl (a) (2)

Evidence of ancient possession

The law upon the subject has been thus summarised —“Ancient documents by which any right of property purports to have been exercised (e.g., leases, licenses, and grants) are admissible, even in favour of the grantor or his successors, in proof of ancient possession. The grounds of admission are two fold,—necessity, ancient possession being incapable of direct proof by witnesses, and the fact that such documents are themselves acts of ownership, real transactions between man and man only intelligible upon the footing of title, or at least of a bona fide belief in title since in the ordinary course of things men do not execute such documents without acting upon them (3) (a) The documents should purport to constitute the transactions which they effect, mere prior directions to do the acts or subsequent narratives of them being inadmissible (4) Thus, though expired leases (or even counterparts) (5) may be tendered to show ancient possession of the property demised or reserved from the demise, recitals in such lease of other documents or facts will be rejected except as admissions (6) (b) Deeds of this nature must to ensure genuineness be like other ancient documents, produced from proper custody, and should to be of any weight, be corroborated by proof within living memory of payments made or enjoyment had in pursuance of them. The absence of evidence of modern enjoyment, however goes merely to weight and not to admissibility (c) Ancient documents admissible as acts of ownership may be tendered on questions either of public or private right and must be distinguished from those ancient documents which are received as evidence of reputation which latter may consist of bare assertions or recitals of the right but are confined to questions of public and general interest

Modern possession being susceptible of proof by witnesses cannot be established by modern leases etc even though supported by evidence of payments made thereunder (7)

(1) Powell Ev 9th Ed 285—288
(2) Banshi Singh v Mir Amur Ali (1907) 11 C W N 703

(3) Malcolison v O'Dea 10 H L C 593
Bristow v Cormican 3 Ap Cas 641 see also The Lord Advocate v Lord Loat 5 App 273 cited ante See also s 13 ante commentary to same passim and as to proof of ancient documents s 90 post

(4) Id

(5) Taylor Ev § 427

(6) Bristow v Cormican supra 662

(7) Bristow v Cormican supra 668 per Lord Blackburn
Clarkson v Woodhouse 3 Doug 189 the passage in quotation marks is from Phson Ev 3rd Ed. 91 ab 5th Ed 97 citing Taylor Ev, §§ 658—667 Roscoe N P Ev, 53 54, Powell Ev 9th Ed 283—283 Wharton Ev §§ 194—199

as a declaration made and adopted by a deceased member of the family, and touching the family reputation, on the subject of its descent, and not shown to be post litem motam (1) In a recent case

section does not make it necessary to show by whom such statements were made (2)

SEVENTH CLAUSE

Statements in documents relating to transaction by which any right or custom was created claimed and the like

Statements contained in any deed will, or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in cl (a) of the thirteenth section that is, any transaction by which any right or custom was created claimed modified, recognized, asserted or demed, or which was inconsistent with its existence may be proved under this clause The thirteenth section which should be read together with the present clause, relates to both public and private rights and customs (3) The present clause therefore, relates to private as well as public rights and customs (4) According to English law, declarations, written or

with verbal and written, and, the latter with written statements relating to public or general rights and customs in general accordance with the English law upon the same subject so far as the latter extends The first mentioned clause admits the verbal or written statement giving the opinion of some particular persons to the existence of such rights But hearsay as to matters of general interest is not confined to such declarations It may be proved under this clause by recitals and descriptions of the public or general right, in wills, deeds, leases, maps surveys assessments and the like (6) However recent such documents may be (7) In a suit by a zemindar to recover certain forest tracts from Government, the plaintiff relied on certain accounts called a jukut accounts as furnishing proof of the inclusion of the said tracts within the limits of his zemindary Held, that inasmuch as they were from time to time prepared for administrative purposes by village officers and were produced from proper custody and otherwise sufficiently proved to be genuine they were admissible as evidence of reputation (8)

(1) Kalka Prasad v Mailura Prasad P C (1908) 30 A 510

(2) Jelangir v Sheoray Singh 37 A 600 (1915)

(3) ante s 13

(4) See Hurronath Mull ch v Nattanand Mullick 10 B L R 263 (1872) in which the custom was a family custom.

(5) ante cl (4) and post

(6) S 32 cl (7) Norton Ev 190 see Phipson Ev 5th Ed 279—290 Roscoe N P Ev 48—51 Powell Ev 4th Ed 237—249 Best Ev § 497 Steph. Dig Art 30 Taylor Ev § 607—634 Brett v Beales M & M 416 Curzon v Lomax 5 Esp 60 Plaxton v Dare 10 B & C 17 Doe v Hittcomb 4 H L C 425 Coombs v Goether M & M 398 Roscoe N P Ev 214 Private Acts—Curzon v Lomax supra Carnarcon v Lillibois 13 M & W 313, Beaumont v Smith 4 Ex. 450 Roscoe N P Ev., 188, Manor books and presentments

—Phipson Ev 5th Ed 287—Private Maps—R v Milton 1 C & K. 58 Hammond v Bradstreet 10 Ex 390 Pipe v Fulcher 28 L J Q B 12 Daniel v Wilkin 7 Ex 429 Ancient Public Surveys—Freeman v Reed 4 B & S 174 Smith v Brownlow L R 9 Eq 241 Daniel v Wilkin supra Modern public surveys—Bidder v Bridges 34 W R (Eng) 514 54 L T 529 affirmed W N 1886 p 148 Ancient public assessments—Plaxton v Dare supra Phipson Ev 5th Ed 282 Cooke v Banks 2 C & P 478 Ell v Caldecott 7 Bng 433

(7) Norton Ev 192 the words of the clause are in any deed will etc in post as to judgments orders and decrees which are admissible in matters of public or general interest only see s 47 post

(8) Sitasubramanya v Secretary of State 9 M 285 (1894)

But further, this section deals with rights and customs generally, private expect a higher species of evidence. It is, therefore, a rule that ancient documents (i.e., documents more than 30 years old) purporting to be a part of the transactions to which they relate, and not a mere narrative of them, are receivable in evidence that those transactions actually occurred, provided they be produced from proper custody (1)

But to prove or disprove a right or custom it is not enough to adduce evidence of a transaction in which or in the course of which the right or custom was asserted or denied, though the transaction will be relevant under section 13 cl (a) if it be one by which the right or custom was asserted or denied. When the question was whether a tenant held lands under the naldi or blaoi systems of rent, and the Court based its decision on a statement contained in a hebanama executed by the deceased grandfather of the tenant, it was held that the hebanama was not admissible under this clause read with section 13, cl (a) (2)

The law upon the subject has been thus summarised—"Ancient documents by which any right of property purports to have been exercised (e.g., leases, licenses, and grants) are admissible, even in favour of the grantor or his successors, in proof of ancient possession. The grounds of admission are two fold,—necessity, ancient possession being incapable of direct proof by witnesses, and the fact that such documents are themselves acts of ownership, real transactions between man and man, only intelligible upon the footing of title, or at least of a bona fide belief in title, since in the ordinary course of things men do not execute such documents without acting upon them (3) (a) The documents should purport to constitute the transactions which they effect, mere prior directions to do the acts, or subsequent narratives of them, being inadmissible (4) Thus, though expired leases (or even counterparts) (5) may be tendered to show ancient possession of the property demised, or reserved from the demise, recitals in such lease of other documents or facts will be rejected except as admissions (6) (b) Deeds of this nature must, to ensure genuineness, be, like other ancient documents, produced from proper custody, and should, to be of any weight, be corroborated by proof within living memory of payments made, or enjoyment had, in pursuance of them. The absence of evidence of modern enjoyment, however, goes merely to weight and not to admissibility (c) Ancient documents, admissible as acts of ownership, may be tendered on questions either of public or private right, and must be distinguished from those ancient documents which are received as evidence of reputation, which latter may consist of bare assertions or recitals, of the right, but are confined to questions of public and general interest

"Modern possession being susceptible of proof by witnesses cannot be established by modern leases, etc., even though supported by evidence of payments made thereunder" (7)

(1) Powell Ev 9th Ed 285—288
(2) Banshi Singh v Mir Amur Ali (1907) 11 C W N 703

(3) Malcolmson v O'Dea 10 H L C 593
Bristow v Cormican 3 Ap Cas 641 see also The Lord Advocate v Lord Lovat 5 App 273 cited ante See also s 13 ante commentary to same passim and as to proof of ancient documents s 90 post

(4) Id

(5) Taylor Ev § 42"

(6) Bristow v Cormican supra 662

(7) Bristow v Cormican supra 666 per Lord Blackburn Clark v H. H. House 3 Doug 189 the said case is a decision marks is from Phillips v. F. and Fd. 91 1b 5th Ed 6 Taylor Ev. § 658—667 Roscoe v P Ev. 53 54. Powell Ev 9th Ed 194—199

Evidence of ancient possession

In the first place, it is to be observed, with reference to the law prevailing in India that while the fourth clause admits parol evidence of reputation in proof of public or general rights and customs, the present clause does not provide for the admissibility of parol evidence of reputation in the cases to which it applies (1) The Act, therefore (being in this respect in accord with English law), does not admit parol evidence of reputation in proof of private rights and customs. It, however, declares that reputation to be relevant in proof both of public and private rights (in respect of such last mentioned rights departing from the English rule) which consists of statements contained in any deed, will or other document relating to any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence. In this respect it appears to deal with both public and private rights upon the same footing. Further, the present section includes any deed, will or other document so that the rule as to ancient documents receivable either as evidence of reputation or as acts of ownership is in terms extended and enlarged for under this clause a statement in any relevant document, though not more than thirty years old and however recent is admissible (2) In practice however the rule under the Act in this last mentioned respect must remain much the same as that under English law since in the case of modern documents, direct proof by witnesses will in most cases be procurable and the conditions under which this form of hearsay testimony is alone admissible will not be found to exist. Moreover even where such conditions exist, recent documents may often for various causes, be of little weight (3)

FIFTH CLAUSE

Statements made by a number of persons and expressing feelings or impressions

Statements made by a number of persons and expressing feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question are relevant, and may be proved by the testimony of persons other than those who made them when such persons are dead or cannot be found, or have become incapable of giving evidence, or when their attendance cannot be procured, without an amount of delay or expense which under the circumstances of the case, appears to the

“that when a number of persons assemble together to give vent to one common statement, which statement expresses the feelings or impressions made in their

be repeated by the witnesses feelings and opinions is dealt as to statements expressing feelings or impressions, not of an individual but an aggregate of individuals as the exclamations of a crowd, and the evidence is receivable on account of the difficulty or impossibility of procuring the attendance of all the individuals who composed such crowd or aggregate of persons (6) So to prove that a carture destroyed before the trial was meant to represent two of the relations of the defendant, exclamations of recognition by spectators in a public

(1) The statement made relevant by cl (7) must be written and the word 'verbal' at the commencement of this section has no application to this clause

(2) Norton Ev 192 Field Ex 6th Ed 143-144 in Hurronath Mullick v Naitanund Mullick 10 B L R 263 (1872) the document in question was executed only 18 months before suit was brought As to the admissibility of reports accompanying orders as hearsay evidence of reputed possess on see D, on an Choudh v Raj v Brajo Moh 29 C 198 (1901)

(3) Hurronath Mullick v Naitanund Mullick supra

(4) S 3 cl (8) illust (n) Field Fr, 6th Ed 144

(5) R v Ram Dutt 23 W R Cr J 38 (18 4) per Jackson J

(6) Norton Fr 193 Field Fr 6th Ed 144 Taylor Ev II 576 79

picture gallery,

(1) And to prove had necessarily publicly jeered at in consequence of the libel was held to be admissible (2) And it was held that, on a prosecution for conspiracy to assemble for the purpose of inspiring terror in the public, the witness had to be called to prove that several persons, who had complained to him that they were alarmed at these meetings and had requested him to send for military assistance (3) But the section has no application to the case of a Police officer, who goes round and collects a great number of statements from persons in different places, nor can he be permitted to give the result of these statements as evidence (4)

33 Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states when the witness is dead, or cannot be found or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable. Provided—

Relevancy of certain evidence for proving in subsequent proceeding the truth of facts therein stated that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest, that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross examine, that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding

Explanation—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section.

Principle—The general rule is that the best evidence must be given. No evidence will be received which is merely substitutionary in its nature so long as the original evidence is attainable. Thus depositions are in general admissible only after proof that the parties who made them cannot themselves be produced (5). The present section states the circumstances under which secondary evidence of oral testimony may be given (6). Under these circumstances, the production of primary evidence is either wholly (as if the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable or is kept away) or partially (as in the case of delay or expense), out of the party's power. In the last mentioned case there is the further ground of convenience. But the use of such secondary evidence is limited by certain provisos based on the following principles. The first is

(1) Du Bost v Beresford 2 Camp 511 see Norton Ev 192 193 Taylor Ev § 579

(2) Cook v Ward 4 M & P 99 Phipson Ev 3rd Ed 319

(3) R v Vincent 9 C & P 275 Redford v Birley 3 Stark R 88

(4) R v Ram Dutt 13 W R Cr 35 (1874)

(5) Taylor Ev § 391 As to English and Indian Law see Lanka Lakshmanna v Lanka Varathanam 15 M L J 657

(6) cf Taylor E § 464

enacted on the grounds of reciprocity, because the right to use evidence, other than admissions, being co-extensive with the liability to be bound thereby, the adversary in the second suit has no power to offer evidence in his own favour which, had it been tendered against him, would have been clearly inadmissible(1), the second because it is certainly the right of every litigant, unless he whose test the party as evidence

be so used (2) The principle involved in the third proviso in requiring identity of the matter in issue is to secure that in the former proceeding the parties were not without the opportunity upon which their evidence admission of such evidence b

the parties and the issues being the same, and full opportunity of cross examination having been allowed, the second trial is virtually a continuation of the first (4) Where the conditions mentioned do not exist then the evidence is not relevant (5)

s 3 ("Evidence")

s 3 ("Court")

s 3 ("Relevant")

s 57, cl 7 (Judicial notice of public officers) ss 74, 76 77, 79 (Public documents certified copies)

s 80 (Presumptions as to record of evidence) s 91 Except 1 (Appointment of public officer) s 104 (Burden of proof)

ss 107, 108 (Burden of proof, death) s 168 (Matters which may be proved in connection with statements under this section)

Steph Dig., Art 32, and see Ch XXII, Roscoe, N P Ev., 201—202, Best, Ev., §496 Powell, Ev., 9th Ed 88, 89, 326 337, Taylor Ev., §§404—478, and Ch V, passim 546—549, Starkie, Ev., 408, et seq., Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed 416—421, Norton, Ev., 103—193, Walls Ev., 2nd Ed, 248—263, Act X of 1873, ss 5, 13 (Indian Oaths), Cr Pr Code, ss 353—355 503, 509 512, 203, 204, Civ Pr Code, O XXIII, 2nd Ed, pp 842—849, Cr Pr Code, s 512 (absconding accused), s 293 (evidence taken before Committing Magistrate) Woodroffe and Amerc Ali a Civ Pr Code, O XXVI, rr 1—8, 2nd Ed, pp 1088—1092, Cr Pr Code (Evidence on Commission) See sections, as also Acts and Statutes cited, post

COMMENTARY.

Depositions in former trials

The conditions on which the evidence is receivable are analogous to those relating to judgments, and whenever a decree in one case would be evidence of the facts decided when tendered in another, then the testimony of a witness in the former trial, who was liable to cross examination but is incapable of being called, is receivable. Depositions of witnesses in a former suit are not admissible in evidence when those witnesses are living and their oral evidence is procurable (6) "This section gives the Court new powers which require to be

(1) Taylor Ev. § 469, Doe v. Derby 1 A & E 783 786, Norton Ev. 196 Laurence v. French, Drew, 472, Morgan v. Nichol L. R. C P, 117

(2) Gorachand Sircar v. Ram Narain 9 W. R. 587 (1868) see also Gregory v. Dooley Chand 14 W. R. 17 (1870) post

(3) R. v. Rami Reddi 3 M. 45 (1881) at p. 52 Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit P. C. 39 B. 441 (1915), 42 1 A 135 et seq. 19 C W N 729

(4) Whart., s 177, cited in Phipson.

Ev. 5th Ed 416

(5) Ponnusami Pillai v. Singaram Pillai 41 M. 731 s. c. 34 M. L. J. 526

(6) Hurish Chunder v. Tara Chand 2 B. L. R. App. 4 (1868) Taylor Ev. § 464 Bhoobun Moyce v. Umbica Churn 23 W. R. 343 (1874) See generally as to conditions of section Chakauri Singh v. Suraj Kwar 2 All. L. J. 91 (1904) in which the conditions of the section not being fulfilled the deposition was rejected.

exercised with great caution. There is no doubt that it is necessary (just as much as ever it was) to produce every witness at the trial, unless it is proved to be either actually impossible to produce him, or to be so difficult to do so that it is, under the circumstances, unreasonable to insist on his production" (1). The grounds of admissibility in the present section depend not, as in the case of the previous section, on the character of the statement and the subject to which it refers, but on the circumstances under which it was made and these circumstances (which must be shown to exist, in order to the admissibility of the evidence) are —

aut Spe
to 1

or solemn affirmation (8). The evidence of a witness given in a proceeding before a Judge or Magistrate who had no jurisdiction and which was thus pronounced to be coram non judice, cannot therefore be used under this section on a re trial before a competent Court (9). Where a plaintiff fails to appear the Court has no jurisdiction to hear the defendant's evidence before dismissing the suit for want of prosecution and evidence so based cannot be used under this section (10). (b) That the witness is dead, or that the other grounds mentioned by the section exist thus inconvenience to witnesses is no ground (11) (v post) these grounds are (with the exception of the witness being kept away) the same as those enumerated in section 32, ante. (c) That the conditions required by the provisos have been fulfilled (v post).

The burden of proving these facts lies on the person who tenders evidence under this section (12).

It is doubtful whether evidence taken on commission can be used by either party till it has been tendered (1). But in a later decision of the C to the practice of the Mofussil should first be tendered (15).

The evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving the truth of the facts which it states either in an entirely new judicial proceeding, or in a subsequent stage of the same proceeding.

The Court has no discretion as to admitting a deposition when the witness (i) is dead, or (ii) cannot be found, or (iii) is incapable, or (iv) is kept out of the way, the deposition of such witnesses is declared to be relevant and must

(1) R v Mowjan 20 W R Cr 69 (1873) per Macpherson J concurred in by White J in R v Pjari Lal 4 C L R 511 (1879) and see R v Muln 2 A 648 (1880).

(2) This can be generally proved by the production of the Original Record & ss 80 57 cl (7) 91 Exception (1) post or a certified copy see ss 74 76 77 79 post Steph Introd 166.

(3) See R v Dassaji Gula 3 B 334 (1878) [British Consul at Zanzibar].

(4) As to evidence taken on commission & Woodroffe's Civ Pro Code O XVI 2nd Ed pp 1088—1092.

(5) R v Rigg 4 F & F 1030 and see Acts IV of 1871 V of 1889 and ss 174—176 Cr Pro Code.

(6) Jeheto Sheikh v Janbanessa Bibi 8 C W N 605 (1913).

(7) And see Civ Pr Code O XVI 2nd

Ed pp 850—851.

(8) Act X of 1873 s 5 but see s 13 ib.

(9) R v Rams Reddi 3 M 48 (1881).

(10) Kesri Chand v National Jute Mills 40 C 119 (1913) distinguishing ex parte Jacobson 22 Ch D 312 (1887).

(11) R v Burke 6 A 224 (1884) as to s 283 Cr Pr Code v post.

(12) S 140 post.

(13) Woodroffe and Ameer Ali Civil Procedure Code 2nd Ed p 109.

(14) Nistaran Dass v Nundo Lall (1899) 3 C W N 239 D arka Nath

v Ganga Dayal (1872) 8 B L R App 102 Kusum Kumari v Satya Ranjan

(1903) 30 C 999 Hemanta Kumari Bhuku Behari Sikdar (1905) 9 C W N 794.

(15) Dhanu Rai Mahto v Murli Mahto (1909) 36 C 567.

therefore be admitted. The Court has such a discretion in the case of the circumstances mentioned at the close of the section (1). When the evidence of an absent witness is admitted under this section, the grounds for its admission should be stated fully and clearly, to enable the High Court to judge of the propriety of its admission (2). Assuming that there are reasons why the Court thinks fit to dispense with the personal attendance of a witness, and circumstances are disclosed showing that his presence could not be obtained without an unreasonable amount of expense and delay, the evidence to supply such reasons and to prove such circumstances should be formally and regularly taken and recorded (3). It has been held in a recent case in the Madras High Court that unless this Court has satisfied itself that there are such reasons, consent or want of objection on the part of the accused will not (in spite of section 54 of this Act) justify the Court in admitting the evidence of an absent witness under this section (4). And it has also been recently held by the Privy Council that in the absence of proof of such circumstances the admission in bulk in a Civil suit of the deposition recorded in a Criminal trial was a serious irregularity (5).

When a witness not — on the —
the
appl
section 431, Criminal Procedure Code in using evidence taken in a previous criminal trial in suppression of evidence given in the presence of the accused (7).

The evidence given in the previous proceeding must have been recorded in the manner prescribed by law (8). Subject to the other provisions of this Act oral evidence is as receivable under this section as when it has been reduced to a formal deposition (9). When the law requires that the entire statements (10) made by witnesses or parties called as witnesses should be reduced into writing no evidence can be given in proof of such statements except the written depositions made in accordance with that law or secondary evidence in cases in which such evidence is admissible (11). And though the case has not been specially provided for (except in the case mentioned in section 533 Criminal Procedure Code) (12), and it does not appear to have been so actually decided it is submitted that statements required by law to be recorded, but which are informally recorded are not admissible under this section. But it has been recently held in the Madras High Court that where a deposition though irregularly taken had been signed by the witness and admitted by him to be correct, it could be used in evidence as against him, though it was open to him to depose in a judicial proceeding has been deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence on such deposition

(1) In the matter of Parsi Lal 4 C L P 500 (18 9)

(2) R v Moijan 20 W R Cr 69 (18*3)

(3) R v Mulu 2 A 648 (1880)

(4) Annan Mathurajan (in re) 39 M 449 (1916) see R v Berrant 1 P C App 570 (1867) R v Dholanath Sen 2 C 23 (1877) Rangasua n v R 18 M L J 330 (1903)

(5) Bal Gangadhar Telak v Shrinivas 101 P C 39 B 441 (1915) 42 I A 13 19 C W 729

(6) R v Moijan 20 W R Cr 69 (18*) In the matter of Parsi Lal 4 C L R 504 (18*9) at pp 505 506 509 R v Burke 6 A 274 (1854)

(7) R v Prossnoodundra 22 W R Cr 36 (18*4)

(8) See Cr Pr Code ss 353—365 503 509 512 263 264 Civ Pr Code O XVIII r 4—17 2nd Ed pp 843—849

(9) Norton Ev 194

(10) Civ Pr Code O XVI r 21 2nd Ed p 833 O XVIII r 5 2nd Ed p 844 Cr Pr Code ss 356 360 367 364 503

(11) s 91 post and note to same

(12) See Noshah M stri v R 5 C 94 (1850) and notes to ss 79 ante and 91 post and Field 1 v 6th Ed 263

(13) Flagra v R (1910) 34 M 141 dissenting from Ka atch nathan Chetty v R (1905) 28 M 308

and under section 91 (post), no other evidence of such deposition was admissible (1) The usual presumptions, however, in favour of the proceedings and depositions having been regular will be made unless the contrary be shown (2) But where the law either does not require the statements of witnesses to be reduced to writing (3), or merely requires the substance of the evidence of witnesses (4), or of witnesses and parties called as witnesses (5), to be recorded, it seems also in the second (though al evidence of such statements as under this section (6) What a witness has orally testified may be proved either by any person who will swear from his own memory, or by notes taken at the time by any person who will swear to their accuracy, or possibly, from the necessity of the case by the Judge's notes How far it may be necessary to prove the precise words does not clearly appear Perhaps on occasions when nothing of importance turns on the precise expression used, it will be considered sufficient if the witness can speak with certainty to the substance of what was sworn on the former trial (7) When a note of the evidence has been made by a reporter or shorthand writer, he could, of course, use the note to refresh his memory, and from such a source a shorthand writer might be able to swear to the very words (8) Under English law a stricter rule is applied in Criminal than in Civil proceedings (9) But this section which is generally more extensive than the English law on the same subject (10), applies alike to Civil and Criminal proceedings

The distinction should be carefully preserved between the use of previous statements as evidence in chief or substantive evidence under this section and the use of previous statements (whether on oath or not and whether in a judicial proceeding or not) to discredit or corroborate a witness only and as admissions when the witness in a former, is party to a subsequent suit (11) Depositions may also be used as dying declarations under the preceding section or to refresh the memory of witnesses under section 159 if the conditions set forth in that section exist Depositions, though informally taken are receivable, like any

Use of previous statements

When in a judicial proceeding it appears that depositions of deceased witnesses may, under the preceding section be admissible even against strangers as for instance, if they relate to a custom prescription or pedigree where reputation would be evidence, for, as the unsworn declaration of persons deceased would be here received their declarations on oath are a fortiori

(1) R v Mayadeb Gossa 11 6 C 762 (1881) and see cases cited in notes to ss 80 91 Roscoe Cr Ev 63 66 Taylor Ev 1756 post See notes to s 91 post
(2) v s 114 illust (e) post
(3) S 263 Cr Pr Code
(4) Ss 264 355 ib (Cr Pr Code)
(5) Civ Pr Code O XVI r 21 2nd Ed p 835 O XVIII r 13 2nd Ed p 84
(6) See notes to s 91 post
(7) Taylor Ev §§ 546 547 and v Myslapore Krist nasa n v R (1909) 32 M 384
(8) Norton Ev 194 195
(9) Taylor Ev § 479a for rule in civil case see R S C 1883 O XXXVII r

27 and as to notice required in Chancery see re Channell (1877) 8 Ch D 49 and for use of deposition when inquiry was recommended before a second Magistrate owing to the illness of the first see Ex parte Botto 1 (1909) 2 K B 14

(10) See Taylor Ev § 464 et seq Roscoe N P Ev 183—189 Powell Ev 9th Ed 326—337 Steph Dig Arts 125 140—142 Roscoe Cr Ev 61 et seq Norton Ev 195 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 416—421 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 248—263

(11) See ss 21 ante and 145 152 157 post Roscoe Cr Ev 61 62 —Soojan Bibi v Ishmun Ali 14 B L R App 3 post

(12) Taylor Ev § 1754

admissible (1) When depositions are tendered in evidence as secondary proof of oral testimony they are of course open to all the objections which might have been raised had the witness himself been personally present at the trial. Leading and other illegal questions are therefore constantly suppressed together with the answers to them and thus too whether the testimony has been taken via voce or by written interrogatories (2) But a party cannot repudiate an answer which has been given to an illegal question put on his own side (3) And if secondary evidence of documents is improperly given on commission and is accepted without objection made it will be too late for the party against whom the evidence is given to take subsequently the objection which he might have urged at the time (1)

Contradiction
Corroboration

As to what matters may be proved in connection with statements under this section by way of contradiction corroboration or otherwise see section 158 post (5)

Death

Some proof of death must be offered and proper enquiries be shown to have been made (6) In proof of this fact reference should be made to the provisions of sections 107 108 post As to the discretion of the Court and proceedings coram iudice & ante (7)

Cannot be found

It must be shown that reasonable exertion has been made to find the witness (8) A deposition was rejected because there was nothing on the record to show that by ordinary care and the use of ordinary means the witness could not have been produced (9) When a summons was properly taken out to be served on one JA at the Cutcherry house in which he lived but the peon in his return stated that as he was unable to find JA and serve him personally he hung up the summons on the Cutcherry house and there was evidence to show that JA suddenly disappeared from the Cutcherry house and it was further shown that enquiry was made in his native village whether he had returned there but the result of the enquiry was that nothing had been heard of him and it was therefore impossible to say where JA was or to serve him with a summons it was held that JA's deposition was properly admitted (10) How far answers to enquiries respecting the witness are admissible to prove that he cannot be found is not very clearly defined by the decisions That such answers will be rejected as hearsay if tendered in proof of the fact that the witness is abroad is beyond all doubt (11) but where the question is simply whether a diligent and unsuccessful search has been made for the witness it would seem both on principle and authority that the answers should be received as forming a prominent part of the very point to be ascertained (12) In order to show that enquiries have been duly made at the house of the witness his declarations as to where he lived cannot be received (13) neither will his statement in the deposition itself that he is about to go abroad render it unnecessary to prove that he has put his purpose into execution (14) Where a warrant is not

- (1) Taylor Ev § 1754
- (2) Taylor Ev 548 Hutcliffson v Barnard 2 M & Rob 1 Norton Ev 198 R v Ramchandra Goind 19 B 49 760 *61 (1895)
- (3) Small v Narve 13 Q B 840
- (4) Robinson v Davies 1879 5 Q B D 76 Taylor § 548
- (5) See Foolksbury Dasse v Vobn Clunder 23 C 441 (1895)
- (6) Benson v Ol 2 S 970
- (7) In the matter of Fyars Lall R v Pam Redd supra Taylor Ev 4
- (8) R v Luckey Varn 24 W R Cr 19 185 R v Mulu 2 A 646 (1880) Vooha Mistr v R 5 C 958 (1820)

- Ran Redd* (n re) 3 M 48 (1881) R v Lukhun Santlal 21 W R 56 (1874)
- (9) R v Mojan 29 W R Cr 69 (1873)
- (10) R v Rocha Mohato 7 C 42 (1881)
- (11) Taylor Ev § 45 Robinson v Marks 2 M & Rob 375 Doe v Powell 7 C & P 617
- (12) Ib Hsatt v Bateman 7 C & P 586 Burt v Walker 4 B & A 697 Aust v Ru sey 2 C & Lr 36 R v Rocha Mohato supra
- (13) Doe v Powell 7 C & P. 61
- (14) Proctor v Lanson 7 C & P. 631

produced and there is no proof of an endeavour to serve it, a statement by the Police that one has been issued is not sufficient proof that a person cannot be found (1) Neither is a statement to that effect by a Public Prosecutor (2) Evidence purporting to have been recorded under section 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be used unless there is proof that the Court before recording it had received satisfactory evidence that the person had absconded and that there was no immediate prospect of arresting him (3) As to the Court's discretion, v supra

The words "incapable of giving evidence," it has been held, denote an incapacity of a permanent, and not of a temporary kind, and where a witness is proved to be incapable of giving evidence, the Court has no discretion as to admitting his deposition. But where the absence of a witness is casual or due to a temporary cause the Court has such a discretion "if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense, which under the circumstances the Court considers unreasonable" (4) In a subsequent case (5), however the Court was of opinion that the incapacity to give evidence contemplated by this section is not necessarily a permanent incapacity (6) To bring a case within the section, in order to admit the deposition of a witness alleged to be unable to attend by reason of illness, it is not sufficient that such witness should be stated to be ill and confined to the house but precise evidence should be required by the Court as to the nature of the illness and the incapacity to attend (7) If the witness he proved at the trial to be insane, his deposition will be admissible (8) If from the nature of the illness or other infirmity no reasonable hope remains that the witness will be able to appear in Court on any future occasion, his deposition is certainly admissible (9) Of course a doctor's certificate, however authentic in itself, is no legal evidence of the state of the witness. His condition must be proved on oath to the satisfaction of the Judge who tries the case. It appears to be established practice that in the case of a witness being alleged to be ill, the doctor, if he attended by one, must be called to prove his condition (10) Where the attorney for the prosecution was put into the box to prove that the witness was unable to attend, and stated that the witness's residence was 23 miles off, and that he had seen him that morning in bed with his head shaved, Earle J, said "The evidence is short of that of a medical man, but the person extremely unwilling to appear as a witness to he ill as to deceive any one but a medical man, and the evidence was rejected (11) And Lord Coleridge, C J, in giving judgment in R v Farrell (12), said it would be dangerous to admit any such latitude of construction as would bring this case within the words of the Statute"

The proposition that if a witness be kept out of the way by the adversary, his former statements will be admissible, rests chiefly on the broad principle of

Kept out of the way

(1) R v Kangan Mall 41 C 601 (1914)

(2) Annas Muthiriyam (in re) 39 M 449 (1916)

(3) R v Rustem 38 A 29 (1916)

(4) In the matter of Pjari Lal 4 C L R 504

(5) In the matter of Asgar Hoossein 8 C L R 124 (1881) s c 6 C 774

(6) Per Pontifex and Field JJ The dictum is obiter as it was not necessary to decide that question in the case v Roscoe Cr Ev 65 66 Taylor Ev § 472 478

(7) In the matter of Asgar Hoossein

supra

(8) Taylor Ev § 472—478 Roscoe Cr Ev 65 Doc v Powell 7 C & P 617 Norton Ev 196

(9) Taylor Ev § 472—478 and cases there cited as to blindness v s 47 note

(10) Roscoe Cr Ev 66 — as a general rule it will be prudent though it is not absolutely necessary to have the testimony of a medical man Taylor Ev § 488

(11) R v Phillis 1 F & F 105 and see R v Willan s 4 F & F 515

(12) L R 2 C C R 116 see also R v Hilton 9 Cox 281 R v Bull 12 Cox C C 31

justice, which will not permit a party to take advantage of his own wrong (1) In a case where three prisoners were indicted for felony, and a witness for the prosecution was proved to be absent through the procurement of one of them the Court held that his deposition might be read in evidence as against the man who had kept him out of the way, but that it could not be received against the other two men (2)

Delay or
expense

The last ground for admitting the deposition of an absent witness is governed by three considerations,—the delay the expense, and the circumstances of the case (3) Of the last one of the chief which the Judge has and ought to weigh is the nature and importance of the statements contained in the deposition It would be unreasonable to incur much delay and expense when the facts spoken to in the deposition are of the nature of formal evidence for the prosecution or supply some link in the case for the prosecution as to which little or no dispute exists or are facts to which other witnesses speak besides the deponent, and which witnesses are produced at the trial On the other hand it might be very reasonable to submit to much delay and considerable expense when the evidence of the deponent is vital to the success of the prosecution or has a very important bearing upon the guilt of the accused (4) Where the delay likely to have been occasioned was about a fortnight, and the witness lived or was staying within a short distance of the Court the witness's deposition was rejected (5) When the witnesses were at a considerable distance from the place of trial and their attendance was not easily procurable their depositions were admitted (6) Where the witness changed his lodging after the order was made to find him (7) It is only in extreme cases of expense or delay that the personal attendance of a witness should be dispensed with (8) 'In my opinion it was intended that the provisions of the section as to emergency (delay or expense) were only to be sparingly applied and certainly not in a case like this where the witness was alive and his evidence reasonably procurable' (9) Quære—Whether the expense contemplated by this section is confined to the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness or whether it also includes the expense of a admitted deponent not being procured unreasonable that the witnesses would be inconvenienced, and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged —Held that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under this section and the question of identification was a most material one, and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment the whole case resting on it, and as been

(1) Taylor Ev. § 473

(2) R. v. Seafie 17 Q. B. 238 s. c. 5 Cox 243

(3) Atlantic Steam Navigation Co. v. Bengal Coal Co. 35 Cal. 751

(4) In the matter of Parsi Lal supra per White J. at pp. 507, 510

(5) Id.

(6) A. v. Rani Reddi 3 M. 43 (1831)

(7) R. v. Lukhy Nara n. 24 W. R. Cr. 18 (1875)

(8) R. v. Mulu 2 A. 646 (1830)

(9) Id. per Straught J. at p. 648

(10) In the matter of Parsi Lal supra at p. 509 R. v. Lukhun Santhal 21 W. R. Cr. 56 (1874)

(11) R. v. Burke 6 A. 224 (1834) taken by commission, nor, looking at his position, could he arrange for their cross examination. Held also that on similar grounds the Sessions Judge was witnesses (2) Where a Sessions Judge, finding that the witnesses who had been summoned to give evidence for the prosecution did not appear upon the date fixed, adjourned the trial, and on the witnesses failing to appear, the Sessions Judge held that the evidence which they had given was inadmissible. Held so under this section, it was held that the Sessions Judge ought to have compelled the witnesses to attend (3) But where on remand by the Bombay High Court for the determination of certain issues, the District Court sent down the case to the first Court in order that the evidence might be taken there, and the evidence of the plaintiff was taken on commission, it was held that the defendant was not aggrieved by that procedure (4)

The 'proceeding' referred to is the former proceeding the language would have been more accurate if it had been — "those whom they represent in interest" (5) It makes no difference that the parties are differently marshalled in the two proceedings, the plaintiffs in the first proceeding being defendant in the second, or vice versa, nor if there have been plurality of parties in the one case and not in the other. Therefore, where a witness testified in a suit in which A and several others were plaintiffs and B defendant, his testimony same parties or their representatives in interest at the time when the suits are proceeding and the evidence is given (9) This section does not apply to the deposition of a witness in a former suit, when the witness is himself a defendant in the subsequent suit, and the deposition is sought to be used against him, not as evidence given between the parties, one of whom called him as a witness, but as a statement made by him, which would be evidence against him whether he made it as a witness or on any other occasion. Such a deposition is admissible under the sections relating to admissions, although it might be shown that the facts were different from what on the former occasion they were stated to be (10) (v. post, Note to Explanation) Statements of Insolvents under section 27 sub-section (1) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act cannot be received in evidence in a subsequent suit brought against them by their creditors, neither this section nor the last being in such case of avail (11)

(1) Ib., see also R. v. Jacob, 19 C (1891) at p. 120

(2) R. v. Lukhun Santhal supra

(3) R. v. Nande Khan A W N, 202 (1905) 2 A L J 599

(4) Kashaba v Chandrabhagabai (1908) 32 B 141

(5) Norton, Ev. 169

(6) Wright v Doe d Tatham 1 A & E 3

(7) R. v. Ishri Singh 8 A., 672 (1886) R. v. Ramji Reddi 3 M. 45 (1891) R. v. Vaman 5 Bom L R. 599 601 (1903)

Cf. Mahomed Khan v Mussamat Fattan 12 P L R 1919 Deb Singh v Emperor

20 Cr L J, 625

(8) See Mrinmoyee Dabee v Bhooban 10 C Dabee 13 B L R 5 (1874) s c

21 W R 42 and notes to ss 21 ante and 40 post As to judgments for or against a remainderman where there are several remainders limited by one deed see remarks of Couch C J 15 B L R 6 supra and Parker v Crouch 1 Ld Raym.

30 Doe d Lloyd v Pasangham 2 C & P 446

(9) Sutanath Dass v Mohesh Chunder, 12 C 727 (1886)

(10) Sojan Bibee v Achmut Ali 14 B L R App 3 (1874) s c 21 W R 414

(11) Luchuram Moulal Boid v Radha 41 C at Pooda 49 C, 93 (1922).

Cross-examination

Under the old law, as well as under the present section, there must have been the right and opportunity to cross examine(1), and therefore if a commission be executed without any notice, or without a sufficient notice(2) being given to the opposite party, to enable him, if he pleases, to put cross interrogatories, the depositions will be rejected(3), yet it is by no means requisite that he should exercise that power, and if notice has been given to him of the time cross-examine be presumed

So, where to examine witnesses upon interrogatories, gave notice that he declined to proceed with the examination, whereupon the plaintiff sent him word that he should apply for a commission ex parte, which he accordingly did the Court held that the examinations taken under this order were admissible in evidence, although the defendant had received no notice of the time and place of taking them (3) The deposition of a witness who was not cross examined before the committing Magistrate and who died before the trial, has been held to be admissible in evidence inasmuch as the accused persons had the right and opportunity of cross examining him notwithstanding the omission of their pleader to avail himself of that right (6) But in a later case it was held that the admissibility of such a deposition was doubtful and that in any case its evidentiary value was small and it was said that the practice of postponing cross-examination at this stage in certain cases should be considered in deciding whether there had been an opportunity to cross examine (7) The words "opportunity to cross

But,
r that show

Assistant Commissioner that the prisoner had an opportunity of cross examining and declined to avail himself of it We think that in order to make a deposition admissible under section 33, there must be evidence that the accused person did, in fact, have an opportunity of cross examining"(11) So also it has been held in the Bombay High Court that to make evidence admissible against an accused person, the fact that he had full opportunity of cross examination, if not admitted, must be proved (12) Quære—whether the

(1) R v Eluarcé Dharce 21 W R Cr 12 (1874), and see R v Luckhy Narain 24 W R Cr 18 (1875), Atty Genl v Davison, 11 Cl & G 160 Taylor, Ex, § 466, R v Ishri Singh 8 A, 672 (1886), R v Ramchandra Govind 19 B 749 757 (1895) [There may be circumstances where although a prisoner has the right he has not the opportunity, e.g., where the witness is at a great distance and the prisoner cannot go to the place and is too poor to employ a pleader or too unfamiliar with the ways of the place to get legal help there] Per Jardine, J

(13) Fitzgerald v Fitzgerald, 3 Sw & Tr 397 Tarnacknath Mookerjee v Gouree Churn 1 W R 47 (1865)

(3) Stenkeller v Newton, 9 C & P. 113 see Gregory v Dooley Chand, 14 W R 17 (1870)

(4) Taylor, Ex, § 466, Cazenove v Laughan 1 M & Sel. 4, R v Moxham 20 W R 69 (1873), Norton Ex 196 197

(5) M Combie v Anton 6 M & Gr. 27
(6) R v Barranta, 2 Bom L R 761 (1900) 25 B 168

(7) Ibrahim v King Emperor, 17 C W 230 (1912)

(8) R v Ram Chandra Govind 10 B, 49 (1895)

(9) R v Peacock 12 Cox C C 21

(10) 20 W R Cr. 69 (1873)

(11) Id at p 70 per Macpherson J

(12) A v Ramchandra Govind 19 B opportunity to administer cross interrogatories under a commission is "an opportunity to cross-examine" within the meaning of the proviso, so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible (1) The section requires an effectual cross-examination complete and not partial Therefore where a commission was returned when the witness had been in part but before he had been fully, cross examined it was held to be inadmissible (2) Platt, B., in R v Johnson (3), reprobated the practice of taking depositions in the absence of the prisoner and then supplying the omission by reading them over to the prisoner and asking him if he would like to put any question to the witnesses The Magistrate should when the prisoner is undefended, invite him to cross examine the witnesses at the end of each examination and not merely at the end of all the examinations and should allow him sufficient time to consider his questions (4) The fact that deceased attesting witnesses to a mortgage were cross-examined by the Special Registrar is enough to make the evidence admissible under this section (5) A deposition of a prosecution witness is admissible in evidence if the accused had an opportunity of cross examining him before the charge and there was no opportunity for further cross-examination after charge (6)

The question in issue must have been substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding And so if in a dispute respecting lands any fact comes directly in issue the testimony given to that fact is admissible to prove the same point in another action between the same parties or their privies, though the last suit relates to other lands (7) So also in the proceedings before a Magistrate on a charge of causing grievous hurt, two (among other) witnesses, one of whom was the person assaulted were examined on behalf of the prosecution The prisoners were committed for trial Subsequently the person assaulted died in consequence of the injuries inflicted on him At the trial, before the Sessions Judge charges of murder and of culpable homicide, not amounting to murder were added to the charge of grievous hurt The deposition of the deceased witness was put in and read at the Sessions trial—Held that the evidence was admissible, either under the first clause of section 32, or this section notwithstanding the additional charges before the Sessions Court The question whether the proviso is applicable—that is whether the questions at issue are substantially the same depends upon whether the same evidence is applicable although different consequences may follow from the same act (8)

Now here the act was the stroke of a sword which though it did not immediately cause the death of the deceased yet conduced to bring about that result subsequently In consequence of the person having died the gravity of the offence became presumptively increased but the evidence to prove the act with which the accused was charged remained precisely the same We therefore think that this evidence was properly admitted under the thirty third section (9) A statement made by a witness in a civil suit concerning the authenticity of a document before the Court may be admissible in evidence on the prosecution of a party to the suit for an offence relating to the document the witness having

(1) R v Ran chandra Govind supra.

(2) Bo sogomoff v Nalopiet Jule Co, 5 C W N cxxxx 1901)

(3) 2 C & K 394 and see ss 353, 537 Cr Ir Code and notes to ss 135 167 post and R v B shonath Pal 12 W R Cr 3 (1869) R v Mohun Bai for 22 W R Cr 38 (1874) Ali Meah In re 25 W R Cr 14 (1876) R v Na dra 9 A 609 (1887) Norton Ex 197

(4) R v Day 6 Cox 55 R v Watts 9 Cox 95

(5) Ieheto Sheikh v Ja baressa Bibi 18 C W N 605 (1913)

(6) Lockley v King Lupton 43 W 411

(7) Doe d Derby v Foster 1 A & E 791 cited in R v Rams Redd 3 M 48 (1881) see also Laxence v French 4 Drex 472 Phipson E 5th Ed 418

(8) R v Rochia Mohato C 42 (1881) s c 8 C L R 773

(9) Id per Pontifex I see Taylor T 54 467 468 Norton Ex 195

since died, but such a statement¹ witness in the same civil suit acc the party and of perjury (1) " in the plural seems to imply th. the same in both proceedings to render the evidence admissible, that is not the intention of the law. And though separate proceedings may involve issues of which some only are common to both, the evidence to those common issues given in the former proceedings may (on the conditions mentioned in section 33 arising) be given in the subsequent proceedings. (2) The evidence of witnesses examined in an enquiry held by a Sub Registrar under section 41 (2) of the Registration Act as to the genuineness of a will is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the same parties raising an issue as to the genuineness of the will if it is proved that the witnesses are dead at the time of the suit and that the adverse party at the enquiry before the Sub Registrar had an opportunity of cross examining the witnesses. (3) In deciding whether the questions in issue are substantially the same, it is always a useful test to see whether the same evidence will prove the affirmative of the issue in both. (4)

Explanation to section

The Explanation to the section is inserted for the purpose of excluding the objection which may arise, when the depositions are taken in criminal cases, that they cannot be used in a subsequent proceeding for want of mutuality.

Thus a prosecution was instituted by S against N O B at the instance, and on behalf, of F, for criminal trespass into a house belonging to F (Penal Code, died tend

the
the

secution for trespass and the civil suit were the same that N O B had had the right and opportunity to cross examine and had, in fact, exercised that right, that the issues in the civil suit were whether F was in possession and whether N O B's entry was unlawful, and that in order to establish the charge of criminal trespass, it had had to be shown that F was in possession, that N O B had unlawfully ousted her and that such ouster was with a criminal intent, that two of the issues in the suit were the same as those in the criminal trial, that the fact that there was an additional issue in the criminal trial made no difference (6), and that under the above circumstances the deposition of S in the criminal trial was admissible in the civil suit, in proof of the issue therein of possession. A certified copy of the deposition was therefore tendered and on objection that such copy was inadmissible and that the original record should be produced, the objection was overruled and the certified copy admitted in evidence. A witness under examination was then asked what information S had given him on the morning following the date of dispossession. On

(1) Emperor v. Kadhe Vol 42 A. 24
(2) R v. Rams Reddi, 3 M. 48 (1831),
at p. 52

(3) Lanka Lakshmanan v. Lanka Var
alanam 35 M. L. J. 657, s. c. 42 M 100

(4) Field Ex. 6th Ed. 149. see R v
Po. la Mohata supra.

(5) Norton v. 197 198 for the ques tion who is prosecutor " see Gaya Prasad
v. Bhagat Singh 30 A. 325 and Pandi
Gaya Prasad Tewari v. Sardar Bista
Singh P. C. (1903) Times L. R. v. 24
at p. 46

(6) See R v. Rams Reddi, supra.

objection being again taken, the question was held admissible under section 158 in corroboration of the deposition of S in the criminal trial (1)

Notwithstanding anything contained in this section Act XIV of 1908, s. 13, provides for a special rule of evidence in the case of the trial of offences under that Act

Indian Criminal Law
Amendment
Act

(1) Foolkistors Dassce v. Nobin Chunder, 23 C., 441 (1895)

since died, but such a statement can not be treated as evidence against another witness in the same civil suit accused of abetment of the offence charged against the party and of perjury (1) "Although the Act in using the word 'questions' in the plural seems to imply that it is essential that all the questions shall be the same in both proceedings to render the evidence admissible, that is not the intention of the law. And though separate proceedings may involve issues of which some only are common to both, the evidence to those common issues

mentioned in section 33

The evidence of witnesses

under section 41 (2) of the Registration Act as to the genuineness of a will is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the same parties raising an issue as to the genuineness of the will if it is proved that the witnesses are dead at the time of the suit and that the adverse party at the enquiry before the Sub Registrar had an opportunity of cross examining the witnesses (3) In deciding whether the questions in issue are substantially the same it is always a useful test to see whether the same evidence will prove the affirmative of the issue in both (4)

Explanation
to section

The Explanation to the section is inserted for the purpose of excluding the objection which may arise when the depositions are taken in criminal cases that they cannot be used in a subsequent proceeding for want of mutuality because the King is the prosecutor in all criminal proceedings (5) As so explained the section admits of the use in a civil suit of a deposition taken in a criminal trial or the reverse provided the conditions of the section are fulfilled. Thus a prosecution was instituted by S against N C B at the instance and on behalf of F, for criminal trespass into a house belonging to F (Penal Code 352 504)

subsequently nth section

ivil suit S

died. At the hearing of the suit the deposition of S in the Criminal Court was tendered on the issue of possession. It was held that according to the evidence the charge of criminal trespass had been at the instance of F, and was therefore the charge of F as the real prosecutor that therefore the parties in both the prosecution for trespass and the civil suit were the same that N C B had had the right and opportunity to cross examine and had in fact exercised that right that the issues in the civil suit were whether F was in possession and whether N C B's entry was unlawful and that in order to establish the charge of criminal trespass it had had to be shown that F was in possession that N C B had unlawfully ousted her and that such ouster was with a criminal intent that two of the issues in the suit were the same as those in the criminal trial that the fact that there was an additional issue in the criminal trial made no difference (6) and that under the above circumstances the deposition of S in the criminal trial was admissible in the civil suit in proof of the issue therein of possession. A certified copy of the deposition was therefore tendered and on objection that such copy was inadmissible and that the original record should be produced the objection was overruled and the certified copy admitted in evidence. A witness under examination was then asked what information S had given him on the morning following the date of dispossession. On

(1) Emperor v. Kadhe Wal 42 A 24

(2) R v. Rani Reddi 3 M 48 (1831)
at p 52

(3) Lanka Lakshmanna v. Lanka Far
Ilamma 30 M L J 657 s. c. 42 M
103

(4) Field Ev 6th Ed 149 see R v.
Rani Molata supra.

(5) Norton v. 197 198 for the question who is prosecutor" see Gaya Prasad
v. Bhagat Singh 30 A 525 and Pandi
Gaya Parshad Tewari v. Sardar Bha.
Singh P C (1903) Times L R v 21
at p 46

(6) See R v. Rani Redd supra.

objection being again taken, the question was held admissible under section 158 in corroboration of the deposition of S in the criminal trial (1)

Notwithstanding anything contained in this section Act XIV of 1908, Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act s 13 provides for a special rule of evidence in the case of the trial of offences under that Act

(1) Foolkissory Dossee v. Nobin Chunder 23 C 441 (1895)

STATEMENTS MADE UNDER SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

Two general classes of statements are dealt with in this portion of the chapter,—(a) Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, (b) entries in public documents or in documents of a public character. Both classes of statements are relevant, whether the person who made them is or is not, called as a witness and whether he is or is not, a party to the suit and are admissible owing to their special character and the circumstances under which they are made which in themselves afford a guarantee for their truth. The first class of statements were not generally admissible according to the principles of the English Common Law except in the case of entries against interest, or made in the course of business by deceased persons(1) but Courts of Equity have for some years past acted upon the principle of admitting account books in evidence in cases in which the vouchers have been lost(2) and the same principle has now been adopted in certain cases by the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883(3), as to documents and orally enlarged by or entries, or otherwise as the Court or Judge may direct (4) The object of this rule is to dispense under the powers of the Judicature Act and to a certain limited extent, with the technical rules of evidence (5) As a general rule a statement though in certain cases it may be admitted to in section 34 being the with caution (7) But these statements are in principle admissible upon considerations similar to those which have induced the Courts to admit them in evidence when made by persons who are dead and cannot be thus called as witnesses Moreover, in the words of the Judicial Committee "accounts may be so kept, and so tally with external

(1) Taylor Ev § 709 Steph Dig Arts 25—31 Best Ev §§ 501 503 Roscoe N P Ev 60—62 Powell Ev 9th Ed 316—323 Starkie Ev 65 Thus A sues B for the price of goods sold an entry in A's shop books debiting B with the goods is not evidence for A to prove the debt Smith v Anderson 7 C. B 21 but an entry debiting C and not B with the goods is evidence against A to disprove the debt Storr v Scott 6 C & P 241

(2) Taylor Ev § 711, and see 15 & 16 Vic. c. 85 s 4

(3) Ord XXXIII rr 2 3

(4) Taylor § 711

(5) Baerlein v The Chartered Mercantile Bank (1895) 2 Ch 483

(6) Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar

11 W R 526 (1869) See Introduction to the Sections on Admissions (s 17 et seq ante)

(7) Aheero Monee v Bhoj Gobind 7 W R 533 (1867) Taylor Ev § 709 but proper weight must be given to them where it was said that an account book is nothing it is one's private affair and he may prepare it as he likes the Privy Council remarked — It is true that there may be accounts to which that description would apply Other accounts may be so kept and may so tally with external circumstances as to carry conviction that they are true And the Evidence Act s 34 therefore enacts etc. Jaswant Sing v Sero Narain 16 A 157 161 (1894) circumstances as to carry conviction that they are true" (1) They are, moreover, subject to the restrictions that they shall not be alone sufficient evidence to charge any one with liability without some independent evidence of the facts stated in them (2) The second class of statements are contained either in public documents such as official books, registers or records or in documents of at least a public character, such as maps offered for public sale. The grounds upon which these statements are admissible have been given in the Notes to the following sections. Public documents are entitled to an extraordinary degree of confidence on the ground of the credit due to the agents who have made them and of the public nature of the facts contained in them. Where particular facts are enquired into and recorded for the benefit of the public those who are empowered to act in making such investigations and memorials are in fact the agents of all the individuals who compose the public and every member of the community may be supposed to be privy to the investigation (3) The other documents mentioned in the following sections such as maps offered for public sale deal with matters of public interest are accessible to the entire community and being open to its criticism are unlikely to be inaccurate and if inaccurate, are liable to detection and to consequent correction (4)

34 Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant (5) whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability

Entries in books of account when relevant

Illustration

A sues B for Rs. 1000 and shows entries in his account books showing B to be indebted to him this amount. The entries are relevant but are not sufficient without other evidence to prove the debt.

Principle—The presumption of truth which arises from the character and nature of this evidence and its constant liability if false to be detected (1 Introduction supra and the second clause of section 32)

- a 32 cl (2) (Statement made in course of business by person who can be called)
- a 32 cl (3) (Statement against interest by some person)
- a 39 (How much of a statement is to be proved)
- a 65 (a) (Numerous accounts secondary evidence)
- a 3 (Relevant)

Widroffe and Amur Ali's Civil Procedure Code O XIII r 5 2nd Ed p 807 (Production of Account Books in Evidence) O XVI rr 11 12 2nd Ed pp 1097 1098 (Committees to examine Accounts) Act VII of 1913 (as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920) (Indian Companies) s 240 Acts XIII of 1891 and I of 1893 (Bankers Books and Books of Post Office Savings Bank and Money Order Offices) Taylor Ev § 709 Best Ev §§ 501 503 Field Ev 6th Ed 153 Id Appendix 4th Ed Wigmore Ev § 1508

(1) v s 32 cl (2) supra Taylor Ev § 709 Powell Ev 9th Ed 316 Starkie Ev 65 Steph Intro 164 165 Jaswant Singh v Sheo Narain supra 161 162 one test of genuineness is correspondence of books with themselves but a better is correspondence with other evidence ib

(2) s 34 post and Commentary

(3) Starkie Ev 277 23 See Samar Dasad v Juggul Kshora 23 C 366 370 (1895)

(4) v ss 36 38 post

(5) Relevant means admissible Lala Laksh v Sayed Haider 3 C W N 224 (1889)

COMMENTARY.

Books of account

A question sometimes arises whether a particular account should be considered, and can be referred to as the original account. If accounts be merely memoranda and rough books from which the regular accounts are prepared, the former, it has been said, can hardly be considered the original account (1). Where account books, though dealing with the same subject matter, deal with it in different ways as in the case of a day book, cash book, ledger or the like, each of such books is an original account-book (2).

This section takes the place of section 43 of the repealed Act II of 1855 which was as follows: "Books proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business shall be admissible as corroborative but not as independent proof of the facts stated therein." Under that Act, therefore, account books would not have been admissible to prove a fact unless some other evidence tending to establish the same fact had also been given. "But the language" of that Act "differs very materially from that of the present Act. That language has not been adopted in the present Act. The only limitation in section 31 is that statements contained in documents of this kind shall not alone be sufficient to charge any one with liability. It appears to me that this change of expression has made substantial alteration in the law" (3). Therefore documents (jama usul bak papers) admissible under this section though not alone sufficient to charge any one with liability were held to be sufficient to answer a claim set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant e.g. in a suit for enhancement of rent to rebut a presumption arising from uniform payment for 23 years (4). These documents were not used alone in order to charge the defendant with the liability that had been imposed upon him. He was charged with the rent of the land he occupied by reason of its occupation by him, that rent being considered a fair and equitable rent for the land occupied, and what these documents were used for was not to charge him with the liability, but to answer the claim which he set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant (5). Therefore, books of account when not used to charge a person with liability (civil or criminal) (6) may be used as independent evidence requiring no corroboration but when sought to be so used they must be corroborated by other substantive evidence independent of them (7). And in this sense books of accounts remain under the present as under the repealed Act, corroborative evidence only and cannot be used as independent primary evidence of the payment or other items to which the entry refers nor when payments entered in many of the items of a book of account are corroborated by other evidence can the inference be raised thereon that even the entries which are not so corroborated are accurate or in other words afford good substantive evidence of the

(1) Raja Peary v Narendra Nath 9 C W N 421 431 (1905). See Wigmore Ev. § 1558.

(2) Megraj v Seunoran 5 C W N 222 (1901) see s. 63 post.

(3) Belaet Khan v Rash Beharee 22 W R 549 (1874) per Markby J. (v post) the present section substitutes regularly kept for proved to have been regularly kept but of course proof is still required except in those cases in which it is rendered unnecessary by the admissions of the parties. As to account books as corroborative evidence of separation in estate see Jagan Koor v Raghoonund in Ill 10 W R (1868). As to Act II of 1855 see Ramkrishna Pal v Hurjados Aoodoo Marshall 219 (1862).

(4) Ib.

(5) Ib this decision in so far as it held jama-usul bak papers in gilt in certain cases be other than corroborative evidence only appears to be dissented from by Princep and Bose JJ in Sur non oja v Johur Mahomed 10 C L R. 546 (1882) v post but it does not appear in the latter case what use was sought to be made therein of these papers see also Gopal Mondul v Nobo Kushen 5 W R. (Act N.) 83 (1866) Sib Pershad v Promothoonath Ghose 10 W R. 193 (1868) and post.

(6) R v Hurdeet Sahoy 23 W R. Cr 27 (1875).

(7) Ib Duarka Doss v Sant Butra 18 A 92 (1895).

payments to which they refer (1) This section only lays down that a plaintiff cannot obtain a decree by merely proving the existence of certain entries in his books of account, even though those books are shown to be kept in the regular course of the business. He will have to show further by some independent evidence that the entries represent real and honest transactions and that the monies were paid in accordance with those entries. No particular form or kind of evidence in addition to the entries is required. Any relevant facts which can be treated as evidence within the meaning of the Evidence Act would be sufficient corroboration of the evidence furnished in the books of account, if true (2) Entries in accounts relevant only under this section are not by themselves alone sufficient to charge any person with liability; corroboration is required (3) But where accounts are relevant also under the second clause of section 32 they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible under only this section, require corroboration. Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both the sections, and in that case the necessity for corroboration does not apply (4) In a suit to recover money due upon a running account the plaintiff produced his account books which were found to be books regularly kept in the course of business in support of his claim. One of the plaintiffs gave evidence as to the entries in the account books, but in such a manner that it was not clear whether he spoke from his personal knowledge of the transactions entered in the books, the entries in which were largely in his own handwriting or simply as one describing the state of affairs that was shown by the books. He was cross-examined, but no questions were asked him to show that he was not speaking as to his personal knowledge. Held that the evidence given as above should be interpreted in the manner most favourable to the plaintiff and might be accepted in support of the entries in the plaintiff's account books which by themselves would not have been sufficient to charge the defendants with liability (5) The mere production of the books without further proof is not enough (6), and such further proof must be afforded by substantive evidence independent of them as by that of witnesses who speak to the payment of mercantile books of the banking firm and of a general statement by the defendant G P that the items in those books were correct. Their Lordships are of opinion that the books being (as is admitted) at most corroborative evidence, the mere general statement of the banker where the fact of the payments was distinctly put in issue to the effect that his books were correctly kept, was not sufficient to satisfy the burden of proof that lay upon him particularly as with respect to many of the disputed items he had the means of producing much better evidence. (8) It has been held that though the actual entries in books of account are relevant to the extent provided by the section, such a book is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry relating to a particular matter. (9) The decision cited if it is to be taken to have ruled that the fact

(1) R v Hurdeep Sahoy 23 W R Cr 27 (1875)

(2) Yesutadiyan v Subba Nacker 52 I C 704

(3) Abdul Ali v Puran Mal 49 P R C J No 82 p 289 (1914)

(4) Ra ipyabai v Balaji Shridhar 6 Bom L R 50 (1904) s c 28 B 294

(5) Duarka Doss v Sant Buxsh 18 A 92 (1895)

(6) Sri Kishen v Hur Kishen 5 W

I A 432 Sorabjee Vacha v Koorurjee Vanshjee 1 M I A 47 s c 5 W R (P C) 29 (1866) Roushan B bee v Hurray Kristo 8 C 931

(7) R v Hurdeep Sahoy 23 W R Cr 27 (1875) and v post

(8) Cunga Pershad v Inderjit Singh, 23 W R (P C) 390 (1878)

(9) R v Greer Chunder, 10 C 1074 (1884) and see in the matter of Juggun Jall C L R. 356 of the absence of an entry is not evidence at all under any section of the act as it is submitted, erroneous and has not in such sense been followed (1) This section which deals with the question of liability, does not oblige that there is no entry is not admissible under this section but may be so under other sections of the act as for instance the ninth and eleventh sections. Thus evidence having been given of the visit of M to Calcutta which he denied the latter's son was called by the other party to corroborate M's statement. He deposed that it was usual when a partner of his firm (to which both he and M belonged) made a journey on the firm's business and he was allowed to state that there was no entry if the party uses the statement of the books must be put in evidence but the Judge is not bound to believe the whole of it. If, for instance, the Judge upon the evidence really believes that the payments credited in a plaintiff's account books were made although he disbelieves the entries as to the amount of the debits there is nothing inequitable in his giving the defendant the benefit of the payments. The Judge is bound to look at the whole of the entries, giving credit to such as he believes to be true and discrediting those which he believes to be false (3). Books of account regularly kept may be appealed to not only for the purpose of refreshing the memory of a witness but also as corroborative evidence of the story which he tells. Books of account containing entries referring to a particular transaction are not entitled to the same credit that is given to the books that record that transaction in common with other transactions in the ordinary course of business (4). Where any company is being wound up all books, accounts and documents of the Company and of the liquidators are as between the contributors of the Company prima facie evidence of the truth of all matters purporting to be therein recorded (5). As to a hoshchutta book being in the absence of fraud binding upon the vendor for whose security it is kept see the undermentioned case (6). Besides their use as corroborative evidence under this section entries in books of account may, under the conditions mentioned in section 159 be used to refresh the memory or as admissions (vide ante) and also under other sections of the Act. Further statements made in books kept in the ordinary course of business by persons who cannot be called as witnesses may be proved under the provisions of the second clause of the thirty second section (7).

kept in the regular course of business

The book must have been kept in the regular course of business. A too limited meaning must not be given to this part of the section. Where one of the plaintiff's witnesses named K T stated in cross examination that he had formerly been employed by C D at intervals of a week or fortnight to make entries in his (C D's) cash book relating to private transactions which he (the witness) did from C's loose memoranda or from oral instructions given by C and this cash book was tendered in evidence. West J. refused to receive it and said — 'Under section 34 of the Evidence Act I do not think this book comes within

(1) Sagarmull v Manraj 4 C. W. N. 100 (1900). In Kam Pershad v Lakshmi Koor 30 C. at p. 247 Lord Davey referred to R v Grees Chunder 10 C. 1024 supra and Lord Robertson said. The Act applies to entries in books of account but no inference can be drawn from the absence of an entry relating to any particular matter but this remark must be taken to have been made with reference to the preceding statement of Counsel which referred to this act on

(2) Sagarmull v Manraj 4 C. W. N. 100 (1900)

(3) Isan Chunder v Haran Sarda 11 W. R. 525 (1869) per Peacock C. J.

(4) Bhog Hong Kong v Ramnath Chetty 29 C. 334 (1902) s. c. 4 B. & L. R. 378

(5) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies) s. 240

(6) Gopee Mohun v Abdool Rajah 1 Jur. N. S. 338 (1866)

(7) vide ante

the designation of books of account regularly kept in the course of business. It is a private account book entered up casually once a week or fortnight and with none of the claims to confidence that attach to books entered up from day to day or (as in banks) from hour to hour as transactions take place. These only in my opinion regularly kept in the course of business' (1). But in a later day to day or from hour to hour make them entirely irrelevant. It is thus not necessary that the entry should have been made at the time of the transaction provided

In the case cited

talukdars' estate

head office where they were abstracted and entered in an account book under the date of entry that being in some cases many days after the transaction of payment or receipt but the entries were made in their proper order on the authority of the officer who it was his duty to receive or pay the money. It was held that the entry in the account book was admissible as corroborative evidence of oral testimony as to the fact of a payment for what it was worth objection being only to be made to its weight not to its relevance under this section (3). But account books though proved not to have been regularly kept in the course of business but proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose are relevant as admissions against the firm (4).

The regular proof of books and accounts required that the clerks who have kept those accounts or some person competent to speak to the facts should be called to prove that they have been regularly kept and to prove their general accuracy (5). Yet the necessity of strict proof may be removed by the admission of the defendant and the fact of the absence by him of any evidence to impeach the accuracy of the accounts the disputed items being satisfactorily accounted for (6). The section simply requires that entries in accounts should which affects the value not the admissibility of the entries (7).

Proof of accounts

Jai a wasil baki papers are accounts made up at the end of the year showing the total rent demandable from each rayat for the current year the balance of previous years the amount collected during the year the balance due at the end thereof and sometimes an account of the land as well as the rent (8). The han books proved to have been kept by themselves they are not admissible of rent mentioned therein but it is

Jama wasil baki papers

(1) Wicherslaw Bejony v New District Spinning Company 4 B 56 (1880) at p 583 referred to in Aga v Bappa 23 B 66 (1898)

(2) Deputy Commissioner of Barabanki v Ram Pershad 2 C 118 (1899) s c 4 C W N 147

(3) Deputy Commissioner of Barabanki v Ram Pershad 27 C 118 (1899) s c 4 C W N 147

(4) Wicherslaw Bejony v New District Spinning Company 4 B 576 (1880)

(5) Daruka Dass Jahee Dass 6 M

I A 88 (1855) t p 98

(6) As to Bankers Books and the book of Post Office Savings Banks and Money Order Office Acts XVIII of 1891 and I f 189

(7) Ram Hanantia 1 B 610 (1877) t p 616

(8) Feld E. and Ed. Appendix

(9) Ram Lal v Tara Soondari 7 W 80 (1867) Kieria Moce v Bejony 80 d W R 533 (1867) Bejony 80 d W R 291 (1868) Jackson J doubts it perfectly right that a person who has prepared such papers on receiving payments of the rents should refresh his memory from such papers when giving evidence as to the amount of rent payable, when so used they are not used as 'independent evidence' (1) In a suit where the Lower Court found upon the evidence of (inter alia) certain jama uasil baki papers that the defendant had been the plaintiff's tenant at a certain rate of rent and gave the plaintiff a decree for that rent, it was observed as follows — "Then it is said that in the first Court, the Munsiff relied improperly on certain jama uasil-baki papers. These jama uasil baki papers, we all know, are not evidence by themselves. The mere production of such papers is not enough. But coupled with other evidence these papers often afford a very useful guide to the truth in cases of this kind, and it is only right that those who have been collecting rent with the assistance of such papers should produce them in Court" (2) And in a suit (3) for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate it was said — "The appellant's pleader contends that the jama uasil baki papers under the Evidence Act of 1872 are no longer Judge has taken a But we would obs that therefore the attached to them c Belact Khan v Rash Beharee (4) we are not aware of any case in which this Court has regarded jama uasil baki papers in a different light. In fact, so far as my own individual experience goes as a Judge of this Court I have never known them to be looked upon as anything else. It seems to us moreover that the terms of section 34 of the Evidence Act do not give such papers any weight beyond that of corroborative evidence (5)

Value of these papers

With regard to the value to be attached to these papers there have been varying decisions. In a suit for possession on the allegation of wrongful dispossession it was said — Jama uasil baki papers in a case of this kind are really of very little consequence or value as it is a matter of perfect ease for either party in the suit to produce any number of such papers. The absence of particular papers of this kind does not appear to be a very material omission (6) In the case of Allyat Chinaman v Juggut Chunder (7) the Court (8) remarked as follows — "But it is contended their allegations are corroborated by the jama uasil baki papers filed by the respondent in which the names of these rajats are entered. Now we observe that such a document—a private memorandum made for the zemindar's own use and by his own servants—must be looked upon case like the present than tion of a document which ed pattern. Has then this a person calling himself a Jurkuns mularrir has been produced to depose to I C's (the tehsildars) signature to this particular paper, but the tehsildar himself has not been examined and it is not pretended that the man is either dead or unable to depose. The best evidence was required to prove a document so naturally open to suspicion and that evidence has not been given." In a subsequent case (9) Norman J., referring to this case said "As to the value of jama uasil baki papers as evidence in rent suits for the zemindar the Deputy Collector quotes a passage from the 5th Volume of the Weekly Reporter, p. 213 and treats it as if the language applied to all jama uasil bakis. But there is a wide distinction between the

(1) Akhill Chandra v Naya 10 C 248 (1883) and see Malomed Mahmood v Safar Ali 11 C 409 (1885)

(2) Roushan Bibee v Hurray Kristo 8 C 931 (1887) per Garth C J

(3) Surnonovi v Johur Mahomed 10 C 1 R 545 (1887)

(4) 27 W R 549 ante p 360

(5) Ib at p 546 per Prinscp & Fess

JJ

(6) Slea Suhaze v Goodur Poy 8 W R 378 (1867) per Jackson J but see Koostia Bbee v Hurray Kristo 8 C. 976 s pra

(7) 5 W R 242 (1866)

(8) Phear and Glover JJ

(9) Aheero Monce v Desoy Gotsal 7 W R 533 (1867)

case with which the learned Judges were then dealing, and to which they applied their remarks, and the present Here we have a series of jama uasil bakis apparently regularly kept for ten years, with one gap, from 1249 to 1258. There is a single paper unattested, the writer of which was not called and his absence not accounted for. Of course, all books of account and entries made by or on behalf of a party when produced as evidence in his favour must be received with caution, but there seems to be no reason why a series of collection-accounts, or jama uasil-baki papers, appearing to be regularly kept, should not be entitled to credit on the same principle as other contemporary records made and kept by the party producing them in the ordinary course of his business. In a case (1), where, in order to rebut the presumption in favour of a permanent tenure created by the fourth section, Act X of 1859, the fact of the rate at which rent was paid having varied, was the fact sought to be proved by jama uasil baki and similar papers, it was observed —“The Judge (of the Lower Court) alludes to the evidence of the gomastahs who filed or attested certain papers of the zemindar. Such papers, we need hardly observe, cannot incontestably prove variations in a rayat's jama, unless it can be shown not merely that the jama uasil baki and similar papers show a varying rate but that the rayat has paid at a varying rate, otherwise every rayat would be at the mercy of a zemindar or his agents. The Judge says that the witnesses attest these papers but he does not say how he considers the rayats bound by them (2).

The jamabandi shows the quantity of land held by each cultivator, its different qualities (i.e., what is grown upon it) the rate of rent for each kind of land, the total rent for all the land of that particular kind in each cultivator's possession, and lastly, the grand total for all the lands of every kind held by him (3). Many of the following cases were decided under the law as it stood prior to the passing of this Act. In Gujjo Koer v. Aalay Ahmed (4) D N Mitter, J., said “The jamabandi paper may be only used as corroborative evidence, viz., of the same value as that which is attached to books of account under Act II of 1855. These papers were admittedly prepared by the zemindar and other papers would be safe.” And where certain jamabandi papers prepared by former patwari were produced in order to show the rent paid by the defendant in previous years, Phear, J., said “Had the former patwari come forward as a witness and sworn that he had collected rent from the defendant at the rate shown in the jamabandi and that the jamabandi was his own record of the fact then this would have afforded very material evidence in support of the plaintiff's claim but this man is not called and his jamabandi papers without him are valueless.” (5) Jamabandi papers for the year in respect of which rent is claimed, made out by the patwari (as being the officer t) as to the amounts collected in previous years, corroborated by the jamabandis of those years, would be about as conclusive in respect of the claim as it well could be (6). But where the rayats signed a jamabandi they were held to be bound by it (7). A tenant cannot be sued for enhanced rent upon a jamabandi to the terms of

(1) Gopal Mundul v. Nobo Kissen 5 W. R. (Act X) 83 (1866)

(2) Ib. at p. 84 but see Shib Pershad v. Protho Nath 10 W. R. 193 (1868) and Belaet Khan v. Rash Behary supra

(3) Field Ev. 4th Ed. Appendix 739

(4) 14 W. R. 474 (1871) s. c. 6 B. L. R. App. 62 and see Clanarnsee Bibee

v. Arunoolah Sirdar 9 W. R. 431 (1863)

(5) Bhugwan Dutt v. Sheo Mungal 22 W. R. 56 (1874)

(6) Dhanoo Kharee Sahee v. Toomey 20 W. R. 147 (1873) and see Kishore Dass

Persin Maltoo 20 W. R. 171 (1873)

(7) Watson & Co. v. Mahendra Nath 23 W. R. 436 (1875) which he has not consented (1) As to Jaibaki (2), Ism navisi (3), Settlement Behari and Auargha (4), Hastabad (5), and Kanungo (6) papers, see cases cited below (7) Although zemindari papers cannot be admitted under this section as corroborative evidence without independent evidence of the fact of collection at certain rates, they can be used as independent evidence if they are relevant under section 32 clause 2 ante (8)

35. An entry in any public or other official book, register, or record, stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register, or record is kept, is itself a relevant fact

Principle—The principle upon which the entries mentioned in this section are received in evidence depends upon the public duty of the person who keeps the book, register or record to make such entries after satisfying himself of their truth. It is not that the writer makes them contemporaneously, or of his own knowledge (9), for no person in a private capacity can make such entries (10) They are admissible, though not confirmed by oath or cross examination them by means of sworn witnesses (11)

..

ss 65 (e), (f) 77 (Proof of public documents)

ss 74 (Definition of "public documents")

ss 76 77 (Certified copies of public documents)

ss 78 (Proof of certain official documents)

ss 79 (Genuineness of certified copies) ss 81 (Genuineness of documents directed to be kept by law)

(1) Enayetoollah Meah v Nobo Coomar 20 W R 207 (1873) Reazooddeen Mahommed v McAlpine 22 W R 540 (1874) both followed in Akshaya Kumar v Shama Churn 16 C 556 (1889)

(2) Baidonath Parooze v Russick Lall 9 W R 274 (1868)

(3) Fergusson v Government 9 W R 158 (1868) Farguharson v Duarkanath Singh 8 B L R 504 (1871) s c 14 M 1 A 259 Erskins v Government 8 W R 232 (1867)

(4) Bunrarry Lall v Forlong 9 W R 239 (1868)

(5) Ram Narsing v Trispora Sundarce 9 W R 105 (1868)

(6) Akceero Monce v Beejoy Gobind, 7 W R 533 (1867). Anand Dinitpat v Tara Chand 2 W R (Act V), 13 (1865) Duarkanath Chuckerbutty v Tara Soon duri 8 W R 517 (1867)

(7) And v Field, Ev 6th Ed, 159

(8) Charitar Rai v Kailash Behari, 4 Pat 1 W 213 s c 44 I C 422

(9) The dictum of Garth C J, which appears to be to the contrary in Sarasua

Dasi v Dhanpat Singh 9 C 434 (1892) was dissented from in Shoshu Bhootun v Gurish Chunder 20 C 940 (1893) and it is submitted opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh 5 C 744 751, 753 (1879) of also acceptance of this principle in ss 194 20 21 of Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages), post Graham v Phanindra Nath Misra 19 C W N 1038 (1915) (admissible irrespective of knowledge as when copy of another entry)

(10) Phipson Ev., 5th Ed, 320, Deo v Andrews 15 Q B, 756 per Frie J Sturla v Frezza 5 App Cas 624-644 Isall v Kennedy 56 L. T., 647 Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, ante Where it is not shown that it is so made the entry is inadmissible Sheo Balak v Gora Prasad 20 A L J, 601

(11) Starkie, Ev., 272 273, Taylor, Ev., § 1591 see remarks of Privy Council in Raja Bommarauze v Rangasamy Mudaly 6 M 1 A at p 249 (1885), Samar Dasadh v Juggi Kishore 23 C, 370 371

Public and Official books registers and records—Marriage Register(1)—Acts VI of 1860 (as amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920 XX of 1920) (Parsi Marriage and Divorce) ss. 6 8 and Schedule III of 1872 (Non Christian Marriage) ss. 13 13A 14 and Schedule III (See Act XXX of 1923), VI of 1872; (Christian Marriage) ss. 28 30 31 32—37, 54 62 79 80 and Schedules III IV (See Acts II of 1891, I of 1903, XIII of 1911, VI of 1914), 14 & 15 Vic, Cap. 40 Acts VI of 1886 (as amended by Act XXXVII of 1900) (Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages) ss. 7, 9, 32—35A I of 1876 (B C) (Mahommedan Marriages) amended by Act I of 1903 (2) Birth and Death Registers—Act VI of 1889 (Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages), ss. 7, 9 18 22 25 28 32—35A Registers or Records of Baptism Naming Dedication Burial—Act VI of 1886 as amended by Act XXXVII of 1900 (supra) ss. 32—35A Registers directed to be kept by the Indian Registration Act—Act VI of 1908 (Indian Registration) Part VI (3) Log books—Act I of 1839 (Merchant Seamen) ss. 103—108, 17 & 18 Vic Cap. 104 (Merchant Shipping Act) ss. 280 295 Registers of Printing Presses Newspapers and books published in India—Act XVI of 1867 (Printing Presses and Newspapers) ss. 6—8 and Part V, Registers of Inventions and Designs(4)—Act II of 1911 as amended by Act XVI of 1914 Sch. I and Acts XXXIII and XXXIV of 1900 (Intentions and Designs) ss. 20 46 71 Registers of Literary Scientific and Charitable Societies—Act XVI of 1860 (Registration of Societies) Registers of Companies—Act VII of 1913 as amended by Acts VI and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920 (Indian Companies) ss. 31 40 87 120 123—125 Part VI and passim (5) Register of British Ships—Act VI of 1841 (Ship Registry) s. 4 17 & 18 Vic Cap. 104 (Merchant Shipping Act) Records of Rights—Act XVII of 1887 (Punjab Land Revenue) N W P Act III of 1901 (N W P Land Revenue) Settlement Record—Beng. Reg. VII of 1892 cl. 9 a 9 Register of Tenures—Act II of 1860 (B C.) (Chota Nagpur Tenure) (6) Registers—Act VII (B C) of 1876 (Bengal Land Registration) (7) Registers of Common and Special Registry—Act VI of 1850 (Sales for Arrears of Revenue Lower Provinces) Thirty ninth section (8)

Taylor, Fr. §§ 1591—1593 1774—1780, Powell Ev. 9th Ed. 271—273 Roscoe N P Fr. 24—129 209—216 Steph. Dig. Art. 34 Phipson Fr. 5th Ed. 320

COMMENTARY.

The Act does not contain any definition of either of the terms "public" or "official" or of a "public servant", but for the purposes of interpretation reference may be made to the seventy fourth(9) and seventy eighth sections post and to section 21 of the Penal Code in which the term "public servant" is defined. Certain Acts declare that the officers appointed under them are to be deemed "public servants". Thus every Registrar of Births and Deaths appointed under Act VI of 1886 is deemed to be a "public servant" within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code (10). So also are census officers(11) and

Public Official Duty

(1) See also following repealed Acts V of 1852 (Marriage by Registrars) ss. 41 42 49 XXV of 1864 (Marriage of Christians) V of 1865 s. 44 (Marriage of Christians) XV of 1872 (Indian Christian marriage)

(2) v. Khadem Ali v. Taj munsiff 10 C. 607 (1884)

(3) Act XVI of 1908 (Indian Registration) has been amended by Act IV of 1914 and Acts V and XV of 1917 which see. See also repealed Acts VIII of 1871 XX of 1866 XVI of 1864 XI of 1861 XVIII of 1841 IV of 1845 XIX of 1843 I of 1843 and XXX of 1838

(4) See also repealed Acts XV of 1859 (Patents) XIII of 1872 (Patterns and Designs) and V of 1888

(5) v. Ram Dass v. Official Liquidator 9 A. 366 (1887)

(6) v. Kirpal Narain v. Sukumari 19 C. 99 Pertab Uda v. Masi Das 72 C. 112 (1894)

(7) v. post cases under this Act

(8) Lukhyararam Chattopadhyaya v. Gora 10 C. 116 (1887)

(9) See Soar Dosadh v. Juggul Kishore 33 C. 366 369 (1895)

(10) Act VI of 1886 s. 14. A manager of an estate employed under the Court of Wards has been held to be a public servant under the Penal Code R. v. Mathura Prasad 21 A. 127 (1898) R. v. Sidhu 26 A. 542 (1904) [Gorai]

(11) Act XVII of 1890 (Census) s. 3. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary registering officers appointed under Act XVI of 1908 (1) It has been queried whether the section applies to an entry in a public register or record kept outside British India (2)

Thus section in the main follows but somewhat extends the English law on the same subject (3) The book register or record must either be a public or an official one it must be one which the law requires to be kept for the benefit or information of the public (4) where so kept for information the public having access thereto are not necessarily all the world but may be limited (5) A 'public document' has been defined to be a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it—especially where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial duty to inquire Its very object must be that the public all persons concerned in it may have access to it (6) Registers kept under private authority for the benefit or information of private individuals are inadmissible (7) Two classes of entries are contemplated by this section (a) by the public servants (b) by persons other than public servants In the case of the latter the duty to make the entry must be speciall enjoined by the law of the country in which the book register or record is kept (the section thus includes British foreign or colonial registers) (8), in the case of entries by the former it is sufficient for their admissibility that they have been made in discharge of official duty But in either case as well in India as in England the entry must have been made by a person whose duty it was to make it Provision however is made by Act VI of 1886 for the admission in evidence under certain conditions of certain records and registers made otherwise than in the performance of a duty specially evidence of certain village papers directed to be made by Reg VI of 1886 on the ground that they were not prepared or attested by the Settlement Officer in person as required by law the Privy Council said When documents are found to be recorded as being properly made up and when they are found to be acted upon as authentic records the rule of law is to presume that everything had been rightly done in their preparation unless the contrary appears (13)

In the last case it was also held on the question whether there did or did not exist a custom in the Bahinla clan in Oudh excluding daughters from inheriting that entries in a uajub ul arz were properly admitted to prove this custom

Documents held admissible or not in the Evidence Act Records of Census are not admissible in evidence in any civil proceeding or any proceeding under Chapters 17 or 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act XVII of 1890 s 17)

(1) Act XVI of 1908 s 84 (Indian Registration)

(2) Ponnammal v Sundaran Pilla 21 M 492 (1900)

(3) 1 Field Ev 6th Ed 167

(4) Taylor Ev s 1592 and cases there cited

(5) Sirla v Freccia 5 App Cas 643

(6) Id

(7) Taylor Ev s 1592n and cases there cited See Baird v Nath v Sukhi 18 C 534 (1891)

(8) With regard to the books recognised as legal registers and public documents in England see Taylor Ev s 1596n

Noscoe v P Ev 174—129 209—16 in part clearly as to births deaths and marriages in India pp 127 128 Ratcliff v Ratcliff 1 Sw & Tr 467 Queen v Proctor v Fry 4 P D 230 14 & 15 Vic Cap 40 s 11 42 & 43 Vic Cap 8

(9) Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages) s 35

(10) Doe v Bray 8 B & C 313

(11) Lzell v Kennedy 14 App Cas 437

As to the correction of errors in registers under Act VI of 1886 s 28 of the Act

(12) Sturla v Freccia 5 App Cas 643

Irish Society v Derry 12 C & F 641

(13) Lekraj Kuwar v Mahpal Singh 5 C 757

this custom being a usage of the kind which Settlement Officers were required by Reg VII of 1822 to ascertain and record (1) And in another case it was held by the Privy Council that entries in village-records by the officer charged by Government with the duty of making them (as under the Oudh Land Revenue Act

made being weight
a recei

to the ordinary Mutakshara Law of Inheritance was forthcoming, the Court was right to disregard entries in a uajib ul arz which seemed rather to show the wishes of the persons consulted than to prove the custom (4) A uajib ul arz prepared and attested according to law is prima facie evidence of the existence of any custom of pre-emption which it records. It is a document of a public character which is prepared with all publicity, and accepted by the Courts as sufficiently strong evidence of the existence of any custom recorded in it so as to cast upon parties denying the custom the burden of proof (5) In the under-mentioned case it was held that upon a question of custom a uajib ul arz is generally more valuable as a record of opinion of persons presumably acquainted with the custom, than as an official record of the custom, but if duly attested by Settlement officials and signed by amildars of the village to which it relates it may be admitted in evidence under this section (6) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that an entry in a uajib-ul arz is prima facie a record of a custom rather than of a contract and that the fact that such a word as ilrarnama is used at the beginning or end of it is not enough to make the entry one of contract and not of custom (7) The same High Court has held in a more recent case that where there is an entry as to pre-emption and no contrary evidence, the Court, having regard to the prevailing practice, can take the custom of pre-emption as proved (8) The Privy Council has recently held that a Riwar-i-jam is a public record prepared by a public officer in discharge of his duties and under Government rules and is clearly admissible, for instance, as rebuttable evidence of a custom of inheritance among Mahomedan Jats settled in the Jhang district of the Punjab (9) And in another later case the Privy Council has held that 'conclusive evidence' in section 10 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869) means not only evidence of being taluqdars but also of having that status on the lists and that a uajib ul arz when merely related traditions and purported to give the history of devolution in families (not the

(1) Ib A uajib ul arz is prima facie evidence of custom: its object is to supply a record of existing local custom see the following cases—Jari Singh v Gunga 2 A 876 (1880) Muhammad Hassan v Munna Lal 8 A 434 (1886) Deoti nandan Sri Ram 12 A 257 (1889) Superundhuaya Prasad v Garurndhuaya Prasad 15 A 147 (1893) Uma Parsad v Gandharp Singh 15 C 20 (1887) Sadhu Sahu v Raja Ravi 16 A 40 (1894) Garurndhuaya Prasad v Super undhuaya Prasad 5 C W N 33 (1900) s c 23 A 37 Ali Nasir v Manil Chand 25 A 90 (1902) Ram Sarup v Sital Prasad 1 All L J 278 (1904) s c 26 A 549 [Entries in uajib ul arz Entry is prima facie evidence under this section of existence of custom Gokul Dicht v Malhar Dicht 2 All L J 790 (1902) Musson at Lall v Murl Dhar 10 C W

N 30 P C 8 B 402

(2) Musst Parbati Kunuar v Rani Chanderpal Kun ar P C (1909) 36 I A 125

(3) Mahomed Iftau v Surdar Hussain 2 C W N 737 (1898)

(4) Anant Singh v Durga Singh P C (1910) 37 I A 191 Mawasi v Mulchand (1912) 34 A 434

(5) Ali Nasir v Mamk Chand 25 A 90 96 (1902)

(6) Musamat Parbati K. ar v Rani Chanderpal Kunuar 8 O C 94 P C (1909) 36 I A 125

(7) Returaj Dubain v Pahlcan Bagol, F N 33 A 196 (1911)

(8) Fazal Hussain v Muhammad Sharif, 36 A 471 (1914)

(9) Beg v Allah Ditta, P C 44 C, 749 (1917)

narrator's) was insufficient to rebut the presumption of a pre existing custom (1) In a suit for possession of a fishery, an admission made by the defendant's predecessor in title in a written statement filed in a previous suit was allowed to be proved under this section by the production of the decree in such previous suit it being the duty of the Court under the old practice of Mofussil Courts to enter in the decree an abstract of the pleadings in each case (2) Quinquennial papers were rejected by the Lower Court the latter was ordered to take these into consideration on the remand of the case (3) Revenue registers in the Madras Presidency judgments and other public records were admitted in Bajilamma v Arulla (4) The measurement papers prepared by Butirara Ameen do not (5) but chittas of the revenue survey do (6) come within the description given in this section The Batwara Akhara is generally prepared by the Amin on the admission of both the landlord and tenants regarding the latter's holding and in cases of difference on the basis of summary decisions by the Batwara Deputy Collector and as such is very valuable evidence in subsequent disputes But a Akhara prepared not on the basis of admissions of all parties but on information supplied by one of them and without enquiry as to whether the result resulting therefrom is that which is at the time payable is absolutely valueless in evidence (7) Certified copies of papers in the Collectorate which relate to a partition made in a proceeding under

Guarantee of a certain person on the other hand a certificate is neither a book nor a register in accordance with any law but is a certificate as it professes to be of which there is only this one and which is not a public record or register of any kind but is a document issued to a particular person giving to that particular person and only to him a particular kind of authority It is no evidence of minority under this section (9) A leis khana register (so called from the number of columns in the statement or register) is not a public document nor is the patwari register It is a document prepared in the zemindar's daristana by the patwars who is paid by the zemindar but approved by the Collector These registers are no doubt kept for the information of the Collector but that does not make them binding as official records of the facts contained in them (10) A register of Munbar dan and Kanango Registers are intended to prove an omission and the General and Mauzdar Registers being intended to facilitate the collection of the Government Dues there was no authority to enter therein *lakheraj*es of less than

(1) Murtaza Hussain Khan v Mahomed Yasun Ali P C 38 A 552 (1916)

(2) Parbati Dassi v Purno Chunder 9 C 586 (1883) followed in Balakamma v Atulla 15 M 23 (1891) and Tilama v Kondan 15 M 378 cf Subbrana Rao v Paravasa naran 11 M 12 (1887)

(3) Shoshu Blusun v Grish Chunder 20 C 942 (1893)

(4) 15 M 24 25 supra Krishnama charan v Krishnama charan 38 M 166 (1915)

(5) Vohi Choudhery v Dhoro M s 1915 C L R 139 (1880)

(6) Gyendra Chandra v Rujendra 15 M 1 C W N 530 533 (1897)

(7) Ras Babu Golab Choud v Syed Salka Hussa 5 Pat L W 6 s c 36 1 C 513

(8) Ahetra Nath Mandal v Mahomed illa H ksh 23 C W N 48 s c 45 1 C 971

(9) Sats Chunder v Mahendra Lal 17 C 849 (1890) followed in Gunra Kumar Ablal Pande 18 A 48 (1896)

(10) Bajji Nath v Sukhu Mahton 18 C 534 (1891) followed in Samar Dasadh v J golk shore Singh 23 C 366 (1893) Chaiho Singh v Jharo Singh 39 C 993 (1912)

(11) Ra Bhaia Draj v Ben Mahad 22 C W N 439

100 bighas in area of *lakheraj*es not the subject-matter of resumption proceedings. The Thak Officers not being empowered to measure and record *lakheraj*es of less than 50 bighas in area, the omission of lakheraj as in the Thak statement was not of any probative value (1) The map and chitta prepared by the Partition Amin under the provisions of section 54 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, proved to have been accurately prepared or to have been accepted and acted upon by the landlord, are, independently of this section, admissible in evidence against the landlord for the purpose of proving what lands were held and by what tenants (2) Copies of judgments have been admitted under this section (3) Statements of facts made by a Settlement Officer in the column of restatubut
and

being at that time invested with authority to decide questions of tenure between the Thot and his tenants, is not, even if regularly recorded, admissible (4) A report on a temple by a khotal made in 1810 at the instance of a Political Agent has been held relevant to the question of the ownership of the temple (5) A statement of a witness to a police officer under the provisions of section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, reduced to writing is not a record within the meaning of this section (6) Neither is a butwara khasra prepared under the Estates Partition Act (V of 1897) (7) A recital in a judgment not inter partes of a relevant fact is not admissible in evidence under this section (8)

In a case in which the question was as to the existence of a customary right and certain reports of former Collectors on the subject of this right, made under sections 10 and 11 of Mad Reg VII of 1817, were used in evidence the Privy Council said — "Their Lordships think it must be conceded that when these reports express opinions on the private rights of parties, such opinions are not to be regarded as having judicial authority or force. But being the reports of public officers entitled to great credit in proceedings and in the conduct of the Government founded upon them" (9) A single document may be a public record within the meaning of this section and a report made by a District Officer in the discharge of his duty as such officer has been held admissible in evidence (10) But the question whether such a document is an entry in an under the first part of this section to prove that the charities were not performed

(1) Bipradas Pal Chowdhury v Monorama Dev 45 C 574 s c 22 C W N 396

(2) Dinanath Chandra v Nawab Ali 49 1 C 984

(3) Krishnasami Ayyangar v Raja Gopala Ayyangar 18 M 73 78 (1895)

(4) Madhav Rao Appaji v Deonak 21 B 695 (1896)

(5) Baldeo Das v Gobind Das 36 A. 161 (1914)

(6) Isab Mandal v R 5 C W N 65 (1900) s c 28 C 348

(7) Nandlal Pathak v Mohan Chandra

urpat Das 17 C L J 462 (1913), s c 17 C W N 779 (1913)

(8) Seethapathi Rao Dora v Venkanna Dora 45 M 332 (1922)

(9) Muttu Randinga v Perianayagam Pillai 11 A 209 238 239 Leelanund Singh v Mussamat Lakhputtee 22 W R. 231 (1874) in which a report was rejected

(10) Raman v Secretary of State, 11 Mad L J 315

(11) Mussamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chanderpai Kunwar, P C (1909), 36 I A 125 and v Jigajamba Bai Sahiba v Venkatasami Ammal, 7 M L J. 117

at that date (1) A document purporting to be a certified copy of a will taken from the Protocol of Record in Ceylon was held not to be admissible under this section (2) But a certified copy of an entry in a register of births and death has been admitted under this section (3) and a certified copy of an order of a Probate Court and grant of letters of administration has been held admissible under sections 66 and 74 (4) A passage in a district Gazetteer describing the lineage of one of the leading families of the district cannot supply the want of a pedigree showing the family and the members of it (5) The person's return in execution proceedings being an official record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty is admissible in evidence (6)

If the entry states a relevant fact, then the entry having stated that relevant fact, the entry itself becomes by force of the section a relevant fact, that is to say, it may be given in evidence as a relevant fact because being made by a public officer or other person in performance of a special duty it contains an entry of a fact which is relevant (7) The entry is evidence, though the person who made it is alive and not called as a witness. For the proof of public and official documents see sections 76 to 78 (post). Though the register may be prima facie evidence of matters directed or authorized to be inserted therein yet the person relying on the register may, by offering other evidence, displace the presumption which the register affords (8) A person who is not a party to the making of the entry is not bound by the statements in it in the sense of being estopped or concluded by them. They are only received as evidence and are open to be answered, and the statements in them may be rebutted (9)

This section does not make the public book evidence to show that a particular entry has not been made in it (10) An entry is evidence of those matters which under the provisions of a particular law it is the duty (11) of a particular public officer to enter (12)

Where a husband and wife are separated by the Hindu Marriage Act I of 1876 setting out as a special condition that the wife under certain circumstances therein set out might divorce her husband it was held in a suit by the husband that the special condition was a matter which under the provisions of the Act it was his duty to enter (13)

the person enjoined to make that entry has no personal knowledge of that fact as where it is reported to him (15)

(1) Mallikarjuna Dugget v Secretary of State for India 35 M 71

(2) Ponnammal v Sundaram Pilla 23 M 499 503 (1900)

(3) Krishnanachariar v Krishnasachariar 38 M 166 (1916)

(4) Habram Das v Hem Nath Sarma 19 C W N 1068 (1915)

(5) Balmakund v Bishva Nath 52 I C 851

(6) Heramba Nath Bandopadhyaya v Surendra Nath Mitra 53 I C 20

(7) Lekraj Fuar v Mahpal Singh 5 C 54
Parbutti Dass v Purna Chander ante

(8) Ran Das v Official Letter 9 A 386

(9) Lekraj Fuar v Mahpal Singh 5 C 755

(10) In the matter of Jaggun Lal 7

C L R 356 (1880) and see R v Greer Chunder 10 C 1074 (1884) Al Nasr

Mamk Cland 25 A 90 (1907)

(11) Doe d France v Andrews 15 Q B 756 Roscoe N P Ev 124

(12) Cf Lekraj Fuar v Mahpal Singh ante and Parbutti Dass v Purna Chander ante

(13) Ljell v Kennedy supra. This section does not extend to entries which a Public Officer is not expected to add and is not permitted to make. Al Nasr v Jank Chand 25 A at p 104 the presumption as to truth and accuracy cannot be extended to entries which were never intended to find a place in the record. Ibid at p 103

(14) Ahadem Ali v Tajmunsis 10 C 670 (1884)

(15) Doe d France v Andrews supra per Garth C J contra (v post)

Proof by Public Record

Facts of which public records are evidence

The admissibility of this class of evidence does not depend upon personal knowledge (vide ante). And so when the manner, in which certain wajib-ul arazi (or village-papers), directed to be made by Regulation VII of 1882, were made up with respect to a custom, appeared to be that the officer recorded the statements of persons who were connected with the villages in the pargana in which the taluk in suit was situated, and objection was taken to their reception in evidence on the ground that they were not prepared or attested by the Settlement Officer in person as required by the Regulation, and that the papers on the face of them did not show that the officers had passed any judgment upon the information they received, it was held that it was no valid objection that the papers had been prepared and attested by officers subordinate to the Settlement Officer, and that the fact that the officers recorded these statements and attested them by their signature amounted to an acknowledgment by them that the information they contained was worthy of credit and gave a true description of the custom (1). And in a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that entries in a public register kept in the Survey Office for the public benefit and under sanction of official duty are admissible under this section, even when they appear to be copies of earlier entries, which had needed re copying, and therefore presumably made without personal knowledge (2).

In Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh(3), Garth, C. J., said that he thought VII of 1876 (Ben-ven of possession, ty fifth section(4),
and that he understood this section (section 35) to relate to that class of cases where a public officer has to enter in a register or other book some actual fact which is known to him as for instance, the fact of a death or marriage, but that the entry that any particular person is the proprietor of certain land, is not properly speaking, the entry of a fact, but is a statement that the person is entitled to the property, and is the record of a right, not of a fact (5). But in a subsequent case(6), in which the plaintiffs tendered in evidence extracts from the Collector's Register, kept under the same Act, for the purpose of showing that certain persons were the registered proprietors of a block of land and the quantity of land held by them, and his evidence was rejected by the lower Courts on the authority of Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh, it was held [dissenting from the dictum of Garth, C. J., which, it was pointed out, was not assented to by Field J., and was opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Lekhraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh(7),] that the entries being of matters which it was the Collector's duty to record, and in the form directed by the law to be kept, certified copies thereof were admissible in evidence quantum valcat (8). In the undermentioned case(9), the Court said with regard to these entries "as evidence of ownership their value may be, and I think is very small, but it is impossible to say that they are not evidence and I therefore admitted them" (10).

(1) Lekhraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh
supra 751 753

(2) Graham v. Phamindra Nath Mitra
19 C. W. N. 1038 (1915)

(3) 9 C. 431

(4) Act VII of 1876 (B. C.) which provides for cases in which there is a dispute between two persons as to which is entitled to be registered and the Collector has to ascertain which of those persons is in possession

(5) Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh supra 434 435 and see Ram Bhusan v. Jebli Mahto 8 C. 853 (1882)

(6) Shoshi Bhoosun v. Girish Chunder
20 C. 940 (1893)

(7) 5 C. 744

(8) Shoshi Bhusun v. Girish Chunder,
supra 942

(9) Gungamoyee Dasi v. Apurba Chandra Suit No 632 of 1901 Cal. H. C., 28 Nov. 1902

(10) Per Henderson J.—The value of these entries (which have frequently been admitted in other cases) must to some extent depend upon the circumstances proved. In the case cited the following documents were admitted—Collectorate Registers, Registers under the Land Registration Act, Land revenue challans, Municipal Bills, Collectorate Bill Registers, Mutation proceedings, Assessment Register

And in a case where there was no settlement of rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act, Chapter X, it was held that the entry in the record of rights, if it was duly published, would be only prima facie and rebuttable evidence in favour of the landlord (1). It has been held in Bombay that a Collector's book is kept for purposes of revenue, not for purposes of title, and the fact of a person's name being entered in the Collector's books as occupant of land, does not necessarily of itself establish that person's title, or defeat the title of any other person (2).

In certain cases the law has expressly declared of what particular facts these entries shall be evidence, as in the case of Marriage Registers. A certified copy under the 9th section of Act VI of 1886 is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the marriage to which the entry relates (3). A Register of Births and Deaths

A certified copy of certain registers of marriage made otherwise than in performance of a special duty is admissible under Act VI of 1886 for the purpose of proving the marriage to which the entry relates (7). The solemnization of a marriage between Christians in British India may be proved in England by the production of a certificate of the marriage from the India Office (8). Foreign Registers of marriages and baptisms or certified extracts from them are receivable in evidence in England as to those matters which are properly and regularly recorded in them when it sufficiently appears that they have been kept under the sanction of public authority and are recognized by the tribunals of the country where they are kept as authentic records (9). Births & Deaths. In the undermentioned case a certified copy of an entry in a Register of Births was produced in proof of the date of the birth of a party and admitted in evidence (10). A copy certified by the Registrar General is admissible for the purpose of proving the birth or death to which the entry relates (11). A copy given by the Registrar is admissible for the same purpose. A certified copy of certain registers of birth, baptism, naming, dedication, death or burial made otherwise than in performance of a special duty, is admissible under Act VI of 1886 for the purpose of proving the birth, baptism, naming, dedication, death or burial to which the entry relates (12). A Register of Births and Deaths kept at the Police stations is a public document within the meaning of this of Calcutta Municipality and pottah granted by Government. As to the nature of the latter, see Freeman v Fairlie 1 M. I. A., 330 338 346.

(1) Abdul Rasheed v Jogesh Chandra Roy (1906), 11 C. W. N., 153.

(2) Fatma v Durja 10 Bom. H. C. R. 187 (1873), Bhagoji v Bapuji 13 B. 75 (1888), Bibi Khater v Bibi Rukha 6 Bom. L. R., 983 (1904).

(3) Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births Deaths and Marriages), s. 9.

(4) Act XV of 1865 (Parsee Marriage and Divorce) ss. 6, 8.

(5) Act III of 1872 (Non Christian Marriage) ss. 13, 14.

(6) Act XV of 1872 (Christian Marriage) ss. 79, 80.

(7) Act VI of 1886, s. 35 [As to Mahomedan marriages: Act I of 1876 (B. C.), and Khadem Ali v Tajmunnisa ante].

(8) Westmacott v Westmacott P. D. (1899) 183 s. c. 3 C. W. N. exch.

(9) Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437 448.

(10) In the estate of Mary Goodrich (deceased) Payne v Bennett (1904) 1 K. B. 138 diss. from In re Wille, L. R. 9 Eq. 373. See 1 All. L. J. 76n.

(11) Act VI of 1886 s. 9.

(12) Id. s. 35. As to Mad. Act III of 1899 see Ramalinga Reddi v Kolavys 41 M. 26.

(13) Sheikh Tamizuddin v Sheikh Tazim 46 C. 152, s. c. 22 C. W. N. 872 46 I. C., 237.

writer, the register not being one directed to be kept by any law (1) The register matters by the Indian matters by the d therein (2) A certificate to the shares and stock (3) The reports of Inspectors of Companies are admissible as evidence of the opinion of the Inspectors in relation to any matter contained in such report (4) The minutes of all resolutions and proceedings of general meetings are admissible in evidence in all legal proceedings (5) When a Company is being wound up, all documents of the Company and liquidators are as between the contributors, prima facie evidence of the truth of all matters purporting to be therein recorded (6) All copies given under section 52 of the Indian Registration Act are admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents (7) An office copy of a declaration under the Printing Presses and Newspapers Act is prima facie evidence that the person whose name is subscribed to such declaration was printer ^{or} and publisher of the periodical work mentioned in the declaration (8) The registers of Patents and Designs shall be prima facie evidence of matters inserted therein in accordance with the Act (9) And a certificate under the hand of the Controller as to any entry matter or thing made by him in accordance with the Act or the Rules thereunder shall be prima facie evidence of the entry having been made, and of the continued and sealed up to be kept by any law for the Debtors Act are without proof of seal or other proof whatsoever sufficient evidence of the same (12) Entries in registers presented to be kept by the various also kept by any law for the Appendix In England can be received to prove incidental particulars concerning the main transaction even where these are required by law to be included in the entry

It is said that if such particulars are necessarily within the knowledge of the Registering Officer they will be admissible otherwise they seem to be evidence only when expressly made so by Statute (13) But it is submitted from a consideration of the words of the section and on the authority of the cases previously cited that (even where not so expressly declared) a public register in India is evidence of all particulars required by law to be inserted therein whether they relate to the main or incidental fact or transaction Under this section a statement made by a Survey Officer in a Village Register of Lands that the name of this or that person was entered as occupant would be admissible if relevant

(1) Molamed Jafar v Emperor 22 O C 220 s c 54 I C 166

(2) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies) s 40 Ram Das v Official Liquidator ante

(3) Act VII of 1913 s 29 and Act XI of 1914

(4) Ib s 143

(5) Act VII of 1913 s 83

(6) Ib s 240

(7) Act XVI of 1908 s 57 See also Act VII of 1876 (B C) (Bengal Land Registration) Ram Bhus v Jebi Malto 8 C 333 Saraswati Das v Dhanpa

Singh Soshi Bloosan v Gurish Chunder ante

(8) Act XXV of 1867 ss 7 8

(9) Act II of 1911 ss 20(3) 46(3)

(10) Ib s 71

(11) Act XXI of 1860 (Registration of Literary Scientific and Charitable Societies) s 19

(12) 11 & 12 Vic Cap 21 s 74 and see s 78

(13) Physon Ev 5th Ed 373 Doe v Bar s 1 M & R 386 Huntley v Doona 15 Q B 96

under the authority of Government The admissibility of the first class depends on the ground that the publication being accessible to the whole community and open to the criticism of all, the probabilities are in favour of any inaccuracy being challenged and exposed (1), and of the second class on the ground that being made and published under the authority of Government, they must be taken to have been made by, and to be the result of the study or inquiries of competent persons and further (in the case of surveys and the like), they contain or concern matters in which the public are interested (2)

s. 3 ("Fact in issue")

s. 3 ("Relevant")

s. 3 ("A map or plan is a 'document'")

s. 57 (13) (Reference to maps by Court)

ss. 74-77 (Proof of public documents)

s. 83 (Presumption of accuracy in case of Government maps or plans)

s. 83 (Proof of maps or plans made for the purpose of any cause.)

s. 87 (Presumption as to any published map or chart)

s. 90 (Presumption as to map or plan 30 years old)

Taylor Fy, §§ 1674 1767-1773 1777 Starkie Fy §§ 284-291 404-408 R. scire
N. P. Ev. 194-196 Phipps Fy 5th Ed. 308 Steph Dig. Art. 30

COMMENTARY

This section is a considerable extension of the English rule (3) In the well known case of Maple v. Chitts (4) the Court held that a map or plan, if it is a "document" within the meaning of the Act, is admissible in evidence. So also.

compared one of the maps in the suit with any good general map of India" (6) A malahuri map is relevant under this section (7) As to the rule that maps drawn for one purpose are not admissible in a suit for another purpose, see Note to section 83 The maps and plans made under the authority of Government referred to in this section are (as has also been held in the case of section 83) maps or plans made for public purposes, such as those of the survey which have been in numerous cases referred to and admitted in evidence (vide post) The provisions of the section are not applicable to a map made by Government for a particular purpose which is not a public purpose, such as the settlement of the silted bed of a certain river (8) The statements must be as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps vide (generally speaking), in the first class of maps the physical features of the country, the names and positions of towns and boundaries of

under the 13th

held that "Government survey maps are evidence not only with regard to the physical features of the country depicted, but also with regard to the other circumstances which the Officers deputed to make the maps are specially commissioned to note down and that an ordinary Government survey map was for

Maps
Charts
Plans

(1) Field Fy 6th Ed. 166

(2) Cf. Taylor Ev. § 1767

(3) v. Taylor Ev. §§ 1770 1771

Steph Dig. Art. 35

(4) Steph Dig. Art. 35 p. 47 note and for recent case on admissibility of railway maps see Blue & Deschamps v. Red Mountain Railway Co. P. C. (1909) A. C. 361

(5) 2 B. L. R. (P. C.) 111 (1869)

s. c. 12 W. R. (P. C.), 6

(6) Ib. at p. 139

(7) Madhaba Sundari v. Gajendra Nath, 9 C. W. N. 111 113 (1904)

(8) Kanto Prasad v. Jagat Chandra 23 C. 335 (1895)

(9) Whitley Stokes Vol. II p. 878

(10) Koomodince Doherty v. Poorno Chunder, 10 W. R. 300 (1904) Ref. to Choudhry Nazrul Haq 1 Pat. 65 (1922)

(11) Shusee Mookhee v. Debee 10 W. R. 343 (186)

cases pencil memoranda on a Government survey map were held to be admissible. The Court observed with reference to a chart of the which I have already referred is issued under and the notes thereon may be referred to as authoritative. I find one note which is worthy of attention worded thus: Owners of vessels are strongly advised not to risk their vessels laying at anchor awaiting orders at the Sandheads between the months of April to November inclusive. Vessels are recommended to go into Saugor Roads where there is a safe anchorage and telegraph station. The record of the proceedings and the maps of the survey being public documents are provable by means of certified copies (2). Maps or plans made by Government are to be presumed to be accurate but maps or plans made for the purpose of any cause must be proved to be so (3). This provision refers to maps or plans made by Government for public purposes only. A map made by Government for a particular purpose which is not a public purpose may be admissible but its accuracy must be proved by the party producing it (4). The Court may however presume that a published map or chart the statements of which are relevant facts was written and published (5) by the person and at the time and place by whom or to which it purports to have been written or published. The Court may resort to aid to maps as documents of reference (6). The presumption provided for by section 90 (post) is applicable to maps or plans as well as to any other document purporting or proved to be 30 years old (7). The thirteenth section the corresponding section of Act II of 1855 included—but the present section is silent as to—maps made under the authority of any public municipal body.

Survey maps as evidence of possession

There are numerous decisions as to the true effect and value which should be assigned to survey maps (8) in evidence. If these cases are carefully examined it will be found there is no real conflict of decisions between them—reasonable allowance being made for observations which were directed not to the consideration of a general proposition but to the particular facts of the case which happened to be at the time before the Court. (9) A survey in these provinces is not made under the authority of any enactment of the Legislature. It is a purely executive act. At the same time the proceedings of the Survey authorities have been recognized by the Legislature and are referred to in Act IX of 1847 (Assessment of New Lands) (10). The co-operation of the parties interested in the measurement is required to be sought by the Survey Officers. It is reasonable to presume that the parties were present at and had notice of the survey and its results. It was before the evidence between the parties quantum taceat (12) is also evidence of

(1) In the matter of the German S.S. Dracenfels 27 C 860 871 (1900)

(2) Ss 74—77 post

(3) S 83 post

(4) Kan a Prashad v Jag t Chandra 23 C 335 (1895)

(5) S 87 post

(6) S 57 post

(7) Ss 3 Illustr. ante and 90 post
See Madi ab v Sindari v Gajendra Nath 9 C W N 111 113 (1904)

(8) For a description of the maps of the Trigonometrical Survey (sketches of boundary marks) and Khasra (detailed measurement maps) and Chakras see Feld Ev. 4th Ed., 215 216 b 6th Ed 166—168 and Feld's Land holding and the relation of Landlord and Tenant As to maps other than those of the survey see Jun ayo Mull ck v Duarkanath Mytee 5 C 287 (1879) Kanta Prashad Jagat

Chandra 23 C 335 (1895) and Note to S 83 and remarks of Jackson J in Collector of Rajshahy v Doorga Soondree 3 W R 211 212 (1865)

(9) Noba Coomar v Gobind Chunder 9 C L R (1881) per Field J at p 307

(10) Id see also Acts XXXI of 1838 (Alluvial Lands Bengal) IV of 1863

(B C) V of 1867 (Bengal Survey)

(11) Ran Nara Moles Chunder 19 W R 202 (1873)

(12) Radha Chandra v Gopal Chandra 20 W R 243 (1873)

possession has been declared by many decisions (1) When the question is simply one of title, and the available evidence is proof of possession at a particular period, a survey map is, and ought to be, most cogent evidence (2) But it is not conclusive evidence of possession (3) A survey map is evidence of possession at a particular time, the time at which the survey was made (4)

But evidence of possession, however short, is evidence of title, and if evidence of possession, they are also therefore evidence of title (5) There are some cases which seem to imply the contrary (6) "But the proposition which is to be deduced from all the cases is thus a survey map is not direct evidence of title in the same way

Survey Officers have 1

Their instructions are at the time, and this is what they do ascertaining such actual possession as well as they can, and, if possible by the admissions of all the parties concerned A survey map is therefore, good evidence of possession according to the boundary demarcated thereupon and which may be taken to have been admitted by the concerned to be correct regard being had to what has been said about the nature of this admission in each particular case In several of the cases quoted this Court has (to my mind, very properly) refused to lay down any general rule as to the weight to be assigned to a survey map as a piece of evidence and in one case (7) a learned Judge of this Court declined to say whether in any particular case maps ought not to be corroborated by independent evidence A survey map is then direct evidence of possession and with reference to particular circumstances of each case the Courts must decide whether this evidence of possession is sufficient to raise a reasonable presumption of title (8)

(1) Gour Monce v. Huree Kishore 10 W R 338 (1868) Shusree Mookhee v. Bissessuree Debee 10 W R 343 (1868) Prakhal Sen v. Budhu Singh 2 B L R (P C) 140 (1869) Gudadhur Banerjee v. Tara Chand 15 W R 3 (1871) Radha Choudhrai v. Gireedhara Sahoo 20 W R 743 (1873) Kashee Kishore Rofi v. Banu Soondaree 23 W R 27 (1875) Juggut Chunder v. Choudhry Zuhoor 24 W R 317 (1875) Charoo v. Zobeida Khatun 25 W R 54 (1876) Prosonno Chunder v. Land Mortgage Bank 25 W R 453 (1876) Mohesh Chunder v. Juggut Chunder 5 C 212 (1879) [discussed in 15 C 353] Syam Lal v. Lachman Choudhry 15 C 353 (1888) Jaytara Dassee v. Mohamed Mobarak 8 C 983 (1882) and see case cited ante and post

(2) Mohesh Chunder v. Juggut Chunder 5 C 212 (1879) per Jackson J at p 214

(3) Mahomed Meher v. Sheeb Pershad 6 W R 267 (1866) and for a reason why it is not see remarks of the court in the same Gudadhur Banerjee v. Tara Chand 15 W R 3 (1871) Prosonno Chunder v. Land Mortgage Bank 25 W R 453 (1876)

(4) Syam Lal v. Luchman Choudhry 15 C 353 (1888)

(5) Shusree Mookhee v. Bissessuree Debee 10 W R 343 (1868) per D N Mitter J at p 344 Gooroo Pershad v. Bishunto Chunder 6 W R 82 (1866)

Oomut Fatia v. Bhujoo Gopal 13 W R 50 (1870) Ram Narain v. Mohesh Chunder 1 W R 207 (1873) Pogose v. Mokoond Chander 25 W R 36 (1876) Syam Lal v. Luchman Choudhry 15 C 353 (1888) Satcourt Ghose v. Secretary of State 2 C 252 258 (1894) Krishna Chara v. Lingata 20 B 270 (1895)

(6) Mahu a Chandra v. Rajkumar Chuckerutty 1 B L R (A C) 5 (1868) [This decision however must be understood with reference to the facts of that particular case in which the award and the maps were the very subjects of litigation Field Ex. 6th Ed 169] Gourmonce v. Huree Kishore 10 W R 338 (1868) following Collector of Rai Shahjee v. Doorga Sundiree 2 W R 210 (1865) Jackson J doubting [Explained in Oomut Fatia v. Bhujoo Gopal 13 W R 50 (1870) Ram Narain v. Mohesh Chunder 1 W R 207 (1873) and in Mohesh Chunder v. Juggut Chunder 5 C 212 (1879)]

(7) Ram Narain v. Mohesh Chunder 1 W R 202 (1873) ref to in Choudhry Aarul Haq v. Abdul Wahab 1 Pat 65 (1922)

(8) Nobu Coomra v. Gobind Chunder 9 C L R per Field J at p 309 And so a survey or kistwari map has been recently held to be evidence between the parties quarta at both as regards possession and title Choudhry Aarul Haq v. Abdul Wahab 1 Pat 65 (1922)

And in Syam Lal Saha v Luckman Choudry(1) the High Court said 'We are not prepared to say that in no case can the evidence of survey maps be sufficient evidence of title. Each case must be decided upon its own merits. But though evidence of title, maps and survey proceedings are not conclusive (2) the Privy Council have held that maps and surveys made in India for revenue purposes are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they were made. They are not conclusive and may be shown to be wrong but in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made (3). This decision was followed in the undermentioned case(4) in which it was held that the object of the thal map being to delineate the various estates borne on the revenue roll of the District, the entry in thal map that certain lands formed part of a certain estate becomes a relevant fact under this section and such entries in thalbust maps are evidence on which a Court may act. It is open to a Court to hold that the same state of things existed at the time of the permanent settlement. As to comparison of land with map(5) and of thal map with survey map(6) see the cases mentioned below. In the undermentioned case it was held that a thalbust map was not only evidence but very good evidence as to what the boundaries of the property were at the time of the Permanent Settlement and also as to what they (by the admission of the parties) were in 1859, when the survey was made and maps prepared (7). As to maps used in subsequent suit admitted to be correct in prior arbitration proceedings(8), and as to the amount of accuracy to be expected in a thal map(9) see the undermentioned cases.

And in a case where the ownership of land was disputed and the plaintiff produced survey maps of the year 1852 1853 and also a thalbust map which contained a statement supporting his case and it was shown that the predecessor of the defendant had had full notice of the thal proceedings it was held that the evidential value of the plaintiff's thalbust and survey maps was greater than that of an unsupported survey map of the year 1805 1806 produced by the defendant and that the statements of zemindars or their agents contained in thalbust maps may amount to admissions that the land belonged to one village and that such admissions should be greatly relied on as made at a time when there was no dispute as to boundaries (10).

Thal maps are as has been pointed out in many decisions of this Court good evidence of possession but the value of that evidence varies enormously. In the case of a thal map containing definite landmarks and undisputed boundaries signed by the parties or their accredited agents and representing land which has been brought under cultivation and is in the possession of rajats whose names are known or can be discovered from the zemindary papers a thal

Evidential value of survey-maps

- (1) 15 C 353 (1888)
- (2) Pogose v Mokoond Chunder 25 W R 36 (1876) Luleet Narain v Naran Sing 1 W R 333 (1865) Tlacoore Bronnia v Tlacoore Lullit W R (1864) 120 Koylash Chunder v Raj Chander (Survey award) 12 W R 180 (1869)
- (3) Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State 30 C 291 (1902) and Secretary of State for India v Brendra Kishore Maikya P C 44 C 328 (1917)
- (4) Abdul Hamid v Kuran Chandra 7 C W N 849 (1903) and see Tajhoo Damor Singh v Kolaor Jagatpal Singh (1906) 11 C W N 230
- (5) Radha Churn v Amund Sein 15 W R 445 (1871)
- (6) Burn v Arclunbit Roy 20 W R,

- 14 (1873)
- (7) Syama Sundari v Jago Bhundu 16 C 186 (1888) see also Satewari Ghor v Secretary of State 22 C 252 258 (1894) had it not been questioned it would have seemed almost unnecessary to state that oral evidence is sufficient to prove boundaries Sirat Soomduree v Rajendra Kishore 9 W R 120 (1868)
- (8) Hronath Sircar v Preonath Sircar 7 W R 249 (1867) v Note s 33 ante
- (9) Ram Monmohun v Watson & Co 4 C W N 113 (1899) s c 27 C 336
- (10) Dunne v Dharani Kanta Lakuri (1908) 35 C 621 and see Abdul Hamid Mian v Kiran Chandra Roy (1903) 7 C W N 849

map is very valuable evidence of possession. But the value of such a map is greatly diminished when we find that there are no natural landmarks delineated thereupon, that the land was jungle when measured, that the boundaries are not discoverable from a mere inspection of the map, and that neither the zemindars nor their agents have by their signatures admitted the correctness of the thal (1). The officers engaged in survey operations are required to seek the co-operation of the parties interested in the measurement. These parties are to be induced, if practicable, to make themselves acquainted with the contents of the thal and khasra plans, and to sign them or state their objections in writing. Persons who are familiar with what takes place in these provinces when Survey Officers commence operations in a locality are well aware that neighbouring proprietors do, as a rule, carefully watch their proceedings, and if the persons interested consider that the boundary demarcated by those officers between any two estates is incorrect, they take immediate and prompt action to object and to have the map rectified. We must then look at the matter somewhat in this way: the proprietors of estates have reasonable notice and may be presumed to be well aware that the boundaries are about to be demarcated upon a map made by imperial Government Officers, and which is by consent and usage regarded as important evidence in cases of boundary dispute: they are invited to co-operate and to point out to the Survey Officers what they admit to be true boundaries between their estates (2). If they or their agents point out the boundaries and the boundaries so pointed out are demarcated on the survey map, which is then signed by them, this map is good evidence of an admission as to the correctness of the boundaries shown thereon (3). If the proprietors or their agents do not actively point out the boundaries but afterwards sign the map it is still evidence of an admission though not of so strong a nature as in the case first put. If these Survey Officers without active assistance from those interested demarcate the boundaries and no objection is raised to their correctness, the reasonable supposition is that objections would have been raised if the boundaries were not correct, and we have here admission by conduct. If objections are raised and abandoned or if objections taken before the Survey Officer unsuccessfully are not persisted in, no attempt being made to have the survey map rectified by a suit brought for this purpose, we have again evidence of admission by conduct. If a suit has been brought for this purpose and has been unsuccessful, the value of any particular survey map in evidence will vary according as the above circumstances are or are not brought out in evidence, and of course as time passes on and the production of living witnesses of what took place at the time of the survey proceedings becomes more or less impossible, the difficulty is increased of producing evidence which will enable the Court to weigh the value of a particular map in nice cases (4). Unless however it can be proved that a person

(1) Joytara Dassie v Mahomed Mobarrick 8 C 95 per Field J at p 983 see also Radha Choudhram v Gireedhar Sahoo (conduct of parties important) 20 W R 243 (1873) Brojanath Choudhry v Lal Meah 14 W R 391 (1870) (map not questioned) Rosanth Roy v Kallu Prashad 18 W R 346 (1872) (map admitted to be correct) Radhika Mohun v Gunga Narain 21 W R 115 (1874) (map not objected to) and 5 C 212 ante Sateowari Ghosh v Secretary of State 22 C 257 (1894) Ref to in Choudhry Anril Haq v Abdul Halab 1 Pat 65 (1922)

(2) See remarks of Jackson J in Col

lector of Rajshahye v Doorga Soodaree - W R 211 (1865)

(3) Id at p 213. The map shows that at the time of the survey the plaintiff alone laid claim to the land and that no one disputed his claim. Such a public assertion of a right of ownership is also I think important evidence of his title. In the absence of direct title deed acts of ownership are the best proofs of title. In connection with the subject of this class of evidence is also (b) ante should be kept in mind.

(4) Noboo Coor v Gobind Chunder 9 C 303 (1861) per Field J at pp 308 309 against whom a thal or survey is attempted to be used expressly consented to the delineation or admitted the correctness of such maps, they have no hindering effect (1) This class of evidence has been said to be valuable because it is not within the power of the parties to manufacture and it comes from a public office (2) But a survey map is a piece of evidence like other evidence in a case and can be of no effect in determining the burden of proof (3) A thal map is in no sense a record of tenures subordinate to Government revenue paying estates, and is of no value as evidence in a suit in which the extent of interest of shilme talookdar is matter for determination (4) In every case the question what lands are included in the Permanent Settlement of 1793 is a question of fact and not of law The onus of proving that the Government Revenue fixed in 1793 is assessed on any particular lands as being included in the Permanent Settlement is on those who affirm that such is the case Assuming lands not to be within the Permanent Settlement of 1793, the last survey made under the third section of Act IX of 1817 is to be taken as the starting point for deciding when the next survey is made whether lands are within the fifth and sixth sections of that Act But when the question is whether lands shown in a particular thal or survey map made since 1793 were or were not included in the lands charged with the assessment permanently fixed in 1793 the last thal or survey map cannot in all cases be acted upon or treated as decisive in the absence of evidence to the contrary (5)

Chittahs

Chittahs
presence of tl and contain t boundaries, t

It may be otherwise when the zemindar and rayats are not amicable, but a chittah made when there is no dispute going on is valuable as an admission by the parties concerned (6) In the case of copies of chittahs and evidence (8) Bayley J. remarking that these papers are the primary records out of which a survey map is made and are originally component parts of the map and evidence of the fact of demarcation of lands and properties measured and surveyed at or about the date of such map and for the purposes of the State and litigated questions respectively that notice of their being made is issued to the parties, so that these records cannot be said to be made in the absence of parties, for legally they were present when they had the opportunity of being present This was a decision under the 11th and 13th sections of Act II of 1855, but on the view there taken of the nature of chittahs they would also have been admissible under this section But whether admissible or not under this section as component parts of maps or as plans, "a chittah of the revenue survey is a public record, viz, the record of public work carried on by a public officer—the Superintendent of Survey—under the directions of the Government of

made in the or parcels ach dag its ho holds it

(1) Kristo Moni v Secretary of State 3 C W N 99 104 (1898) But in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State 30 C 291 (1903)

(2) Gidaddur Banerjee v Tara Chand 15 W R. 3 (1871)

(3) Narain Singh v Nurendro Narain 22 W R 297 (1874)

(4) Mohina Cunder v Wise 22 W R 277 (1876)

(5) Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State 30 C 291 (1903)

(6) Field Ex. 737 4th Ed Appendix

(7) 8 W R 167 (1867)

(8) In the following cases also survey chittahs were received as evidence Sudu lina Clor drain v Rajmohan Bose 3 B L R (A C) 381 (1869) Mahomed Fedee v O wood deen 10 W R 340 (1868) Srossit, Dossee v Umba Vund 24 W R 192 (1875) Taruknath Mookerjee v Mohendranath Ghose 13 W R 56 (1870) Moocheeram Majhee v Bsswibier Roy 24 W R 410 (1875) Ari an Bibi v Asrarissa (No 1294 of 1871 decided on 28th Feb 1872 by the Calcutta High Court cited in Field Ex. p 227 4th Ed 168)

Bengal' (1), and is therefore admissible under the thirty-fifth section (2). Any chittah moreover, if made by the persons and under the circumstances mentioned in the 18th section, may be admissible under that section as documentary admissions or under the 13th section as an assertion of right (3). The Privy Council in the case of Eckowrie Singh v Herralall Seal (4), speak of chittahs as no evidence of title in boundary disputes between rival proprietors when they are without further account, introduction or verification. "By these words said Hobhouse, J., "it seems to me, their Lordships held that, if chittahs are relied upon without any account given or verification made of them, then they are not to be considered as evidence, but here an account was given of the chittahs and they were properly introduced and verified and therefore that remark of their Lordships does not seem to me to apply to the chittahs now before us. They were therefore I think, properly used as evidence in this case' (5). 'It may here be observed' says Mr Field, that the reports do not always show what was the precise nature of the chittahs offered in evidence in each particular case, and to this may be attributable some of the difference of opinion which seems to prevail upon the subject in question. There is and ought to be a wide distinction as regards both weight and admissibility between the chittah and other measurement papers of the revenue survey of the country designed and carried out as an executive act of State, the similar paper of a decennial survey made under the provisions of Act IX of 1847 (v ante) the chittahs of a measurement of a particular khas mehal made by Government as zemindar (6) the chittahs of a measurement made by a private zemindar (7) at a time when the relations between him and his *raiya*ts were friendly, and the chittahs of a measurement made by the same zemindar when disputes had arisen as to enhance ment of rents. If the original records of the reported cases were examined with reference to this distinction it is more than probable that any seeming difference of opinion may be found reconcilable with sound and uniform principle" (8). Where chittahs were produced by the plaintiff as evidence of certain lands being mal, it was held that they were sufficiently attested by the deposition of the village gomastah that they were the chittahs of the village while he was gomastah, and that he had been present when, with their assistance, a puttal (new, revised) measurement had been carried out in the village (9).

37. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament or in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, or of any other legislative authority in British India constituted for the time being under the Indian Councils Act, 1861, the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892, or the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 to 1909" (10), or in a

Relevancy of state ment as to fact of public nature contained in certain Acts or Notifications

(1) Per Jackson J in Surrosmity Dossee v Ls bca Nurd 24 W R. 192 (1875)

(2) See Girindra Clandra v Nagesdra nath Chatterjee 1 C W N 530 533 (1897)

(3) See remarks of Jackson J in Collector of Rajshahye v Doorga Soonduree 2 W R 211 212 (1865) (v post) Taylor Ev § 1770 C

(4) 2 B L R (P C) 4 (1868) s c 11 W R (P C) 2

(5) Sudukhina Choudram v Rajmahon Bose 3 B L R (A C) 381 (1869) See Dinanoni Cloudram v Brojomahon Choudram 29 C 201 (1901)

(6) See Junmajooy Mull ch v Duarkasail Mytec 5 C 287 (1875) Raichnder v Binscedlar Naik 9 C 741 (1883) Taruchath Mookerjee v Mohendruath Gase 13 W R 56 (1880)

(7) As to chittahs other than those of the survey see Gopal Chander v Vadhuchander 21 W R 79 (1874) Krishna Chander v Meer Safdar 22 W R 376 (1884) Shan Chand v Runkristo Geurah 19 W R 309 (1873)

(8) Field Ev 226 1b 6th Ed 168

(9) Dabee Pershad v Ram Coomar 10 W R 443 (1863)

(10) The portion quoted has been substituted by Act X of 1914 Sch. 1 notification of the Government appearing in the Gazette of India or in the Gazette of any Local Government, or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any colony or possession of the Queen, is a relevant fact (1)

Principle.—These documents are admissible on grounds similar to those on which entries in public records are received. They are documents of a public character made by the authorized agents of the public in the course of official duty and published under the authority and supervision of the State, and the facts recorded therein are of public interest and notoriety. Moreover, as the facts stated in them are of a public nature, it would often be difficult to prove them by means of sworn witnesses (2)

s. 3 (Fact)

s. 78 (Proof of Notifications)

s. 3 (Relevant)

s. 81 (Presumption as to Gazettes, Newspapers and Private Acts)

s. 57 (2) (Judicial notice of Acts)

Steph Dig Art 33 Tylor Ev § 1660 Starkie Ev 278 Pocr, N P Ev, 187 188 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 318 31 & 32 Vic Cap 37 (The Documentary Evidence Act 1868 amended by the Documentary Evidence Act 1887) Act XXXI of 1863 (Gazette of India) Act III of 1909 s. 116

COMMENTARY.

The fact as to the existence of which the Court has to form an opinion must be one of a public nature. A similar expression occurs in section 42 post which speaks of matters of a public nature (3). The Gazette of India the organ of the Government of India was first published in 1863 only. Previous to that date the notifications of the Government of India were published in such of the Gazettes of the Local Governments as was necessary. By Act XXXI of 1863 publication in the Gazette of India was declared to have the effect of publication in any other Official Gazette in which publication was prescribed by the law in force at the date of the passing of the Act (1). In the case of R v Amiruddin (5) the Gazette of India and the Calcutta Gazette containing official letters on the subject of hostilities between the British Crown and Mahomedan fanatics on the frontier were held to have been rightly admitted in evidence under the sixth and eighth sections (6) of the repealed Act II of 1855 as proof of the commencement, continuation and determination of hostilities. It was a documents should be interpreted for purposes for which they were put in the Wahabi conspirators at Patna for purpose (7). According to the law is in general prima facie but not conclusive in judgment of law every subject is privy to the making of it but a private Statute (though it contains a clause requiring it to be judicially noticed as a public one) is not evidence at all

(1) The last portion of this section which was added by s. 2 Act V of 1899 has been removed by Act X of 1914 Sch 11

(2) Taylor Ev § 1591 Starkie Ev 273 et seq

(3) v Notes to ss 13 32 (4) ante and 42 post

(4) Act XXXI of 1863 s. 1

(5) 7 B L R 63 s. c. 15 W R Cr 75

(6) S. 6 of Act II of 1855 corresponds generally to s. 57 (judicial notice) and s. 8 of the same Act to the present section

(7) Field Ev 6th Ed 172 for English cases v Taylor Ev § 1660 and Starkie Ev 278

against strangers either of notice, or of any of the facts recited (1) The present section draws no distinction between public and private Acts of Parliament, merely requiring that the fact spoken to in either case should be of a public nature but of course neither in the case of the Act nor of the Gazette in the section mentioned is any recital therein contained conclusive of the fact recited unless expressly declared to be so, and knowledge of a fact although it be of a public nature is not to be conclusively inferred from a notification in the Ga etc, it is a question of fact for the determination of the Court (2)

Thus by the Documentary Evidence Act(3) the Ga etc is made prima facie evidence of any proclamation, order, or regulation issued by Her Majesty, the Privy Council or any of the principal departments of State. So also by section 116 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act the production of the Ga etc containing the notice mentioned in the section is conclusive evidence of the order having been duly made and of its date (4)

By Statute the Gazette has been expressly rendered evidence of various matters

The Gazettes and Newspapers are often evidence as a medium to prove notice as of the dissolution of a partnership which is a fact usually notified in that manner. But unless the case is governed by some special Act such evidence is very weak without proof that the party to be affected by the notice has probably read the particular Ga etc in which it is contained eg that he takes it in or attends a reading room where it is taken or has shown knowledge that it is a publication with the mere fact that the paper. Moreover in the case of those who dissolve partnership it is incumbent upon them to give to old customers of the firm an express and specific notice by circular or otherwise (6) Under section 350 of the repealed Act VIII of 1859 (Civil Procedure) the Government Ga etc containing the advertisement of sale and a printed paper purporting to be the conditions of sale alluded to in the Gazette and issued from the Master's Office in the name of the Master were admitted in evidence to prove the actual conditions of the deed of sale (7) Notice of a resolution of winding up a Company voluntarily must also be given by advertisement in the Local Official Ga etc(8) in certain cases by the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act(9) and certain orders made thereunder will affect creditors after proof of notice given and the lapse of a certain time (10)

Gazettes as medium to prove notice

38. When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings is relevant

Relevancy of statements as to any laws contained in law books

(1) Taylor Ev §§ 1660 1661 Steph Dig Art 33 Roscoe N P Ev 187 188 See Baban Mjacia v Nagu Shrawmala 2 B 38 (1876) Ballard v Way 5 L J Ex 207
(2) Harratt v Wise 9 B & C 712 Starkie Ev 280
(3) 31 & 32 Vic Cap 37 (1868) s 2 amended by the Documentary Evidence Act 1882 s 2
(4) Act III of 1909
(5) Starkie Ev 280 Taylor Ev §§ 1665 1666 Phillips Ev 5th Ed 131 319 Whart cited ib ss 671-675 see s 14 ante and Notes thereto In rebuttal evidence may of course be given as that the party is unable to read etc

(6) Chundee Churn v Eduljee Coxas 1 c 8 C 678 (1837)
(7) Jotendro Mohun v Rance Brjo W R 1864 50
(8) Act VII of 1913 s 206
(9) Act III of 1909 ss 70 69(4) Sch I ss 3 6 and the Insolvency Rules (Calcutta) ss 108 129 1) 138 147B and 147C
(10) Id s 3

Principle—These statements in books of law and in Reports are admissible on grounds similar to those of the three preceding sections. Books containing the law of a country(1), whether in the form of Statute or case law, deal with matters which are of public notoriety and interest, and when published under the authority of Government have the further guarantee of that authority, while reports not published under the authority of Government or of the Courts,

s 3 ("Relevant")

s 45 (Proof of Foreign law) s 57 (Judicial notice)

s 84 (Genuineness of books here mentioned)

Taylor, Ev, §§ 1423—1425, Best, Ev, § 513, Roscoe, N P Ev, 119—121, Steph Dig, Arts. 49, 50, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 367, Act XVIII of 1875, s 3 (Indian Law Reports) 6 & 7 Vic, Cap 94, s 3 22 & 23 Vic, Cap 63, 24 & 25 Vic, Cap 11 (Ascertainment of Foreign and Colonial law) Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, 53 & 54 Vic, c, 37

COMMENTARY.

'Law
of any country'

These words would by themselves include India as well as Great Britain and other Foreign Countries* but the words "form an opinion" and the fact that Courts of this country must take judicial cognizance of the laws they administer(2) which, therefore, require no proof, indicate that the countries referred to in the section are countries other than British India. Though, however, the Court must take judicial notice of laws in force in British India and of the Acts of Parliament, it may refuse, if called upon by any person, to do so, until such person produces any such appropriate book or document of reference as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so (3). Statements of law other than those contained in Reports must purport to be printed or published under authority. So a statement contained in an unauthorized translation of the Code Napoleon as to what the French law was upon a particular matter was held not to be relevant under this section(4) but reports of rulings need not be so published, if only the book containing them purport to be a report of the rulings of such country. As to the presumption of genuineness of the books in this section mentioned, see s 84, post skilled witnesses, or (in the case of foreign customs and usage)(6) by any witness, expert or not, who is acquainted with the fact and not by the production of the books in which it is contained (7). In India also Foreign law may (in addition to the method provided by this section) be proved by the opinions of persons specially skilled in such law (8). Further there exists a statutory procedure for the ascertainment of Foreign and Colonial law. By 22 and 23 Vic, Cap 63, a case may be stated for the opinion of a superior Court in any of Her Majesty's

(1) Where it is necessary to refer to a Statute judicially noticeable a copy is not given in evidence but merely referred to to refresh the memory—Starkie Ev 274

(2) S 57, post

(3) S 57, post

(4) Christian v Delaney, 26 C, 931 (1899) s c, 3 C W N, 614

(5) v definition of Foreign Court Civil Pr Code s 2 2nd Ed p 33

(6) Lindo v Belisario 1 Hagg C R 216 Sussex Peerage Case 11 C & F 114—117, Vanderdonckt v Thelluson 8 C B, 312

(7) Sussex Peerage Case, supra. Mostyn v Fabrigas, Cowp, 174, Roscoe N P Ev 119—121, Bater v Bater (1907) P. 333 (expert evidence required to prove the validity of foreign marriage)

(8) v c 45 post

donations to ascertain the law of that part(1) and by 24 and 25 Vic, Cap 11, a similar case may be stated for the opinion of a Court in any Foreign State with which Her Majesty may have entered into a Convention for the ascertainment of such law(2), and is to judicial notice of the territorial extent of the jurisdiction and sovereignty exercised de facto see The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (3)

(1) Logie v Princess Victoria 1 Jur O S 109 in which the Court of Chancery in England forwarded a case on Hindu Law to the Supreme Court of Calcutta

(2) This Act is stated to be practically a dead letter as no Convention has ever been made in pursuance of it Phipson 1 v 5th Ed 368 See also 6 & 7 Vic, Cap 94 § 3 and R v Dossaji Gulam 3 B 334 (1878)

(3) 53 & 54 Vict c 37

HOW MUCH OF A STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED

While on the one hand, in the case of a statement in a civil or criminal proceeding by way of admission or confession read together, since thus alone can the statement intended to convey be obvious, unfair to take that only which is against the interest of the declarant, while the very next sentence might contain a material qualification, on the other hand, great proximity, waste of time, and not seldom injustice, might occur if evidence of matters (often otherwise inadmissible) were allowed to be given simply on the ground that the whole of the documents or conversations must be before the Court. The latter is, therefore, constituted the judge of the amount which may be given in evidence of any document or conversation.

What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation document book, or series of letters or papers 39 When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers, as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.

Principle — section (which is to the same effect) added on the general grounds

s 21 23 (Proof of Admissions) (Examination Cross examination. Re examination) ss 137, 138 & Chap X passim

Taylor, Ev., §§732—734, 14 4, Roscoe, N P Ev., 179

COMMENTARY.

Documents generally

“Though the whole of a document may, as a general rule, be read by the one party, when the other has already put in evidence a partial extract (2), this rule will not warrant the reading of distinct entries in an account book (3), or distinct paragraphs in a newspaper (4), unconnected with the particular entry or paragraph relied on by the opponent, nor will it render admissible bundles of proceedings in bankruptcy, entries in corporation books, or a series of copies of letters inserted in a letter book, merely because the adversary has read therefrom one or more papers or entries or letters (5). If, indeed, the extract

(1) Norton Ev 203 204 Taylor, Ev., §§ 732—734, 127—129 v ante

(2) R v Queens C Is, Re Feckham, 10 L. R. Ir 294 cited in Taylor, Ev., p 527

(3) Call v Howard 3 Stark, R. 6
Reeve v Whitmore 2 Drew, & Sm., 446
(4) Darby v Ousely 1 H & N 1
(5) Sturge v Buchanan, 10 A. & E. 598

put in expressly refer to other documents, these may be read also(1), but the mere fact that remaining portions of the papers or books may throw light on the parts selected by the opposite party will not be sufficient to warrant their admission, for such party is not bound to know whether they will or not, and moreover, the light may be a false one"(2) It may be inferred, it has been said, from this section, how much of a police diary may be seen by an accused person when it is used to refresh memory or to contradict the police officer. In such case the accused person is entitled to see only the particular entry and so much of the special diary as is, in the opinion of the Court, necessary in that particular matter to the full understanding of the particular entry, so used and no more (3)

"The same rule prevails in the case of a conversation in which several distinct matters have been discussed, and although it was at one time held, on high Conversation of proceeding has induced the Courts, in later times, to adopt a stricter rule and if a part of a conversation is now relied on as an admission, the adverse former time does not authorise proof by the party calling that witness of all that was said at the same time, but only of so much as can be in some way connected with the statement proved (6) Therefore where a witness has been cross examined as to what the plaintiff had said in a particular conversation it was held that he could not be re-examined as to other assertions, made by the plaintiff in the same conversation, that were not connected with the assertions to which the cross examinations related, although they were connected with the subject matter of the suit (7)

"With regard to letters it has been held that a party may put in such as Letters were written by his opponent, without producing those to which they were answers, or calling for their production, because in such a case the letters to which those put in were answers are in the adversary's hands and he may produce them if he thinks them necessary to explain the transaction (8) But while this is the strict rule, yet in practice if a party reads a letter from his opponent and is in possession of a copy of his own letter to which the opponent's is an answer he is expected to read both. If a plaintiff puts in a letter by the defendant on the back of which is something written by himself, the defendant is entitled to have the whole read(9), and where a defendant laid before the Court several letters between himself and the plaintiff, he was allowed to read a reply of his own to the last letter of the plaintiff it being considered as a part of an entire correspondence (10)

(1) Sturge v Buchanan 10 A & E 600 605 The reference incorporates the two together Johnson v Gibson 4 Esp 21 Falconer v Hanson 1 Camp 171

(2) Sturge v Buchanan supra 600—605 Taylor Ev § 732

(3) R v Mannu 19 A 405 (1897) per Edge C J Dal Singh v Emperor 44 I A 137 (1917)

(4) The Queen's case 2 B & E 297 298 per Abbott C J

(5) Prince v Samo 7 A & E 627 634 635 Taylor Ev § 733

(6) Prince v Samo supra 627 Sturge

v Buchanan 10 A & E 600

(7) Taylor Ev § 1474 Prince v Samo supra 637 In this case the opinion of Lord Tenterden in The Queen's Case (2 B & B 298) that evidence of the whole conversation if connected with the suit, was admissible though it related to matters not touched in the cross examination was considered and overruled

(8) Lord Barrymore v Taylor 1 Esp 177 De Med na v Owen 3 C & K 72

(9) Daglish v Dodd 5 C & P 238

(10) Taylor Ev § 734 Roe v Dey 7 C & P 705

must have been pronounced by a competent Court in the exercise of Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty, or Insolvency jurisdiction. Such a judgment is conclusive of certain matters against all the world and not against the parties and their privies only. On the other hand, the judgment in personam (or the ordinary judgment between parties as in cases of contract tort or crime) of a Court of competent jurisdiction is conclusive proof in subsequent proceedings between the same parties or their privies only of the matter actually decided (1) but is no evidence of the truth of the decision between strangers or a party and a stranger (2) except upon matters of a public nature in which case however they are not conclusive evidence of that which they state (3). The reasons of this rule are commonly stated to rest on the ground expressed in the maxim res inter alios acta vel iudicata alteri nocere non debet it being considered unjust that a man should be affected and still more that he should be bound by proceedings in which he could not make defence cross examine or appeal (4).

Foremost among the judgments orders and decrees which are declared to be admissible by the following sections are those which have the effect of barring a second suit or trial (5). Thus judgments orders and decrees may be relevant for the purpose of showing that there is a lis pendens (6) or that the matter is res iudicata (7) or that the claim advanced forms part of a former claim or that the remedy for which the plaintiff sues is one for which the plaintiff might have sued in a former suit in respect of the same cause of action (8). Next the judgments of certain Courts in the exercise of Probate Matrimonial Admiralty or Insolvency jurisdiction are declared to be relevant and conclusive proof of certain matters (9). The general nature of these the particular individuals status generally as against rule is that public policy requires that matters of status should not be left in doubt and a decision in rem not merely declares status but ipso facto renders it such as it is declared (10). With the exception of such judgments there are no judgments conclusive in Indian Courts against persons other than the parties to the proceedings or their representatives (11) as to the facts which they declare or the rights which they confer. There are however such judgments namely those relating to matters of a public proof of what they state and not proceeding and their representative way of evidence as to the facts with which they are concerned. Thus in a suit in admissibility under the preceding sections the existence of a judgment order or decree may be a fact in issue in the case or a relevant fact under some of the other provisions of this Act as to relevancy (13). Thus where A sues B, because through B's fault A has been sued and cast in damages the judgment

(1) See s 40 post

(2) vide s 43 post illustrates (a) (b)

(3) S 42 post where the reasons for this Exception are considered

(4) See Pherson v. E. J. Ed 405 where the grounds of this rule are considered

(5) S 40 post

(6) Civ. Pr. Code Part I 10 2nd Ed p 95 see s 40 post

(7) Ib. Part I ss 11-14 d Ed

pp 99-101 Cr Pr Code see s 403 40 post Furness Withy Co v. Hall (1909) Times L.R. V 25 p 233

(8) Woodroffe & A. v. Al. s Civ. Pr. Code O II r 2 2nd Ed p 573 see s 40 post

(9) S 41 post

(10) See note to s 41 post

(11) Norton v. E. J. Ed 204 214

(12) S 42 post

(13) See s 43 post

such questions (1) It is therefore not intended in this work to deal with these subjects, but merely to cite the provisions of the Codes relating thereto

The reception of this evidence is grounded upon the fact that unless it were admitted effect could not be given to the provisions of the law of Procedure which this section is intended to subserve If that law declares that a Court shall not in particular circumstances hold or take cognizance of a judicial proceeding it is plainly necessary to be able to show that these circumstances exist The present section accordingly enables such proof to be given

Except where a suit has been stayed under the Civil Procedure Code, Pending suits a Court shall not try any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit for the same relief between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim pending in the same or any other Court whether superior or inferior in British India having jurisdiction to grant such relief or any Court beyond the limits of British India established by the Governor General in Council and having like jurisdiction or before Her Majesty in Council Explanation—The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court (2) does not preclude the Courts in British India from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action (3) This section only provides that no suit shall be tried if the same issues are involved in a previously instituted suit It does not dispense with the institution of a suit within the proper time when the law requires such institution (4)

In respect of relief or remedies for which the plaintiff in a former action omitted to sue the Civil Procedure Code enacts as follows — Omission to sue for relief or remedy

Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action (5) but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court

If a plaintiff omit to sue in respect of or intentionally relinquish any portion of his claim he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished

A person entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of his remedies but if he omits (except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing) to sue for any of such remedies he shall not afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted For the purpose of this section an obligation and a collateral security for its performance shall be deemed to constitute but one cause of action (6)

The rule of estoppel by judgment or res judicata is that facts actually decided by a court in one suit cannot be again litigated between the same parties and are conclusive between them for the purpose of terminating litigation (7) Res judicata

- | | |
|---|---|
| (1) Cunningham Ev 175 176
(2) See as to meaning of Civ Pr Code s 2
(3) Civ Pr Code Part I s 10 2nd Ed p 95 Fakeer uddin Malomed v Official Trustee 7 C 82 (1881) Balkishan v Kulan Lal 11 A 148 (1888) Bisses v Singh v Ganpit 8 C L R 113 (1880) Mekyee Keshtu v Detachand 4 C L R 282 (1879) Ramalinga Chetty v Ragunatha Rao 20 M 418 (1897) Naappa Chetty v Chidambaram 21 M 18 (1897) Venkata Chandrappa v Venkatarama Redd 22 M 256 (1898)
(4) Nenaganda v Paresi 22 B 640 (1897)
(5) Venkatarama Ayyar v Venkatarama Sibrhawan 24 M 27 (1900) | (6) Civ Pr Code O II r 2 2nd Ed p 573
(7) Bolcau v Bullen 2 Ex 665 681 per Park B and per Lord Hardwicke in Gregory v Molesworth 3 Atkyns 625 cited in Soorjo noone Dayee v Suddanund Molapatter 12 B L R 304 315 (1873)
Estoppel by judgment results from a matter having been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit and having been therein heard and finally decided Kali Krishna v Secretary of State 16 C 173 (1883) Poulton v Adjustable Cover and Boiler Block Co C A (1903) 2 Ch 240 For an apparent exception to this rule in the case of a petition to revoke a patent which exception seems based on the ground that such a petition is on behalf |
|---|---|

There is nothing technical or peculiar to the law of England in this rule which is recognised by the Civil law and has been held to be consistent with the Code of Civil Procedure (1) Independently of the provision in the Code of 1859 the Courts in India recognised the rule and applied it in a great number of cases and the re enactment of the provision in the Code of 1877 appears to have been made with the intention of embodying in the 12th and 13th sections of that Code the law then in force in India instead of the imperfect provision in the second section of Act VIII of 1859 (2) The provisions in the present Code (3) which embody the law of estoppel by judgment in civil suits in India (4) correspond very nearly with those in the Code of 1877 English text writers deal with this subject under the head of Evidence as it is a branch of the law of estoppel but the authors of the Indian Codes have regarded it as belonging more properly to the head of Procedure (5) Estoppel is regarded in these Codes as proceeding upon the equitable principle of altered situation and is distinguished from res judicata which is based on the principle that there must be an end to litigation (6) The principle of res judicata as remarked by West J in Sridhar Bai Ajak v Arajan Lalad Babaji (7) is simple in its statement but presents considerable difficulty in its application Very numerous cases have arisen in India upon the construction of the sections of the Code dealing with this subject and upon them Many of them turn upon the principles to be applied to the subject of this work it would be unprofitable and lead to confusion to enter into an examination of many of these decisions (8) for a case may perhaps be a binding authority as to the conclusion arrived at where the facts are identical but not otherwise in any other case the tribunal must investigate the facts for itself and determine (9) referring to previous cases only for such propositions of law as are contained in them.

In a reported case in the Privy Council (10) it was said Their Lordships desire to emphasize that the rule of Res Judicata while founded on recent precedent is dictated by a wisdom which is for all time * * * * Though the rule of the Code may be traced to an English source it embodies a doctrine in no way opposed to the spirit of the law as expounded by the Hind com " of the public see n re Deely's Patent (1895) 1 Ch 687 & Taylor § 1685 (a) For bar in suit by members of public see Wlam ed An r v Sum tra Kiar 36 A 424 (1914) (members of Mahomedan community)

(1) Kluwoleg Sngl v Hosse n Bur 7 B L R 673 678 (1871) But while consistent it was not identical with it see Hukum Chand Res Jud 7

(2) M s r Raghb r v Sheo Baksh 9 C. 439 445 9 I A 197 202 204 (1882) Kan eswar Pershad v Rajkumar Ruttun 19 I A 238 20 C 79 (1892)

(3) Act V of 1908 ss 11—14 2nd Ed pp 99—101

(4) Cf as to the law on this subject Estoppel by matter of record in civil suits in India by L Broughton (1893) The Law of Estoppel in British India by A Caspersz (4th Ed 1915) Felds Ev 6th

Ed 175—190 The Law of Res Judicata by Hukum Chand (1894)

(5) See remark of Mahmood J in S to Ran Am r Begum 8 A 325 331 (1886) folio ed in Ramchandra Dhondo v Mahkafa 40 B 679 (1916)

(6) Casamally Jaurajbhav v S r Currim bhoy Ebrahm 36 B 214 (1912) Bow shanker Nanabhai v Morarj Keshav 36 B 283 (1912)

(7) 11 Bom H C R 228 (1874)

(8) See Broughton op cit 7

(9) London Joint Stock Bank v S m ons App Cas 1892 at p 222 per Lord Herschell v b at p 210 per Lord Halsbury L C I must make a protest that it is not a very profitable inquiry whether one case resembles another in its facts

(10) Shooparsan Singh v Ramnandan Prasad Sngl P C. 43 C 694 (1916) per S r Lawrence Jenk ns of former judgment. And so the application of the rule by the Courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of forms but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law.

With respect to the rule as applicable to Civil cases, the provisions of the present Code of Civil Procedure in regard to res judicata as contained in sections 11—14 are as follow —

No Court shall try any suit or a sue(1) in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties(2) or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit, or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised and has been heard and finally decided by such Court.

Explanation I —The expression former suit shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question whether or not it was instituted prior thereto.

Explanation II —For the purpose of this section the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provision as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court.

Explanation III —The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted expressly or impliedly by the other.

Explanation IV —Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit.

Explanation I —Any relief claimed in the plaint which is not expressly granted by the decree shall for the purpose of this section be deemed to have been refused.

Explanation II —Where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others all persons interested in such rights shall for the purpose of this section be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating (3).

The rule contained in this section applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous proceedings where a proceeding is not a suit, or to the decision of a question arising in it. The Madras High Court has held in two recent cases that the principle of constructive res judicata should not be applied to execution proceedings unless the decision of the subsequent question was either expressly given or necessarily implied (6).

Where a plaintiff is precluded by rules from instituting a further suit in respect of any particular cause of action he shall not be entitled to institute a suit in respect of such cause of action in any Court to which the Code applies (7).

(1) As to the propriety of the extension or the doctrine to exclude the trial of an issue see Rai Churn v. Kaur and Mohan 2 C W N 287 301 (1898) s c 25 C 571 and see Clandi Prasad v. Mahendra Singh 23 A 5 8 11 (1900).

(2) See Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmad 44 M 778 (1921).

(3) Civ. Pr. Code s 11.

(4) Balkrishnan v. Kishan Lal 11 A 145 (1888).

(5) Sriish Chandra Pal Chowdhury v. Triguna Prasad 40 C 541 (1913).

(6) Saundaram Pillai v. Chokkalingam 40 M 780 (1917). Lakshmi Narayana v. Pallamraju 4 M L W 101 (1916). See on this point Woodroffe and Amcer Ali's Civil Procedure Code and Kashinath Krishna Jashi v. Dhondshi 40 B 675 (1916) and Ajudhia v. Panda v. Inayatullah 35 A 111 (1913).

(7) Civ. Pr. Code s 12.

A foreign judgment shall be conclusive as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, except—

- (a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction,
- (b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case(1),
- (c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international Law or a refusal to recognize the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable,
- (d) where the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice,
- (e) where it has been obtained by fraud,
- (f) where it sustains a claim founded in a breach of any law in force in British India (2)

The Court shall presume upon the production of any document purporting to be a certified copy of a foreign judgment that such judgment was pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction unless the contrary appears on the record, but such presumption may be displaced by proving want of jurisdiction (3)

These sections as also the present section of this Act, must be read as subject to any other enactments touching their subject matter. Thus an entry of a record prepared under section 108 of the Land Revenue Code, Bombay Act V of 1879 by the Survey Officer, describing certain lands as khots, is by force of the seventeenth section of the Khots Act (Bombay Act I of 1880) conclusive and final evidence of the liability thereby established and shuts out the evidence of a prior decision under this section of the Evidence Act as proof of res judicata whereby a Civil Court adjudged the land to be dhara (4)

The rule with regard to previous judgments in Criminal cases is contained in the Criminal Procedure Code(5) and is as follows —

A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237

A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 255, first paragraph

A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted may be afterwards tried for such last mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted

A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he

(1) Keymer v Viswanatham Reddi
P C 40 M 112 (1917) 44 I A 6

(2) Civ Pr Code s 13

(3) Civ Pr Code s 14

(4) Rai chandra Bhaskar v Raghunath
Buclaset 20 B 475 (1895) See also as to khots Act Balaaj Raghunath v Bulbin

Rughoji 21 B 235 (1895) Gopal v
Dasurath Set 21 B 244 (1895), Antaji
Kashinath v Antaji Madlat 21 B 480
(1896) Gopal v Magheswar 21 B 608
(1896)

(5) S 403

may have committed if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged

Explanation—The dismissal of a complaint the stopping of proceedings under section 219 the discharge of the accused or any entry made upon a charge under section 273 is not an acquittal for the purpose of this section

The rule as has been already seen is applicable in Criminal cases also and a person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction and convicted or acquitted cannot be tried again for the same offence (1) The principle of the rule of res judicata is one that is well settled namely that a matter which has been put in issue tried and determined by a competent Civil or Criminal Court cannot be re opened between those who were parties to such adjudication The competency of the Court is essential (2) The test is not whether the decision was explicit but whether the issue was one upon which the judgment of the former suit was based (3) And the grounds for the decision may be res judicata as well as the decision itself (4) Res judicata should not be inferred from a judgment it must be clear from the pleadings and findings (5) The findings must be on points directly and substantially in issue (6) And a finding to be res judicata as between co plaintiffs must have been essential for the purpose of the relief (7) while the Courts are reluctant to enforce the principle as between co defendants (8) The grounds of same matter interest of ut sit finis be twice vexed for the same cause (emo debet bis vexari pro una eadem causa) or twice punished for one and the same offence (ne no debet bis puniri pro ui o delicto) (9) Inasmuch however as an estoppel shuts out enquiry into the truth it is necessary to see that the principle of res judicata is not unduly enlarged (10) Although the plea of res judicata may be taken at any state of a suit including first or second appeal an Appellate Court is not bound to entertain the plea if it cannot be decided upon the record before that Court and if its consideration involves the reference of fresh issues for determination by the Lower Court (11)

41 A final judgment order or decree of a competent Court in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction which confers upon or takes away from any person

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate etc jurisdiction

(1) Cr Pr Code s 403 as to the mode of proving a previous conviction or an acquittal see s 517 ib

(2) Abdul Kadir v Doolanbibi 37 B 563 (1913)

(3) Sri Gopal v Parthi Sngl P C 24 A 479 Kali Kumar v B dhu Bhusan 16 C L J 89 (1912) Maharan Beni Pershad v Raj Kumar 16 C L J 124 (1912)

(4) Mutlanlal v Secretary of State 39 M 1202 (1916) Krishna Belari Roy v Brajeswar Choudra ee 2 I A 283 (1875) Kamrujon v Secretary of State F B 11 M 309 (1888)

(5) Rutlimes v Dhondo Maladev 36 B 207 (1912) Ba yya Na du v Suryanarayana F B 37 M 70 (1914) see Ba yya Na du v Paradesi Na du 35 M 716 (1912) Mahomed Ibrahim v A bika Pershad P C 39 C 527 (1912) and for other recent decisions on Res Judicata see

Mo a Holappa v Vithal Gopal 40 B 663 (1916) Ba Devani v Umedbhai Bhilabhai 40 B 614 (1916) Ramchandra Dile do v Malkapa 40 B 679 (1916) Madia rao v Anurajabai 40 B 606 (1916)

(6) Secretary of State v Samantla 37 M 25 (1914)

(7) Ramchandra Narayan v Narayan Maladev 11 B 716 (1886)

(8) Fakirchand Lalubhai v Vagachaidas 40 B 211 (1916)

(9) Lockyer Ferryma 2 App Cas 519 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 390 cited in Ra clod Marar v Benaj Edulji 20 B at p 91 (1894)

(10) Ras Churn v Kumud Mohan 2 C W N 297 301 (1893) s c. 25 C 51

(11) Kanai Lal v Su aj Ku uar 71 A 446 (1899)

any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, order or decree(1) declares it to have accrued to that person; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, order or decree(1) declared that it had ceased or should cease;

and that any thing to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, order or decree(1) declares that it had been or should be his property.

Principle.—A decision in rem not merely declares the status of the person or thing but ipso facto renders it such as it is declared. Public policy requires, that matters of social status should not be left in continual doubt, and as regards things every one, generally speaking, who can be affected by the decision, may protect his interests by becoming a party to the proceedings (2)

40, 42, 43 (Judgments, orders and decrees) s 3 ('Relevant')

44 (Fraud and want of jurisdiction) s 4 ('Conclusive proof')

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1673—1681, 1733—1738, Best, Ev., § 593, Pigott on Foreign Judgment (1879), Roscoe, N P Ev., 193, 194, Everest and Strode on Estoppel, Bigelow on Estoppel, Story's Conflict of Laws, Westlake's Private International Law (1912), Wheaton's International Law, 216, 225 (1889), 4th Ed., 221, 230, 231, Foote's Private International Law, Broughton's Estoppel by Matter of Record in India, 114, Caspersz's Law of Estoppel, 4th Ed., 731; Hukum Chand's Res Judicata, 493, Field, Ev., 6th Ed. 179—181, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed. 385; Steph Dig., Arts. 39—47, pp. 165—166.

COMMENTARY.

Although the term "judgment in rem" is not used in this Act, yet this section incorporates the law on the subject of such judgments as explained in the decision of Sir Barnes Peacock in Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn (3). Many

(1) The words "order or decree" in the last three paragraphs were added by s 3, Act VIII of 1872

(2) Phipson, Ev., 365, and authorities there cited 5th Ed., 386—387.

(3) 7 W R., 338 (1867), see this judgment Field, Ev., 329—333, Yarakalamma v Annakala 2 Mad H C R 276 (1864) Jogendra Deb v Fumndro Deb 14 M I A., 367; 11 B L R., 244 (1811) where the subject of judgments in rem and the meaning of the terms in rem 'jura in rem' and 'status' are fully discussed See also Broughton op cit. 114, Caspersz, op cit. 4th Ed., 734, Hukum Chand, op cit. 493, Bigelow on Estoppel Pigott on Foreign Judgments (1879). Westlake's Private International Law (1880) Wheaton's International Law 5th Ed., 221, 230 231, Foote's Private International Law, Everest and Strode on Estoppel, Story's Conflict of Laws With difficulties on the subject, at any rate so far as domestic judgments in rem are concerned, are removed by this section, which greatly simplifies the law relating to these judgments. For the section declares what are the judgments which are alone to have a conclusive character, and one of the main difficulties has always been to ascertain some principle upon which to rest this class of judgments so as to determine what cases fall within it. And the section is exhaustive, for instance, it has been recently held in the Punjab High Court that a previous judgment in a compromise suit was not a judgment in rem not being included in the scope of this section and was therefore no bar to a subsequent suit. . . . and on a footing somewhat well as from that of foreign enforcement is still void of express legislative sanction, as when they are beyond the rule of res judicata enunciated in the Civil Procedure Code, there is nothing in this Act to directly indicate that its provisions relating to judgments in rem are to be construed so as to include foreign judgments. But it is apprehended that in analogy with the practice of the English Courts such judgments given in the exercise of or insolvency jurisdiction will receive in India the same effect accorded to domestic judgments of the same world. Prior to the passing of the Evidence Act, conclusive effect was not infrequently, but erroneously, given to decisions which were really binding only inter partes. . . . if an adoption is made by a person, the adoption is valid, and the adopted son is entitled to the same rights as a natural son. . . . Yarukalamma v. Churn (5) . . . is a case in which the Court considered the effect of an adoption in a suit inter partes or more correctly speaking in an action in personam. . . . is not a judgment in rem or binding upon strangers or in other words upon persons who were neither parties to the suit nor privies was approved of and confirmed by Peacock C. J. delivering the judgment of the Full Bench in the case of Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn 7 W. R. 338 post (5) 7 W. R. 338 (1867) B. L. R. Sup. Vol. F. B. 662. . . . (6) See Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn supra where it is said of a decree of divorce—It is conclusive upon all persons that the parties have been divorced and that the parties are no longer husband and wife but it is not conclusive nor even pro ma facie evidence against strangers that the cause for which the decree was pronounced existed. For instance if a reference to this section the Select Committee on the Bill remarked in their Report as follows—For the sake of simplicity and in order to avoid the difficulty of defining or enumerating judgments in rem we have adopted the statement of the law by Sir Barnes Peacock in Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn 7 W. R. 339.

(1) Ramat Ali Khan v. Musst. Babu Zuhra (1912) 47 P. R. 14 p. 49.

(2) See Hukam Chand op cit 603 et seq. Pigott, op cit Westlake op cit Wheaton op cit supra note (1).

(3) As to the history and position of judgments in rem in India prior to this Act see Yarukalamma v. Annakala 2 Mad. H. C. R. 276 (1864) Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn 7 W. R. 338 (1867) Jogendra Deb v. Funindro Deb 14 M. I. A. 373 (1871) Ahmedbhoy v. Vallebhoy 6 B. 703 (1882).

(4) 2 Mad. H. C. R. 276 (1864). The conclusion of Holloway J.—That a decision by a competent Court that a Hindu family was joint and undivided or upon a question of legitimacy adoption partition of property rule of descent in a particular family or upon any other question in a suit inter partes or more correctly speaking in an action in personam is not a judgment in rem or binding upon strangers or in other words upon persons who were neither parties to the suit nor privies was approved of and confirmed by Peacock C. J. delivering the judgment of the Full Bench in the case of Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn 7 W. R. 338 post (5) 7 W. R. 338 (1867) B. L. R. Sup. Vol. F. B. 662.

(6) See Kanhya Lal v. Radha Churn supra where it is said of a decree of divorce—It is conclusive upon all persons that the parties have been divorced and that the parties are no longer husband and wife but it is not conclusive nor even pro ma facie evidence against strangers that the cause for which the decree was pronounced existed. For instance if a the legal character to which a person may be declared to be entitled, or to which a person may be declared not to be entitled, and the title which a person may be declared to possess in a specific thing. This section not only therefore but also enacts what their and less extensive than that in rem in English Courts(1)

whose present tendency is, however, to narrow the effect of such judgments making them binding for their proper purposes only, in accordance with the view which has been adopted by the Indian Legislature. For, according to the exception of the adjudication in rem against all persons and beyond the judgment on appeal (4). Under the provision of the present section the judgments therein mentioned will operate in rem only in respect of those matters of which these judgments are declared to be conclusive proof. Beyond this only parties and privies will be within the estoppel. In English law a judgment in rem is strong prima facie evidence in a Criminal case on behalf of the person in whose favour such judgment was given but it is not conclusive(5), and a Criminal conviction is not in a subsequent proceeding conclusive of the facts necessary to be proved to obtain the conviction and is subject to the same rules of evidence as an ordinary judgment inter partes. Indeed, such a judgment would not seem to be a judgment in rem at all except in so far as a conviction for felony amounts to a judgment that divorce between A and B were granted upon the ground of the adultery of B with C it would be conclusive as to the divorce but it would not be even prima facie evidence against C that he was guilty of adultery with B unless he were a party to the suit.

(1) According to English Law a domestic judgment in rem is conclusive inter omnes of the matters actually decided and also in prize cases of the grounds of the decision if these are plainly stated. A foreign judgment in rem is generally conclusive against strangers only upon questions of prize where the ground of condemnation is plainly stated or of marriage and divorce where the marriage was solemnised and the parties domiciled in the foreign country or of bankruptcy as to contracts made in such country or of probate administration and guardianship to a limited extent see Phipson Ev 5th Ed 386 387 where the authorities are cited.

(2) De Mora v Concha L R 29 Ch D 268 Concha v Concha L R, 11 App Cas 541.

(3) See Bernard v Motteux Doug 574 580. All the world are parties to a sentence of a court of Admiralty per Lord Mansfield, Hughes v Cornelius 2 Sm L Ca. 9th Ed 825, 10 12th Ed Vol II p 764. The Helena 4 Rob Adm 3. Such adjudications have been held conclusive not only for their own proper purposes but for other purposes as well but it has been doubted whether, since the case of Concha v Concha supra the findings and grounds of the judgment as distinguished from the judgment itself would be deemed conclusive upon all the world. Bigelow on Estoppel 5th Ed 242. See Caspersz op cit (4th Ed pp 731 737-739) and following note.

(4) 'The Court of Appeal in De Mora v Concha L R 29 Ch D 268 plainly intimate that none of the generally accepted kinds of judgment in rem are such with the single exception of adjudication in prize causes in the admiralty in the sense that is to say that the findings and grounds of decision bind inter omnes. The judgment itself may operate in rem in a variety of cases but nothing else than the judgment except in the case mentioned. The result is that the discussion in regard to the distinction between judgments in rem and judgments in personam appears to have become for the greater part obsolete learning. If the two cases referred to point aright (De Mora v Concha supra Brigha v Fayerweather, 140 Mass 411) there is but one pure judgment in rem carrying that is to say in its broadly conclusive effect necessary findings and grounds of the decision other judgments operate only so far as they have perfectly and completely against all persons—established a right in rem. Beyond the judgment only parties and their privies are within the estoppel. Prize cases themselves are treated by both Courts English and American as exceptional possibly the foundations even of Hughes v Cornelius (a prize case supra) are no longer secure. M M Bigelow in the 'Law Quarterly Review, Vol II p 406 (1886).

(5) Taylor Ev § 1680.

the person convicted is a felon (1) But under this Act such a judgment will be conclusive in a Criminal, equally and to the same extent as in a Civil proceeding (2) In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it has been held that a verdict of acquittal can only be conclusive as regards persons actually tried and not as regards persons named in a charge of conspiracy but not brought to trial, and it was said that the technicalities of English Law based on the sacred character of Trial

An order may be conclu

Thus an order upon a evidence that the moneys ordered to be paid are due and all other pertinent matters stated in such order are to be taken to be truly stated as against all persons and in all proceedings whatsoever (4) As in the case of judgments inter partes a judgment in rem must be final and pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction (5) It has been held by the Punjab High Court that a plaintiff was estopped under this section from pleading in a suit filed in the Punjab that property

he had unsuccessfully

High Court to be decl

made a fraudulent disj fact that the Bombay High Court was a Court of competent jurisdiction under section 16 of the Civil Procedure Code in which section 'property' means property in British India (6)

The Courts exercise testamentary and intestate jurisdiction (7) under the Indian Succession Act (8) the Hindu Wills Act (9) and the Probate and Administration Act (10) This section is applicable to probates granted prior to the passing of the Hindu Wills Act (11) In the case now cited it was contended that as the testator died before the Hindu Wills Act came into force and as the executor of the will of a Hindu dying before that Act came into force was a mere manager having no title to the estate the probate of his will neither conferred a legal character nor declared the executor to be entitled to any legal character But the Court held as above mentioned and said — "I have examined the cases which have been cited but I am of opinion that section 41 of the Evidence Act applies to this case It is quite true that a Hindu executor was at any rate until the passing of the Hindu Wills Act only

Probate Jurisdiction

(1) Taylor § 16 4 & see Alderson v Collinson (1901) 7 K B 107 an order made in affiliation proceedings is not a judgment in rem neither is an order to wind up a Company In re Boulton & Wells's contract 1895 1 Ch 663

(2) Field Ev 335 1b 6th Ed 181 see p 380 381 post notes (4) and (5)

(3) Manindra Chandra Ghose v Emperor 41 C 754 (1914) approving Ramesh Chandra Bannerjee v Emperor 41 C 350 (1913) per Woodroffe J

(4) Indian Companies Act VII of 1913 s 198

(5) S 41 see s 44 past and s 40 ante And see Toronto Railway Co v Corporation of Toronto (1904) A C 809

(6) Ram Narain v Durga Das (1912) 47 P R 55 p 205

(7) As to the effect of probate and letters of administration see De Mora v Concha L R, 29 Ch D 268 Whicker v Hume 7 H L C A 124 Concha v Concha L R 11 App Cas 541 and other cases cited in Physon Ev 5th Ed 411 412 Taylor Ev § 1759—1761 Roscoe

N P Ev 201 202 Cootes Probate 10th Ed 352—356 Williams on Executors 10th Ed 431—434 see also pp 341 472 492—493 1637—1638 Hukm Chand op cit 513 Act X of 1865 ss 242 283 191 Act V of 1861 ss 59 12 14 and post Komol Lochun Dutt v Nidruton Mundie 4 C 360 (1878) Ref to in Rakshab Mondol v Sm Tarangini Devi 25 C W N 207 (1921) Teen Cowree v Harekur Mookerjee 8 W R 308 (1867) Hormusjee Nowroji v Bai Dhanba jee 12 B 164 (1887) Maylo v Willans 2 N W P Rep 268 (1870) [ref to in Rakshab Mondol v Sm Tarangini Devi 25 C W N 207 (1921)]

(8) Act X of 1865 see Part XXXI ss 242 179 331 as to the High Court see Letters Patent 1865 I (34) In the matter of Fackeroodeen Adam Sar 11 W R 413 (1869)

(9) Act XXI of 18 0

(10) Act V of 1861

(11) Gurish Chunder v Brogilton 14 C 361 8 4—8 6 (1887)

a manager, but as such manager he had certain powers over the estate, and for many purposes he represented the testator. It may be that the probate did not confer upon the executor any legal character, but I think that the effect of probate is to declare the person to whom probate is granted to be entitled to the powers of an executor, whatever his powers as such may be. The words 'legal character' are not anywhere defined, but I think that it is quite clear that they are intended to include the case of an executor. The fact that this section has been frequently applied to cases of persons dying after the Hindu Wills Act came into force shows this. The only legal character which the Probate Act declares a person to be entitled to is that of executor. It confers the character of administrator. It does not declare it. So the section would be meaningless unless 'legal character' included the office of an executor. I do not think that the circumstance that in the particular case the powers of the executor may be limited makes any difference in the construction of the section" (1)

The judgment of a Court refusing probate, it has been said, is as much a judgment in rem as one which grants it, for such a judgment takes away from the executors named in the will the legal character of executors and from the legatees and beneficiaries their legal character, and this result is final as against all persons interested under the will (2). But in a recent Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court it was held that this section did not apply to a judgment of an Appellate Court refusing probate (3) and it was said that the only kind of negative judgment contemplated in it is one which expressly takes away from a person a legal character which he has held till such judgment and that this cannot cover the case of a finding that an attempted proof of a right to such a character has failed (4). In this case a will produced in a contention that the will was not the genuine will of the testator was refused and the widow of the deceased was denied the property from the alleged executor of the rejected will.

It was held that where this section did not apply, the judgment in the Probate proceedings operated as res judicata between the parties under section 83 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) and section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code (5). Every refusal to grant probate does not conclusively show that the will propounded is not the genuine will of the testator. From a refusal to grant probate it by no means necessarily follows, that, in the opinion of the Court, the will propounded is not the genuine will of the testator. It may be based upon entirely different grounds. To operate conclusively there must have been a prior final decision against the will. A finding that sufficient evidence has not been adduced to prove the genuineness of the will will not preclude a fresh application for probate when they are in a position to support it with more complete proof (6). Where the genuineness of the will is not disputed and the applicant is not legally incapable, the Court has no discretion to refuse probate (7). The judgment of a Probate Court granting probate is a judgment in rem, and, therefore, the judgment of any other Court in a proceeding inter partes cannot be pleaded in bar of an investigation in the Probate Court as to the factum of the will propounded in that Court. The only judgment that can be put forward in a Court of Probate in support of

(1) Girish Chunder v Broughton 14 C P 875 per Trevelyan J

(2) Chinnasa ni v Hariharabadra 16 M 380 383 (1893)

(3) Kalyanchand Lalchand v Sstaba, F B, 38 B 309 (1914)

(4) Ib per Scott C J

(5) Ib and it was said that the contention that Probate proceedings are not a suit had not been addressed in Mrs Kurachilain v Peara Sahib P C 33 C 116 (1905) 32 I A 244 nor at any time in the Bombay High Court

(6) Ganesh Jagannath v Ra chandra Ganesh 21 B 563 (1896)

(7) Hara Coomar v Doorgaion 21 C 195 (1892) Fran Nath v Jadu Nath 20 A 189 (1897)

the plea of res judicata is a judgment of a competent Court of Probate (1) In the undermentioned case (2) it was held that the order of a Judge was ultra vires which was passed under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, so long as the probate of the will in respect of which forgery was charged was unrevoked; and that it was for the Civil Court to determine the genuineness of a will, and that it was not open to a Criminal Court to find the contrary or to convict any person of having forged a will which had been found to be genuine by a competent Court, and that this section provides that in such matters the finding of the Civil Court is conclusive A grant of letters of administration with the will annexed, does not make any question as to the title to property covered by, or as to the construction of the will, res judicata in a subsequent suit in which such title or construction comes in issue (3)

The Courts exercise matrimonial jurisdiction under the Indian Divorce Act of 1929 of divorce jurisdiction is not confined to cases for which the decree was pronounced earlier (6) but such a decree in common with others may be re opened on the ground of fraud or collusion (7) The general rule with regard to foreign judgments is that they are conclusive where the marriage was solemnized and the parties domiciled in the foreign country (8) Section 20 of the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869) does not make the proviso in the seventeenth section applicable to the confirmation by the High Court of a decree of nullity of marriage made by a District Judge and such a decree may therefore be confirmed before the expiration of six months from the pronouncement of the decree (9)

Court not competent to make it, within the meaning of sections 41 and 44 of the Evidence Act, and is therefore under section 11 conclusive proof that the marriage was null and void (9)

and Admiralty jurisdiction
Adm

(1) Chinnasami v. Harisharabadra 16 M pp 383 384
(2) Manjanath Debi v. Ramdas Shome 4 C W N clxxvi (1900)
(3) Arunmozhi Das v. Mohendra Nath 20 C 188 (1893) 'It has been held that in a proceeding upon an application for probate of a will the only question which the Court is called upon to determine is whether the will is true or not and that it is not the province of the Court to determine any question of title with reference to the property covered by the will' 1b 894 895 Behary Lall v. Juggo Mohun 4 C 1 Brij Nath v. Chandar Mohan 19 A 458 (1897) Jagganath Prasad v. Ranjit Singh 25 C 354 369 (1897) [shebaitships] Ochauram v. Dolatram 6 Bom L R 966 (1904)
(4) Act IV of 1869 as to the matrimonial jurisdiction of the High Courts see Letters Patent 1865 J (35)
(5) Acts XV of 1872 (Indian Christian Marriage) XV of 1865 as amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920 (Parsee Marriage and Divorce), XXI of 1866 (Native Con ert s Marriage Dissolution) III of 1872 (relating to Marriage between persons not professing the Christian Jewish Hindu Mahomedan Parsi Buddhist Sikh or Jaina religions)

(6) Kanhya Lall v. Radha Churn 7 W R 338 (1867) As to the use of a decree in a previous suit see Ruck v. Ruck L R P D (1896) 152
(7) S 44 post see Perry v. Weddorecroft 10 Beav 138 139
(8) Westlake Private International Law §§ 6 321 see Sinclair v. Sinclair 1 Hagg 294 — Roach v. Gorlan 1 Ves Sr 157 Shas v. Gould 3 F & I App 25 Harvey v. Fabrie L R 8 App Cas 43 Hukri Chaud of cit 52
(9) Caston v. Castan 22 A 270 (1900) see s 44 post For a case of judgment without jurisdiction see Abdul Aadir v. Doolanbibi 37 B 563 (1913)
(10) Letters Patent 1865 clis (32) (33)
(11) 53 & 54 Viet 32" See in the matter of the British sailing ship "Falls of Ettrick" 22 C 511 (1892) is for the time being declared or which, if no such declaration is made, shall be deemed to be a declaration of unlimited civil jurisdiction, and may for the purpose of that jurisdiction exercise all the powers which it possesses for the purpose of its other civil jurisdiction and such Court in reference to the jurisdiction conferred by this Act in this Act referred to as a Colonial Court of Admiralty (1) It is with reference to vessels condemned as prizes that questions concerned with this jurisdiction usually arise and to such judgments of condemnation, the last paragraph of this section will be applicable

Insolvency
Juris diction

The Presidency High Courts exercise this jurisdiction under their respective Charters (2), and Act III of 1909 and the Mofussil Courts under Act III of 1907

Relevancy and effect of judgments
orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41

42 Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of public (3) nature relevant to the inquiry, but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which the state

Illustration

A sues B for trespass on his land. B alleges the existence of a public right of way over the land which A denies

The existence of a decree in favour of the defendant in a suit by A against C for trespass on the same land in which C alleged the existence of the same right of way is relevant but it is not conclusive proof that the right of way exists. (4)

Principle.—This section also forms an exception to the general rule that no one shall be affected or prejudiced by judgments to which he is not party or privy (5) In matters of public right, however, the new party to the second proceeding as one of the public has been virtually a party to the former proceeding (6) Judgments of this character (which are regarded as a species of reputation) are said to be receivable on the same grounds as evidence of reputation which in matters of public or general interests is admissible (7) On account of the public nature of the rules which exclude res inter judgment is not conclusive, and the technical judicata is narrowed, lose all their force when it is considered whether

(1) Ib s 2 see Broughton op cit 149—158

(2) See Letters Patent 1865 (Calcutta) cl 18 see Broughton op cit 158

(3) Heiniger v Draz 25 B 441 (1900)

(4) See Petri v Nuttall 11 Ex 569

(5) Judgments are relevant under this section not as res judicata but as evidence whether between the same parties or not Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C 174 491 post For recent case of relevancy as res judicata see Muhammad Amir v Sumitra Kuar 36 A 424 (1914) (suit by members of Mahomedan community)

(6) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C 171 183 (1880) per Pontifex J

(7) Taylor Ev § 1682 1683 (v post) Norton Ev 216 see s 32 1 (4) ante When juries were summoned de vicineto and assumed to be acquainted with the subject in controversy the verdicts were properly evidence of reputation but at the present day they are not so see Taylor Ev § 624 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 232—234

(8) See Norton Ev 216 Madhub Chunder v Toomee Bewah 7 W R 210 (1867) Bai Ba ji v Bai Santok 20 B 53 57 58 (198) (1894)

the judgment may be used, not as a bar, but merely, as evidence in the cause (1)

s. 40 41, 43 (Judgments orders decrees) as 13 32 cl (4) 48 (Public right and custom)
s. 3 (Pleasant)
s. 4 (Conclusive proof)

Steph Dig., Art. 44, Taylor, Ev., §§ 624—626 1682, 1683, Phipson Ev., 5th Ed., 253 406, Starkie, Ev., 386—388, Roscoe, N P Ev., 190—192, Wills Ev., 2nd Ed. 232—234

COMMENTARY

The English rule (which is reproduced by this section)(2) is that on questions of public or general interest wherein reputation is evidence the verdict, judgment or order, even inter alios, of a competent tribunal is admissible, not as tending to prove any specific fact existing at the time, but as evidence of the most solemn kind of an adjudication upon the state of facts and the question of usage at the time (3) The relevancy of adjudications upon subjects of a public nature (which means subjects of public or general interest and will thus include public or general rights and custom) such as custom rights of ferry and the like, forms an exception to the general rule that judgments inter partes are not admissible either for or against strangers in proof of the facts adjudicated In all cases of this nature, as evidence of reputation will be admissible adjudications—which for this purpose are regarded as a species of reputation,—will also be received and this too whether the parties in the second suit be those who litigated the first or utter strangers (4) The effect, however, of the adjudication when admitted will so far vary that if the parties be the same in both suits, they will be bound by the previous judgment but if not, the judgment is not binding on the parties in the second suit (5) It ought to be observed that the question of custom was not a question of enforcement of a custom but a question of a final decree based on the custom (7) The existence of local custom such as a right of pre-emption, is a matter of a public nature, and previous judgments will be admissible under this section in proof thereof (8) Manorial customs may also be of a similar character (9) Where a plaintiff sued for damages for

Judgments upon matters of a public nature

(1) Durga Dass v Norendro Coomar 6 W R 232 (1866)

(2) Norton Ev 216

(3) Taylor Ev § 624 as to the meaning of public or general interest see s 32 1 (4) ante

(4) Taylor Ev §§ 1682 1683 Field Ev 6th Ed 76 77 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 232—234

(5) Taylor Ev § 1683 and see generally text books cited supra

(6) Tota Ram v Mohun Lal 2 Agra 1120 12 (1867) see also Laybourn v Crisp 4 M & W 42 325 326 as to reading of the decree in connection with the judgment see Shri Ganes v Keshav 15 B 635 (1890) post

(7) Gurdial Mal v Jhandu Mal 10 A 580 (1888) Lachman Ras v Akbar Khan 1 A 445 (1877)

(8) Madhub Chunder v Tomce Beulah 7 W R 210 (1867) Tota Ram v Mohun Lal 2 Agra 120 (1867) [in this case however it was held that a previous decreed made in pursuance of a compromise could not be cited as any judicial decision of the existence of the custom or any admission by the defendant in that suit that such a custom existed] Shaikh Koodootoolah v Mohini Mohan 5 Rev Civ & Cr Rep 290 (1867) [Decisions of local Courts where not conflicting may be good proof of local customs See also as to conflicting decisions Inder Naran v Maloosied Narrood n 1 W R 234 (1864) Gurdial Mal v Jhandu Mal 10 A 585 (1888) [in this last mentioned case the Court appears to have admitted the previous judgments under s 13 (b)] Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh 12 A 177 but they would have also been admissible under the present section

(9) Lachman Ras v Akbar Khan 1 A 440 441 (1877) as to manorial rights see Kahan Dass v Bhagirathi 6 A 47 (1883) Lala v Hira Singh 2 A., 49 (1878) Akbar Khan v Sheoratan 1 A., 373 (1877) Sheoratan v Bhara Prasad

value of timber carried away by Government, after being washed on to his estate, and to have his right declared as against Government, to all timbers that in the future may be washed on to his estate, it was held that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to produce in support of the right some decree or decision of competent authority establishing the custom (1) Where a custom alleged to be followed by any particular class of people is in dispute judicial are very relevant as evidence of the existence of the same custom amongst the Jains of another place, unless it is shown that the customs are different, and oral evidence of the same kind is equally admissible There is nothing to limit the scope of the enquiry to the particular locality in which the persons setting up the custom reside (3) In a suit brought by the trustee of a temple to recover from the owners of certain lands in certain villages money claimed under an alleged right as due to the temple it was held that judgments in other suits against other persons in which claims under the same right had been decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple were relevant under this section as relating to matters of a public nature (4) A custom under which lands are held is a matter of public and general interest to all the villagers and a former decree is most cogent evidence against them of the existence and validity of the custom whose exercise a plaintiff seeks to enforce (5) The existence of customs of succession in particular communities is a matter of public interest and decrees of competent Courts are good evidence thereof (6) In a suit by the landlords to avoid the sale of an occupancy holding in their mouza and eject the purchaser thereof, one of the questions was as to the existence of a custom or usage under which that a judgment in an adjoining villa usage under this locutory orders awards, nor claims not prosecuted to judgment, are admissible under the rule which is contained in this section (8) Many matters may go to the weight of this class of evidence which will not, however, affect its admissibility. Thus matters not with respect to the admissibility, though it may as to the weight

7 A 880 (1885) in the case of the Lower Provinces see Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) ss 74 183

(1) Chuttur Lal v The Government 9 W R 97 (1868) [rights of Lords of Manors]

(2) Shimbu Nath v Gyan Chand 16 A 379 (1894) Harnath Pershad v Mundul Dass 27 C 379 (1899)

(3) Harnath Pershad v Mundul Dass 27 C 379 (1899)

(4) Ramasami v Apparu 12 M 9 (1887) the judgments were also held to be relevant under s 13 ante as being evidence of instances in which the right claimed had been ascertained See s 13 ante see also Nallathambi Battar v Nellakumbaba Pillai 7 Mad H C R. 306 (1873)

(5) Venkataswami Nayakkam v Subba Rao 2 Mad H C R. 1 6 (1864) per Scotland C J as to judgment in regard to the nature of the interest of certain family and of a shrine in certain villages

see Shri Ganesh v Keshavray Govind 15 B 625 635 (1890)

(6) Bar Bai v Bar Santok 20 B 53 57 58 (1894)

(7) Daigish v Guzaffer Hassan 23 C 477 (1896)

(8) Taylor Ev § 626 the last mentioned claims though inadmissible as evidence of reputation may however be admissible as evidence of acts of ownership thus old Bills and Answers in Chancery have been admitted on the latter ground to show claims made to a public right and abandoned Malcolmson v O'Dea 10 H L C 593 on the same grounds it has been held that an indictment whether submitted to or prosecuted to conviction was admissible as evidence of the right in suit being exercised R v Inhabitants of Brightside 14 Q B 933 as to awards see Etans v Rees 10 A. & R 151 but see also Tota Ram v Mohan Lal 2 Agra 120 supra of such evidence, that the judgment has been suffered by default, or, though of a very recent date, is not supported by any proof of execution or of the payment of damages (1). And judgments standing upon a different footing from ordinary declarations by private persons, the conditions as to lis mota do not, and indeed cannot, apply to them (2).

43 Judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in sections 40, 41 and 42, are irrelevant, unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree, is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provisions of this Act

Judgments, etc., other than those mentioned in ss. 40 to 42, when relevant

Illustrations

(a) A and B separately sue C for a libel which reflects upon each of them. C in each case says, that the matter alleged to be libellous is true and the circumstances are such that it is probably true in each case or in neither.

A obtains a decree against C for damages on the ground that C failed to make out his justification. The fact is irrelevant as between B and C (3).

(b) A prosecutes B for adultery with C's wife.

B denies that C is A's wife but the Court convicts B of adultery.

Afterwards C is prosecuted for bigamy in marrying B during A's lifetime. C says that she never was A's wife.

The judgment against B is irrelevant as against C.

(c) A prosecutes B for stealing a cow from him. B is convicted.

A afterwards sues C for the cow which B had sold to him before his conviction.

As between A and C the judgment against B is irrelevant.

(d) A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B. C, B's son, murders A in consequence.

The existence of the judgment is relevant as showing motive for a crime (4).

(e) A is charged with theft and with having been previously convicted of theft.

The previous conviction is relevant as a fact in issue (5).

(f) A is tried for the murder of B.

The fact that B prosecuted A for libel and that A was convicted and sentenced is relevant under section 8 as showing the motive for the fact in issue (6).

Principle—Judgments considered as judicial opinions are only relevant under sections 40-42 under the circumstances mentioned in those sections. Other judgments when tendered against strangers are sometimes said to be excluded as opinion evidence (7), sometimes as hearsay (8) but more commonly on the ground expressed in the maxims res inter alios acta vel iudicata alteri nocere non debet and res inter alios iudicata nullum inter alios prejudicium facit (9). Such judgments are said not to be evidence for a stranger even against

(1) Taylor Ev. § 624

(2) Starkie Ev. 190 note (c)

(3) Cf. Doorga Churn v. Shoshie Bhoojain 5 W. R. S. C. C. Ref. 23 (1866) in which it was held that the finding in a previous judgment was not evidence of fraud.

(4) Gujju Lal v. Fattch Lal 6 C. 181

(5) Illusts. (e) and (f) have been added by s. 5 Act III of 1891. See also Lakshman v. Amrit 24 B. 591-593 (1900).

(6) R. v. Fontaine Moreau 11 Q. B. 1028-1035 per Lord Denman. C. J. Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar 18 M. 77 (1893). Gujju Lal v. Fattch Lal 6 C. at p. 188 per Garth C. J.

(7) Steph. Dig. Art. 14. Whart. s. 280 but see Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 405.

(8) Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 405 where the grounds of this rule are considered. Gujju Lal v. Fattch Lal 6 C. at p. 189, Taylor Ev. § 1682.

(9) Id.

a party, because their operation would thus not be mutual. The propriety of this last ground has however been questioned.⁽¹⁾ But if the existence of the judgment is a fact in issue, or relevant under some other provision of this Act the judgment is not excluded⁽²⁾

Steph Dig, Arts, 40, 42, 44, Phypson, Ev 5th Ed. 382—410, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1667 1668, 1682, 1694, Best, Ev, § 590, Roscoe, N P Ev, 190 192

COMMENTARY.

Judgments,
orders and decrees
other than those already mentioned

It has been seen that section 40 deals with the effect of judgments as barring suits or trials, by reason amongst others, of their being res judicata; that section 41 deals with the effect of the so called judgments in rem and section 42 with the admissibility of judgments relating to matters of a public nature. This section declares that judgments, orders, and decrees, other than those mentioned in those sections, are of themselves irrelevant, that is, in the sense that they can have any such effect or operation as mentioned in those sections qua judgments, orders and decrees, that is, as adjudications upon and decide (7) relating to sequent

or as proof of the particular point which it decides⁽⁷⁾, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them⁽⁸⁾. But the present section expressly contemplates cases in which judgments would be admissible either as facts in issue or as relevant facts under other sections of the Act. And as to this Garth, C J, in the case last cited, said "This is quite true. But then I take it that the cases so contemplated by section 43 are those where a judgment is used not as a res judicata, as evidence more or less binding upon an opponent by reason of the adjudication which it contains (because judgments of that kind had already been dealt with under one or other of the immediately preceding sections). But the cases referred to in section 43 are such, I conceive, as the section itself illustrates, viz, when the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. As for instance, if A sues B for slander, in saying that he had been convicted of forgery, and B justified upon the ground that the alleged slander was true, the conviction of A for forgery would be a fact to be proved by B like any other fact in the case, and quite irrespective of whether A had been actually guilty of the forgery or not. This, I conceive, would be one of the many cases alluded to in the fourth section⁽⁹⁾. And though judgments, other than those mentioned in sections 40 42 are irrelevant qua judgments, this section does not make them absolutely inadmissible when they are the best evidence of something that may

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1682, as to bankruptcy, administration and divorce proceedings, see Phypson, Ev, 5th Ed, 406 407

(2) See Notes to s 13, ante

(3) Collector of Gorakhpore v Palah dhar Singh 12 A (F B), 1, 25 (1889) As to order of Board of Revenue, see Manno Choudhury v Munshi Chowdhury, 3 Pat L J 188

(4) Under s 41 ante

(5) Under s 42, ante

(6) Under s 40, ante

(7) S 43 in effect declares that for such purpose they are irrelevant see R v Parbhudas 11 Bom H C R, 90, 96 (1874)

The sole object for which it was sought to use the former judgment in Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall (v post) was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right, and it was held that the opinion expressed in the former judgment was not a relevant fact within the meaning of the Evidence Act. Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 77 (1895)

(8) Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall 6 C. (F B) 171 see ss 13, 40 ante and Notes thereto

(9) Gujju Lall v Fattah Lall, 6 C. at p 192 indictment for perjury committed in a trial, the record will be evidence to show that such a trial was bad(1) and if a party be indicted for aiding the escape of a felon from prison the production of the record of conviction from the proper custody will be conclusive evidence that the prisoner was convicted of the crime stated therein (2) So where the judgment constitutes one of the muniments of the party's title to land or goods,—as where a deed was made under a decree in Chancery(3) or goods were purchased at a sale made by a sheriff upon an execution(4), the record may be given in evidence against a party who is a stranger to it So, in an action to recover lands, a decree in a suit between the defendant's father and other persons unconnected with the plaintiff which directed that the father should be let into possession of the estate as his own property, has been held admissible on behalf of the defendant not as proof of any of the facts therein stated, but for the purpose of explaining in what character the father, through whom the defendant claimed had afterwards taken actual possession of the estate (5) Many other instances might be given of the admissibility of judgments inter alios where the record is matter of inducement or merely introductory to other evidence, but those cited will suffice to illustrate the principle (6) A judgment may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission, being received in favour of a stranger against one of the parties as an admission by such party in a judicial proceeding with respect to a certain fact (7) This is no exception to the rule which requires mutuality, since the record is not received as a judgment conclusively establishing the fact but merely as the declaration of the party that the fact was so Thus not appealing against an adverse judgment may operate as an admission by the party of its correctness (8) And a stranger to a judgment may also be estopped thereby, not directly but by his acquiescence therein (9) So if A pleads guilty to a crime and is convicted the record of judgment upon this plea is admissible against him in a Civil action as a solemn judicial confession of the fact (10) But if A pleads not guilty to a crime, but is convicted, the record of judgment upon with the prosecution as an action to establish the truth

ment in a Civil action, or an award, cannot be given in evidence for such a purpose in a Criminal prosecution (14) Technically, the judgments are inadmissible

(1) R v Hles Cas Temp Hardz 118
B N P 243 R v Hammond Page 2
Esp 649n see Penal Code s 193

(2) R v Strat R & R. 526 Taylor
Ev § 1668 see Penal Code ss 222 223

(3) Barr v Gratz 4 Wheat 213

(4) St Ev 255 Wistner v Sellatter
2 Rayle 359 Jackson v Wood 3 Wind
25 34 Fowler v Savage 3 Conn 90
96

(5) Davies v Loundes 6 M & Gr
471 520

(6) Taylor Ev § 1688 see s 13 ante

(7) Steph Dig Art 4 Taylor Ev
§ 1694 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 406 407
Krisi nasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala
Ayyangar 18 M 73 77 78 (1895)

(8) Eaton v Swansea Waterworks 17
Q B 267

(9) Re Last 1896 2 Ch 788

(10) R v Fontaine Moreau 11 Q B

1028 1033 per Lord Denman C J

Why does what a man says of himself cease to be evidence by being said in Court? As to a plea of guilty being evidence of an admission see Shumboo
Cunder v Madhoo Koybert 10 W R
56 (1868) A plea of guilty in the Criminal Court may but a verdict of convict on cannot be considered in evidence in a civil case Taylor Ev § 1694

(11) R v Warden of the Fleet 12
Mod 339 and v post

(12) S 12 ante Taylor Ev §§ 1693
674

(13) Taylor Ev § 1693

(14) Taylor Ev § 1693 and cases
there cited Castrique v Imrie L R. 4
E & I 434 Keramutoollah Chowdhry
v Gholam Hossein 9 W R 77 (1868)
[A proceeding of a Criminal Court is not admissible as evidence a Civil Court is as not being between the same parties, the parties in the prosecution being the King Emperor on the one hand, and the prisoner on the other, and in the civil suit the prisoner and some third party, and substantially, because the issues in a civil and criminal proceeding are not the same, and the burden of proof rests in each case on different shoulders (1) Thus A is convicted of forging B's signature to a bill of exchange B is afterwards sued by C to whom A has transferred the bill A's conviction is not admissible to prove the forgery (2) So again a certificate of acquittal on a charge of rape is not admissible to disprove the rape in a divorce suit founded thereon (3) A mother murdering her son is not beneficially entitled to take his estate by inheritance, but the fact of her having been acquitted or convicted is not relevant in a Civil Court upon the question whether she has committed the wrongful act imputed to her and, if so, whether by such act she has forfeited her rights of inheritance (4) A stranger to a judgment may also be bound by it, if he has so contracted. Thus, if A contract to indemnify B against any damages recoverable against the latter by C, and B has bona fide defended the action and paid the amount the judgment will be conclusive of A's liability. But this does not apply where B has no contract with, but merely a claim against A for such indemnity (5) In the absence of special agreement a judgment or an award against a principal debtor is not binding on the surety and is not evidence against him in an action by the creditor but the surety is entitled to have the liability proved as against him in the same way as against the principal debtor (6) As to decrees considered as evidence of the necessity of alienation, see authorities cited below (7)

44 Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show fraud or collusion in obtaining judgment or incompetency of Court may be proved that any judgment, order or decree, which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse bound to find the facts itself] Bishonath Yeogi v. Huro Gobind 5 W R R 27 (1866) [The conviction in a criminal case is not conclusive in a civil suit for damages in respect of the same act] Ahannid Surmah v. Kashnath Nyalun 5 W R R 26 (1866) [A Civil Court is not bound to adopt the view of a Magistrate as to the genuineness or other value of a document] Doorga Dass v. Dooraa Churn 6 W R Civ Ref 26 (1866) [A suit for money forcibly taken from the plaintiff by the defendant is maintainable in Civil Court notwithstanding defendants acquittal in the Criminal Court on the charge of robbery], Ali Buksh v. Shaikh Samiruddin 4 B L R A C 13 (1869) 1 W R 477 In a suit for damages for an assault the previous conviction of the defendant in a Criminal Court is no evidence of the assault. The facts of the assault must be tried in the Civil Court R v. Hedger (1852) at p 135 Aghorenaith Roy v. Radhika Pershad 14 W R 339 (1870) Gogun Chunder v. R 6 C 247 (1880) Ram Lal v. Tulla Ra 4 A 97 (1880) See Raj Kumari v. Ba a Sundari 23 C 610 (1896) in which however Ghose J observed that he was not prepared to say that the decision in a Civil suit would not be admissible in evidence in a Criminal case if the parties were substantially the same and the issues in the two cases identical

Rampini J contra Manjanath Debi v. Ramdas Shome 4 C W N clxxvi (1900) For a case in which a Civil judgment was rejected in a Criminal proceeding see R v. Fontaine Moreau 11 Q B 1028 And for a case in which a Civil judgment was admitted in a Criminal proceeding see Markur (in re) 41 B 1 (1917) Here the former plaintiff was the complainant with former defendant the accused and the issue substantially the same and the Civil judgment in certain points now included in the Criminal charge was admitted in evidence of breach of trust

(1) Gogun Chunder v. R 6 C 247 (1880) per White J

(2) Castrique v. Inrie L R 4 E & I 234 Parsons v. London County Council 9 T L R 619

(3) Virgo v. Virgo 69 L T 460 So also in the trial of A as accessory to a felony committed by R the conviction of B though admissible to prove that fact is no evidence of B's guilt See Phipson Ex 5th Ed 407 et seq cases

(4) Vedanyagar Mudaher v. Vedam, 14 Mad L J 297

(5) Parker v. Leais 3 Ch App 1035 1058 1059

(6) Ex parte Young In re Kitchin 17 Ch D 668

(7) Field Ex 6th Ed 184—186 Maynes Hindu Law §§ 323 324 and cases there cited

indictment for perjury committed in a trial, the record will be evidence to show that such a trial was bad (1) and if a party be indicted for aiding the escape of a felon from prison, the production of the record of conviction from the proper custody will be conclusive evidence that the prisoner was convicted of the crime stated therein (2). So where the judgment constitutes one of the muniments of the party's title to land or goods,—as where a deed was made under a decree in Chancery (3) or goods were purchased at a sale made by a sheriff upon an execution (4), the record may be given in evidence against a party who is a stranger to it. So, in an action to recover lands, a decree in a suit between the defendant's father and other persons unconnected with the plaintiff which directed that the father should be let into possession of the estate as his own property, has been held admissible on behalf of the defendant, not as proof of any of the facts therein stated, but for the purpose of explaining in what character the father, through whom the defendant claimed, had afterwards taken actual possession of the estate (5). Many other instances might be given of the admissibility of judgments inter alios, where the record is matter of inducement, or merely introductory to other evidence, but those cited will suffice to illustrate the principle (6). A judgment may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission, being received in favour of a stranger against one of the parties as an admission by such party in a judicial proceeding with respect to a certain fact (7). This is no exception to the rule which requires mutuality, since the record is not received as a judgment conclusively establishing the fact but merely as the declaration of the party that the fact was so. Thus not appealing against an adverse judgment may operate as an admission by the party of its correctness (8). And a stranger to a judgment may also be estopped thereby, not directly but by his acquiescence therein (9). So if A pleads guilty to a crime and is convicted, the record of judgment upon this plea is admissible against him in a Civil action, as a solemn judicial confession of the fact (10). But if A pleads not guilty to a crime, but is convicted, the record of judgment upon this plea is not receivable against A in a Civil action as an admission to prove his guilt (11). For the judgment contains no admission and in conformity with the rule which rejects judgments to prove the facts:—

admissible as evidence with the prosecution a action to establish the fact in a Civil action, or an award, cannot be given in evidence for such a purpose in a Criminal prosecution (14). Technically, the judgments are inadmissible

(1) R v Hles Cas Temp Hardz 118, B N P 243 R v Hammond Page 2 Esp, 649n see Penal Code s 193

(2) R v Stat R & R 576 Taylor Ev § 1668 see Penal Code ss 222 223

(3) Barr v Gratz 4 Wheat 213

(4) St Ev 255 Winter v Schlatter, 2 Rawle 359 Jackson v Head 3 Wind 25 34 Fowler v Satage 3 Conn 90 96

(5) Davies v Lowndes, 6 M & Gr 471 520

(6) Taylor Ev § 1688 see s 13 ante

(7) Steph Dig Art 4 Taylor, Ev § 1694 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 406 407 Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala Ayyangar 18 M 73 77 78 (1895)

(8) Eaton v Swansea Waterworks 17 Q B 267

(9) Re Last 1896 2 Ch 788

(10) R v Fontaine Moreau 11 Q B,

1028 1033 per Lord Denman C J

Why does what a man says of himself cease to be evidence by being said in Court? As to a plea of guilty being evidence of an admission see Shumboo Chunder v Madhoo Koybert 10 W R, 56 (1868). A plea of guilty in the Criminal Court may but a verdict of conviction cannot be considered in evidence in a civil case Taylor Ev § 1694

(11) R v Warden of the Fleet 12 Mod 339 and post

(12) S 12 ante Taylor Ev § 1693 624

(13) Taylor Ev § 1693

(14) Taylor Ev § 1693 and cases there cited Castrique v Imrie L. R., 4 E & L 434 Keramutoolah Choudhry v Gholam Hossein 9 W R. 77 (1863) [A proceeding of a Criminal Court is not admissible as evidence, a Civil Court is is not being between the same parties, the parties in the prosecution being the King-Emperor on the one hand, and the prisoner on the other, and in the civil suit the prisoner and some third party; and substantially, because the issues in burden of proof rests in

 : of forging B's signature
 : A has transferred the : property (2) So again a she has committed the wrongful act imputed to her and, if so, whether by such act she has forfeited her rights of inheritance (4) A stranger to a judgment may also be bound by it, if he has so contracted. Thus, if A contract to indemnify B against any damages recoverable against the latter by C, and B has bond fide defended the action and paid the amount, the judgment will be conclusive of A's liability. But this does not apply where B has no contract with, but merely a claim against A for such indemnity (5) In the absence of special agreement, a judgment or an award against a principal debtor is not binding on the surety, and is not evidence against him in an action by the creditor, but the surety is entitled to have the liability proved as against him in the same way as against the principal debtor (6) As to decrees considered as evidence of the necessity of alienation, see authorities cited below (7)

44 Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree, which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse Fraud or collusion in obtaining judgment or incompetency of Court, may be proved bound to find the facts itself] Biswanath Neog v Huro Gobind, 5 W R 27 (1866) [The conviction in a criminal case is not conclusive in a civil suit for damages in respect of the same act] Nyjanand Surmah v Kashinath Nyasun 3 W R 26 (1866) [A Civil Court is not bound to adopt the view of a Magistrate as to the genuineness or other wise of a document] Doorga Dass v Doorga Churn 6 W R Civ Ref, 26 (1866) [A suit for money forcibly taken from the plaintiff by the defendant is maintainable in Civil Court notwithstanding defendants acquittal in the Criminal Court on the charge of robbery], Ali Buksh v Shaikh Samiruddin 4 B L R, A C 13 (1869) 1 W R 477 In a suit for damages for an assault the previous conviction of the defendant in a Criminal Court is no evidence of the assault. The facts of the assault must be tried in the Civil Court R v Hedger (1852) at p 135 Aghorenath Roy v Radhika Pershad 14 W R 339 (1870) Gogun Chunder v R, 6 C 247 (1880), Ram Lal v Tulla Ram 4 A 97 (1880) See Raj Kumari v Bania Sundari 23 C 610 (1896) in which however Ghose J observed that he was not prepared to say that the decision in a Civil suit would not be admissible in evidence in a Criminal case if the parties were substantially the same and the issues in the two cases identical

Rampini J contra Manjanath Debi v Ramdas Shome 4 C W N cxxxv (1900)

For a case in which a Civil judgment was rejected in a Criminal proceeding see R v Fontaine Moreau 11 Q B 1028 And for a case in which a Civil judgment was admitted in a Criminal proceeding see Markur (in re) 41 B 1 (1917) Here the former plaintiff was the complainant with former defendant the accused and the issue substantially the same and the Civil judgment in certain points now included in the Criminal charge was admitted in evidence of breach of trust

(1) Gogun Chunder v R 6 C 247 (1880) per White J

(2) Castrique v Inwie L R 4 E & I 234 Parsons v London County Council 9 T L R 619

(3) Vargo v Vargo 69 L T 460 So also in the trial of A as accessory to a felony committed by R the conviction of B though admissible to prove that fact is no evidence of B's guilt See Phipson Ex 5th Ed 407 et ibi casus

(4) Vedanayagar Mudalier v Vedaum, 14 Mad L J 297

(5) Parker v Leas 3 Ch App 1035 1058 1059

(6) Ex parte Young In re Kitchin 17 Ch D 668

(7) Field Ev 6th Ed, 184—186 Mayne's Hindu Law §§ 323 324 and cases there cited party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it or was obtained by fraud or collusion

Principle—A judgment delivered by a Court not competent (1) to deliver as by a Court which had no jurisdiction over the parties or the subject matter of the suit is a mere nullity (2) And though the maxim is stringent that no man shall be permitted to aver against a record yet when fraud can be shewn this maxim does not apply (3) nor in the case of collusion when a decree is passed between parties who were really not in consent with each other (4) Fraus et jura nunquam cohabitant Fraud avoids all judicial acts ecclesiastical or temporal It is an extrinsic collateral act, which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice which upon being satisfied of such fraud have a power to vacate and should vacate their own judgments (5) In the application of this rule it makes no difference whether the judgment impugned has been pronounced by an inferior or by the highest tribunal but in all cases alike it is competent for every Court whether superior or inferior to treat as a nullity any judgment which can be clearly shown to have been obtained by manifest fraud (6) ss 40—42 (Judgments orders and decrees) s 3 (Court)

s 3 (Relevant)

Steph Dig Art 46 Taylor Ev §§ 1713—1717 Phipson Ev 5th Ed 384 Best Ev § 505 Field Ev 6th Ed 186—190 Norton Ev 218 219 Wharton Law Lex con (1899) 1b 12th Ed (1910) Hukm Chand s Res Jud cata 484

COMMENTARY

When one of the parties to a suit tenders or has put in evidence (7) a judgment order or decree under the fortieth forty first, or forty second section (8) it is open to the other party under this section to avoid its effect on any of the three grounds (a) want of jurisdiction in the Court which delivered the judgment (b) that the judgment was obtained through fraud or (c) collusion (9)

A judgment delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it is a mere nullity and cannot have any probative force whatever between the parties (10)

(1) See Kettilamma v Kelappon 12 M 228 (1887) Sardarmal v Aranvojal Sakhapatily 21 B 205 212 (1896)

(2) See cases cited post

(3) Rogers v Hodley 2 H & C 247 see Huffer v Allen L R 2 Ex 18

(4) Handon v Becher 3 C & F 510

(5) Duchess of Kingston's Case 2 Sm L C per Lord de Grey C J Phipson v The Earl of Egremont 6 A. & E 587 605 Paranjpe v Kanade 6 B 148 (1882)

(6) Sledden v Patrick 1 Macq H L 535 as to the procedure to be taken to set aside a decree obtained by fraud and collusion see Meeo Lal v Bhujay Jha 13 B L R App 11 (1874) Ashootosh Chandra v Tara Prasanna 10 C 612 (1884) Eshan Chandra v Nandamoni Dassee 10 C 357 (1884) Karamah Ralmbhoy Rahmbhoy Habbhoy 13 B 137 (1888) Bans Lal v Roj Lal 20 A 370 374 (1898) Nustar n Dassee v Nundo Lal 26 C 907 (1899) See also Act IX of 1908 Sch 1 Art. 95

(7) See Nustar n Dass v Nundo Lal 30 C 369 382 (1902) where it was objected that the decree had not been proved by the adverse party

(8) In Norton Ev 218 it is suggested that the same rule ought to apply in the case of a judgment order or decree tendered under s 43

(9) 1b See Amedbhoy Habbhoy v Vileebhoy Cassumbhoy 6 B 716 (1882) it was suggested that the word may be read as equivalent to fraud and collusion sed quare see post

(10) See Kalka Parshad v Kanhaiya Singh 7 N W P 99 (1875) Sookram Misser v Crowdy 19 W R 284 (1873) Ganesh Patro v Ram Niddee 22 W R 361 (1874) R v Hussein Gab 8 B 307 (1884) Where an offence is tried by a Court without jurisdiction the proceedings are void and the offender if acquitted is liable to be tried

Incom
petency
fraud collu sion

(1) Incom
petency

The words 'not competent' in this section refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction (1). And although one Court cannot set aside the proceedings of into (2). By the law both of this country and of England anybody whether party may dictate depend on whether a point which it decides has been raised or argued by a party or counsel. It cannot be said that whenever a decision is wrong in law or violates a rule of procedure the Court must be held incompetent to deliver it. It has never been and could not be held, that a Court which erroneously decrees a suit which it should have dismissed as time barred or as barred by the rule of res judicata acts without jurisdiction and is not competent to deliver its decree. This and section 41 recognise that given the competency of the Court even error or irregularity in the decision is a less evil than the total absence of finality which would be the only alternative (4). There is a distinction between an order which a Court is not competent to pass and an order which even if erroneous in law or in fact, is within the Court's competency (5). But a decision afterwards found to be erroneous in law cannot have effect as res judicata in a later execution proceeding for a different relief (6).

The Act contains no definition of the term fraud for the purposes (ii) Fraud of this section. It was held in one case that the fraud must not consist in the fact of a fraudulent defence having been set up, it must be fraud in procuring the judgment, such as collusion or the like between the parties or fraud in the Court itself (7). In a subsequent case it was said that the fraud must be actual fraud, such that there is on the part of the person chargeable with it the malus animus putting itself in motion and acting in order to take an undue advantage of some other person for the purpose of actually and knowingly defrauding him. The fraud must be such as can be explained and defined on the face of a decree and mere irregularity or the insisting upon rights which upon a due investigation of these rights might be found to be overstated or over estimated is not the kind of fraud which will authorise the Court to set aside a decree (8).

(1) Kettilamma v Kelappan 12 M 228 (1887). Competency is here synonymous with jurisdiction. Sardarmal v Anaravayal Sabhapathy 21 B 205 212 (1896). See the same matter reported in 21 B 297 (1897) see Abdul Kader v Doolanbibi 37 B 563 (1913) (incompetence and res judicata).

(2) Gunnesh Pattro v Ram Nidhee 22 W R 361 (1874).

(3) Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sengh 27 C 11 21 (1899). Steph Dig Art 46 Taylor Ev § 1714. According to English Law while in the case of fraud or collusion on strangers alone may show their existence want of jurisdiction may be shown by anybody. As to fraud and collusion in this country v post.

(4) This passage was cited with approval in Nathu Ram v Kalyan Das 1 All L J 21 222 (1904) s c 26 A 522 Caston v Caston 22 A 270 281 (1899) see s 41 ante.

(5) Sardarmal v Anaravayal Sabhapathy 21 B 205 211 (1896).

(6) Boj Nath Goenka v Padmanand Singh 39 C 848 (1912).

(7) Cammell v Sewell 4 Jur N S 978 (1858) s c 3 H & N 617 5 H & N 728 see Story Eq Jur 258 § 252a as to enquiries in the Bankruptcy Court guarding against fraud with regard to the consideration for a judgment debt see Ex parte Revell in re Tollemache 13 Q B D 720 Ex parte Lennox 16 Q B D 315 Ex parte Flatow 2 Q B D 83 Ex parte Bonham 14 Q B D 605 Ex parte Official Receiver Re Miller 67 L T 601 Re Fraser (1892) 2 Q B 633 Re Hawks Ex parte Troup (1895) 1 Q B 404. As to the effect of fraud in judgments see Hukm Chand op cit 484.

(8) Patch v Ward L R 3 Ch D 203 cited in Mahomed Golab v Mahomed Sullman 21 C 617 (1894) and recently followed in Nanda Kumar Houladar v Ram Jiban Houladar 41 C 990 (1914) 19 C L J 457 which has been followed in Janki Kuar v Lachmi Narain 37 A, 535 (1915).

In a subsequent case(1) an action was brought for infringement of a patent, and judgment was recovered by the plaintiff, which was reversed by the Court of Appeal on the ground that the facts shewed no infringement. Subsequently the plaintiff brought an action to impeach the judgment on the ground that when an expert sent down by the Court, and whose evidence was the only material evidence before the Court as to the nature of the defendant's process, examined the defendant's works, the defendant fraudulently concealed from him certain parts of the process, so that he had no opportunity of the plaintiff. On the judgment was set aside

(James, Baggallay and reversed on the ground and the following observations, in which Thesiger, L. J., concurred, Baggallay, L. J., dissenting. "As assuming all the alleged falsehood and fraud to have been substantiated, is such a suit as the present sustainable? That question would require very grave consideration indeed before it is answered in the affirmative. Where is litigation to end if a judgment obtained in an action fought out adversely between two litigants suo jure and at arm's length could be set aside by a fresh action on the ground that perjury had been committed in the first action or that false answers had been given to interrogatories, or a misleading production of documents or of a machine, or of a process, had been given? There are hundreds of actions tried every year, in which the evidence is irreconcilably conflicting and must be on one side or the other wilfully and corruptly perjured. In this case, if the favour, the present judgment aside on ion of perjury, and observations, which were obiter dicta, were cited by Ketharam, C. J., in the case undernoted(3), where the plaintiff alleged that he was induced by the fraud of the defendant not to defend the action and in which the following observations (which were also obiter, as fraud was negatived) were made.—The principle upon which these in any against obtained which use a person that it was other party, rehearing of

the form in which first decree was
ven. To so hold only of the law
dictata as well
by James L. J.,

in the passage I have quoted " Since the English decision cited there have been several cases where the Court has under similar circumstances

(1) Flower v. Lloyd, 6 Ch. D. 297 (1877) cited in Austrian Dasse v. Nundo 1 All. 26 C. 891 (1899)

(2) Flower v. Lloyd 10 Ch. D. 327 (1888) see Abuloff v. Oppenheimer, 10 Q. B. D. 295 307 308 (1882), in which this decision was criticized and Sarkis Kwar v. Lachmi Narain 37 A. 535 (1915), in which it was stated to be no longer law

(3) Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sullman 21 C. 612 619 (1894)

exercised jurisdiction. In the undermentioned case(1), B in an action brought in the Probate Division had propounded a will, and A had propounded the substance of a later will alleging that the earlier will had been obtained by undue influence. A compromise was effected under which the alleged earlier will was admitted to probate. Afterwards A discovered that the last mentioned alleged will was a forgery and that B was a party or privy to the forgery and brought an action to set aside the compromise as having been procured by fraud, and obtained judgment in that action. In another case (2) the plaintiff alleged that a judgment was procured by the fraud of the defendant, in that the latter fraudulently exhibited to the Court and jury certain false and counterfeit documents and certain memorandum books containing false and fraudulent entries touching the matters in issue in the action and the judgment so fraudulently obtained was set aside. But in another where the plaintiff having obtained letters of administration to the estate of a deceased landlold sued a tenant for rent, and the latter in his written statement objected that the letters of administration had been obtained upon a misrepresentation by the plaintiff as to his relationship with the intestate it was held that assuming that the letters of administration could be regarded as in order within the meaning of this section, the allegations of the defendant were not such as would entitle him to go into evidence for the purpose of proving that the letters of administration were invalid in law, and also that such a defence could not be successfully raised so long as the letters of administration were not revoked by a competent Court (3). And in a recent case it has been held that a suit to set aside a decree on the ground that it had been procured by perjured evidence is not maintainable for the fraud must be actual and positive, a meditated intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the Court in ignorance of the facts of the case and an obtaining of the decree by such contrivance (4).

With regard to the parties who may show fraud it is clear that a stranger no way privy to the fraud and not by a party since if the latter were innocent he might have applied to vacate the judgment and if guilty he cannot escape the consequence of his own wrong. But the language of the section is wide enough to allow a party to the suit in which the judgment was obtained to aver and prove that it was obtained by the fraud of his antagonist though the judgment stands unreversed (7). And it has been accordingly held that a party to a previous suit in which a judgment was obtained may in a subsequent suit aver and prove that it was obtained by fraud though the judgment remains unreversed (8). So in a suit brought by A against B for khas possession of a tank

(1) Priestman v Thomas 9 F D 210 (1884) Ref to in Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangin Deb 25 C W N 207 (1921)

(2) Cole v Langford 2 Q B (1898) 36 cited in Sri Ranganimal 23 M 216 219 (1899)

(3) Ambica Charan Das v Kala Chandra Das 10 C W N 422 Ref to in Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangin Deb 25 C W N 207 (1921)

(4) Janki Kuar v Lachmi Narain 37 A 535 (1915) following Nanda Kumar Howladar v Ram Jiban Howladar 41 C 990 (1914) per Jenkins C J which dissenting from Venkatapa Naih v Sabha Naih, 29 M 179 (1905) and see Munshi

Mosaful Huq v Surendra Nath Ray 16 C W N 1002 (1912) and Chandra v Jaisa 38 M 203 (1915)

(5) Taylor Ex § 1413 Steph Dig Art 46 Below s Estoppel 208 Huffer v Hill 1 L R 7 Exch 15 See also Kumar v Saadad 21 C W N 594

(6) This view is by no means a clearly settled and accepted one the rule with regard to innocent parties being treated as open to some doubt Rajib Panda v Lakhon Sindh 27 C 23 (1899)

(7) Anmedbhoy Hubibhoy v Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy 6 B 703 715 (1832)

(8) Rajib Panda v Lakhon Sindh 27 C 1 (1899) s c 3 C W N 660 Vistarini Dassce v Vundo Lal 26 C

the plaintiff put in a decree based on a compromise in a previous suit between him and the defendant to prove his right to has possession. The defence inter alia was that the decree was a fraudulent one. It was objected by the plaintiff that the former decree, which was unreversed, it was procured by fraud, but it was held so (1). A party to a proceeding is never disabled from showing that a judgment or order has been obtained by the adverse party by fraud (2), and if it can be proved that the decree in the former suit was obtained by fraud there can be no question of res judicata (3). In the case of A mortgaged certain property to B, who obtained a decree therein. Subsequently B having attempted to transfer the property in the hands of C, the latter instituted a suit for the purpose of having it declared that the property was mortgaged to A, because the mortgage transaction was a fraudulent one, and the decree had been obtained by fraud and collusion. In such suit B contended that C having purchased subsequent to the decree was absolutely bound by it. But it was held that, having regard to the terms of this section, it was perfectly open to C to prove that the decree had been obtained by fraud and collusion (4). The words of the section "any party to a suit, do" are wide enough to include parties to the first suit, both innocent and guilty. But there can be no doubt that the benefit conferred by the section is given only to an innocent party not privy to the fraud. For though the words of the section would, by themselves and independent of the general law, allow a party to set up his own fraud in procuring the decree, it is not to be construed so as to allow a party to set up his own fraud to defeat it (which has been characterised as a star-guilty party would not be permitted to obtaining it he had practised an imposition on the plaintiff. The plaintiff is precluded from obtaining justice which for the nephew of a party to the suit on the ground of perjury.

time of the grant but had refrained because the executor had promised him a payment which had since been withheld, his application was refused on the ground that on his own showing he had been a party to the fraud (8). It is no

891 (1899), s. c., 3 C W N 670. In appeal 30 C, 369, s. c., 7 C W N, 353, it was held that the High Court had original jurisdiction to entertain a suit to set aside a decree of a Mofussil Court on the ground of fraud and that even if this were not so, inasmuch as admittedly the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit so far as it was one for administration if the decree was relied upon by the defendant the plaintiff might show that it was obtained by fraud [approved in Sri Rangammal v Sandammal 23 M, 216, 218 (1899)], Bansi Lal v Dhapa, 24 A, 242 (1902) in which cases this matter and prior decisions thereon will be found fully discussed. These three cases are supported by dicta in Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v Vullcebhoy supra, Manchharam v Kaldas, 19 B, 821, 826 (1894), Nilmoney Mukhopadhyaya v Aiumissa Bibee 12 C 156 (1885). The case of Bansi Lal v Ramji Lal, 20 A, 370 (1898), cannot be regarded as an authority as the present section was not consti-dered nor even mentioned in that decision. See Bansi Lal v Dhapa, 24 A, 242, 245 (1902). As to foreign judgments see Nistaram Dossee v Nundo Lal 25 C, at p 910 (1899).

(1) Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sindh, 27 C 11 (1899).

(2) Manchharam v Kaldas, 19 B, 821 (1894).

(3) Krishnabhanpali v Ramamurti, 16 M, 198 (1892).

(4) Nilmoney Mukhopadhyaya v Aiumissa Bibee, 12 C, 156 (1885).

(5) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v Vullcebhoy Casumbhoy, 6 B, 703 (1882), at p 716, per Latham J., having regard to the maxims Allegans suam turpitudinem non est audendus and Nemo ex dolore proprio reletatur aut auxilium capiat.

(6) Nistaram Dossee v Nundo Lal, 26 C, 891, 907 (1899).

(7) Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sindh, 27 C, 11, 22, 23 (1899).

(8) Kishorbhai Ravadas v Ranchodas Dhalia, 38 B, 427 (1914).

doubt a general rule that a Court will not interfere actively in favour of a party who has been particeps criminis in an illegal or fraudulent transaction, and this rule ordinarily applies to persons who are privies in estate. But the rule that a privy in estate cannot set up — — — — — There are cases which form an

in which the parties concur is
In such cases the Court sees the necessity of supporting the public interest, how ever blameable the parties themselves may be. Another exception is where the collusive fraud has been on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of the privies. The rule which prevents a person who is a party from pleading the illegality of his act does not hold good as against persons claiming through such party, if they are the parties sought to be defrauded. So where by means of a fraud practised on the Court the owner of considerable property caused a decree to be passed against himself as defendant in a collusive suit upholding a fictitious wahf namah, by which it was intended to tie up the property in perpetuity for the benefit of the direct descendants of the uqif to the exclusion of his collateral heirs, it was held in a suit by such heirs to recover possession of their share by inheritance of the property so dealt with (a) that a Court, which was otherwise competent to entertain the suit had jurisdiction on the finding that it had been obtained by means of fraud to treat the previous decree as a nullity, and (b) that the plaintiffs were not prevented from setting up the plea that the previous decree had been obtained by fraud by the fact that the person who practised such fraud was their predecessor in title (1)

As in the case of the term 'fraud,' the Act contains no definition of the word 'collusion,' for the purposes of this section. 'Collusion is the uniting for the purposes of fraud or deception and has been defined to be a deceitful agreement or compact between two or more persons to do some act in order to prejudice a third person or for some improper purpose. Collusion in judicial proceedings is a secret agreement between two persons that the one should institute a suit against the other in order to obtain the decision of a judicial tribunal for some sinister purpose, and appears to be of two kinds (a) When the facts put forward as the foundation of the sentence of the Court do not exist, (b) when they exist but have been corruptly preconcerted for the express purpose of obtaining the sentence. In either case the judgment obtained by such collusion is a nullity (2)

It is clear that a stranger to a judgment can avoid its effect by proof of collusion. But a party who has himself procured the judgment by his collusion cannot — — — — — by a — — — — — or an — — — — — neither of them can escape its consequences(5) Strangers no doubt may falsify

(1) Barkut un nissa v. Fahl Hag 26 A 277 (1904)

(2) Wharton's Law Lexicon (1892) sub loco Collusion n 151 to 12th Ed (1916) p 187 This definition is perhaps in some respects too limited. Proof of collusion in the sense that the parties even without fraud were not really in contest will vitiate the judgment. Earl of Bandon v. Becher, 3 C & F 510 Girdlestone v. Brighton Aquarium Coy 4 Ex D 107 [referred to in Nustarini Dossee v. Nundo Lal 26 C at p 909 (1899)] The former action in the case last cited was one brought not for the purpose of giving the person named as plaintiff the fruits of it or indeed any benefit whatever from it but for the protection of the defendants. It was held that there was no fraud in procuring the former judgment but that it was no bar inasmuch as there had been collusion (deceit) and the defendants in the second action were in truth both plaintiff and defendants in the former action the judgment in which was pleaded as a bar. In Sardarmal v. Aravayal Sabl apathy 21 B 205 215 (1896) it was held that there was no collusion.

(3) Chennurappa v. Putappa 11 B 708 713 (1887)

(4) In cases cited ante

(5) Chennurappa v. Putappa supra.

a decree by charging collusion, but a party to a decree not complaining of any fraud practised upon himself cannot be allowed to question it. It is not competent to a party to a collusive decree to seek to have it set aside (1). A party to a collusive decree is bound by it, except possibly when some other interest is concerned that can be made good only through his (2). The distinction between fraud and collusion has been said (3) to lie in this, that a party alleging with the principle of res judicata (4)

(iv) Generally

The question of fraud as affecting judgment and decree was considered by the Bombay High Court on general grounds of English law in the case of Ahmedbhai Hubibbhai v. Vullerbhai Cassumbhai (5) which must be read in conjunction with the previous observations. After a division of persons into three classes with reference to their position as affected by the judgment viz (a) privies, (b) persons who, though not claiming under the parties to the former suit were represented by them therein, (c) strangers, neither privies to, nor represented by, the parties to the former suit, the Court proceeded to consider the effect of a previous judgment on these three classes respectively with reference to their capacity to dispute it.

In the first place, the judgment may be an honest one obtained in a suit conducted with good faith on the part of both plaintiff and defendant. In such a case the previous judgment (a) and class (b), class (c) will be in no way affected inter partes, but if it be one in rem passed by the Court, it binds all parties and cannot controvert it (7). In the second place, the judgment may be passed in a suit really contested by the parties thereto, but may be obtained by the fraud of one of them as against the other. There has been a real battle, but force, but it may be impeached for fraud and set aside if the fraud be proved. If obtained by the fraud in this case there has been no real battle, and as to such a judgment, it is void as against the privies of these parties (8). It is on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of such privies (9). Thus in the undermentioned case, A with the intention of defeating and defrauding his creditors made and delivered a representative under Hindu law sued B to have the note and conveyance set aside and to have the defendant restrained by injunction from executing the decree, but it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief in respect of

(1) Varadarajulu Naidu v. Srinivasulu Naidu 20 M. 333 (1897)

(2) Chenvirappa v. Putappa 11 B. 708 (1887)

(3) Varadarajulu Naidu v. Srinivasulu Naidu 20 M. at p. 338

(4) Ib. if it be proved that the decree was obtained by the collusion of others there can be no res judicata. Krishnabhai Patil v. Ramamurti 16 M. 198 (1892)

(5) 6 B. 703 (1882)

(6) v. s. 41 ante

(7) Ahmedbhai Hubibbhai v. Vullerbhai Cassumbhai supra.

(8) Ahmedbhai Hubibbhai v. Vullerbhai Cassumbhai supra. Rangammal v. Venkatachari 18 M. 378 (1895)

(9) Ahmedbhai Hubibbhai v. Vullerbhai Cassumbhai supra.

the note and the decree, although she was not personally a party to the fraud, inasmuch as she claimed through A by whose contrivance and collusion the defendant was enabled to obtain the decree (1) But as regards class (b) and class (c) the court held that the decree could not be set aside on motion on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, but that a separate suit must be brought for that purpose (3) And in a recent case in the Allahabad High Court, where it was alleged that a compromise was obtained by undue influence, it was held that a decree obtained by consent or on a compromise can be attacked in a separate suit, not only upon the ground of fraud, but upon any ground which would be sufficient for invalidating the agreement upon which the decree was based (4) Seemle having regard to the wide terms of this section it is not possible to say that it is not open to a Court other than the Court from which a grant has issued, in cases of fraud or collusion, to deal with the matter and decide whether the grant has been obtained by fraud or collusion But the better course in such cases would be, when it is open to a party alleging fraud to apply to the Court from which the grant issued, to stay the suit to enable an application to be made to revoke the grant (5)

(1) Rangammal v Venkatachari 18 M 378 (1895)

(2) Ahmedbhoy Hubidhoy v Vullee bhoy Casumbhoy 6 B at pp 710—714 and see Barkanta Nath Roy Choudhary v Mohendra Nath Roy 1 C L J 65

(3) Falcoamary Das v Woodoy Chunder 2 S C 649 (1898)

(4) Shami Nath Chaudri v Ravinas

34 A 143 (1911) following Huddersfield Banking Co v Henry Lister & Son Ltd L R 2 Ch 273 (1895) and v Musst Gulab Kuar v Badshah Bahadur 13 C W N 1197 (1909) and Sarbish Chandra Basu v Hari Dajal Singh 14 C W N, 451 (1910)

(5) Rakshab Mondal v S. Taranguni Devi 25 C W N 207 (1921)

OPINIONS OF THIRD PERSONS, WHEN RELEVANT

THE opinions of any person, other than the Judge by whom the fact is to be decided, as to the existence of facts in issue or relevant fact, are, as a rule, irrelevant to the decision of the cases to which they relate. To show that such and such a person thought that a crime had been committed or a contract made, would either be to show nothing at all, or it would invest the person whose opinion was proved with the character of a Judge. The use of witnesses being to inform the tribunal respecting facts, their opinions are not in general receivable as evidence, though what is matter of opinion is sometimes a question of some difficulty. In some few cases, the reasons for which are self evident it is otherwise. They are specified in the following sections 45—51 (1). A distinction must, however, be drawn between the cases where an opinion may be admissible under sections 6—11 (independently of its correctness as such) as forming a link in the chain of relevant facts to be proved and those in which an opinion is tendered merely as such, and is sought to be made use of solely by reason of the correctness of its findings upon its subject matter. In the last mentioned case the opinion will be excluded, unless it be one of those which are permitted to be given in evidence under the above mentioned sections. That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact (section 3) and this fact when relevant must like others be proved by direct evidence. Subject to a proviso in favour of the opinions of experts who cannot be called as witnesses, oral evidence, if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds (section 60).

The weight of such evidence depends on the maxim cuiuslibet in arte sua credentia in the general rule, admissible, when persons are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without such assistance, in other words, when it so far partakes of the character of a science or art, as to require a course of previous habit or study in order to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature" (2). On the other hand, it is equally clear that the opinions of skilled witnesses cannot be received, when the inquiry relates to a subject which does not require any peculiar habits or course of study in order to qualify a man to understand it (3). Thus witnesses are not permitted to state their views on the construction of documents or on matters of moral or legal obligation, or on the manner in which other persons would probably have been influenced had the parties acted in one way rather than another, because on such points the Court is as capable of forming an opinion as the witnesses themselves (4).

(1) Steph Introd. 167. Opinions in so far as they may be founded on no evidence or illegal evidence are worthless and in so far as they may be founded on legal evidence tend to usurp the functions of the tribunal whose province alone it is to draw conclusions of law or fact. Phipson Ev 5th Ed., 361 citing Best Ev § 511. Powell Ev 9th Ed. 37—55. Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 1. Wigmore Ev § 1917 et seq.
(2) Taylor Ev § 1418 as to the meaning of the term expert see Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence 1905.

(3) Taylor Ev § 1419, see Pranjyan das v Moyaram 1 Bom H C R. & p. 153 (1863). See remarks to Lord Bramwell in G v W 1 R. 10 App Cas. 171 200 and of Vaughan Williams J. in R v Silverlock L. R. 2 Q B D (1894) 766 769.

(4) Taylor Ev § 1419, Greenleaf Ev § 441.

The opinions of skilled witnesses are admissible in evidence, not only where they rest on the personal observation of the witnesses themselves, and on facts within their own knowledge, but even where they are merely founded on the case as proved by other witnesses at the trial. But here the witness cannot in strictness be asked his opinion respecting the very point which the Court or jury are to determine. So if the question be whether a particular act, for which a prisoner is tried, were an act of insanity a medical man conversant with that disease, who knows nothing of the prisoner but has simply heard the trial, can not be broadly asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, because such a question involves the determination of the truth of the facts deposed to as well as the scientific inference from those facts. He may, however, be asked what judgment he can form on the subject, assuming the facts stated in evidence to be true (1). An expert may refer to text books to refresh his memory or to correct or confirm his opinion (2) e.g., a doctor to medical treatises a valuer to price lists a foreign lawyer to codes, text writers, and reports. If he describe particular passages therein as accurate they may be read as part of his testimony, the vice per se (3). The opinion of an expert is open and when the opinion is relevant the grounds upon which such opinion is based are also relevant (5). The evidence of experts is to be received with caution because they may often come with such a bias in their minds to support the cause in which they are embarked that their judgments become warped, and they themselves become even when conscientious. And thus the evidence on a forgery charge

Opinion when admissible

er of opinion is not a all supposed state ned by the judgment is therefore neces

Distinction between matter of fact and matter of opinion early involved in statement of fact. An instance erroneously supposed to be simply an 'opinion' is found in cases where the phenomena being too numerous or intangible to permit of correct or effective individual statement witnesses are permitted in their minds. Thus, a witness can health or the reverse, or seemed 'hostile' or 'friendly', or appeared intoxicated or looked 'excited', or 'scared', old or young or was of a particular age, 'pleased' or 'agitated', or that two persons seemed to be 'attached'.

(1) Taylor Ev § 1421 M. Roghun, Singh v R 9 C 455 461 (1882) R v Meher Ali 15 C 589 (1888) McNaghten's Case 10 C & F 200

(2) S 159 post

(3) Taylor Ev § 1422 Sussex Peerage Case 11 C & F 85 114 Coller v Simpson 5 C & F 74 Nelson v Bridport 8 Beav 527 Concla v Murielita 40 Ch D 543

(4) S 46 post

(5) S 51 post

(6) See Best Ev § 514 et seq and per Lord Campbell Tracey Peerage Case 10 C & F 191 See remarks of Jessel M R in Abinger v Ashton L R 17 Eq 373. An expert is not like an ordinary witness who hopes to get his expenses but he is employed and paid in the sense of gain being employed by per sons who call him. Undoubtedly there is a natural bias to do something serviceable for those who employed you and adequately remunerate you.—Id at p 374. See also Goday Nara n v Sri Ankata 6 Mad H C R 85 87 88 (1871) Hari Chintamani v Moro Lakshman 11 B 101 (1886). And as to criminal cases see Srikant v R 2 All L J 444 (1904) Panchu Mondal v R 1 C L J 385 (1905).

(7) Venkata Rao (n re) 36 M 159 (1913)

(8) Best Ev 473 Amer Notes See Cornwall Lewis Influence of authority 1 Sully's Illusions 328 Wigmore Ev. § 1919. It is of course not intended under the Act to exclude evidence of this description. See Cunningham Ev 190 and s 3 ante definition of fact."

to each other, or that a building or document was 'in good or had preservation,' or the like. Such persons are not experts properly so called, though experts with the same facilities for observation, may, of course, testify in the same manner and to the same points. The obvious, and perhaps, the only, limitation placed on evidence of this nature, which may be described as the opinions of non-experts, is that the witness will not be allowed unnecessarily to invade the province of the Judge or Jury, substituting his opinion for theirs (1). But such evidence is admitted on the grounds that positive and direct testimony is unattainable (2). As all language embodies inferences of some sort, it is not possible to wholly dissociate statements of opinion from statements of fact. The evidentiary test has been said to be, that if the fact stated necessarily involves the component facts, it will be admissible as amounting to a mere abbreviation, if it does not necessarily involve them, but may be supported upon several distinct phases of fact the particulars only should be given and not the inference. Thus though a witness might, without objection, state that 'A shot B,' or 'A stabbed B' yet the statement that 'A killed B' would be improper, as involving a conclusion that might be remote and doubtful, and apply equally to a variety of different incidents" (3). So it was held that a witness's statement that a party 'is in possession' is no evidence of that fact, that the question of possession is a mixed one of law and fact, and that the evidence produced must give the various acts of ownership which go to constitute possession, so that the Court may arrive at its own conclusion (4). In, however, a subsequent case it was laid down that a statement by a witness that a party is in possession, is, in point of law, admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession (5). Such general and vague statements are, however, as a rule of but little value (6). A common instance of such opinion evidence of non-experts is that which is given numeness ked "in you have seen with the man you see at the trial. The same rule of comparison belongs to every species of identification" as for instance to the identification of

(1) Best Ev 473 474 § 517 Taylor Ev § 1416 Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence post see next note James Law of Experts 32 Wharton Ev § 502

(2) Taylor Ev § 1416 Such opinions have been described as opinions from necessity and the rule stated as follows the opinions of ordinary witnesses derived from observations are admissible in evidence when from the nature of the subject under investigation no better evidence can be obtained or in fact cannot otherwise be presented to the tribunal e.g. question relating to time quantity number dimensions height speed distance or the like and to the facts stated in the text Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence 460

(3) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 378 citing Best Ev Amer Notes to § 511 supra Whart §§ 15 509—513 Stephen J in 3 Southern Law Rep (Amer) 567 and see Taylor Ev § 1416 On some particular subjects positive and direct testimony is often unattainable. In such cases a witness is allowed to testify to his belief or opinions or even to draw inferences respecting the fact in question from other facts which are within his personal knowledge see also Powell Ev, 9th Ed 54 Best Ev § 517

(4) Ishan Clunder v Ram Lochun 9 W R 79 (1868)

(5) Manram Deb v Dett Charan 4 B L R (F B) 97 (1869)

(6) See notes to s 110 post

(7) Taylor Ev § 1416 Witnesses may not only state their belief as to the identity of persons present in Court or not but may identify them by photographs (Frith v Frith 1896 p. 74) produced and proved to be theirs. The same rule applies to the identification of things (Fryer v Gathercole 13 Jur 542) e.g., opinion may be given as to the resemblance of an engraving to a picture not produced (Lucas v Williams 1892 2 Q B 113 116) or even of a portrait that is produced to one of the parties in Court (Miles v Lamson Times Oct. 29 1892 McQueen v Phipps Times July 1 1897) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 376 Wigmore Ev § 1917

(8) see 4 post

(9) 13 Jur 542

handwriting (1) The opinions of witnesses are also admissible to prove the innuendoes of libel, where ordinary words are used in a peculiar sense, or where such was f the ning The question

"(2) A person may
his testimony being

Witnesses may, however, as has been already observed, describe the apparent condition of people or of a building or document like (5)

Another case in which they are allowed to speak to character (6) value may also be given by an opinion of any witness possessing knowledge of the subject. There are many things in almost universal use, the value of which any one may testify to it being a matter of common knowledge. In other cases the opinion of an ordinary witness would not be sufficient. The market value of land is not a question of science and skill upon which only an expert can give an opinion. Persons living in the neighbourhood may be presumed to have a sufficient knowledge of the market value of property from the location and character of the land in question and so also witnesses may express their opinions as to the value of goods and chattels. "Market value," said Mr Justice Story in an early case, "is necessarily a matter of opinion as well as of fact, or rather of opinions gathered from facts. How are we to arrive at it? Certainly not by the mere purchase made by a single person, or by purchases made by a few persons, for in either case they may have purchased above or below the market price or the market price may be fluctuating and the sales too few to justify any general conclusion. Buyers may refuse to buy at a particular price, sellers may refuse to sell at a lower price. In this state of things we must necessarily resort to opinions of merchants and others conversant in trade for opinions what under all the circumstances is the fair market price or value of the goods. In the next case the knowledge of their market price being thus, in fact a matter of skill judgment and opinion it is in no just sense mere hearsay, but is in the nature of the evidence of experts (7). In the case cited it was

(1) See Best Ev § 233 s 47 post
See Harris Law of identification (1892)
[Treating of persons name idem sonans identity of prisoner photographs opinion evidence murder identification ancient records and documents handwriting identity of real estate identification of personal property view of premises by jury compulsory physical examination mistaken identity etc]

(2) Odgers on Libel 567 Starkie on Libel 5th Ed 465 Wharton s 975
Phipson Ev 5th Ed 376 Daines v
Hartley 3 Ex 200 referred to in Cum-mington Ev 191 Burns v Harmer
3 C & K 10 Barnett v Allen 3 H &
N 376 Simmons v Mitchell 6 App
Cas 155 163 Curtes v Peek 13 W R
(Eng.) 230

(3) v ante p 197

(4) Wright v Tatha 7 A & E 313.

R v Newell Cr & Dix Ab Cas 96
Greenslade v Dare 20 Beav 284 nor under this Act Field Ev 346 note

(5) v Phipson Ev 5th Ed 376—378

(6) Phipson Ev 5th Ed 378 see
Notes to s 55 post

(7) Albonso v United States 2 Story
421 (1843) (Amer) Lawsons Expert
Evidence 431—456 439 it is no objection to the evidence of a witness testifying as to market value that such evidence rests on hearsay. Wharton Ev 449
Wigmore Ev § 1940 See as to market rate Narain Cunder v Cohen 10 C. 56 (1884) and as to market value under Municipal and Land Acquisition Acts see Manindra Chandra Band v Secretary of State 41 C 967 (1914) and Harish Cunder Neogy v Secretary of State, 11 C W N 875 (1907) said that the market-value of land may be roughly defined as the price which a vendor, willing but not compelled to sell, might reasonably expect to obtain from a willing purchaser (1)

Summary

The rule upon evidence in matter of opinion has been thus summarised. (2) The general rule is that a witness must only state facts and his mere personal opinion is not evidence. But this rule is subject to the following exceptions namely—(a) On questions of identification a witness is allowed to speak as to his opinion or belief. (b) A witness's opinion is receivable in evidence to prove the apparent condition or state of a person or thing. (c) The opinions of skilled or scientific witnesses are admissible evidence to elucidate matters which are of a strictly professional or scientific character. Sections 45, 46, 51 of this Act deal with the last exception and sections 47, 51 with the first in so far as it bears on the question of identification of handwriting. Sections 48-50 add further exceptions relating to opinions on general customs and rights (3) to usages, tenets, and the like (4), and to opinions on relationship, provided such opinions are expressed by conduct (5)

Opinion of experts

45 When the Court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, or of science or art, or as to identity of hand writing [or finger-impressions] (6), the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science or art, or in questions as to identity of handwriting [or finger impressions] (7) are relevant facts

Such persons are called experts

Illustrations

(a) The question is whether the death of A was caused by poison.

The opinions of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died are relevant.

(b) The question is whether A at the time of doing a certain act, was by reason of unsoundness of mind incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law.

The opinions of experts upon the question whether the symptoms exhibited by A commonly show unsoundness of mind and whether such unsoundness of mind usually renders persons incapable of knowing the nature of the acts which they do or of knowing that what they do is either wrong or contrary to law are relevant.

(c) The question is whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A.

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons are relevant.

Facts bearing upon opinion of experts

46 Facts, not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant

(1) Kailas Chandra Mista v Secretary of State 17 C L J 34 (1913)
(2) Powell v Evans 111 et seq
(3) S 48 post
(4) S 49 post
(5) S 50 post

(6) The portion in brackets was added by s 3 Act V of 1899
(7) Id finger impressions of course include thumb impressions. See Report of Select Committee cited 3 C W N. xc.

Illustrations

- (a) The question is whether A was poisoned by a certain poison

The fact that other persons who were poisoned by that poison exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be the symptoms of that poison is relevant

- (b) The question is whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea wall

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects but where there were no such sea walls began to be obstructed at about the same time is relevant (1)

Principle—The use of witnesses being to inform the tribunal respecting facts, their opinions are not in general receivable as evidence. Facts should be stated and not inferences. The rule however is not without its exceptions. Being based on the presumption that the tribunal is as capable of forming a presumptive opinion when circumstances rebut this presumption as the opinions of specially skilled persons are, the foundation on which expert testimony rests is the supposed superior knowledge or experience of the expert in relation to the subject matter upon which he is permitted to give an opinion as evidence (3)

- * 3 ("Court")
- * 3 ("Preliminary")
- * 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion as a fact)
- * 3 ("Fact")
- * 60 (Evidence of opinion must be direct)
- * 60 (Persons of opinion who cannot be called as witnesses)

- * 74 (Opinion as to handwriting)
- * 51 (Grounds of opinion)
- * 73 (Comparison of handwriting)
- * 159 (Expert refreshing memory)
- * 57 (Preference by Court to books of experts)

Steph. Dig. Arts. 49 on Taylor Fr §§ 1423—1425 1417—1419 1420 1445 337
Phryson Ev 5th Ed. 363—376 Norton Fr 225 Field Ev 6th Ed. 191—193 Best Ev all et seq., Powell Ev 9th Ed. 40—50 Roscoe N P Ev, 84 175 176 Rogers on Expert Testimony (1883) 2nd Ed. 1891 Lawson on Expert and Opinion Evidence (1886)
James Ohio Law of Opinion Evidence (1889) Wigmore Ev § 1917, et seq., Harris Law of Identification (1892) Hagin on Disputed Handwriting (1894)

COMMENTARY.

The phrase "expert" testimony is not applicable to all species of opinion evidence. A witness is not giving expert testimony who without any special personal fitness or special intelligence simply testifies as to the impressions produced in his mind or senses by that which he has seen or heard, and which can only be described to others by giving the impression produced upon the witness. Neither is he giving such testimony, strictly speaking, when he is testifying as to matters which require no peculiar intelligence and concerning which any person is qualified to judge according to his opportunities of observation. Expert testimony properly begins with testimony (4) concerning those branches where some intelligence is requisite for judgment and when opportunities and habits of observation must be combined with some practical experience. An expert is one who is skilled in any particular art, trade or profession being possessed of peculiar knowledge concerning the same (5). Many

Expert

(1) Folkes v Chadd 3 Dougl. 157
(2) Best Ev §§ 511—513. See Introduction ante and Notes post.
(3) Rogers on Expert Testimony 21
(4) As to the relative value of testimony and extracts from scientific treatises see Sleeo Bahadur Singh v Beni Bahadur Singh 6 O L J 178 s. c. 51 I C, 419

(5) Rogers op cit § 1

Court may construe it for itself (1) In India such law may not only be proved under this section by the evidence of persons specially skilled in it, but also, under section 38, by the production of a book printed or published under the authority of the Foreign Government (2) Foreign customs and usages may be proved by any witness, whether expert or not, who is acquainted with the fact (3)

Science and Art

"The opinions of medical men are admissible upon questions within their own province, e.g. insanity, the causes of disease or death or injuries, the effects of injuries, medicines, poisons, the consequence of wounds, the conditions of gestation, the effects of hospitals upon the health of a neighbourhood the likelihood of recovery, those of actuaries as to the average duration of life with respect to the value of annuities, those of naturalists as to the ability of fish to overcome obstacles in a river, those of chemists as to the value of a particular kind of guano as a fertiliser, the safety of a 'non explosive camphene and fluid lamp,' the constituent effects of a particular poison, ferns as to the existence of coal seams, those of coke ovens upon trees in the neighbourhood, those of persons specially skilled in insurance matters, such as the opinion of an insurance agent and examiner that a partition in a room increased the risk in a fire policy, and so with other branches of science

The opinions of artists are admissible as to the genuineness and value of a work of art, the opinion of a photographer as to the good execution of a photograph, though a non expert might speak to its being a good likeness, the opinion of an engraver or professional examiner of writings as to erasure in a document, those of engineers as to the cause of obstruction to a harbour, that the erection of a dam would not cause the adjoining land to be overflowed by back water, that certain drains do not lessen the quantity or flow of water, that a contract for doing a piece of work or building a vessel did not call for connecting the engines by a centre shaft, that a bridge built of wood should have been built of stone in order to withstand a flood and the like, those of seal engravers as to the impressions from a seal, those of officers of a fire brigade as to the cause of a fire, those of military men as to a question of military practice, those of post office clerks as to post marks, those of ship builders, marine surveyors and engineers as to the strength and construction of a ship and (when the Court is not sitting with assessors) those of nautical men as to the proper navigation of a vessel" (4)

Trade

Mechanics, artisans, and workmen are experts as to matters of technical skill in their trades, and their opinions in such cases are admissible. So the opinion of a mason as to how long it takes to dry the walls of a house, of a miner as to the cause of the settling of the walls of a mine, of a blacksmith as to whether a horse was properly shod, of the foreman of a mill as to the running order of the machinery, of a road builder as to the necessity of a railing along an elevated part of a road, of a railroad man as to questions of railroad management, such as whether a rail was properly laid, as to the

(1) Concha v. Murello C. A. (1889), 40 Ch. D. p. 543

(2) v. Notes to s. 38 ante, et seq., and as to s. 60 v. post

(3) Ganes v. Lanesborough 1 Peake R. 18 Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F. 124 Yostyn v. Fabrigas 1 Comp. 174 Yander Doncht v. Thellusson 8 C. B. 812, Lindo v. Belisario 1 Hagg. C. R. 216, see s. 49 post. As to the construction of foreign documents see De Sora v. Phil

Ippis 10 H. L. C. 624 Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 367—368, Taylor, Ev. § 1424

(4) Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence. See passim Index, Wharton Ev. §§ 441 446, Phipson Ev. 5th Ed. 366—367, Taylor Ev. §§ 1417, 1418 et seq. and cases there cited. As to evidence of medical witnesses and reports of chemical examinations see Cr. Pr. Code ss. 509 510 cause of a train being thrown from the track as to the distance within which a train can be stopped, whether the holer of an engine was safe whether coupling appliances were defectively constructed have been held to be admissible. So also are the opinions of farmers and agriculturists on matters peculiarly within their knowledge as that of a grazier on the effect of disturbance in the value of cattle of a farmer as to the quality of the soil of a farm. So also a banker may speak as to the genuineness of a bank note a merchant may depose to the value of goods in which he deals and so forth. According to English decisions the opinions of shop keepers are admissible to prove the average waste resulting from the retail sale of goods those of persons conversant with a market to prove a market value and those of business men to prove the meaning of trade terms and the like (1).

Experts may give their opinions upon the genuineness of a disputed hand writing after having compared it with specimens proved to the satisfaction of the Judge to be genuine (2). In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it has been held that while the writing with which the comparison is made must first be admitted or proved to be that of the person alleged the comparison must be made in open Court and in the presence of such person. This decision was based on the ground that though these conditions are not expressly laid down in this section they are indicated by Illustration (C) (3). But independent of all cases in which handwriting is sought to be proved by actual comparison the testimony of skilled witness will be admissible for the purpose of throwing light upon the document in dispute as upon the question whether a writing is in a feigned or natural hand or the probable date of an ancient writing or as to whether interlineations were written contemporaneously with the rest of a document or whether the writing is cramped or one document exhibits greater ease or facility than another or whether a writing has been touched by the pen a second time as if done by some one attempting to imitate or whether the writing has been made over pencil marks or whether a document could have been made with a pen or whether two documents were written with the same pen and ink, and at the same time or whether two parts of a writing were written by the same person or the like (4). But opinion as to handwriting is not confined to experts but may be given by any person who is duly acquainted with it (5).

By nature and habit individuals contract a system of forming letters which give a character to their writing as distinct as that of the human face (6). The general rule which admits of proof of handwriting of a party is founded on the reason that in every person's manner of handwriting there is a peculiar prevailing character which distinguishes it from the handwriting

(1) Phypson Ev 16 and see last note and s 49 post.

(2) v s 73 post for a case in which a judge was held to have wrongly called expert testimony see Bendessure Dist v Doma Sngl 9 W R 88 (1865).

(3) Suresh Chandra Sanjay v R (1912) 39 C 606 and see Sreemitt Phoojee Bibi v Gobind Chander Roy (184) 27 W R 212 and Cresswell v Jackson (1850) 2 F & F 24 and Cobbett v Kilmister (1860) 2 F & F 490.

(4) Taylor Ev 33 1877 1417 Best Ev 5 246 See notes to s 47 post.

(5) See notes s 47 post and Surendra Narayas Adhuary v R (1911) 39 C 597.

(6) Lavson's Expert Ev 277 Men are distinguished by their handwriting as well as by their faces for it is seldom that the shape of the letters agree any more than the shape of the bodies. Buller's Ns Prius 236 2 Evans Pother on Obligations. The handwriting of every man has something peculiar and distinct from that of every other man and is easily known by those who have been accustomed to see it. Peakes Ev 67 Almost everybody's usual handwriting possesses a peculiarity in it and distinguishing it from other people's writing. Ram on Facts 68 See at p 69 citation from Cowper's work (Letters Vol V 217 Ed 1836

